

ORIGINAL SANSKRIT TEXTS

ON THE

ORIGIN AND HISTORY

OF

THE PEOPLE OF INDIA,

THEIR RELIGION AND INSTITUTIONS.

COLLECTED, TRANSLATED, AND ILLUSTRATED,

BY

J. MUIR, D.C.L., LL.D.

23732

VOLUME FIRST.

MYTHICAL AND LEGENDARY ACCOUNTS OF THE ORIGIN OF CASTE, WITH AN ENQUIRY INTO ITS EXISTENCE IN THE VEDIC AGE.

SECOND EDITION,

REWRITTEN AND GREATLY ENLARGED.

Ditte

891.2082 - Mui

LONDON:

TRÜBNER & CO., 60, PATERNOSTER ROW.

1868.

(All rights reserved.)

Na viśesho sti varnānām sarvam brāhmam idam jagat | Brahmanā prūva-srishṭam hi karmabhir varnatām gatam | Mahābhārata.

"There is no distinction of castes. This world, which, as created by Brahma, was at first entirely Brahmanic, has become divided into classes in consequence of men's works."—See pages 138 and 140.

RAL ARCHAEC 13RARY, NEW DE Acu. No. 23732 13 6. 56 Call No. 891. 2082/ Mux...

> HERTFORD: STEPHEN AUSTIN, PRINTER.

Openlie gist

PREFACE.

THE main object which I have proposed to myself in this volume is to collect, translate, and illustrate the principal passages in the different Indian books of the greatest antiquity, as well as in others of comparatively modern composition, which describe the creation of mankind and the origin of classes, or which tend to throw light upon the manner in which the caste system may have arisen.

I have not, however, hesitated to admit, when they fell in my way, such passages explanatory of the cosmogonic or mythological conceptions of the Indians as possess a general interest, although not immediately connected with the chief subject of the book.

Since the first edition appeared my materials have so much increased that the volume has now swelled to more than twice its original bulk. The second and third chapters are almost entirely new. The fourteenth and fifteenth sections of the fourth chapter are entirely so. Even those parts of the book of which the substance remains the same have been so generally expanded that comparatively little continues without some alteration of greater or less importance.

¹ The contents of these chapters are not, however, absolutely new, but drawn from articles which I have contributed to the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society since the first edition of the volume appeared.

In order that the reader may learn at once what he may expect to find in the following pages, I shall supply here a fuller and more connected summary of their contents than is furnished by the table which follows this preface.

The Introduction (pp. 1-6) contains a very rapid survey of the sources from which our information on the subject of caste is to be derived, viz. the Vedic hymns, the Brāhmaṇas, the Epic poems, and the Purāṇas, in which the chronological order and the general characteristics of these works are stated.

The first chapter (pp. 1-160) comprehends the mythical accounts of the creation of man and of the origin of castes which are to be found in the Vedic hymns, in the Brāhmanas and their appendages, in the Rāmāyana, the Mahābhārata, and the Purānas. The first section (pp. 7-15) contains a translation of the celebrated hymn called Purusha Sūkta, which appears to be the oldest extant authority for attributing a separate origin to the four eastes, and a discussion of the question whether the creation there described was intended by its author to convey a literal or an allegorical sense. The second, third, and fourth sections (pp. 15-34) adduce a series of passages from the works standing next in chronological order to the hymns of the Rig-veda, which differ more or less widely from the account of the creation given in the Purusha Sūkta, and therefore justify the conclusion that in the Vedic age no uniform orthodox and authoritative doctrine existed in regard to the origin of castes.

• In the fifth section (pp. 35-42) the different passages in Manu's Institutes which bear upon the subject are quoted, and shewn to be not altogether in harmony with each other. The sixth section (pp. 43-49) describes the system of great mundane periods called Yugas, Manvantaras, and Kalpas, as explained in the Puranas, and shews that no traces of these periods are to be found in the hymns of the Rig-veda, and but few in the Brāhmanas (compare p. 215 f.). Sections seventh and eighth (pp. 49-107) contain the accounts of the different creations, including that of the castes, and of the primeval state of mankind, which are given in the Vishnu, Vāyu, and Mārkandeya Purānas, together with references (see pp. 52 ff., 68 ff.) to passages in the Brāhmanas, which appear to have furnished some of the germs of the various Puranic representations, and a comparison of the details of the latter with each other which proves that in some respects they are mutually irreconcileable (see pp. 65 ff., 102 ff.). The ninth section (pp. 107-114) adduces the accounts of Brahmā's passion for his daughter, which are given in the Aitareya Brāhmana and the Matsya Purāna. In the tenth section (pp. 114-122) are embraced such notices connected with the subject of this volume as I have observed in the Rāmāyana. In one of the passages men of all the four eastes are said to be the offspring of Manu, a female, the daughter of Daksha, and wife of Kaśyapa. The eleventh section contains a collection of texts from the Mahābhārata and its appendage the Hari-vamsa, in which various and discrepant explanations are given of the existing diversity of castes, one of them representing all the four classes as descendants of Manu • Vaivasvata (p. 126), others attributing the distinction of classes to an original and separate creation of each, which, however, is not always described as occurring in the same manner (pp. 128 ff. and 153); whilst others, again, more reasonably, declare the distinction to have arisen out of differences of character and action. This section, as well as the one which precedes it, also embraces accounts of the perfection which prevailed in the first yugas, and of the gradually increasing degeneracy which ensued in those that followed. The twelfth section (pp. 155-158) contains extracts from the Bhagavata Purana, which coincide for the most part with those drawn from the other authorities. One text, however, describes mankind as the offspring of Aryaman and Mātrikā; and another distinctly declares that there was originally but one caste. The thirteenth section (pp. 159 f.) sums up the results of the entire chapter, and asserts the conclusion that the sacred books of the Hindus contain no uniform or consistent theory of the origin of caste; but, on the contrary, offer a great variety of explanations, mythical, mystical, and rationalistic, to account for this social phenomenon.

The second chapter (pp. 160-238) treats of the tradition of the descent of the Indian nation from Manu. The first section (pp. 162-181) contains a series of texts from the Rig-veda, which speak of Manu as the progenitor of the race to which the authors of the hymns belonged, and as the first institutor of religious rites; and adverts to certain terms employed in the hymns. - either to denote mankind in general or to signify certain tribal divisions. The second section (pp. 181-196) adduces a number of legends and notices regarding Manu from the Brāhmanas and other works next in order of antiquity to the hymns of the Rig-veda. The most interesting and important of these legends is that of the deluge, as given in the Satapatha Brāhmana, which is afterwards (pp. 216 ff.) compared with the later versions of the same story found in the Mahābhārata and the Matsva, Bhāgavata and Agni Purānas, which are extracted in the third section (pp. 196-220). Some remarks of M. Burnouf and Professor Weber, on the question whether the legend of a deluge was indigenous in India, or derived from a Semitic source, are noticed in pp. 215 f. The fourth section adduces the legendary accounts of the rise of castes among the descendants of Manu and Atri, which are found in the Puranas; and quotes a story given in the Mahābhārata about king Vitāhavya, a Kshattriya, being transformed into a Brāhman by the mere word of the sage Bhrigu.

In the third chapter (pp. 239-295) I have endeavoured to shew what light is thrown by a study of the hymns of the Rig- and Atharva-vedas upon the mutual relations of the different classes of Indian society at the time when those hymns were composed. In the first section (pp. 240-265) the various texts of the Rig-veda in which the words brahman and brahman occur are cited, and an attempt is made to determine the senses in which those words are there employed. The result of this examination is that in none of the hymns of the Rig-veda, except the Purusha Sūkta, is there any distinct reference to a recognized system of four castes, although the occasional use of the word Brāhmana, which is apparently equivalent to Brahma-putra, or "the son of a priest," and other indications seem to justify the conclusion that the priesthood had already become a profession, although it did not yet form an exclusive caste (see pp. 258 f., 263 ff.). The second section (pp. 265-280) is made up of quotations from the hymns of the Rig-veda and various other later works, adduced to shew that persons who according to ancient Indian tradition were not of priestly families were in many instances reputed to be authors of Vedic hymns, and in two cases, at least, are even said to have exercised priestly functions. These two cases are those (1) of Devāpi (pp. 269ff.), and (2) of Viśvāmitra, which is afterwards treated at great length in the fourth chapter. This section concludes with a passage from the Matsya Purāna, which not only speaks of the Kshattriyas Manu, Ida, and Purūravas, as "utterers of Vedic hymns" (mantra-vādinah); but also names three Vaiśyas, Bhalanda, Vandya, and Sankīrtti, as "composers of hymns" (mantra-kritah). The third section (pp. 280-289) shews by quotations from the Atharva-veda that at the period when those portions of that collection which are later than the greater part of the Rig-veda were composed, the pretensions of the Brahmans had been considerably The fourth section (pp. 289-295) gives developed. an account of the opinions expressed by Professor

- R. Roth and Dr. M. Haug regarding the origin of castes.
- The fourth chapter (pp. 296-479) contains a series of legendary illustrations derived from the Rāmāyana, the Mahābhārata, and the Purānas, of the struggle which appears to have occurred in the early ages of Indian history between the Brāhmans and the Kshattriyas, after the former had begun to constitute an exclusive sacerdotal class, but before their rights had become accurately defined by long prescription, and when the members of the ruling caste were still indisposed to admit their pretensions. I need not here state in detail the contents of the first five sections (pp. 296-317) which record various legends descriptive of the ruin which is said to have overtaken different princes by whom the Brāhmans were slighted and their claims resisted. The sixth and following sections down to the thirteenth (pp. 317-426) contain, first, such references to the two renowned rivals, Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra as are found in the hymns of the Rig-veda, and which represent them both as Vedic rishis; secondly, such notices of them as occur in the Brāhmanas, and shew that Viśvāmitra, as well as Vasishtha, had officiated as a priest; and, thirdly, a series of legends from the Rāmāyana and Mahābhārata which describe the repeated struggles for superiority in which they were engaged, and attempt, by a variety of fictions, involving miraculous elements, to explain the manner in which Viśvāmitra became a Brāhman, and to account for the fact which was so distinctly certified by tradition (see pp. 361 ff.), but appeared so unaccountable in later ages (see pp. 265 f., 364 ff.), that that famous personage, although notoriously a Kshattriya by birth, had nevertheless exercised sacerdotal functions.² The fourteenth section (pp. 426–430) contains a story from the Satapatha Brāhmana about king Janaka, a Rājanya, renowned for his stoical temperament and religious knowledge, who communicated theological instruction to

2 As I have omitted in the body of the work to say anything of the views of Signor Angelo de Gubernatis about the purport of the Vedic texts relating to Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra, I may state here that this young Italian Sanskritist, in his Essay, entitled "Fonti Vediche dell' Epopea" (see the Rivista Orientale, vol. i. pp. 409 ff., 478 ff.), combats the opinion of Professor Roth that these passages refer to two historical personages, and to real events in which they played a part; and objects that Roth "took no account of the possibility that a legend of the heavens may have been based upon a human foundation" (p. 409). Signor de Gubernatis further observes that the 33rd and 53rd hymns of the third Mandala of the Rig-veda "may perhaps have been recited at a later period in connection with some battle which really occured, but that the fact which they celebrate seems to be much more ancient, and to be lost in a very remote myth" (p. 410). Visvāmitra, he considers, is one of the appellations of the sun, and as both the person who bears this name, and Indra are the sons of Kusika, they must be brothers (p. 412. See, however, the remarks in p. 347 f. of this volume on the epithet Kausika as applied to Indra). Sudās, according to Signor de Gubernatis (p. 413), denotes the horse of the sun, or the sun himself, while Vasishtha is the greatest of the Vasus, and denotes Agni, the solar fire, and means, like Visvamitra, the sun (p. 483). Signor de Gubernatis is further of opinion (pp. 414, 478, 479, and 483) that both the 33rd and 53rd hymns of the third, and the 18th hymn of the seventh Mandala are comparatively modern; that the names of Kusikas and Visvamitras claimed by the authors of the two former, are fraudulently assumed; while the last (the 18th hymn of the seventh Mandala) was composed by a sacerdotal family who claimed Vasishtha as its founder. I will only remark that the theory of Signor de Gubernatis appears to me to be an improbable one. But the only point of much importance for my own special purpose is that ancient Indian tradition represents both Vasishtha and Visvamitra as real personages, the one of either directly divine, or of sacerdotal descent, and the other of royal lineage. They may, however, have been nothing more than legendary creations, the fictitious eponymi of the families which bore the same name.

some eminent Brāhmans, and became a member of their class. In the fifteenth section (pp. 431-436) two other instances are adduced from the same Brāhmana and from two of the Upanishads, of Kshattrivas who were in possession of truths unknown to the Brāhmans, and who, contrary to the usual rule, became the teachers of the latter. The sixteenth section (pp. 436-440) contains an extract from the Aitareya Brāhmana regarding king Viśvantara who, after at first attempting to prevent the Syaparna Brahmans from officiating at his sacrifice, became at length convinced by one of their number of their superior knowledge, and accepted their services. In the seventeenth section (pp. 440-442) a story is told of Matanga, the spurious offspring of a Brāhman woman by a man of inferior caste, who failed, in spite of his severe and protracted austerities, to elevate himself (as Viśvāmitra had done) to the rank of a Brāhman. The eighteenth section (pp. 442-479) contains a series of legends, chiefly from the Mahābhārata, regarding the repeated exterminations of the Kshattriyas by the warlike Brāhman Paraśurāma of the race of Bhrigu, and the ultimate restoration of the warrior tribe, and a variety of extravagant illustrations of the supernatural power of the Brahmans, related by the god Vayu to king Arjuna, who began by denying the superiority of the priests, but was at length compelled to succumb to the overwhelming evidence adduced by his aerial monitor.

In the fifth chapter (pp. 480-488) I have given some account of the opinions entertained by Manu, and the accountable in later ages (see pp. 265 f., 364 ff.), that that famous personage, although notoriously a Kshattriya by birth, had nevertheless exercised sacerdotal functions.² The fourteenth section (pp. 426-430) contains a story from the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa about king Janaka, a Rājanya, renowned for his stoical temperament and religious knowledge, who communicated theological instruction to

2 As I have omitted in the body of the work to say anything of the views of Signor Angelo de Gubernatis about the purport of the Vedic texts relating to Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra, I may state here that this young Italian Sanskritist, in his Essay, entitled "Fonti Vediche dell' Epopea" (see the Rivista Orientale, vol. i. pp. 409 ff., 478 ff.), combats the opinion of Professor Roth that these passages refer to two historical personages, and to real events in which they played a part; and objects that Roth "took no account of the possibility that a legend of the heavens may have been based upon a human foundation" (p. 409). Signor de Gubernatis further observes that the 33rd and 53rd hymns of the third Mandala of the Rig-veda "may perhaps have been recited at a later period in connection with some battle which really occured, but that the fact which they celebrate seems to be much more ancient, and to be lost in a very remote myth" (p. 410). Visvāmitra, he considers, is one of the appellations of the sun, and as both the person who bears this name, and Indra are the sons of Kusika, they must be brothers (p. 412. See, however, the remarks in p. 347 f. of this volume on the epithet Kausika as applied to Indra). Sudās, according to Signor de Gubernatis (p. 413), denotes the horse of the sun, or the sun himself, while Vasishtha is the greatest of the Vasus, and denotes Agni, the solar fire, and means, like Visvamitra, the sun (p. 483). Signor de Gubernatis is further of opinion (pp. 414, 478, 479, and 483) that both the 33rd and 53rd hymns of the third, and the 18th hymn of the seventh Mandala are comparatively modern; that the names of Kusikas and Visvamitras claimed by the authors of the two former, are fraudulently assumed; while the last (the 18th hymn of the seventh Mandala) was composed by a sacerdotal family who claimed Vasishtha as its founder. I will only remark that the theory of Signor de Gubernatis appears to me to be an improbable one. But the only point of much importance for my own special purpose is that ancient Indian tradition represents both Vasishtha and Visvamitra as real personages, the one of either directly divine, or of sacerdotal descent, and the other of royal lineage. They may, however, have been nothing more than legendary creations, the fictitious eponymi of the families which bore the same name.

some eminent Brāhmans, and became a member of their class. In the fifteenth section (pp. 431-436) two other instances are adduced from the same Brāhmana and from two of the Upanishads, of Kshattrivas who were in possession of truths unknown to the Brāhmans, and who, contrary to the usual rule, became the teachers of the The sixteenth section (pp. 436-440) contains an extract from the Aitareva Brāhmana regarding king Viśvantara who, after at first attempting to prevent the Syaparna Brahmans from officiating at his sacrifice, became at length convinced by one of their number of their superior knowledge, and accepted their services. In the seventeenth section (pp. 440-442) a story is told of Matanga, the spurious offspring of a Brāhman woman by a man of inferior caste, who failed, in spite of his severe and protracted austerities, to elevate himself (as Viśvāmitra had done) to the rank of a Brāhman. The eighteenth section (pp. 442-479) contains a series of legends, chiefly from the Mahābhārata, regarding the repeated exterminations of the Kshattriyas by the warlike Brāhman Paraśurāma of the race of Bhrigu, and the ultimate restoration of the warrior tribe, and a variety of extravagant illustrations of the supernatural power of the Brāhmans, related by the god Vāyu to king Arjuna, who began by denying the superiority of the priests, but was at length compelled to succumb to the overwhelming evidence adduced by his aerial monitor.

In the fifth chapter (pp. 480-488) I have given some account of the opinions entertained by Manu, and the authors of the Mahābhārata and the Purānas, regarding the origin of the tribes dwelling within, or adjacent to, the boundaries of Hindustan, but not comprehended in, the Indian caste-system.

The sixth and concluding chapter (pp. 489-504) contains the Puranic accounts of the parts of the earth exterior to Bhāratavarsha, or India, embracing first, the other eight Varshas or divisions of Jambudvīpa, the central continent; secondly, the circular seas and continents (dvīpas) by which Jambudvīpa is surrounded; and, thirdly, the remoter portions of the mundane system.

The Appendix (pp. 505-515) contains some supplementary notes.

As in the previous edition, I have been careful to acknowledge in the text and notes of this volume the assistance which I have derived from the writings of the different Sanskrit Scholars who have treated of the same subjects. It will, however, be well to specify here the various publications to which I have been indebted for materials. In 1858, I wrote thus: "It will be seen at once that my greatest obligations are due to Professor H. H. Wilson, whose translation of the Vishnu Purāna, with abundant and valuable notes, derived chiefly from the other Puranas, was almost indispensable to the successful completion of such an attempt as the present." In this second edition also I have had constant occasion to recur to Wilson's important work, now improved and enriched by the additional notes of the editor Dr. Fitzedward Hall. It is to his edition, so far as it has yet appeared, that my references have been made. I acknowledged at the same time the aid which I had received from M. Langlois' French translation of the Harivamsa, and from M. Burnouf's French translation of the first nine books of the Bhagavata Purana, which opened up an easy access to the contents of the original works. A large amount of materials has also been supplied to me, either formerly or for the preparation of the present edition, by Mr. Colebrooke's Miscellaneous Essays; by Professor C. Lassen's Indian Antiquities; Professor Rudolph Roth's Dissertations on the Literature and History of the Vedas, and contributions to the Journal of the German Oriental Society, and to Weber's Indische Studien, etc.: Professor Weber's numerous articles in the same Journals, and his History of Indian Literature; Professor Max Müller's History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature, Chips from a German Workshop, article on the Funeral rites of the Brāhmans, etc.; Professor Benfey's Glossary of the Sāma Veda, and translations of Vedic hymns; Dr. Haug's text and translation of the Aitareva Brāhmana: while much valuable aid has been derived from the written communications with which I have been favoured by Professor Aufrecht, as well as from his Catalogue of the Bodleian Sanskrit MSS. I am also indebted to Professor Müller for pointing out two texts which will be found in the Appendix, and to Professor Goldstücker for copying for me two passages of Kumārila Bhaṭṭa's Mīmansā-vārttika, which are printed in the same place, and for making some corrections in my translations of them.

I formerly observed that at the same time my own researches had "enabled me to collect a good many texts which I had not found elsewhere adduced;" and the same remark applies to a considerable portion of the new matter which has been adduced in the present edition.

CONTENTS.

PAGES.

- v.-xvi. PREFACE.
- 1—6. INTRODUCTION, CONTAINING A PRELIMINARY SURVEY OF THE SOURCES OF INFORMATION.
- 7-160. CHAPTER I.—MYTHICAL ACCOUNTS OF THE CREATION OF MAN, AND OF THE ORIGIN OF THE FOUR CASTES.
- 7— 15. Sect. I. Ninetieth hymn of the tenth Book of the Rigveda Sanhitā, called Purusha-Sūkta, or the hymn to Purusha.
- 15— 16. Sect. II. Quotation from the Taittirīya Sanhitā, vii. 1, 1, 4 ff.
- 17— 22. Sect. III. Citations from the Satapatha Brāhmana, the Taittirīya Brāhmana, the Vāyasaneyi Sanhitā, and the Atharva-veda.
- 22— 34. Sect. IV. Further quotations from the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, Sanhitā, and Āranyaka, and from the Satapatha Brāhmana.
- 35-42. Sect. V. Manu's account of the origin of castes.
- 43— 49. Sect. VI. Account of the system of yugas, manvantaras, and kalpas, according to the Vishnu Purāna and other authorities.
- 49— 73. Secr. VII. -Account of the different creations, including that of the castes, according to the Vishnu Purana, with some passages from the Brahmanas, containing the germs of the Puranic statements.
- 74—107. Secr. VIII. Account of the different creations, including that of the castes, according to the Vāyu and Mārkandeya Purānas.

- 107-114. SECT. IX. Legend of Brahmā and his daughter, according to the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, and of Satarūpā, according to the Matsya Purāna.
- √114-122. Sect. X. Quotations from the Rāmāyana on the creation, and on the origin of castes.
 - 122-155. Sect. XI. Quotations from the Mahābhārata and Harivamsa on the same subjects, and on the four yugas.
 - 155-158. Sect. XII. Citations from the Bhagavata Purana on the creation and on the origin of castes.
 - 159-160. Sect. XIII. Results of this chapter.
 - 161-238. CHAPTER II. TRADITION OF THE DESCENT OF THE INDIAN RACE FROM MANU.
 - 162-181. Sect. I. On Manu as the progenitor of the Aryan Indians and the institutor of religious rites, according to the hymns of the Rig-veda.
 - 181-196. Sect. II. Legend of Manu and the deluge from the Satapatha Brāhmana, and other notices regarding Manu from the Satapatha, Aitareya, and Taittirīya Brāhmanas, the Taittirīya Sanhitā, and the Chāndogya Upanishad.
 - 196-220. Sect. III. Extracts from the Mahābhārata and the Matsya, Bhāgavata, and Agni Purānas regarding Manu, and the deluge; and comparison of the versions of this legend adduced in this and the preceding section.
 - 220-238. Sect. IV. Legendary accounts of the origin of castes among the descendants of Manu and Atri, according to the Puranas.
 - 239-295. CHAPTER III. ON THE MUTUAL RELATIONS OF THE DIFFERENT CLASSES OF INDIAN SOCIETY, ACCORDING TO THE HYMNS OF THE RIG- AND ATHARVA-VEDAS.
 - 240-265. Sect. I. On the signification of the words brahman and brāhmaṇa, etc., in the Rig-veda.
 - 265-280. Secr. II. Quotations from the Rig-veda, the Nirukta, the Mahābhārata and other works, to show that according to ancient Indian tradition persons not of priestly families were authors of Vedic hymns, and exercised priestly functions.
 - 280-289. Sect. III. Texts from the Atharva-veda, illustrating the progress of Brahmanical pretensions.
 - 289-295. Sect. IV. Opinions of Professor R. Roth and Dr. M. Haug regarding the origin of caste among the Hindus.

- PAGES.
- 296—400. CHAPTER IV.— EARLY CONTESTS BETWEEN THE BRAH-MANS AND THE KSHATTEIYAS.
- 296—298. Sect. I. Manu's summary of refractory and submissive monarchs.
- 298-306. Sect. II. Legend of Vena.
- 306-307. Sect. III. Legend of Pururavas.
 - 307-315. Sect. IV. Story of Nahusha.
 - 316-317. SECT. V. Story of Nimi.
 - 317-337. Sect. VI. Vasishtha, according to the Rig-veda and later works.
 - 337—371. Sect. VII. Viśvāmitra, according to the Rig-veda, Aitareya Brāhmaṇa and later authorities; earlier and later relations of priestly families and the other classes.
 - 371—375. Sect. VIIa. Do the details in the last two sections enable us to decide in what relation Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra stood to each other as priests of Sudās?
 - 375-378. Sect. VIII. Story of Triśanku.
 - 379-388. Sect. IX. Legend of Harischandra.
 - 388—397. Sect. X. Contest of Vasishtha and Visvāmitra, and entrance of the latter into the Brāhman caste, according to the Mahābhārata.
 - 397—411. Sect. XI. The same legend, and those of Triśanku, and Ambarīsha, according to the Rāmāyaṇa, with a further story about Viśvāmitra from the Mahābhārata.
 - 411—414. Sect. XII. Other accounts from the Mahābhārata of the way in which Viśvāmitra became a Brāhman.
 - 414—426. Sect. XIII. Legend of Saudāsa, and further story of the rivalry of Vasishtha and Visvāmitra, according to the Mahābhārata, with an extract from the Rāja Taranginī.
 - 426—430. Sect. XIV. Story from the Satapatha Brāhmana about king Janaka becoming a Brāhman, with extracts from the Mahābhārata about the same prince.
 - 431—436. Sect. XV. Other instances in which Brāhmans are said to have been instructed in divine knowledge by Kshattriyas.
 - 436—440. Sect. XVI. Story of king Viśvantara and the Syāparna Brāhmans.
 - 440-442. Sect. XVII. Story of Matanga, who tried in vain to raise himself to the position of a Brāhman.

PAGES

- 442—479. Secr. XVIII. Legend of the Brāhman Paraśurāma, the exterminator of the Kshattriyas, according to the Mahābhārata and the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, with a series of narratives from the former work illustrating the superhuman power of the Brāhmans.
- 480—488. CHAPTER V. RELATION OF THE BRAHMANICAL INDIANS TO THE NEIGHBOURING TRIBES, ACCORDING TO MANU, THE MAHABHARATA, AND THE PURANAS.
- 489—504. CHAPTER VI. Puranic accounts of the parts of the earth exterior to Bhāratavarsha, or India.
- 505-516. APPENDIX, CONTAINING SUPPLEMENTARY NOTES.

517-532. INDEX.

ERRATA ET CORRIGENDA.

Page 23, line 19, for "beingy ellow" read "being yellow." ,, 38, ,, 17 ff., for "59-64" read "58-63." 42, .. 4 from foot, for "p. 36" read "p. 37." " 46, " 26, for "p. 42" read "p. 43." ,, 47, ,, 8, for "12,826" read "iii. 826." " 51, " 17, for "Purushottasna" read "Purushottama." 19, for "to" read "tu." ,, 123, ,, 18 f., for "the two by which these three are followed," read "two of ., 127, ,, those which follow, viz. in pp. 134 and 139." , 136, ,, 18, for "116" read "11 and 12." 26, for "Vivaswat" read "Vivasvat." ,, 169, ,, " 170, " 28 and 33, for "Mātariswan" read Mātarisvan." ,, 171, ,, 26, for "As'wins" read "Asvins." " 180, " 28, before " Prajāpatir " insert "ii. 33." " 194, " 5, for "mā bhaja" read "mā ābhaja." 221, ,, 20, before "Prishadhras" insert "iv. 1, 12." 7, for "ix. 2" read "ix. 2, 16." -- ,, 13, before "Nabhago" insert "iv. 1, 14."

", 235, ", 19, for "iv." read "ix."
", 251, ", 27, for "3" read "2."
", 258, ", 3 from the foot, for "viii." read "vii."
", 274, ", 8, for "Dilipāt" read "Dilīpāt."
", 280, ", 14, for "was" read "were."
", 307, ", 10, for "virāt" read "virāj."
", 308, ", 24, before "Nahusho" insert "12460."
", 318, ", 4, for "139 f." read "161 f."

,, 318, ,, 4, for "139 f." read "161 f." ,, 371, ,, 12, for "vii." read "viia."

" 399, " 18, for "58, 18" read "56, 18."

" 487, " 2, for "thei rdesertion" read "their desertion."

ORIGINAL SANSKRIT TEXTS.

PART FIRST.

INTRODUCTION

CONTAINING A PRELIMINARY SURVEY OF THE SOURCES OF INFORMATION.

I PROPOSE in the present volume to give some account of the traditions, legends, and mythical narratives which the different classes of ancient Indian writings contain regarding the origin of mankind, and the classes or castes into which the Hindus have long been distributed. In order to ascertain whether the opinions which have prevailed in India on these subjects have continued fixed and uniform from the earliest period, or whether they have varied from age to age. and if so, what modifications they have undergone, it is necessary that we should first of all determine the chronological order of the various works from which our information is to be drawn. This task of classification can, as far as regards its great outlines, be easily accomplished. Although we cannot discover sufficient grounds for fixing with any precision the dates of these different books, we are perfectly able to settle the order in which the most important of those which are to form the basis of this investigation were composed. From a comparison of these several literary records, it will be found that the Hindus, like all other civilized nations, have passed through various stages of development,—social, moral, religious, and intellectual. The ideas and beliefs which are exhibited in their oldest documents, are not the same as those which we encounter in their later writings.

The principal books to which we must look for information on the subjects of our enquiry are the Vedas, including the Brāhmaṇas and Upanishads, the Sūtras, the Institutes of Manu, and the Itihāsas and Purāṇas. Of these different classes of works, the Vedas are allowed by all competent enquirers to be by far the most ancient.

There are, as every student of Indian literature is aware, four Vedas,—the Rig-veda, the Sāma-veda, the Yajur-veda, and the Atharva-veda. Each of the collections of works known as a Veda consists of two parts, which are called its mantra and its brāhmaṇa.¹ The Mantras are either metrical hymns, or prose forms of prayer. The Rig-veda and the Sāmaveda consist only of mantras of the former description. The Brāhmanas contain regulations regarding the employment of the mantras, and the celebration of the various rites of sacrifice, and also embrace certain treatises called Āraṇyakas, and others called Upanishads or Vedāntas (so called from their being the concluding portions of each Veda), which expound the mystical sense of some of the ceremonies, and discuss the nature of the godhead, and the means of acquiring religious knowledge with a view to final liberation.

The part of each Veda which contains the mantras, or hymns, is called its Sanhitā.² Thus the Rig-veda Sanhitā means the collection of hymns belonging to the Rig-veda. Of the four collections of hymns, that belonging to the last-mentioned Veda, which contains no less than 1,017 of these compositions, is by far the most important for historical purposes. Next in value must be reckoned those hymns of the Atharvaveda, which are peculiar to that collection, another portion of which, however, is borrowed, in most cases, verbatim, from the Rig-veda.³

¹ Sāyaṇa says in his commentary on the Rigveda (vol. p. i. p. 4): Mantra-brāh maṇātmakam tāvad aḍushṭam lakshaṇam | ata eva Āpastambo yajna-paribhāshāyām evāha 'mantra-brāhmaṇayor veda-nāmadheyam' | "The definition (of the Veda) as a book composed of mantra and brāhmaṇa, is unobjectionable. Hence Āpastamba says in the Yajnaparibhāshā, 'Mantra and Brāhmaṇa have the name of Veda.'"

² This definition applies to all the Sanhitās, except that of the Taittirīya, or Black Yajur, Veda, in which Mantra and Brāhmaṇa are combined. But even this Sanhitā had a separate Brāhmaṇa connected with it. See Müller's Anc. Sansk. Lit. p. 350, and Weber's Indische Literaturgeschichte, p. 83. The general character of the Vājasaneyi and Atharva Sanhitās is not affected by the fact that the last section of the former is an Upanishad, and that the fifteenth book of the latter has something of the nature of a Brāhmaṇa.

³ For further information on the Vedas, reference may be made to Professor Max Müller's Ancient Sanskrit Literature, passim, and also to vols. ii. iii. and iv. of the present work.

From this succinct account of the contents of the Vedas, it is clear that the Mantras must constitute their most ancient portions, since the Brāhmanas, which regulate the employment of the hymns, of necessity pre-suppose the earlier existence of the latter. On this subject the commentator on the Taittirīya, or Black Yajur-veda, Sanhitā thus expresses himself (p. 9 of the Calcutta edition):—

Yadyapi mantrabrāhmaṇātmako vedas tathāpi brāhmaṇasya mantravyākhāna-rūpatvād mantrā evādau samāmnātāḥ | "Although the Veda is formed both of Mantra and Brāhmaṇa, yet as the Brāhmaṇa consists of an explanation of the Mantras, it is the latter which were at first recorded."

The priority of the hymns to the Brāhmanas is accordingly attested by the constant quotations from the former which are found in the latter." Another proof that the hymns are far older than any other portion of Indian literature is to be found in the character of their language. They are composed in an ancient dialect of the Sanskrit, containing many words of which the sense was no longer known with certainty in the age of Yāska, the author of the Nirukta,6 and many grammatical forms which had become obsolete in the time of the great grammarian Pānini, who refers to them as peculiar to the hymns (chhandas).7 A third argument in favour of the greater antiquity of the mantras is supplied by the fact that the gods whom they represent as the most prominent objects of adoration, such as Indra and Varuna, occupy but a subordinate position in the Itihasas and Puranas, whilst others. viz., Vishnu and Rudra, though by no means the most important deities of the hymns, are exalted to the first rank, and assume a different character, in the Puranic pantheon.8

⁴ See also the passage quoted from the Nirukta in p. 174 of the 2nd vol. of this work, and that cited from Sāyaṇa in p. 195 of the same vol. Compare the the following passage of the Muṇḍaka Upanishad, i. 2, 1: Tad etat satyam mantreshu karmāṇi kavayo yāny apasyams tāni tretāyām bahuāhā santatāni | "This is true: the rites which the rishis saw (i.e. discovered by revelation) in the hymns—these rites were in great variety celebrated in the Tretā (age)."

⁵ See vol. ii. of this work, p. 195, and the article on the "Interpretation of the Veda" in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, vol. ii. new series, pp. 316 ff.

⁶ See vol. ii. of this work, pp. 178 ff, and my article on the "Interpretation of the Veda" in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, vol. ii. new series, pp. 323 ff.

⁷ See vol. ii. of this work, pp. 216 ff.

⁸ See vol. ii. of this work, 212 ff, and vol. iv. 1, 2, and passin.

On all these grounds it may be confidently concluded that the mantras, or hymns, of the Rig-veda are by far the most ancient remains of Indian literature. The hymns themselves are of different periods, some being older, and some more recent. This is shown not only by the nature of the case,—as it is not to be supposed that the whole of the contents of such a large national collection as the Rigveda Sanhitā should have been composed by the men of one, or even two, generations,-but also by the frequent references which occur in the mantras themselves to older rishis, or poets, and to older hymns.9 It is, therefore, quite possible that a period of several centuries may have intervened between the composition of the oldest and that of the most recent of these poems. But if so, it is also quite conceivable that in this interval considerable changes may have taken place in the religious ideas and ceremonies, and in the social and ecclesiastical institutions of the people among whom these hymns were produced, and that some traces of these changes may be visible on comparing the different hymns with each other.

No sufficient data exist for determining with exactness the period at which the hymns were composed. Professor Müller divides them into two classes, the Mantras or more recent hymns, which he supposes may have been produced between 1000 and 800 years, -and the older hymns, to which he applies the name of Chhandas, and which he conceives may have been composed between 1200 and 1000 years,before the Christian era. Other scholars are of opinion that they may be even older (see Müller's Anc. Sansk. Lit., p. 572, and the Preface to the 4th Vol of the same author's edition of the Rig-veda, pp. iv.-xiii). This view is shared by Dr. Haug, who thus writes in his introduction to the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, p. 47: "We do not hesitate, therefore, to assign the composition of the bulk of the Brāhmanas to the years 1400-1200 B.C.; for the Samhita we require a period of at least 500-600 years, with an interval of about two hundred years between the end of the proper Brahmana period. Thus we obtain for the bulk of Samhitā the space from 1400-2000; the oldest hymns and sacrificial formulas may be a few hundred years more ancient still, so that we would fix the very commencement of Vedic literature between 2000-2400 B.c."

⁹ See vol. ii. of this work, pp. 206 ff., and vol. iii. pp. 116 ff., 121 ff.

Next in order of time to the most recent of the hymns come of course, the Brahmanas. Of these (1) the Aitareva and Sankhavana are connected with the Rig-veda: (2) the Tandva, the Panchavimsa and the Chhandogva with the Sama-veda; (3) the Taittirīva with the Taittirīva or Black Yajur-veda: (4) the Satapatha with the Vājasanevi Sanhitā or White Yajur-veda; and (5) the Gopatha with the Atharva-veda.10 These works, written in prose, prescribe, as I have already intimated, the manner in which the Mantras are to be used and the various rites of sacrifice to be celebrated. They also expound the mystical signification of some of the ceremonies, and adduce a variety of legends to illustrate the origin and efficacy of some of the ritual prescriptions. That in order of age the Brāhmanas stand next to the Mantras is proved by their simple antiquated, and tautological style, as well as by the character of their language, which, though approaching more nearly than that of the hymns, to classical or Pāninean Sanskrit, is yet distinguished by certain archaisms both of vocabulary and of grammatical form which are unknown to the Itihasas and Puranas.11 The most recent portions of the Brāhmanas are the Aranyakas and Upanishads, of which the character and contents have been already summarily indicated. The remaining works which form the basis of our investigations come under the designation of Smriti, as distinguished from that of Sruti, which is anplied to the Mantras, Brāhmanas, Aranyakas, and Upanishads.

The term Smriti includes (1) the Vedāngas, such as the Nirukta of Yāska, (2) the Sûtras or aphorisms, śrauta and grihya, or sacrificial and domestic, etc., (3) the Institutes of Manu, (4) the Itihāsas and Purānas. To the class of Itihāsas belong (1) the Rāmāyana (said to be the work of Valmīki), which contains an account in great part, at least, fabulous, of the adventures of Rāma, and the Mahābhārata, which describes the wars and adventures of the Kurus and Pāndus, and embraces also a great variety of episodes and numerous mythological narratives, as well as religious, philosophical, and political discussions, which are interwoven with, or interpolated in, the framework of the poem. This and ii. 6, 7, 1.

11 See, for example, the S'. P. Br. xi. 5, 1, 15; and the Taitt. Sanhita, ii. 2, 10, 2,

¹⁰ For further details on these Brähmanas, the reader may consult Professor Max Müller's Anc. Sansk. Lit. pp. 345 ff.; Professor Weber's Indische Literaturgeschichte, and Indische Studien; and Dr. Haug's Aitareya Brahmana.

work is said to be the production of Vyāsa, but its great bulk, its almost encyclopædic character, and the discrepancies in doctrine which are observable between its different parts, lead inevitably to the conclusion that it is not the composition of a single author, but has received large additions from a succession of writers, who wished to obtain currency and authority for their several opinions by introducing them into this great and venerated repository of national tradition.¹³

The Purānas are commonly said to be eighteen in number, in addition to certain inferior works of the same description called Upapurānas. For an account of these books and a summary of their contents, I must refer to the late Professor H. H. Wilson's introduction to his translation of the Vishnu Purāna.¹³

In treating the several topics which are to be handled in this volume, I propose in each case to adduce, first, any texts bearing upon it which may be found in the hymns of the Rig-veda; next, those in the Brāhmanas and their appendages; and, lastly, those occurring in any of the different classes of works coming under the designation of Smriti. By this means we shall learn what conceptions or opinions were entertained on each subject by the oldest Indian authors, and what were the various modifications to which these ideas were subjected by their successors.

¹² On the Rāmāyana and Mahābhārata, see Professor Monier Williams's "Indian Epie Poetry," which contains a careful analysis of the leading narrative of each of the poems.

¹³ See also the same author's analyses of the contents of the Vishnu, Vāyu, Agni, and Brāhma-vaivartta Purānas in the "Gleanings of Science," published in Calcutta, and those of the Brāhma and Pādma Purānas in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, No. ix (1838) and No. x. (1839).

CHAPTER I.

MYTHICAL ACCOUNTS OF THE CREATION OF MAN, AND OF THE ORIGIN OF THE FOUR CASTES.

It will be seen from the different texts to be adduced in this chapter, that from a very early period the Indian writers have propounded a great variety of speculations regarding the origin of mankind, and of the classes or castes into which they found their own community divided. The most commonly received of these explanations is the fable which represents the Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaisyas, and Sūdras, to have been separately created from the head, the breast or arms, the thighs, and the feet of the Creator. Of this mythical account no trace is to be found in any of the hymns of the Rig-veda, except one, the Purusha Sūkta.

Although for reasons which will be presently stated, I esteem it probable that this hymn belongs to the most recent portion of the Rigveda, it will be convenient to adduce and to discuss it first, along with certain other texts from the Brāhmaṇas, Itihāsas, and Purāṇas, which professedly treat of the origin of mankind and of caste, before we proceed to examine the older parts of the hymn-collection, with the view of ascertaining what opinion the authors of them appear to have entertained in regard to the earliest history of their race, and to the grounds of those relations which they found subsisting between the different classes of society contemporary with themselves.

Sect. I.—90th Hymn of the 10th Book of the Rig-veda Sanhitā, called Purusha Sūkta, or the hymn to Purusha.

This celebrated hymn contains, as far as we know, the oldest extant passage which makes mention of the fourfold origin of the Hindu race.

In order to appreciate the character of this passage, we must consider it in connection with its context. I therefore quote the whole of the hymn:¹⁴

R. V. x. 90. 1. Sahasra-śīrshā Purushah sahasrākshah sahasrapāt | sa bhūmim viśvato vritvā atyatishṭhad daśāngulam | 2. Purushaḥ evedam sarvam yad bhūtam yachcha bhāvyam | utāmritatvasyeśāno yad annenātirohati | 3. Etāvān asya mahimā ato jyāyāmscha Pūrushah | pādo 'sya viśvā bhūtāni tripād asyāmṛitam divi | 4. Tripād ūrdhva ud ait Pūrushah pādo 'syehābhavat punah | tato vishvan vyakrāmat sāśanānaśane abhi | 5. tasmād Virāl ajāyata Virājo adhi Pūrushaḥ | sa jāto aty arichyata paśchād bhūmim atho puraḥ | 6. Yat Purushena havishā devāh yajnam atanvata | vasanto asyāsīd ājyam grīshmah idhmah śarad havih | 7. Tam yajnam barhishi praukshan Purusham jātam agratah | tena devāh ayajanta sādhyāh rishayaś cha ye | 8. Tasmād yajnāt sarvahutah sambhritam prishadājyam | paśūn tāmś chakre vāyavyān āranyān grāmyāś cha ye | 9. Tasmād yajnāt sarvahutaḥ richah sāmāni jajnire | chhandāmsi jajnire tasmād yajus tasmād ajāyata | 10. Tasmād aśvā ajāyanta ye ke cha ubhayādatah | gāvo ha jajnire tasmāt tasmāj jātāḥ ajāvayaḥ | 11. Yat Purusham vi adadhuh katidhā vi akalpayan | mukham kim asya kau bāhū kā ūrū pādā uchyete | 12. Brāhmano 'sya mukham āsīd bāhū rājanyah kritah | ūrū tad asya yad vaisyah padbhyām śūdro ajāyata | 13. chandramāḥ manaso jātaś chakshoḥ sūryo ajāyata | mukhād Indraś cha Agniś cha prānād Vāyur ajāyata | 14. Nābhyāh āsīd antariksham śīrshno dyauh samavarttata | padbhyām bhūmir diśah śrotrāt tathā lokān akalpayan | 15. Saptāsyāsan paridhayas trih sapta samidhah kritāh | devāh yad yajnam tanvānāh abadhnan Purusham paśum | 16. Yajnena yajnam ayajanta devās tāni dharmāni pratha-

The Purusha Sūkta is also found in the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā of the White Yajar-veda (31. 1-16) and in the Atharva-veda (19. 6. 1 ff.) See Colebrooke's Miscellaneous Essays, i. 167 f., and note in p. 309 (or pp. 104, and 197, of Messrs. Williams and Norgate's edition); Burnouf's Bhāgavata Purāna, vol. i. Preface, pp. cxxiii. ff.; Wilson's Preface to his translation of the Rigveda, vol. i. p. xliv.; Professor Roth's remarks in the Journal of the German Oriental Society, i. pp. 78 f.; Müller in Bunsen's Philosophy of Univ. History, vol. i. p. 344; 'Müller's Anc. Sank. Lit., pp. 570 f.; Professor Weber's translation in Indische Studien ix. p. 5; and my own translation, notes and remarks in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1865, pp. 353 ff., and for 1866, pp. 282 f.

māni āsan | te ha nākam mahimānah sachanta yatra pūrve sādh-yāh santi devāh |

"1. Purusha has a thousand heads,¹⁵ a thousand eyes, a thousand feet. On every side enveloping¹⁶ the earth, he overpassed ¹⁷ (it) by a space of ten fingers. 2. Purusha himself is this whole (universe), whatever has been and whatever shall be. He is also the lord of immortality, since (or, when) by food he expands.¹⁵ 3. Such is his greatness, and Purusha is superior to this. All existences are a quarter of him; and three-fourths of him are that which is immortal in the sky.¹⁹ 4. With three quarters Purusha mounted upwards. A quarter of him was again produced here. He was then diffused everywhere over things which eat and things which do not eat. 5. From him was was born Virāj, and from Virāj, Purusha.²⁰ When born, he extended beyond the earth, both behind and before. 6. When the gods performed a sacrifice with Purusha as the oblation, the spring was its butter, the summer its fuel, and the autumn its (accompanying) offering.

7. This victim, Purusha, born in the beginning, they immolated on 15 The Atharva-veda (xix. 6, 1) reads sahasra-bāhuḥ, "having a thousand arms," the transcriber, perhaps, taking the verse literally, and considering that a being in human form, if he had a thousand eyes and a thousand feet, ought only to have five hundred heads, and not a thousand as in the text of the Rig-veda.

¹⁶ For $vritv\bar{a}$ in the R. V. the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā, 31. 1, reads $spritv\bar{a}$, which seems to mean nearly the same.

17 The word is atyatishthat. Compare the S'atapatha Brāmaṇa, xiii. 6, 1, 1, and atishthāvānah in S'. P. B. iv. 5, 4, 1, 2. Professor Weber renders atyatishthat "occupies" (Indische Studien, ix. 5).

18 The sense of this is obscure. Instead of yad annenātirohati, the A. V. reads yad annenāthavat saha, ("that which," or, "since he) was with another."

19 Compare A. V. x. 8, 7: ardhena visvam bhuvanam jajāna yad asya ardham kva tad babhūva: "with the half he produced the whole world; what became of the (other) half of him?" See also ibid. v. 13.

This sentence is illustrated by R. V. x. 72, 5, where it is said, Aditer Daksho ajāyata Dakshād u Aditih pari | "Aditi was born from Daksha and Daksha from Aditi"—a text on which Yāska remarks (Nirukta, xi. 23): tat katham upapadyeta | samāna-janmānau syātām iti | api vā deva-dharmeṇa īturetara-janmānau syātām itaretatara-prakritī | "how can this be possible? They may have had a common birth; or, conformably with their nature as deities, they may have been produced from one another, and possess the properties of one another." Compare A. V. 13. 4. 29 ff., where Indra is said to have been produced from a great many other gods, or entities, and they reciprocally from him. In regard to Virāj, compare the notes on the verse before us in my article on the "Progress of the Vedic religion," etc., in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1865, p. 354.

the sacrificial grass. With him the gods, the Sadhyas,21 and the rishis sacrificed. 8. From that universal sacrifice were provided curds and butter. It formed those aerial 22 (creatures) and animals both wild and tame. 9. From that universal sacrifice sprang the rich and saman verses, the metres, and the yajush. 10. From it sprang horses, and all animals with two rows of teeth; kine sprang from it; from it goats and sheep. 11. When (the gods) divided Purusha, into how many parts did they cut him up? what was his mouth? what arms (had he)? what (two objects) are said (to have been) his thighs and feet? 12. The Brāhman was his mouth;28 the Rājanya was made his arms; the being (called) the Vaisya, he was his thighs;24 the Sūdra sprang from his feet. 13. The moon sprang from his soul (manas), the sun from his eye, Indra and Agni from his mouth, and Vayu from his breath.25 14. From his navel arose the air, from his head the sky, from his feet the earth, from his ear the (four) quarters: in this manner (the gods) formed the worlds. 15. When the gods, performing sacrifice, bound Purusha as a victim, there were seven sticks (stuck up) for it ²¹ See on the Sādhyas, Professor Weber's note, Ind. St. ix. 6 f., and the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1866, p. 395, note.

²² See, however, Vaj. Sanh. xiv. 30, to be quoted below.

²³ Compare the Kaushītakī Brāhmana Upanishad, ii. 9: atha paurnamāsyām purastāch chandramasam drišyamānam upatishtheta etayā eva āvritā "somo rājāsi vichakshano pancha mukho'si prajapatih | brahmanas te ekam mukham | tena mukhena rājno 'tsi | tena mukhena mām annādam kuru | rājā te ekam mukham | tena mukhena viśo tsi | tena mukhena mām annādam kuru | syenas te ekam mukham "ityādi | which is thus translated by Mr. Cowell: "Next on the day of the full moon let him in this same way adore the moon when it is seen in front of him (saying), 'thou art Soma, the brilliant, the wise, the five-mouthed, the lord of creatures. The Brahman is one mouth of thine, with that mouth thou eatest kings, with that mouth make me to eat food. The king is one mouth of thine, with that mouth thou eatest common men, with that mouth make me to eat food. The hawk is one mouth of thine," etc. The fourth mouth is fire, and the fifth is in the moon itself. I should prefer to render the words somo rājā'si, "thou art king Soma,"-"king" being a frequent designation of this god in the Brahmanas. See also M. Bh. iii. 12,962, where Vishnu is introduced as saying in the same mystical way: Brahma vaktram bhujau kshattram ūrū me samsthitāh vis'ah | pādau s'ūdrāh bhavantīme vikramena kramena cha | "The Brahman is my mouth; the Kshattra is my arms; the Visas are my thighs; these S'ūdras with their vigour and rapidity are my feet."

²⁴ Instead of ūrū, "thighs," the Atharva-veda, xix. 6, 6, reads madhyam, "middle.' 25 The Vāj. S. xxxi. 13, has a different and singular reading of the last half verse: s'rotrād vāyus'cha prāṇas' cha muklād agnir ajāyata | "From his ear came Vāyu and Prāṇa (breath) and from his mouth Agni."

(around the fire), and thrice seven pieces of fuel were made. 16. With sacrifice the gods performed the sacrifice. These were the earliest rites. These great powers have sought the sky, where are the former Sādhyas, gods."²⁶

I have above (p. 7) intimated an opinion that this hymn does not belong to the most ancient portion of the Rig-veda. This view is, however, controverted by Dr. Haug, who, in his tract on "the origin of Brāhmanism" (published at Poona in 1863), p. 5, writes as follows: "The few scholars who have been engaged in the study of the Vedas unanimously regard this hymn as a very late production of Vedic poetry; but there is no sufficient evidence to prove that. On the contrary, reasons might be adduced to shew that it is even old. The mystical character of the hymn is no proof at all of its late origin. Such allegorical hymns are to be met with in every book of the collection of the mantras, which goes by the name of Rig-veda samhitā. The Rishis, who were the authors of these hymns, delighted in such speculations. They chiefly were suggested to them by the sacrificial rites, which they daily were performing. According to the position which is assigned to it in the Yajur-veda (where it is found among the formulas referring to the human sacrifice), the hymn appears to have been used at the human sacrifices. That, at the earliest period of the Vedic time, human sacrifices were quite common with the Brahmans, can be proved beyond any doubt. But the more eminent and distinguished among their leaders soon abandoned the practice as revolting to human feelings. The form of the sacrifice, however, seems to have been kept for a long time; for the ritual required at that occasion is actually in the Yajur-veda; but they only tied men of different castes and classes to the sacrificial posts, and released them afterwards, sacrificing animals instead of them."

If it could be satisfactorily shewn that this hymn, in the same form as we now possess it, existed contemporaneously with the barbarous practice of human sacrifices which Dr. Haug believes to have at one time prevailed in India, we should, no doubt, have in this circumstance a strong proof of its antiquity. But if it was merely adopted as a part of the ceremonial at a later period, when the immolation of human beings had ceased to be otherwise than formal and nominal, and animals were substituted as the actual victims, the evidence of its remote antiquity is greatly weakened.

²⁶ This verse occurs also in R. V. i. 164. 50, and is quoted in Nirukta, xii. 14. See the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1866, p. 395, note, already referred to.

If we now compare the Purusha Sūkta with the two hymns (162 and 163) of the first Mandala of the Rig-veda, it will, I think, be apparent that the first is not adapted to be used at a literal human sacrifice in the same manner as the last two are to be employed at the immolation of a horse. There are, no doubt, some mystical passages in the second of these two hymns, as in verse 3, where the horse is identified with Yama, Āditya, and Trita; and "in the last section of the Taittirīya Yajurveda the various parts of the horse's body are described as divisions of time and portions of the universe: 'morning is his head; the sun his eye; the air his breath; the moon his ear," etc. (Colebrooke's Essays, i. 62).27 But the persons who officiate at the sacrifice, as referred to in these hymns, are ordinary priests of the ancient Indian ritual,—the hotri, adhvaryu, āvayaj, etc. (i. 162, 5); and details are given of the actual slaughter of the animal (i. 162, 11). The Purusha Sükta, however does not contain the same indications of the literal immolation of a human victim. In it the sacrifice is not offered to the gods, but by the gods (verses 6, 7, 15, 16); no human priests are mentioned; the division of the victim (v. 11) must be regarded, like its slaughter (v. 7), as the work of the deities only. And the Purusha mentioned in the hymn could not well have been regarded as an ordinary man, as he is identified with the universe (v. 2), and he himself, or his immolation, is represented as the source of the creation (vv. 8, 10, 13, 14). and of the Vedas (v. 9).

As compared with by far the largest part of the hymns of the Rigveda, the Purusha Sükta has every character of modernness both in its diction and ideas. I have already observed that the hymns which we find in this collection are of very different periods. This, I believe, is not disputed.²⁸ The authors themselves, as we have seen, speak of newer and older hymns. So many as a thousand compositions of this description could scarcely have been produced within a very short space of time, and there is no reason to suppose that the literary activity of the ancient Hindus was confined to the period immediately preceding the collection of the hymns. But if we are to recognize any difference of age, what hymns can we more reasonably suppose to be the oldest than those which are at once archaic in language and style, and naive and simple in the character of their conceptions? and, on the other hand, what compositions can more properly be set down as the most recent than those which manifest an advance in speculative ideas, while their language approaches to the modern Sanskrit? These latter conditions seem to be fulfilled in the Purusha Sūkta, as well as in hymns x. 71 and 72, x. 81 and 82, x. 121, and x. 129.

²⁷ Compare the commencement of the Brihadaranyaka Upanishad.

²⁸ See Dr. Haug's own remarks (quoted above, p. 4) on the period when the hymns were composed.

On this subject Mr. Colebrooke states his opinion as follows (Miscellaneous Essays i. 309, note): "That remarkable hymn (the Purusha Sūkta) is in language, metre, and style, very different from the rest of the prayers with which it is associated. It has a decidedly more modern tone; and must have been composed after the Sanscrit language had been refined, and its grammar and rhythm perfected. The internal evidence which it furnishes serves to demonstrate the important fact that the compilation of the Vedas, in their present arrangement, took place after the Sanscrit tongue had advanced from the rustic and irregular dialect in which the multitude of hymns and prayers of the Veda was composed, to the polished and sonorous language in which the mythological poems, sacred and prophane (purānas and cāvyas), have been written."

Professor Max Müller expresses himself in a similar sense (Anc. Sansk. Lit., p. 570 f.): "There can be little doubt, for instance, that the 90th hymn of the 10th book is modern both in its character and in its diction. It is full of allusions to the sacrificial ceremonials, it uses technical philosophical terms, it mentions the three seasons in the order of Vasanta, spring; Grishma, summer; and S'arad, autumn; it contains the only passage in the Rig-veda where the four castes are enumerated. The evidence of language for the modern date of this composition is equally strong. Grishma, for instance, the name for the hot season, does not occur in any other hymn of the Rig-veda; and Vasanta also, the name of spring, does not belong to the earliest vocabulary of the Vedic poets. It occurs but once more in the Rig-veda (x. 161. 4), in a passage where the three seasons are mentioned in the order of S'arad, autumn; Hemanta, winter; and Vasanta, spring."

Professor Weber (Indische Studien, ix. 3) concurs in this view. He observes: "That the Purusha Sūkta, considered as a hymn of the Rig-veda, is among the latest portions of that collection, is clearly perceptible from its contents. The fact that the Sāma-sanhitā has not adopted any verse from it, is not without importance (compare what I have remarked in my Academical Prelections, p. 63). The Naigeya school, indeed, appears (although it is not quite certain), to have extracted the first five verses in the seventh prapāṭhaka of the first Archika, which is peculiar to it."

We shall see in the following chapter that the word $br\bar{a}hmana$ occurs but rarely in the Rig-veda Sanhitā, while brahman, "a priest," from which the former is derived, is of constant occurrence. From this circumstance also, it may be reasonably concluded that the hymns in which the derivative occurs are among the latest. The same remark may be made of the word vaisya, as compared with vis.³⁰

Mr. Colebrooke's opinion of the character of the Purusha Sukta is given in the following passage of his "Miscellaneous Essays" (vol. i. p. 161, note; or p. 105 of Williams & Norgate's ed. of 1858); "I think it unnecessary to quote from the commentary the explanation of this eurious passage of the Vedas as it is there given, because it does not really elucidate the sense; the allegory is for the most part sufficiently obvious.

In his tract on "on the origin of Brahmanism," p. 4, Dr. Haug thus remarks on verses 11 and 12: "Now, according to this passage, which is the most ancient and authoritative we have on the origin of Brahmanism, and caste in general, the Brahman has not come from the mouth of this primary being, the Purusha, but the mouth of the latter became the Brahmanical caste, that is to say, was transformed into it. The passage has, no doubt, an allegorical sense. Mouth is the seat of speech. The allegory thus points out that the Brahmans are teachers and instructors of mankind. The arms are the seat of strength. If the two arms of the Purusha are said to have been made a Kshattriya (warrior), that means, then, that the Kshattriyas have to carry arms to defend the empire. That the thighs of the Purusha were transformed into the Vaisya means that, as the lower parts of the body are the principal repository of food taken, the Vaisya caste is destined to provide food for the others. The creation of the Shudra from the feet of the Purusha, indicates that he is destined to be a servant to the others, just as the foot serves the other parts of the body as a firm support."

²⁹ See on this subject Weber's foot-note, p. 3.

⁵⁰ Professor Aufrecht informs me that the word vaisya does not occur in any other hymn of the Rig-veda but the Purusha Sūkta; only once in the Atharva-veda, v. 17, 9; and not at all in the Vāj. Sanh., except in the Purusha Sūkta. The same scholar remarks, as another proof of the comparatively late date of the Purusha Sūkta, that it is the only hymn which refers to the four different kinds of Vedic compositions rich, samān, chhandas, and yajush.

But whether the writer of the hymn intended it to be understood allegorically or not, it conveys no distinct idea of the manner in which he supposed the four castes to have originated. It is, indeed, said that the S'ūdra sprang from Purusha's feet; but as regards the three superior castes and the members with which they are respectively connected, it is not quite clear which (i.e., the castes or the members) are to be taken as the subjects and which as the predicates, and consequently, whether we are to suppose verse 12 to declare that the three castes were the three members, or, conversely, that the three members were, or became, the three castes.

But whatever may be the sense of the passage, it is impossible to receive it as enunciating any fixed doctrine of the writers of what is called the Vedic age in regard to the origin of the four castes; since we find, if not in the mantras or hymns, at least in the Brāhmaṇas (which, as we have seen in page 2, are esteemed by orthodox Indian writers as being equally with the hymns a part of the Veda), not only (1) texts which agree with the Purusha Sūkta, but also (2) various other and discrepant accounts of the manner in which these classes were separately formed, as well as (3) third a class of narratives of the creation, in which the production of the human race is described without allusion to any primordial distinction of castes.

To the first of these classes (viz., that of texts which coincide more or less exactly with the Purusha Sūkta) belongs the following passage from the Taittirīya Sanhitā.

SECT. II.—Quotation from the Taittiriya Sanhitā, vii. 1. 1. 4 ff.

Prajūpatir akūmayata "prajūyeya" iti | sa mukhatas trivritam niramimīta | tam Agnir devatā 'nvasūyata gūyatrī chhandro rathantaram

sāma brāhmano manushyānām ajah paśūnām | tasmāt te mukhyāh mukhato hy asrijyanta | uraso bāhubhyām panchadasam niramimīta | tam Indro devatā 'nvasrijyata trishtup chhando brihat sāma rājanyo manushyānām avih paśūnām | tasmāt te vīryāvanto vīryād hy asrijyanta | madhyatah saptadaśam niramimīta | tam Viśvedevāh devatāh anvasrijyanta jagatī chhando vairūpam sāma vaišyo manushyānām gāvah pašūnām | tasmāt te ādyā annadhānād hy asrijyanta | tasmād bhūyāmso 'nyebhyah | bhūyishthāh hi devatāh anvasrijyanta | pattah ekavimsam niramimīta | tam anushtup chhando 'nvasrijyata vairājam sāma śūdro manushyānām aśvah paśūnām | tasmāt tau bhūta-sankrāmināv aśvaś cha śūdraś cha | tasmāt śūdro yajne 'navaklripto na hi devatāh anvasrijyanta | tasmāt pādāv upajīvatah | patto hy asrijyetām | "Prajāpati desired, 'may I propagate.' He formed the Trivrit (stoma) from his mouth. After it were produced the deity Agni, the metre Gāyatrī, the Sāman (called) Rathantara, of men the Brāhman, of beasts the goats. Hence they are the chief (mukhyāh), because they were created from the mouth (mukhatah). From (his) breast, from (his) arms, he formed the Panchadaśa (stoma). it were created the god Indra, the Trishtubh metre, the Saman (called) Brihat, of men the Rajanya, of beasts the sheep. Hence they are vigorous, because they were created from vigour. (his) middle he formed the Saptadaśa (stoma). After it were created the gods (called) the Viśvedevas, the Jagatī metre, the Sāman called the Vairūpa, of men the Vaisya, of beasts kine. Hence they are to be eaten, because they were created from the receptacle of food. Wherefore they are more numerous than others, for the most numerous deities were created after (the Saptadasa). From his foot he formed the Ekavimsa (stoma). After it were created the Anushtubh metre, the Sāman called Vairāja, of men the Sūdra, of beasts the horse. Hence these two, both the horse and the Sudra, are transporters of (other) creatures. Hence (too) the Sudra is incapacitated for sacrifice, because no deities were created after (the Ekavimsa). Hence (too) these two subsist by their feet, for they were created from the foot."

Sect. III.—Citations from the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, the Taittirīya

Brāhmaṇa, the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā, and the Atharva-veda.

The following texts belong to the second class—i.e., that of those which recognize a distinct origination of the castes, but describe their creation differently from the Purusha Sükta:

S. P. Br. ii. 1, 4, 11 ff.—"Bhūr" iti vai Prajāpatir imām ajanayata "bhuvaḥ" ity antariksham "svar" iti divam | etāvad vai idam sarvam yāvad ime lokāḥ | sarveṇa eva ādhīyate | "bhūr" iti vai Prajāpatir brahma ajanayata "bhuvaḥ" iti kshattram "svar" iti viśam | etāvad vai idam sarvam yāvad brahma kshattram viṭ | sarveṇa eva ādhīyate | "bhūr" iti vai Prajāpatir ātmānam ajanayata "bhuvaḥ" iti prajām "svar" iti paśūn | etāvad vai idam sarvam yāvad ātmā prajāḥ paśavaḥ | sarveṇa eva ādhīyate |

"(Uttering) 'bhūḥ,' Prajāpati generated this earth. (Uttering) 'bhuvaḥ,' he generated the air, and (uttering) 'svaḥ,' he generated the sky. This universe is co-extensive with these worlds. (The fire) is placed with the whole. Saying 'bhūḥ,' Prajāpati generated the Brahman; (saying) 'bhuvaḥ,' he generated the Kshattra; (and saying) 'svaḥ,' he generated the Viś. All this world is so much as the Brahman, Kshattra, and Viś. The fire is placed with the whole. (Saying) 'bhūḥ,' Prajāpati generated himself; (saying) 'bhuvaḥ' he generated offspring; (saying) 'svaḥ,' he generated animals. This world is so much as self, offspring, and animals. (The fire) is placed with the whole."

Taitt. Br. iii. 12, 9, 2—Sarvañ hedam brahmaṇā haiva srishṭam | rigbhyo jātam vaiśyam varṇam āhuḥ | yajurvedam kshattriyasyāhur yonim | sāmavedo brāhmaṇānām prasūtiḥ | pūrve pūrvebhyo vacha etad ūchuḥ |

"This entire (universe) has been created by Brahma. Men say that the Vaisya class was produced from rich-verses. They say that the Yajur-veda is the womb from which the Kshattriya was born. The Sāma-veda is the source from which the Brāhmans sprang. This word the ancients declared to the ancients."

To complete his assessed of the desiration of the contact from the Vedas, the author had only to add that the Südras had sprung from the Atharvangirases (the Atharva-veda); but he perhaps considered that to assign such an origin to the servile order would have been to do it too great an honour.

Vājasaneya Sanhitā, xiv. 28 ff. (= Taittirīya Sanhitā, iv. 3, 10, 1).ekayā astuvata prajāh adhīyanta Prajāpatir adhipatir āsīt | tisribhir astuvata brahma asrijyata Brahmanaspatir adhipatir āsīt | panchabhir astuvata bhūtāny asrijyanta Bhūtanāmpatir adhipatir āsīt | saptabhir astuvata sapta rishayo 'srijyanta Dhātā adhipatir āsīt | navabhir astuvata pitaro 'srijyanta Aditir adhipatny āsīt | ekādasabhir astuvata ritavo 'srijyanta ārtavāh adhipatayah āsan| trayodasabhir astuvata māsā asrijyanta samvatsaro 'dhipatir āsīt | pañchadaśabhir astuvata kshattram asrijyata Indro 'adhipatir āsīt | saptadaśabhir astuvata paśavo 'srijyanta Brihaspatir adhipatir āsīt | navadašabhir astuvata šūdrāryāv asrijyetām ahorātre adhipatnī āstām | ekavimsatyā astuvata ekasaphāh pasavo 'srijyanta Varuno 'dhipatir āsīt | trayovimsatyā astuvata kshudrāh pasavo 'srijyanta Pūshā adhipatir āsīt | panchavimsatyā astuvata aranyāḥ paśavo 'srijyanta Vāyur adhipatir āsīt | saptavimśatyā astuvata dyāvāprithivī vyaitām | Vasavo Rudrā Adityāh anuvyāyan | te eva adhipatayah āsan | navavimšatyā astuvata vanaspatayo'srijyanta Somo'dhipatir āsīt | ekatrimsatā astuvata prajā asrijyanta yavās cha ayavās cha adhipatayah āsan | trayastrimsatā asturata bhūtāny asāmyan Prajāpatih Parameshthī adhipatir āsīt

"He lauded with one. Living beings were formed: Prajāpati was the ruler. He lauded with three: the Brahman (Brāhman) was created: Brahmanaspati was the ruler. He lauded with five: existing things were created: Bhūtānāmpati was the ruler. He lauded with seven: the seven rishis were created: Dhātri was the ruler. He lauded with nine: the Fathers were created: Aditi was the ruler. He lauded with eleven: the seasons were created: the Ārtavas were the rulers. He lauded with thirteen: the months were created: the year was the ruler. He lauded with fifteen: the Kshattra (the Kshattriya) was created: Indra was the ruler. He lauded with seventeen: animals were created: Brihaspati was the ruler. He lauded with nineteen: the Sūdra and the Arya (Vaiśya) were created: day and night were the rulers. He lauded with twenty-one: animals with undivided hoofs small animals were created: Pūshan was the ruler. He lauded with twenty-five: wild animals were created: Vāyu was the ruler (compare R.V. x. 90, 8). He lauded with twenty-seven: heaven and earth separated: Vasus, Rudras, and Ādityas separated after them: they were the rulers. He lauded with twenty-nine: trees were created: Soma was the ruler. He lauded with thirty-one: living beings were created: The first and second halves of the month 31 were the rulers. He lauded with thirty-one: existing things were tranquillized: Prajāpati Parameshthin was the ruler." This passage is explained in the Satapatha Brāhmana viii. 4, 3, 1 ff.

The following text is of a somewhat mystical description; but appears to intimate a distinction in nature between the different castes corresponding to that of the gods with whom they are associated:

S. P. Br. xiv. 4, 2, 23 (= Brihadāranyaka Upanishad, i. 4, 11 ff. (p. 235).—Brahma vai idam agre āsīd ekam eva!\ tad ekam san na vyabhavat \ tat śreyo rūpam aty asrijata kshattram yany etani devatra kshattrani Indro Varunah Somo Rudrah Parjanyo Yamo Mrityur İsanah iti | tasmat kshattrāt param nāsti \ tasmād brāhmanah kshattriyād adhastād upāste rājasūye kshattre eva tad yaśo dadhāti | sā eshā kshattrasya yonir yad brahma | tasmād yadyapi rājā paramatām gachhati brahma eva antatah upaniśrayati svām yonim | yah u ha enam hinasti svām sa yonim richhati | sa pāpīyān bhavati yathā śreyānsam himsitvā | 24. Sa na eva vyabhavat sa višam asrijata yāny etāni deva-jātāni ganašah ākhyāyante vasavo rudrāh ādityāh viśvedevāh marutah iti | 25. Sa na eva vyabhavat | sa śaudram varnam asrijata pūshanam | iyam vai pūshā iyam hi idam sarvam pushyati yad idam kincha | 26. Sa na eva vyabhavat | tat śreyo rūpam aty asrijata dharmam | tad etat kshattrasya kshattram yad dharmah | tasmād dharmāt param nāsti | atho abalīyān balīyāmsam āsamsate dharmena yathā rājnā evam | yo vai sa dharmah satyam vai tat | tasmāt satyam vadantam āhur "dharmam vadati" iti | dharmam vā

³¹ The Taittirīya Sanhitā reads $y\bar{a}v\bar{a}h$ and $ay\bar{a}v\bar{a}h$ (instead of $y\bar{a}v\bar{a}h$ and $ay\bar{a}v\bar{a}h$ as in the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā) and in another passage, v. 3, 4, 5 (as I learn from Prof. Aufrecht), explains these terms to mean respectively months and half months $(m\bar{a}s\bar{a}vai\ y\bar{a}v\bar{a}h)$ ardhamāsāh $ay\bar{a}v\bar{a}h$), whilst the commentator on the V. S. understands them to mean the first and second halves of the month, in accordance with the S.P. B. viii. 4, 3, 18, and viii. 4, 2, 11 ($p\bar{u}vvapaksh\bar{a}\ vai\ yav\bar{a}h\ aparapaksha\ ayav\bar{a}h\ |\ te\ hi\ idam\ sarvam\ yuvate\ chayuvate\ chay\ |\ Prof.\ Aufrecht\ also\ points\ out\ that\ yava\ |\ se\ raut$ sexplained in Kātyayana's S'rauta Sūtras, iv. 11, 8, as equivalent to yavamayam\ apupam,

vadantam "satyam vadati" iti | etad hy eva etad ubhayam bhavati | 27. Tad etad brahma kshattram viţ śūdrah | tad Agninā eva deveshu brahmābhavad brāhmano manushyeshu kshattriyena kshattriyo vaiśyena vaiśyah śūdrena śūdrah | tasmād Agnāv eva deveshu lokam ichhante brāhmane manushyeshu | etābhyām hi rūpabhyām brahma abhavat |

23. "Brahma (here, according to the commentator, existing in the form of Agni, and representing the Brāhman caste 32) was formerly this (universe), one only. Being one, it did not develope. It energetically created an excellent form, the Kshattra, viz., those among the gods who are powers (kshattrāṇi), Indra, Varuna, Soma, Rudra, Parjanya, Yama, Mrityu, İśāna. Hence nothing is superior to the Kshattra. Therefore the Brāhman sits below the Kshattriya at the rājasūya-sacrifice: he confers that glory on the Kshattra (the royal power).33 This, the Brahma, is the source of the Kshattra. Hence, although the king attains supremacy, he at the end resorts to the Brahma as his source. Whoever destroys him (the Brāhman) destroys his own source. becomes most miserable, as one who has injured a superior. 24. He did not develope. He created the Viś-viz., those classes of gods who are designated by troops, Vasus, Rudras, Ādityas, Viśvedevas, Maruts. 25. He did not develope. He created the Sudra class, Pushan. This earth is Püshan: for she nourishes all that exists. 26. He did not develope. He energetically created an excellent form, Justice (Dharma). This is the ruler (kshattra) of the ruler (kshattra), namely, Justice. Hence nothing is superior to justice. Therefore the weaker seeks (to overcome) the stronger by justice, as by a king. This justice is truth. In consequence they say of a man who speaks truth, 'he speaks justice; or of a man who is uttering justice, he speaks truth. For this is both of these. 27. This is the Brahma, Kshattra, Viś, and Sūdra. Through Agni it became Brahma among the gods, the Brāhman among men, through the (divine) Kshattriya a (human) Kshattriya, through the (divine) Vaiśya a (human) Vaiśya, through the (divine) Sūdra a (human) Sūdra. Wherefore it is in Agni among the gods and in a Brāhman among men, that they seek after an abode."

²² Atra yad ūtma-śabdenoktań srasktri Brahma tad Agniń srisktvū agre Agni-rūpāpannam Brāhmana-jāty-abhimānavad asmin vākye Brahma-sabdenābhidhīyate |

³³ This rendering of the last few words is suggested by Professor Aufrecht. The commentators understand them to mean that the Brāhmans give the king their own glory (that of being a Brahman): and they refer to a formula by which at the rājasūyasacrifice the king, after addressing the priest as Brāhman, is addressed in return with the word "Thou, king, art a Brāhman" (tvām rājan brahmāsi), etc. See the Taittiriya Sanhitā i. 8, 16, 1, where the commentator remarks. "As in common life domestic priests and others, sitting below a king seated on his throne after his return from conquering a foreign territory, address him with many benedictions and eulogies, so here too service is presented. By this benedictory service the power of cursing and showing kindness existing in the Brāhmans is transferred to the king." Reference is then made to the passage before us, as noticing this custom.

Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, i. 2, 6, 7.—Daivyo vai varno brāhmaṇaḥ | asuryyo śūdrah. "The Brāhman caste is sprung from the gods; the Sūdra from the Asuras."

Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, iii. 2, 3, 9.—Kāmam eva dāru-pātreṇa duhyāt | śūdraḥ eva na duhyāt | asato vai esha sambhūto yat śūdraḥ | ahavir eva tad ity āhur yat śūdro dogdhi iti | agnihotraṃ eva na duhyāt śūdraḥ | tad hi na utpunanti | yadā khalu vai pavitram atyeti atha tad havir iti | "Let him at his will milk out with a wooden dish. But let not a Sūdra milk it out. For this Sūdra has sprung from non-existence. They say that that which a Sūdra milks out is no oblation. Let not a Sūdra milk out the Agnihotra. For they do not purify that. When that passes beyond the filter, then it is an oblation."

Atharva-veda, iv. 6, 1.—Brāhmano jajne prathamo daśaśīrsho dasās-yaḥ | sa somam prathamaḥ papau sa chakārārasam visham | "The Brāhman was born the first, with ten heads and ten faces. He first drank the soma; he made poison powerless."

As the description (which is, perhaps, a fragment of a longer account), stops short here, we are left in the dark as to the author's ideas about the creation of the other castes. It would have interested us to know how many heads and faces he would have assigned to the other three castes. The student of Indian poetry is aware that the giant Rāvana is represented in the Rāmāyana both as a Brāhman and as having ten heads.

As implying a separate origination of the Rājanya caste, the following text also may find a place here:

Taittirīya Sanhitā, ii. 4, 13, 1.—Devā vai rājanyāj jāyamānād abibhayuh | tam antar eva santam dāmnā 'paumbhan | sa vai esho 'pobdho jāyate yad rājanyo | yad vai esho 'napobdho jāyeta vrittrān ghams charet | yam kāmayeta rājanyam "anapobdho jāyeta vrittrān ghams chared" iti tasmai etam aindrā-bārhaspatyam charum nirvapet | aindro vai rājanyo brahma Brihaspatih | brahmanā eva enam dāmno 'pombhanād munchati | hiranmayam dāma dakshinā sākshād eva enam damno 'pombhanād munchati | "The gods were afraid of the Rājanya when he was in the womb. They bound him with bonds when he was in the womb. Consequently this Rājanya is born bound. If he were born unbound he would go on slaying his enemies. In regard to whatever Rājanya any one desires that he should be born unbound, and should go on slaying his enemies, let him offer for him this Aindra-Bārhaspatya oblation. A Rājanya has the character of Indra, and a Brahman is Bṛihaspati. It is through the Brahman that anyone releases the Rājanya from his bond. The golden bond, a gift, manifestly releases from the bond that fetters him."

In the following text of the Atharva-veda, xv. 8, 1, a new account is given of the origin of the Rājanyas:

So 'rajyata tato rājanyo 'jūyata |

"He (the Vrātya) became filled with passion: thence sprang the Rājanya."

And in the following paragraph (A. V. xv. 9, 1 ff) we have the same origin ascribed to the Brāhman also:

Tad yasya evam vidvān vrātyo rājno'tithir grihān āgachhet śreyāmsam enam ātmano mānayet | tathā kshattrāya nāvriśchate tathā rāshtrāya nāvriśchate | ato vai brahma cha kshattram cha udatishthatām | te abrūtām "kam praviśāva" iti |

"Let the king to whose house the Vrātya who knows this, comes as a guest, cause him to be respected as superior to himself. So doing he does no injury to his royal rank, or to his realm. From him arose the Brahman (Brāhman) and the Kshattra (Kshattriya). They said, 'Into whom shall we enter,' etc."

Sect. IV.—Further Quotations from the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, Sanhitā, and Āraṇyaka, and from the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa.

The following passages belong to the third of the classes above adverted to, as in the descriptions they give of the creation, while they refer to the formation of men, they are silent on the subject of any separate origination of castes:

Taittirīya Brāhmana, ii. 3, 8, 1.—Prajāpatir akāmayata "prajāyeya" iti | sa tapo 'tapyata | so 'ntarvān abhavat | sa haritah śyāvo 'bhavat | tasmāt strī antarvatnī harinī satī śvāvā bhavati | sa vijāvamāno garbhena atāmyat | sa tāntah krishna-śyāvo 'bhavat | tasmāt tāntah krishnah śyāvo bhavati | tasya asur eva ajīvat | 2. Tena asunā asurān asrijata | tad asurānam asuratvam | ya evam asurānām asuratvam veda asumān eva bhavati | na enam asur jahāti | so 'surān srishţvā pitā iva amanyata | tad anu pitrīn asrijata \ tat pitrīnām pitritvam \ ya evam pitrīnām pitritvam veda pitā iva eva svānām bhavati (3) yanty asya pitaro havam 1 sa pitrīn srishtvā 'manasyat | tad anu manushyān asrijata | tad manushyanam manushyatvam | yah evam manushyanam manushyatvam veda manasvī eva bhavati na enam manur jahāti | tasmai manushyān sasrijānāya divā devatrā abhavat | tad anu devān asrijata | tad devānām devatvam | ya evam devānām devatvam veda divā ha eva asya devatrā bhavati | tāni vai etāni chatvāri ambhāmsi devāh manushyāh pitaro 'surāh | teshu sarveshu ambho nabhah iva bhavati |

"Prajapati desired, 'may I propagate.' He practised austerity. He became pregnant. He became vellow-brown.34 Hence a woman when pregnant, beingy ellow, becomes brown. Being pregnant with a foetus. he became exhausted. Being exhausted, he became blackish-brown. Hence an exhausted person becomes blackish-brown. His breath became alive. 2. With that breath (asu) he created Asuras. Therein consists the Asura-nature of Asuras. He who thus knows this Asuranature of Asuras becomes a man possessing breath. Breath does not forsake him. Having created the Asuras, he regarded himself as a father. After that he created the Fathers (Pitris). That constitutes the fatherhood of the Fathers. He who thus knows the fatherhood of the Fathers, becomes as a father of his own: (3) the Fathers resort to his oblation. Having created the Fathers, he reflected. After that he created men. That constitutes the manhood of men. He who knows the manhood of men, becomes intelligent. Mind 35 does not forsake him. To him, when he was creating men, day appeared in the heavens. After that he created the gods. This constitutes the godhead of the gods. To him who thus knows the godhead of the gods, day appears in the heavens. These are the four streams, 30 viz., gods, men, Fathers, and Asuras. In all of these water is like the air."

³⁴ Nila-sveta-misra-varnah, "of a mixed blue and white colour," says the Commentator.

³⁵ Manuh = manana-saktih, "the power of thinking." Comm.

Satapatha Brahmana, vii. 5, 2, 6.—Prajāpatir vai idam agre āsīd ekah eva | so 'kāmayata "annam srijeya prajāyeya" iti | sa prānebhyah eva adhi paśūn niramimīta manasah purusham chakshusho 'śvam prānād gām śrotrādavim vācho 'jam | tad yad enān prānebhyo 'dhi niramimīta tasmād āhuh "prānāh paśavah" iti | mano vai prānānm prathamam | tad yad manasah purusham niramimīta tasmād āhuh "purushah prathamah paśūnām vīryyavattamah" iti | mano vai sarve prānāh | manasi hi sarve prānāh pratishthitāh | tad yad manasah purusham niramimīta tasmād āhuh "purushah sarve paśavah" iti | purushasya hy ete sarve bhavanti |

"Prajāpati was formerly this (universe), one only. He desired, 'let me create food, and be propagated.' He formed animals from his breaths, a man from his soul, a horse from his eye, a bull from his breath, a sheep from his ear, a goat from his voice. Since he formed animals from his breaths, therefore men say, 'the breaths are animals.' The soul is the first of the breaths. Since he formed a man from his soul, therefore they say, 'man is the first of the animals, and the strongest.' The soul is all the breaths; for all the breaths depend upon the soul. Since he formed man from his soul, therefore they say, 'man is all the animals;' for all these are man's."

S. P. Br. xiv. 4, 2, 1 (= Brihadāranyaka Upanishad, p. 125).—Ātmā eva idam agre āsīt purusha-vidhaḥ | so'nuvīkshya na anyad ātmano'paśyat | "so'ham asmi" ity agre vyāharat | tato'ham-nāmā abhavat | tasmād apy etarhy āmantrito "ham ayam" ity eva agre uktvā atha anyad nāma prabrūte yad asya bhavati | 2. Sa yat pūrvo'smāt sarvasmāt sarvān pāpmanaḥ aushat tasmāt purushaḥ | oshati ha vai sa tam yo'smāt pūrvam bubhūshati yaḥ evam veda | 3. So'bibhet | tasmād ekākī bibheti |

The Commentary not very satisfactorily explains this as meaning, "All these four abodes of the gods, etc., are like waters—i.e., suited to yield enjoyment, as ponds, rivers, etc., are fit for bathing, drinking," etc. The phrase is repeated in the Vishnu Purāṇa, i. 5 (vol. i., p. 79, of Dr. Hall's edition); and in his note Professor Wilson says ambhāmsi "is also a peculiar and probably a mystic term." It is explained in the Vāyu Purāṇa, as will be seen further on. The last words of the quotation from the Brāhmaṇa are obscure. In another passage of the same work (iii. 8, 18, 1, 2) the terms ambhas, nabhas, and mahas, are declared to denote respectively "earth," "air," and "sky" (... ayam vai loko 'mbhāmsi ... antariksham vai nabhāmsi ... asau vai loko mahāmsi).

sa ha ayam īkshānchakre yad "mad anyad nāsti kasmād nu bibhemi" iti | tataḥ eva asya bhayam vīyāya | kasmād hy abheshyat | dvitīyād vai bhayam bhavati | 4. Sa vai naiva reme | tasmād ekākī na ramate | sa dvitīyam aichhat | sa ha etāvān āsa yathā strī-pumāmsau samparishvaktau | 5. Sa imam eva ātmānam dvedhā 'pātayat | tataḥ patiḥ patnī cha abhavatām | tasmād "idam ardhavrigalam iva svaḥ" iti ha sma āha Yājnavalkyaḥ | tasmād ākāśaḥ striyā pūryate eva | tām samabhavat | tato manushyāḥ ajāyanta | 6. Sā u ha iyam īkshānchakre "katham nu mā ātmanaḥ eva janayitvā sambhavati hanta tiro 'sāni' iti | 7. Sā gaur abhavat vrishabhaḥ itaras tām sam eva abhavat | tato gāvaḥ ajāyanta | 8. Vaḍavā itarā abhavad aśvavrishaḥ itaraḥ gardabhī itarā gardabhaḥ itaras tām sam eva abhavat | tataḥ ekaśapham ajāyata | 9. Ajā itarā abhavad vastaḥ itaraḥ avir itarā meshaḥ itaraḥ | tām sam eva abhavat tato 'jāvayo 'jāyanta | evam eva yad idam kincha mithunam ā pippīlikā-bhyas tat sarvam asrijata | $\frac{2}{3}$

"This universe was formerly soul only, in the form of Purusha. Looking closely, he saw nothing but himself (or soul). He first said, 'This is I.' Then he became one having the name of I. Hence even now a man, when called, first says, 'this is I,' and then declares the other name which he has. 2. Inasmuch as he, before (pūrvah) all this, burnt up (aushat) all sins, he (is called) purusha. The man who knows this burns up the person who wishes to be before him. 3. He was afraid. Hence a man when alone is afraid. This (being) considered that 'there is no other thing but myself: of what am I afraid?' Then his fear departed. For why should he have feared? It is of a second person that people are afraid. 4. He did not enjoy happiness. Hence a person when alone does not enjoy happiness. He desired a second. He was so much as a man and a woman when locked in embrace. 5. He caused this same self to fall asunder into two parts. Thence arose a husband and a wife.38 Hence Yājvanalkya has said that 'this one's self is like the half 30 of a split pea.' Hence the void is filled up by

³⁷ This passage has been already translated by Mr. Colebrooke, Essays i. 64, as well as by Dr. Roer, in the Bibliotheca Indica.

³⁸ Manu and S'atarūpā, according to the Commentator.

³⁹ Compare Taitt. Br. iii. 3, 3, 5. Atho arddho vai esha ātmano yat patnī | "Now a wife is the half of one's self;" and ibid. iii. 3, 3, 1: Ayajno vai esha yo 'patnīkah | na prajāh prajāyeran | "The man who has no wife is unfit to sacrifice. No children will be born to him." We must not, however, suppose from these passages that the woman. He cohabited with her. From them MEN were born. 6. She reflected, 'how does he, after having produced me from himself, cohabit with me? Ah! let me disappear.' 7. She became a cow, and the other a bull; and he cohabited with her. From them kine were produced. 8. The one became a mare, the other a stallion, the one a she-ass, the other a male-ass. He cohabited with her. From them the class of animals with undivided hoofs was produced. The one became a she-goat, the other a he-goat, the one a ewe, the other a ram. He cohabited with her. From them goats and sheep were produced. In this manner pairs of all creatures whatsoever, down to ants, were created."

The next passage describes men as descendants of Vivasvat, or the Sun, without specifying any distinction of classes:

Taittirīya Sanhitā vi. 5, 6, 1 f.—Aditih putrakāmā sādhyebhyo devebhyo brahmaudanam apaehat | tasyai uchchheshanam adaduh | tat prāśnāt sā reto 'dhatta | tasyai chatvārah Adityāh ajāyanta | sā dvitīyam apachat | sā 'manyata "uchchheshanād me ime 'jñata | yad agre prāśishyāmi ito me vasīyāmso janishyante" iti | sā 'gre prāśnāt sā reto 'dhatta tasyai vyriddham āndam ajāyata | sā Ādityebhyah eva tritīyam apachat "bhogāya me idam śrāntam astv" iti | te 'bruvan "varam vrināmahai yo 'to jāyātai asmākam sa eko 'sat | yo 'sya prajāyām ridhyātai asmākam bhogāya bhavād" iti | tato Vivasvān Ādityo 'jāyata | tasya vai iyam prajā yad manushyāh | tāsv ekah eva riddho yo yajate sa devānām bhogāya bhavati |

"Aditi, desirous of sons, cooked a Brahmaudana oblation for the gods the Sādhyas. They gave her the remnant of it. This she ate. She conceived seed. Four Adityas were born to her. She cooked a second (oblation). She reflected, 'from the remains of the oblation these sons have been born to me. If I shall eat (the oblation) first, more brilliant estimation in which women were held by the authors of the Brāhmaṇas was very high, as there are other texts in which they are spoken of disparagingly; such as the following: Taitt. Sanh. vi. 5, 8, 2.—So some nātishṭhata strībhyo grihyamāṇaḥ | tam ghṛitam vajram kṛitvā 'ghnan tam nirindriyam bhūtam agrihṇam | tasmāt striyo nirindriyā adāyādīr api pāpāt pumsa upastitaram vadanti | "Soma did not abide, when being poured out to women. Making that butter a thunderbolt they smote it. They poured it out when it had become powerless. Hence women, powerless, and portionless, speak more humbly than even a poor man." (Compare the quotation in the Commentary on the Taitt. Sanhitā, Vol. i. p. 996.) Taitt. Sanh. vi. 5, 10, 3. Tasmāt striyam jātām parāsyanti ut pumāmsam haranti | "Hence they reject a female (child) when born, and take up a male." (Compare Nirukta, iii. 4.)

40 Compare Taitt. Br. iii. 3, 10, 4. Prajayā hi manushyah pūrnah, "For by offspring a man is completed."

(sons) will be born to me. She ate it first; she conceived seed; an imperfect egg was produced from her. She cooked a third (oblation) for the Ādityas, (repeating the formula) 'may this religious toil have been undergone for my enjoyment.' The Ādityas said, 'Let us choose a boon: let any one who is produced from this be ours only; let anyone of his progeny who is prosperous be for us a source of enjoyment.' In consequence the Āditya Vivasvat was born. This is his progeny, namely men.' Among them he alone who sacrifices is prosperous, and becomes a cause of enjoyment to the gods."

The passages next following do not specify separately the creation of men (who must, however, be understood as included along with other beings under the designation $praj\bar{a}h$, "offspring," or "creatures,") and therefore afford less distinct evidence that their authors did not hold the fourfold origin of mankind.

The first of these extracts is especially interesting, both on account of its own tenor, and because (along with Taitt. Br. ii. 3, 8, 1 ff. quoted in p. 23) it contains the germ of one of the Puranic accounts of the creation which will be adduced in a subsequent section.

Taitt. Br. ii. 2, 9, 1 ff.—Idam vai agre naiva kinchana āsīt | na dyaur āsīd na prithivī na antariksham | tad asad eva sad mano 'kuruta " syām" iti | tad atapyata | tasmāt tapanād dhūmo 'jāyata | tad bhūyo 'tapyata tasmāt tapanād Agnir ajāyata | tad bhūyo 'tapyata | 2. Tasmāt tapanāj jyotir ajāyata | tad bhūyo 'tapyata | tasmāt tapanād archir ajāyata | tad bhūyo 'tapyata | tasmāt tapanād archir ajāyata | tad bhūyo 'tapyata | tasmāt tapanād udārāḥ ajāyanta | tad bhūyo 'tapyata | tad abhram iva

⁴¹ Compare Taitt. Br. i. 8, 8, 1. Ādityāḥ vai prajāḥ, "Creatures are descended from Aditi."

⁴² This story is told also, but with more detail of names and somewhat differently, in Taitt. Br. i. 1, 9, 10 ff. . Aditih putrakāmā sādhyebhyo devebhyo brahmaudanam apachat | tasyai uchchheshaṇam adaduḥ | tat prāśnāt | sā reto 'dhatta | tasyai Dhātā cha Aryamā cha ajāyetām | sā dvitīyam apachat tasyai uchchheshaṇam adaduḥ | tat prāśnāt | sā reto 'dhatta | tasyai Mitraś oha Varuṇaś cha ajāyetām | sā tritīyam apachat | tasyai uchchheshaṇam adaduḥ | tat prāśnāt | sā reto 'dhatta | tasyai Añśaicha Bhagaś cha ajāyetām | sā chaturtham apachat | taysai uchchheshaṇam adaduḥ | tat prāśnāt | sā reto 'dhatta | tasyai Añśaicha Bhagaś cha ajāyetām | sā chaturtham apachat | taysai uchchheshaṇam adaduh | tat prāśnāt | sā reto 'dhatta tasyai Indraś cha Vivasvāmś cha ajayetām | the Aditi, desirous of sons, cooked a Brahmaudana oblation to the gods the Sādhyas. They gave her the remnant of it. She ate it. She conceived seed. Dhātri and Aryaman were born to her.' She does the same thing a second time, when she bears Mitra and Varuṇa,—a third time, when she bears Añsia and Bhaga,—and a fourth time, when she bears Indra and Vivasvat.

samahanyata | tad vastim abhinat | 3. Sa samudro 'bhavat | tasmāt samudrasya na pibanti | prajananam iva hi manyante | tasmāt paśor jāyamānād āpah purastād yanti | tad daśahotā anvasrijyata | Prajāpatir vai daśahotā | yah evam tapaso vīryyam vidvāms tapyate bhavaty eva | tad val idam āpaḥ salilam āsīt | so 'rodīt Prajāpatiḥ (4) "sa kasmai ajñi yady asyāpratishthāyāh" iti | yad apsv avāpadyata sā prithivy abhavat | yad vyamrishta tad antariksham abhavat | yad ūrdhvam udamrishta sā dyaur abhavat | yad arodīt tad anayoh rodastvam | 5. Yah evam veda na asya grihe rudanti | etad vai eshām lokānām janma | ya evam eshām lokānām janma veda na eshu lokesho ārttim ārchhati | sa imām pratishthām avindata | sa imām pratishthām vittvā akāmayata " prajāyeya " iti | sa tapo 'tapyata | so 'ntarvān abhavat | sa jaghanād asurān asrijata | 6. Tebhyo mrinmaye pātre 'nnam aduhat | yā asya sā tanūr āsīt tām apāhata | sā tamisrā 'bhavat | so 'kāmayata " prajāyeya" iti | sa tapo 'tapyata | so 'ntarvān abhavat | sa prajananād eva prajāh asrijata | tasmād imāh bhūyishthāh | prajananād hy enāh asrijata | 7. Tābhyo dārumaye pātre payo'duhat | yā asya sā tanūr āsīt tām apāhata | sa jyotsnā 'bhavat | so 'kāmaysta " prajāyeya" iti | sa tapo 'tapyata so 'ntarvān abhavat | sa upapakshābhyām eva ritūn asrijata | tebhyo rajate pātre ghritam aduhat | yā asya sā tanūr āsīt (8) tām apāhata | so'ho-rātrayoh sandhir abhavat | so 'kāmayata " prajāyeya" iti | sa tapo'tapyata | so 'ntarvān abhavat | sa mukhād devān asrijata | tebhyo harite pātre somam aduhat | yā asya sā tanūr āsīt tām apāhata | tad ahar abhavat | 9. Ete vai Prajāpater dohāḥ | ya evam veda duhe eva prajāh | "divā vai no 'bhūd" iti tad devānām devatvam | ya evam devānām devatvam veda devavān eva bhavati | etad vai aho-rātrānām janma | ya evam aho-rātrānām janma veda na aho-rātreshu ārttim ārchhati | 10. Asato 'dhi mano 'srijyata | manah Prajāpatim asrijata | Prajāpatiķ prajāķ asrijata | tad vai idam manasy eva paramam pratishthitam yadidam kincha | tad etat śvovasyasam nāma Brahma | vyuchhantī vyuchhantī asmai vasyasī vasyasī vyuchhati prajāyate prajayā paśublih pra parameshthino mātrām āpnoti ya evam veda |

"At first this (universe) was not anything. There was neither sky, nor earth, nor air. Being non-existent, it resolved 'let me be.' It became fervent. 43 From that fervour smoke was produced. It again became fervent. From that fervour fire was produced. It again became fervent. From that fervour light was produced. It again became fervent. From that fervour flame was produced. It again became fervent. From that fervour rays were produced. It again became fervent. From that fervour blazes 44 were produced. It again became fervent. It became condensed like a cloud. It clove its bladder. That became the sea. Hence men do not drink of the sea. For they regard it as like the place of generation. Hence water issues forth before an animal when it is being born. After that the Dasahotri (a particular formula) was created. Prajāpati is the Daśahotri. That man succeeds, who thus knowing the power of austere abstraction (or fervour), practises it. This was then water, fluid. Prajāpati wept, (exclaiming), (4) 'For what purpose have I been born, if (I have been born) from this which forms no support?"45 That which fell 46 into the waters became the earth. That which he wiped away, became the air. That which he wiped away, upwards, became the sky. From the circumstance that he wept $(arod\bar{\imath}t)$, these two regions have the name of rodasī, (worlds). 5. They do not weep in the house of the man who knows this. This was the birth of these worlds. He who thus knows the birth of these worlds, incurs no suffering in these worlds. He obtained this (earth as a) basis. Having obtained (this earth as a) basis, he desired, 'May I be propagated.' He practised austere fervour. He became pregnant. He created Asuras from his abdomen. 6. To them he milked out food in an earthen dish. He cast off that body of his. It became darkness. 47 He desired. 'May I be propagated.' He practised

⁴³ The word thus rendered is atapyata, which has the sense of "being heated" as well as "practising austere abstraction." I have purposely given an equivocal rendering, which may bear either sense.

⁴⁴ Such is the sense the commentator gives to the word udurāh, which he makes = ulvaṇa-jvālāh. Professor Roth (s. v.) explains the word as meaning "fogs."

⁴⁵ This is the mode of rendering suggested to me by Professor Aufrecht. After "if" the Commentator supplies the words—" from this non-existing earth I can create no living creature."

^{46 &}quot;Prajāpati's tears," etc., according to the commentator.

⁴⁷ Compare S'. P. Br. xi. 1, 6, 8: Atho yo'yam avān prānas tena asurān asrijata | te imām eva prithivīm abhipadya asrijyanta | tasmai sasrijānāya tamah iva āsa | 9. So'vet "pāpmānam vai asrikshi yasmai me sasrijānāya tamah iva abhīnā" iti | tāms tatah eva pāpmanā 'vidhyat | tatah eva te parābhavann ityādi | "Then he created the Asuras from this lower breath of his. It was only after reaching this earth that they were created. On him, as he continued to create, darkness fell. 9. He understood, "I have created misery, since darkness has fallen upon me as I was creating." Then he pierced them with misery, and they in consequence succumbed," etc. The word rendered in the text by "cast off" is applied in Taitt. Sanh. i. 5, 4, 1, to serpents

He created living beings austere fervour. He became pregnant. (prajāh) from his organ of generation. Hence they are the most numerous because he created them from his generative organ. 8. To them he milked out milk in a wooden dish. He cast off that body of his. It became moon-light. He desired, 'May I be propagated. He practised austere fervour. He became pregnant. He created the seasons from To them he milked out butter in a silver dish. He his armpits. cast off that body of his. It became the period which connects day and night. He desired, 'May I be propagated.' He practised austere fervour. He became pregnant. He created the gods from his mouth.40 To them he milked out Soma in a golden dish. He cast off that body of his. It became day. 9. These are Prajāpati's milkings. He who thus knows milks out offspring. 'Day (divā) has come to us:' this (exclamation expresses) the godhead of the gods. who thus knows the godhead of the gods, obtains the gods. This is the birth of days and nights. He who thus knows the birth of days and nights, incurs no suffering in the days and nights. (or soul, manas,) was created from the non-existent. Mind created Prajāpati. Prajāpati created offspring. All this, whatever exists, rests absolutely on mind. This is that Brahma called Svovasyasa.49 For the man who thus knows, (Ushas), dawning, dawning, dawns more and more bright; he becomes prolific in offspring, and (rich) in cattle; he obtains the rank of Parameshthin."

S. P. Br. vi. 1, 2, 11.—Atho āhuḥ \ "Prajāpatir eva imān lokān srishṭvā prithivyām pratyatishṭhat | tasmai imāh oshadhayo 'nnam apachyanta | tad āśnāt | sa garbhī abhavat | sa ūrdhvebhyaḥ eva prānebhyo devān asrijata | ye 'vānchaḥ prānās tebhyo martyāḥ prajāḥ" iti | yatamathā 'srijata tathā 'srijata | Prajāpatis tv eva idam sarvam asrijata yad idam kincha |

"Wherefore they say, 'Prajāpati, having created these worlds, was shedding their old skins (sarpāḥ vai jīryanto 'manyanta . . . tato vai te jīrnās tanūr apāghnata).

46 Compare S. P. Br. xi. 1, 6, 7, quoted in the 4th Vol. of this work, p. 22 f.
49 The Commentator explains this word to mean "that which each succeeding day becomes transcendently excellent (uttarottara-dine vasīyo 'tišayena śreshtham). Here, he says, the highest and absolute Brahma is not meant, but mind, which has the form of Brahma, and, by means of the series of its volitions, is every successive moment more and more world-creating" (sankalpa-paramparayā pratikshanam uttarottarā-dhika-jagat-srashtritvād īdrig-Brahma-rūpatvād manah praśastam supported upon the earth. For him these herbs were cooked as food. That (food) he ate. He became pregnant. He created the gods from his upper vital airs, and mortal offspring from his lower vital airs. In whatever way he created, so he created. But Prajāpati created all this, whatever exists."

S. P. Br. x. 1, 3, 1.—Prajāpatiķ prajāķ asrijata | sa ūrdhvebhyaķ eva prānebhyo devān asrijata | ye 'vānchaķ prānās tebhyo martyāķ prajāķ | atha ūrdhvam eva mrityum prajābhyo 'ttāram asrijata |

"Prajāpati created living beings. From his upper vital airs he created the gods; from his lower vital airs mortal creatures. Afterwards he created death a devourer of creatures."

Taitt. Ar. i. 23, 1. - Āpo vai idam āsan salilam eva | sa Prajāpatir ekah pushkara-parne samabhavat | tasya antar manasi kāmah samavarttata "idam srijeyam" iti | tasmād yad purusho manasā 'bhigachhati tad vāchā vadati tat karmaṇā karoti | tad eshā 'bhyanūktā " kāmas tad agre samavarttatūdhi | manaso retaḥ prathamam yad āsīt | 2. Sato bandhum asati niravindan hridi pratīshyā kavayo manīshā" iti | upa evam tad upanamati yat-kāmo bhavati yaḥ evam veda | sa tapo 'tapyata | sa tapas taptvā śarīram adhūnuta | tasya yad māmsam āsīt tato 'runāh Ketavo Vātaraśanāḥ rishayaḥ udatishthan | 3. Ye nakhās te Vaikhānasāḥ | ye bālās te Bālakhilyāḥ | yo rasaḥ so 'pām antarataḥ kūrmam bhūtam sarpantam tam abravīt "mama vai tvan-māmsā samabhūt" | 4. "na" ity abravīt " pūrvam eva aham iha āsam" iti | tat purushasya purushatvam iti | sa "sahasra-śīrshā purushaḥ sahasrākshaḥ sahasra-pād" bhūtvā udatishthat | tam abravīt "tvam ve (sic. me or vai?) pūrvam samabhūt tvam idam pūrvah kurushva" iti | sa itaḥ ādāya apo (5) 'ñjalinā purastād upādadhāt "evā hy eva" iti | tataḥ Ādityaḥ udatishṭhat | sā prāchī dik | atha Arunah Ketur dakshinatah upadadhad "eva hy Agne" iti | tato vai Agnir udatishthat | sā dakshinā dik | atha Arunah Ketuh paśchād upādadhād "evā hi Vāyo" iti | 6. Tato Vāyur udatishthat | sā pratīchī dik | atha Arunah Ketur uttaratah upādadhād "evā hi Indra" iti | tato vai Indrah udatishthat | sā udīchī dik | atha Arunah Ketur madhye upādadhād "evā hi Pūshann" iti | tato vai Pūshā udatishthat | sā iyam dik | 7. Atha Arunah Ketur uparishtād upādadhād "evā hi devāh" iti | tato deva-manushyāḥ pitaro gandharvāpsarasas cha udatishthan | sā ūrdhvā dik | yāh viprusho vi parāpatan tābhyo 'surāh rakshāmsi piśachāścha udatishthan | tasmat te parabhavan viprudbhyo 'hi samabhavan | taa

eshā bhyanūktā (8) "āpo ha yad bṛihatīr garbham āyan daksham dadhānūh janayantīh svayambhūm | tataḥ ime 'dhyasrijyanta sargāḥ | adbhyo vai idam samabhūt | tasmād idam sarvam Brahma svayambhv" iti | tasmād idam sarvam šithilam iva adhruvam iva abhavat | Prajāpatir vāva tat | ātmanā ātmānam vidhāya tad eva anuprāviśat | tad eshā 'bhyanūktā (9) "vidhāya lokān vidhāya bhūtāni vidhāya sarvāḥ pradiśo diśaścha | Prajāpatih prathamajāḥ ritasya ātmanā "tmānam abhisamviveśa" iti |

"This was water, fluid. Prajāpati alone was produced on a lotusleaf. Within, in his mind, desire arose, 'Let me create this.' Hence whatever a man aims at in his mind, he declares by speech, and performs by act.50 Hence this verse has been uttered, 'Desire formerly arose in it, which was the primal germ of mind, (2) (and which) sages, searching with their intellect, have discovered in the heart as the bond between the existent and the non-existent' (R. V. x. 129, 4). That of which he is desirous comes to the man who thus knows. He practised austere fervour. Having practised austere fervour, he shook his body. From its flesh the rishis (called) Arunas, Ketus, and Vātaraśanas 31 arose. 3. His nails became the Vaikhānasas, his hairs the Bālakhilyas. The fluid (of his body became) a tortoise moving amid the waters.⁵² He said to him, 'Thou hast sprung from my skin and flesh.'53 4. 'No,' replied the tortoise, 'I was here before.' In that (in his having been 'before' purvam) consists the manhood of a man (purusha). Becoming 'a man (purusha) with a thousand heads, a thousand eyes, a thousand feet'

50 Compare Taitt. S. vi. 3, 10, 4, (quoted by Roth. s. v. abhigam) yad vai hridayena abhigachhati taj jihvayā vadati |

⁵¹ They are mentioned again in Taitt, Ār. i. 24, 4. See Böhtlingk and Roth's Lexicon s.v. Ketu (where the Aruna Ketus are stated to be a sort of superior beings or demons); Artharva-veda, xi. 10, 2; Weber's Indische Studien, ii. 177; and the verse of the M. Bif. xii. 774: Arunāh Ketus ketus kvādhāyena divam gatāh | "By sacred study the Arunas and Ketus have ascended to heaven."

⁵² The Sanskrit scholar will observe that the text here is rather obscure. It is either corrupt, elliptical, or grammatically irregular.

⁵³ Here the Sanskrit, if it be not corrupt, must be irregular and incorrect. On the style of the Āranyakas, see Mr. E. B. Cowell's Preface to the Kaushītakī Upanishad, p. viii., where it is remarked: "The Āranyakas appear to belong to a class of Sanskrit writings, whose history has not yet been thoroughy investigated. Their style, if we may judge from that of the Taittirīya and Kaushītakī, is full of strange solecisms which sometimes half remind us of the gathās of the Lalita Vistara. The present Upanishad has many peculiar forms, some of which are common to both recensions, while others appear only in one. Such are: nishincha, in p. 10; praiti for prayanti, in p. 51; sanvesiyan, in p. 56; veti for vyeti, in p. 78; adūdham, in p. 89, etc."

(R.V. x. 90, 1), he arose. Prajāpati said to him, 'Thou wert produced before me: do thou first make this.' He took water from this (5) in the cavity of his two hands, and placed it on the east, repeating the text, 'so be it, o Sun.'54 From thence the sun arose. That was the eastern quarter. Then Aruna Ketu placed (the water) to the south, saying, 'so be it,' o Agni.' Thence Agni arose. That was the southern quarter. Then Aruna Ketu placed (the water) to the west, saying 'so be it, o Vayu.' 6. Thence arose Vayu. That was the western quarter. Then Aruna Ketu placed (the water) to the north, saying 'so be it, o Indra.' Thence arose Indra. That is the northern quarter. Then Aruna Ketu placed (the water) in the centre, saying 'so be it, o Pushan.' Thence arose Pushan. That is this quarter. 7. Then Aruna Ketu placed (the water) above, saving 'so be it, o gods.' Thence arose gods, MEN. fathers. Gandharvas and Apsarases. That is the upper quarter. From the drops which fell apart arose the Asuras, Rakshases, and Piśāchas. Therefore they perished, because they were produced from drops. Hence this text has been uttered; (8) 'when the great waters became pregnant, containing wisdom, and generating Svayambhu, from them were created these creations. All this was produced from the waters. Therefore all this is Brahma Svayambhu.' Hence all this was as it were loose, as it were unsteady. Prajapati was that. Having made himself through himself, he entered into that. Wherefore this verse has been uttered; (9) 'Having formed the world, having formed existing things and all intermediate quarters and quarters, Prajāpati, the firstborn of the ceremonial, entered into himself with himself."

From an examination of the legends contained in the Brāhmaṇas, of which some specimens have just been given, it appears (1) that they are generally, if not always, adduced, or invented, with the view of showing the origin, or illustrating the efficacy, of some particular ceremony which the writer wished to explain or recommend; (2) that the accounts which they supply of Prajāpati's creative operations are various and even inconsistent; and (3) that they are the sources of many of the details which are found in a modified form in the cosmogonies of the Purānas.

⁵⁴ The formula is in the original $ev\bar{a}$ hy eva. The Commentator says that the first word means "objects of desire to be obtained," and that the second eva signifies "the moving (Sun);" the sense of the entire formula being, "Thou, o Sun, art thyself all objects of desire." The six formulas here introduced had previously occurred at the close of a preceding section, i. 20, 1.

When we discover in the most ancient Indian writings such different and even discrepant accounts of the origin of man, all put forth with equal positiveness, it is impossible to imagine that any uniform explanation of the diversity of castes could have been received at the period when they were composed, or to regard any of the texts which have been cited as more orthodox and authoritative than the rest. Even, therefore, if we should suppose that the author of the Purusha Sükta meant to represent the four castes as having literally sprung from separate parts of Purusha's body, it is evident that the same idea was not always or even generally adopted by those who followed him, as a revealed truth in which they were bound to acquiesce. In fact, nothing is clearer than that in all these cosmogonies, the writers, while generally assuming certain prevalent ideas as the basis of their descriptions, gave the freest scope to their individual fancy in the invention of details. In such circumstances, perfect coincidence cannot be expected in the narratives.

We shall hereafter see that the Puranic writers reproduce some of these discrepancies in the traditions which descended to them from earlier generations, and add many new inconsistencies of their own, which they themselves, or their commentators, endeavour to explain away by the assumption that the accounts so differing relate to the occurrences of different Kalpas or Manvantaras (great mundane periods). But of a belief in any such Kalpas or Manvantaras no trace is to be found in the hymns or Brāhmaṇas: and, as we shall hereafter see, they must be held to be the inventions of a later age. The real explanation of these differences in the Brāhmaṇas is that the writers did not consider themselves (as their successors held them) to be infallibly inspired, and consequently were not at all studious to avoid in their narratives the appearance of inconsistency with the accounts of their predecessors.

SECT. V .- Manu's Account of the Origin of Castes.

I shall first quote a few verses from the beginning of Manu's account of the creation:

- i. 8. So'bhidhyāya śarīrāt svāt sisrikshur vividhāḥ prajāḥ | apa eva sasarjādau tāsu vījam avāsrijat | 9. Tad andam abhavad haimañ sahas-rāmśu-sama-prabham | tasmin jajne svayam Brahmā sarva-loka-pitāmahaḥ | 10. Āpo nārā iti proktāḥ āpo vai narasūmavaḥ | tāḥ yad asyāyanam pūrvam tena Nārāyanaḥ smritah | 11. Yat tat kāranam avyaktam nityam sad-asadātmakam | tad-visrishṭaḥ sa purusho lok-Brahmeti kīrttyate | 12. Tasminn ande sa bhagavān ushitvā parivate saram | svayam evātmano dhyānāt tad andam akarod dvidhā | 55
- "8. He (the self-existent) having felt desire, 56 and willing to create various living beings from his own body, first created the waters, and threw into them a seed. 9. That seed became a golden egg, of lustre equal to the sun; in it he himself was born as Brahmā, the parent of all the worlds. 10. The waters are called $n\bar{a}r\bar{a}h$, for they are sprung from Nara; and as they were his first sphere of motion (ayana—path), he is therefore called $N\bar{a}r\bar{a}ya\underline{n}a$. 11. Produced from the imperceptible, eternal, existent and non-existent, cause, that male (purusha) is celebrated in the world as Brahmā. 12. After dwelling for a year in the egg, the glorious being, himself, by his own contemplation, split it in twain."

After a description of various other preparatory creative acts (vv. 13-30) the author proceeds in vv. 31 ff. to inform us how the four castes were produced:

i. 31. Lokānām tu vivriddhyartham mukhabāhūru-pādataḥ | brāhmanam kshattriyam vaisyam sūdram cha niravarttayat | 32. Dvidhā kritvātmano deham ardhena purusho 'bhavat | ardhena nārī tasyām sa Virājam asrijat prabhuḥ | 33. Tapas taptvā 'srijad yam tu sa svayam purusho

⁵⁵ The ideas in this passage are derived (with modifications expressive of the theories current in the author's own age) from the S'atapatha Brāhmaṇa, xi. 1, 6, 1 ff. (see vol. iv. of this work, p. 21 f.); or from some other similar account in another Brāhmaṇa.

⁵⁶ See S'. P. Br. i. 7, 4, 1: Prajāpatir ha vai svām duhitaram abhidadhyau.

⁵⁷ In the M. Bh. iii. 12952, Krishna says: apām nārāh iti purā sanjnā-karma kritam mayā | tena Nārāyano py ukto mama tat tv ayanam sadā | "The name of nārāh was formerly assigned by me to the waters: hence I am also called Nārāyana, for there has always been my sphere of motion."

Virāt | tam mām vittāsya sarvasya srashtāram dvija-sattamāh | 34.

Aham prajāh sisrikshus tu tapas taptvā suduścharam | patīn prajānām asrijam maharshīn ādito daśa | 35. Marīchim Atryangirasau Pulastyam Pulaham Kratum | Prachetasam Vasishtham cha Bhrigum Nāradam eva cha | 36. Ete Manūms tu saptānyān asrijan bhūritejasah | devān devanikāyāmś cha maharshīmś chāmitaujasah | 37. Yaksha-rakshah-piśā-chāmś cha gandharvāpsaraso 'surān | nāgān sarpān suparnāmś cha pitrīnām cha prithagganān | 38. Vidyuto 'śani-meghāmś cha rohitendra-dhanūmsi cha | ulkā nirghāta-ketūmś cha jyotīmshy uchchāvachāni cha | 39. Kinnarān vānarān matsyān vividhāmś cha vihangamān | paśūn mrigān manushyāmś cha vyālāmś chobhayatodatah | 40. Krimikīta-patangāmś cha yūkā-makshika-matkunam | sarvam cha damśa-maśakam sthāvaram cha prithagvidham | 41. Evam etair idam sarvam man-niyogād mahātma-bhih | yathākarma tapo-yogāt srishtam sthāvara-jangamam |

31. "That the worlds might be peopled, he caused the Brāhman, the Kshattriya, the Vaiśya, and the Sūdra to issue from his mouth, his arms, his thighs, and his feet. 23. Having divided his own body into two parts, the lord (Brahmā) became, with the half a male (purusha), and with the half, a female; and in her he created Virāj. 23. Know, O most excellent twice-born men, that I, whom that male, (purusha) Virāj, himself created, am the creator of all this world. 34. Desiring to produce living creatures, I performed very arduous devotion, and first created ten Maharshis (great rishis), lords of living beings, (35) viz., Marīchi, Atri, Angiras, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu, Prachetas, Vasishtha, Bhṛigu, and Nārada. 136. They, endowed with so On this Kullūka the Commentator remarks: Daivyā cha šaktyā mukhādibhyo brāhmaṇādi-nirmāṇam Brahmaṇo na visankanīyam śruti-siddhatvāt | "It is not to be doubted that, by his divine power, Brahmā formed the Brāhman and the other castes from his mouth and other members, since it is proved by the Veda. He then quotes the 12th verse of the Purusha Sūkta.

⁵⁹ See the Purusha Sūkta, verse 5.

co It will be observed that Manu applies this term purusha to three beings, first to Brahmā (v. 11), second to the male formed by Brahmā from the half of his own body (v. 32), and third to Virāj, the offspring of the male and female halves of Brahmā's body (v. 33). It will be noticed that this story of Brahmā dividing his body is borrowed from the passage of the S'. P. Br. xiv. 4, 2, 1, quoted above.

⁶¹ In the Rāmāyaṇa, ii. 110, 2 ff., a different account is given of the origin of the world, in which no reference is made to Manu Svāyambhuva. The order of the creation there described is as follows: First everything was water. Then Brahmā Svāyambhū, with the deities, came into existence—Brahmā being said to have sprung great energy, created 62 other seven Manus, gods, and abodes of gods, and Maharshis of boundless might; (37) Yakshas, Rakshases, Piśāchas, Gandharvas, Apsarases, Asuras, Nāgas, Serpents, great Birds, and the different classes of Pitṛis; (38) lightnings, thunderbolts, clouds, Indra's bows unbent and bent, meteors, portentous atmospheric sounds, comets, and various luminaries; (39) Kinnaras, apes, fishes, different sorts of birds, cattle, deer, men, beasts with two rows of teeth; (40) small and large reptiles, moths, lice, flies, fleas, all gadflies and gnats, and motionless things of different sorts. 41. Thus by my appointment, and by the force of devotion, was all this world both motionless and moving, created by those great beings, according to the (previous) actions of each creature."

The different portions of the preceding narrative of the creation of the human species are not easily reconcileable with each other. For it is first stated in verse 31, that men of the four castes proceeded separately from different parts of Brahma's body,-prior (as it would appear) (1) to the division of that body into two parts and to the successive production (2) of Virāj, (3) Manu, and (4) the Maharshis, who formed all existing creatures. And yet we are told in verse 39, that MEN were among the beings called into existence by those Maharshis. and in verse 41, that the entire moving as well as motionless world was their work. It is not said that the men created by the Maharshis were distinct from those composing the four castes, and we must, therefore, assume that the latter also are included under the general appellation of men. But if men of the four castes had been already produced before the formation of all living creatures by the Maharshis, what necessity existed for the men of these castes being a second time called into being as a part of that later creation? It is possible that this from the æther (ākāśa). Brahmā, with his sons, created the world. From Brahmā sprang Marīchi; from Marīchi, Kas'yapa; from Kas'yapa, Vivasvat; and from Vivasvat, Manu Vaivasvata. The original of this passage is quoted in the 4th vol. of this work, p. 29 ff.

These great rishis seem to be the beings denoted by the word viśvasrijah. "creators of the universe," in the verse of Manu (xii. 50), which will be quoted below. Reference to rishis, or to seven rishis, as "formers of existing things" (bhūta-krītah). is also found in the Atharvaveda, vi. 108, 4; vi. 133, 4, 5; xi. 1, 1, 3, 24; xii. 1, 39; and the word bhūtakritah, without the addition of rishis, is found in the same work iii. 28, 1; iv. 35, 2, and xix. 16, 2.

allegation of the separate creation of castes may have been engrafted as an after-thought on the other account. 63

After other details, regarding the propagation, nature, etc, of created things (vv. 42-50), the re-absorption of Brahmā into the Supreme Spirit, and his alternations of sleep and repose, etc. (vv. 50-57), Manu proceeds:

- 58. Idam śāstram tu kritvā 'sau mām eva svayam āditah | vidhivad grāhayāmāsa Marīchyādīmś tv aham munīn | 59. Etad vo 'yam Bhriguh śāstram śrāvayishyaty aśeshatah | etad hi matto 'dhijage sarvam esho 'khilam munih | 60. Tatas tathā sa tenokto maharshir Manunā Bhriguh | tān abravīd rishīn sarvān prītātmā "śrūyatām" iti | 61. Svāyambhuvasyāsya Manoh shad-vamśyā Manavo 'pare | srishtavantah prajāh svāh svāh mahātmāno mahaujasah | 62. Svārochishaś chauttamiś cha Tāmaso Raivatas tathā | Chākshushaś cha mahātejā Vivasvat-suta eva cha | 63. Svāyambhuvādyāh saptaite Manavo bhūritejasah | sve sve 'ntare sarvan idam utpādyāpuś charācharam |
- 59. "Having formed this Scripture, he (Brahmā) himself in the beginning caused me to comprehend it according to rule; as I did to Marīchi and the other munis. 60. This Bhṛigu will give you to hear this scripture in its entirety; for this muni learned the whole from me. 61. Then that Maharshi (great rishi), Bhṛigu being so addressed by Manu, with pleasure addressed all those rishis, saying, 'Let it be heard.' 62. 'From this Manu Svāyambhuva sprang other Manus in six successive generations, great and glorious, who respectively created living beings of their own,—(63) viz., Svārochisha, Auttami, Tāmasa, Raivata, Chākshusha, and the mighty son of Vivasvat. 64. These seven 64 Manus of great power, of whom Svāyambhuva was the first, have each in his own period (antara) produced and possessed the world.'"

⁶³ In the same way it may be observed that in v. 22 Brahmā is said to have formed the subtile class of living gods whose essence is to act, and of the S'ādhyas (karmātmanām cha devānām so 'srijat prāninām prabhuh | sādhyānām cha ganam sūkshmam), and in v. 25, to have "called into existence this creation, desiring to form these living beings" (srishṭim sasarja chaivemām srashṭum ichchann imāh prajāh). But if the gods and all other creatures already existed, any such further account of their production by the Maharshis, as is given in verse 36, seems to be not only superfluous but contradictory.

⁶⁴ It will be observed that here Sväyambhuva is included in the seven Manus, although in verse 36 (see above) it is said that the ten Maharshis, who had themselves been created by Sväyambhuva (vv. 34 f.), produced seven other Manus.

After some preliminary explanations regarding the divisions of time as reckoned by men and gods, etc. (vv. 64-78), the author proceeds to tell us how long each of these Manus reigns:

* 79. Yat prāk dvādaśa-sāhasram uditam daivikam yugam | tad eka-saptati-guṇam manvantaram ihochyate | 80. Manvantarāny asankhyāni sargaḥ samhāra eva cha | krīḍann ivaitat kurute Parameshṭhī punaḥ punaḥ |

"The age (yuga) of the gods mentioned before, consisting of twelve thousand (years), when multiplied by seventy-one, is here called a manvantara. 80. There are innumerable manvantaras, creations and destructions. The Supreme Being performs this again and again, as if in sport."

A more detailed account of these great mundane periods will be given in the next section, when I come to take up the Vishnu Purana. Meanwhile it may be remarked that the present manvantara is that of the last of the Manus above enumerated, or Manu Vaivasvata, who, according to verse 63, must have created the existing world. But if such be the case, it does not appear why the creation of Manu Syāyambhuva, with which the present race of mortals can have little to do. should have been by preference related to the rishis in vv. 33 ff. It must, however, be observed that in v. 33 Manu Svayambhuva described himself as the former of "this" (i.e., the existing) universe, and there is no doubt that the whole code of laws prescribed in the sequel of the work is intended by the author to be observed by the existing race of Indians (see verses 102 ff. of the first book). We must, therefore, suppose that the creations of the later Manus are substantially identical with that of the first; or that there is some confusion or inconsistency in the accounts which I have cited. Perhaps both suppositions may be correct.

In vv. 81-86, the four Yugas (or great ages of the world) the Kṛita, Tretā, Dvāpara, aud Kali, their gradual deterioration, and the special duties peculiar to each, are described. 65

cs In v. 86 these predominant duties are said to be austere fervour in the Krita age, knowledge in the Tretā, sacrifice in the Dvāpara, and liberality alone in the Kali (tapah param Krita-yuge tretāyām jnānam uchyate | dvāpare yajnam evāhur dānam ekam kalau yuge). This, as remarked in Weber's Indische Studien, 282 f., note, is not quite in conformity with the view of the Mundaka Upanishad, i. 2, 1, which states:

At verse 87, Bhrigu recurs to the four castes:

87. Sarvasyāsya tu sargasya gupty-artham sa mahādyutiḥ | mukhabāhūru-paj-jānām prithak karmāny akalpayat |

"For the preservation of this whole creation, that glorious being (Brahmā) ordained separate functions for those who sprang from his mouth, his arms, his thighs, and his feet."

These functions are then detailed (vv. 88-92). In verse 93, the grounds of the Brāhmans' pre-eminence are stated:

93. Uttamāngobhavāj jyaishṭhyād brahmaṇaś chaiva dhāraṇāt | sarvasyaivāsya sargasya dharmato brāhmaṇaḥ prabhuḥ | 94. Tam hi svayambhūḥ svād āsyāt tapas taptvā "dito 'srijat |

Since the Brahman sprang from the most excellent organ, since he is the first-born and possesses the Veda, he is by nature the lord of this whole creation. Him, the self-existent (Brahmā) after exercising fervid abstraction, formed at the first from his own mouth."

But as there are grades of excellence among created things, and among men themselves (96), so are there also among Brahmans:

97. Brāhmaneshu cha vidvāmso vidvatsu kṛita-buddhayaḥ | kṛita-buddhishu karttāraḥ karttṛishu brahma-vedinaḥ |

"Among Brāhmans the learned are the most excellent, among the learned the resolute, among the resolute those who act, and among them who act they who possess divine knowledge."

In a subsequent part of the work (xii. 40 ff.) we find men in general, the castes, and indeed all existing things, from Brahmā downwards, classified according to their participation in different degrees in the three gunas, or qualities (sattva, "goodness," rajas, "passion," and tamas, "darkness").

39. Yena yāms tu gunenaishām samsārān pratipadyate | tān samāsena vakshyāmi sarvasyāsya yathākramam | 40. Devatvam sāttvikā yānti manushyatvam cha rājasāh | tiryaktvam tāmasā nityam ity eshā tri-tat etat satyam mantreshu karmāṇi kavayo yāny apasyams tāni tretāyām bahudhā santatāni | "This is true: the rites which sages beheld in the hymns, are in great variety celebrated in the Tretā." In the same way the M. Bh. iii. v. 11,248, says that sacrifices and rites prevail in the Tretā (tato yajnāḥ pravarttante dharmās cha vividhāh kriyāḥ | tretāyām ityādi). See also M. Bh. xii. 13,090. The word krita, as the name of the first yuga is thus explained in a previous verse of the former of these two passages (11,235): kritam eva na karttavyam tasmin kāle yugottame | "In the time of that most excellent Yuga (everything) has been done, (and does) not (remain) to be done."

vidhā gatiḥ | . . . 43. Hastinaś cha turangāś cha śūdrā mlechhāś cha garhitāḥ | simhā vyāghrā varāhāś cha madhyamā tāmasī gatiḥ | . . . 46. Rājānaḥ kshattriyāś chaiva rājnaś chaiva purohitāḥ | vāda-guddha-pradhānāś cha madhyamā rājasī gatiḥ | . . . 48. Tāpasā yatayo viprā ye cha vaimānikā gaṇāḥ | nakshatrāṇi cha daityāś cha prathamā sāttvihī gatiḥ | 49. Yajvāna rishayo devā vedā jyotīmshi vatsarāḥ | pitaraś chaiva sādhyāś cha dvitīyā sāttvikī gatiḥ | 50. Brahmā viśvasrijo dharmo mahān avyaktam eva cha | uttamām sāttvikīm etām gatim āhur maṇīshinaḥ |

"39. I shall now declare succinctly in order the states which the soul reaches by means of each of these qualities. 40. Souls endowed with the sattva quality attain to godhead; those having the rajas quality become men; whilst those characterized by tamas always become beasts—such is the threefold destination . . . 43. Elephants, horses, Südras and contemptible Mlechhas, lions, tigers, and boars form the middle dark condition . . . 46. Kings, Kshattriyas, a king's priests (purohitāh), and men whose chief occupation is the war of words, compose the middle condition of passion . . . 48. Devotees, ascetics, Brāhmans, the deities borne on aerial cars, constellations, and Daityas, constitute the lowest condition of goodness. 49. Sacrificing priests, rishis, gods, the vedas, the celestial luminaries, years, the fathers, the Sādhyas, form the second condition of goodness. 50. Brahmā, the creators, for righteousness, the Great One (mahat), the Unapparent One (avyakta), compose the highest condition of goodness."

⁶⁶ These "creators" (viśvasrijah) are thus mentioned in Taitt. Br. iii. 12, 9, 2. Adarsam Agnim chinvanah purve visvasrijo 'mritah | satam varsha-sahasrani dikshitāh satram āsata | 3. tapah āsīd grihapatir Brahma brahmā 'bhavat svayam | satyam ha hotaisham asid yad visvasrija asata | amritam ebhya udagayat sahasram parivatsarān | bhūtam ha prastotaishām āsīd bhavishyat prati chāharat | prāno adhvaryur abhavad idam sarvam sishāsatām | . . . 7. Viśvasrijah prathamāh satram āsata | | tato ha jajne bhuvanasya gopāh hiranmayah sakunir Brahma nāma | yena sūryas tapati tejaseddhah | . . . 8. Etena vai viśvasrijah idam visvam asrijanta yad visvam asrijanta tasmād visvasrijah | visvam enān anu prajāyate | "2. The ancient and immortal creators of the universe, keeping fire kindled till they saw the new moon, and consecrated, were engaged in a sacrifice for 100,000 years. 3. Austere fervour was the householder; Prayer itself (brahma) was the brahma priest; Truth was their hotri, when the creators were so occupied. Immortality was their udgātri for a thousand years. The Past was their prastotri, the Future their pratihartri; Breath was the adhvaryu, whilst they were seeking to obtain all this." After a good deal more of this allegory, the author proceeds in para.: 7. "These first

It will be observed that the different parts of this account of the mode in which the three qualities are distributed, are not quite in harmony. From v. 40 it would appear that all souls having the quality of passion become men; and yet we find from vv. 43, 48, and 49, that Sūdras belong to the tāmasa class, and Brāhmans, of different descriptions, to two of the Sāttvika grades. According to the rule enunciated in v. 40, the latter ought to have been born as gods.

It is, further, remarkable that in this enumeration Sudras are found in the same category with Mlechhas (v. 43), that the Vaisyas are not accommodated with a position in any of the classes, that Kshattriyas and kings' domestic priests, who are of course Brahmans, and others (who must be Brāhmans) fond of disputation on learned questions 67 (though not stated to be heretical) are ranked together as "passionate" (v. 46), while other Brāhmans of different characters are placed in two of the higher grades, Brahmans simply so called (viprah) being regarded as "good" in the lowest degree (v. 48), and sacrificing priests (yajvānah) sharing with rishis, gods, the vedas, etc., the honour of the middle condition of goodness. It is not clear whether the devotees, and ascetics, mentioned in v. 48, belong to the same caste as the Brāhmans with whom they are associated, or may also be men of the inferior classes. Nor is it evident for what reason the sacrificing priests (yajvānah), specified in v. 49, are so much more highly estimated than the king's priests (rājnah purchitah) in v. 46, since the latter also officiate at sacrifices. honourable position assigned to Daityas in the lowest class of "good" beings (v. 48) is also deserving of notice. We shall see in the following chapter that the Puranas variously describe mankind as belonging entirely to the "passionate" class (see v. 40, above) and as characterized by the three other "qualities," according to their caste.

creators were engaged in sacrifice . . . Thence was born the preserver of the world, the golden bird called Brahma, by whom the sun glows, kindled with light. . . . 8. . . . Through this the creators created this universe. As they created the universe, they are called vis vasrijah. . Everything is created after them." See above the reference made to rishayo bhūta-kritah in p. 36. The allegory in this extract from the Taitt. Br. resembles in its character that in the sixth verse of the Purusha Sūkta.

⁶⁷ S'arstarthakalaha- priyas cha | Comm.

Sect. VI.—Account of the System of Yugas, Manvanturas, and Kalpas, according to the Vishau Purāṇa, and other authorities.

I shall in the next section adduce the description given in the Vishnu Purāṇa of the creation of living creatures, and the origin of the four castes, after first supplying in the present some explanation of the great mundane periods, the Yugas, Manvantaras, Kalpas, etc.

The computations of these great periods are stated in the third chapter of the first book, and in the first chapter of the sixth book, and are clearly explained by Professor Wilson in his notes to page 50 of his translation.

One year of mortals is equal to one day of the gods.68

12,000 divine years are equal to a period of four Yugas, which is thus made up, viz.:

Kṛita Yuga with its mornings and evenings.....4,800 divine years Tretā Yuga ,, ,, ,, ,,3,600 ,, ,, Dvāpara Yuga ,, ,, ,, ,,2,400 ,, ,, Kali Yuga ,, ,, ,, ,,1,200 ,, ,, making... 12,000 divine years. 69

As a day of the gods is = to one year of mortals, the 12,000 divine years must be multiplied by 360, the assumed number of days in a year, to give the number of the years of mortals in this great period of four yugas, thus: 12,000 divine years \times 360 = 4,320,000 years of mortals. 1000 of these periods of 12,000 divine, or 4,320,000 human, years—i.e., 4,320,000,000 human years are = 1 day of Brahmā, or and his night is of the same duration. Within that period of a day of Brahmā, 14 Manus reign, and a Manvantara, or period of Manu,

⁶⁸ Vishnu P. vi. 1, 4 ahorātram pitrīnām tu māso'bdas tridivaukasām | See also Manu i. 66 and 67. The Taitt. Br. iii. 9, 22, 1, too, states: ekam vai etad devānām ahar yat samvatsarah | "This period of a year is one day of the gods."

⁶⁹ i. 3, 10. Divyair varsha-sahasraistu krita-tretādi-sanjnitam | chaturyugam dvūdaslabhis tad-vibhāgam nibodha me | 11. chatvūri trīni dve chaikam kritūdishu yathākramam | divyābdānām sahasrāni yugeshv āhur purāvidah | 12. Tat-pramānaih s'ataih sandhyā pūrvā tatrābhidhīyate | sandhyāmsakas cha tat-tulyo yugasyānantaro hi saḥ | 13. Sandhyā-sandhyāmsayor antar yaḥ kālo muni-sattama | yugākhyaḥ sa tu vijneyaḥ krita-tretādi-sanjnitaḥ |

⁷⁰ V. P. i. 3, 14. Kritañ tretā dvāparas cha kalis chaiva chaturyugan | prochyate tat-sahasrañ cha Brahmano divasam mune | See also Manu i. 72.

⁷¹ V. P. i. 3, 15. Brahmano divase brahman Manavas cha chaturdasa | bhavanti | is consequently = the 14th part of a day of Brahmā. In the present Kalpa (= a day of Brahmā) six Manus, of whom Svāyambhuva was the first, have already passed away, the present Manu being Vaivasvata. In each Manvantara seven rishis, certain deities, an Indra, a Manu, and the kings, his sons, are created and perish. A thousand of the systems of 4 Yugas, as has been before explained, occur coincidently with these 14 Manvantaras; and consequently about 71 systems of 4 Yugas elapse during each Manvantara, and measure the lives of the Manu and the deities of the period. At the close of this day of Brahmā a collapse (pratisancharaḥ) of the universe takes place, which lasts through a night of Brahmā, equal in duration to his day, during which period the three worlds are converted into one great ocean, when the lotus-born god, expanded by his deglutition of the universe, and contemplated by the yogis and gods in Janaloka, sleeps on the serpent Sesha. At the end of that night he awakes and creates anew.

A year of Brahmā is composed of the proper number of such days and nights; and 100 such years constitute his whole life. The period of his life is called Para, and the half of it Parārddha, or the half of a Para. One Parārddha, or half of Brahmā's existence, has now expired, terminating with the great Kalpa, called the Pādma Kalpa. The now existing Kalpa, or day of Brahmā, called Vārāha (or that of the boar), is the first of the second Parārddha of Brahmā's existence.⁷⁷ The

73 V.P. i. 3, 16. Saptarshayah surāḥ S'akro Manus tat-sūnavo nṛipāh | ekakāle hi srijyante samhriyante cha pūrvavat |

Ti Ibid ver. 17. Chaturyugānām̃ sankhyātā sādhikā hy eka saptatiḥ | manvantaram Manoḥ kālaḥ suradīnām̃ cha sattama | See also Manu i. 79.

 75 The birth of Prajāpati on a lotus-leaf is mentioned in the Taitt. Ārany. i. 23, 1, quoted above, p. 32.

76 Ibid 20. Chaturdaśa-guno hy esha kālo brāhmam ahaḥ smṛitam | brāhmo naimittiko nāma tasyānte pratisancharaḥ | . . . 22. Ekārṇave tu trailokye Brahmā Nārāyaṇātmakaḥ | bhogi-śayyāgataḥ śete trailokya-grāsa-vriñhitaḥ | 23. Janasthair yogi-bhir devaiś chintyamāno 'bja-sambhavaḥ | tat-pramāṇām hi tām rātrim tadante srijate punaḥ | See also V. P. i. 2, 59-62, as translated by Wilson, vol. i. p. 41.

77 Ibid ver. 24. Evam tu Brahmano varsham eva^m varsha-satam cha tat | satam hi tasya varshanam param ayur mahatmanah | 25. Ekam asya vyatītam tu pararddham Brahmano 'nagha | tasyānte 'bhūd mahākalpah Pādmah ity abhivisrutah | dvitīyasya

⁷² This is stated by Manu i. 62 ff. (see above), as well as in the third book of the V. P. i. 3, which gives the names in the same order: Svāyambhuvo Manuh pūrvo Manuh Svārochishas tathā | Auttamis Tāmasas chaiva Raivatas Chākshushas tathā | shad ete Manavo 'tītāh sāmpratam tu Raveh sutah | Vaivasvato 'yam yasyaitat saptamam varttate 'ntaram |

dissolution, which occurs at the end of each Kalpa, or day of Brahmā, is called naimittika, incidental, occasional, or contingent. (See Wilson's Vishnu Purana, vol. i. of Dr. Hall's edition, p. 52, with the editor's note; and vol. ii. p. 269. For an account of the other dissolutions of the universe I refer to the same work, vol. i. p. 113, and to pp. 630-633 of the original 4to. edition.)

Of this elaborate system of Yugas, Manvantaras, and Kalpas, of enormous duration, no traces are found in the hymns of the Rig-veda. Their authors were, indeed, familiar with the word Yuga, s which frequently occurs in the sense of age, generation, or tribe. Thus in i. 139, 8; iii. 26, 3; vi. 8, 5; vi. 15, 8; vi. 36, 5; x. 94, 12, the phrase yuge yuge means "in every age." In iii. 33, 8; x. 10, 10, we have uttarā yugāni, "future ages," and in x. 72, 1, uttare yuge, "in a later age;" in vii. 70, 4, pūrvāni yugāni, "former ages," and in i. 184, 3, yuga jūrnā, "past ages." In i. 92, 11; i. 103, 4; i. 115, 2; i. 124, 2; i. 144, 4; i ii. 2, 2; v. 52, 4; vi. 16, 23; vii. 9, 4; viii. 46, 12; viii. 51, 9; ix. 12, 7; x. 27, 19; x. 140, 6 s (in all of which places, except i. 115, 2, the word is combined with manushyā, mānushā, manushah, or janānām), yuga seems to denote "generatious" of men, or parārādhasya varttamānasya vai dvija | Vārāhah iti kalpo 'yam prathamah parikalvitah |

78 In Professor Willson's Dictionary three senses are assigned to yuga (neuter) (1) a pair; (2) an age as the Kṛita, Tretā, etc.; (3) a lustre, or period of five years. When used as masculine the word means, according to the same authority, (1) a yoke; (2) a measure of four cubits, etc.; (3) a particular drug.

79 Sāyana, on iii. 36, 3, explains it by pratidinam, "every day;" on vi. 8, 5; vi. 15, 8; vi. 36, 5, by kāle kāle, "at every time."

80 Sāyana takes the phrase for former "couples of husbands and wives," mithunāni jāvāņatirūpāni.

²¹ In i. 92, 11 and i. 124, 2, Ushas (the Dawn) is spoken of as, praminatī manushyā yugāni, "wearing away human terms of existence, or generations." In commenting on the former text Sāyana explains yugāni as equivalent to krita-tretādīni, "the Krita, Tretā, and other ages," whilst in explaining the second, he takes the same word as signifying yugopalakshitān nimeshādi-kālāvayavān, "the seconds and other component parts of time indicated by the word," or as equivalent to yugmāni, "the conjunctions of men,"—since the dawn scatters abroad to their several occupations men who had been previously congregated together!" In his note on i. 144, 4, he gives an option of two different senses: manoh sambhandhīni yugāni jāyāpati-rupāni hotradhvaryurūnāni vā | "couples consisting of husband and wife, or of the hotri and adhvaryu priests."

⁶² This verse, ix. 12, 7, is also found in Sāma V. ii. 552, where, however, yujā is substituted for yugā.

83 This verse occurs also in Sāma V. ii. 1171, and Vāj. S. xii. 111.

rather, in some places, "tribes" of men. In v. 73, 3, the phrase nāhushā yugā must have a similar meaning. In i. 158, 6, it is said that the rishi Dīrghatamas became worn out in the tenth yuga; an which Professor Wilson remarks (R. V. vol. ii. 104, note): "The scholiast understands yuga in its ordinary interpretation; but the yuga of five years is perhaps intended, a lustrum, which would be nothing marvellous." Professor Aufrecht proposes to render, "in the tenth stage of life." The first passage of the Rig-veda, in which there is any indication of a considerable mundane period being denoted, is x. 72, 2 f., where "a first," or, "an earlier age (yuga) of the gods" is mentioned (devānām pūrvye yuge; devānām prathame yuge) when "the existent sprang from the non-existent" (asatah sad ajāyata); but no allusion is made to its length. In the same indefinite way reference is made in x. 97, 1, to certain "plants which were produced before the gods,three ages (yugas) earlier" (yāh oshadhīh pūrvāh jātāh devebhyas triyugam purā). In one verse of the Atharva-veda, however, the word yuga is so employed as to lead to the supposition that a period of very long duration is intended. It is there said, viii. 2, 21: śatam te ayutam hāyanān dve yuge trīni chatvāri krinmah | " we allot to thee a hundred, ten thousand, years, two, three, four ages (yugas)."84 As we may with probability assume that the periods here mentioned proceed in the ascending scale of duration, two yugas, and perhaps even one yuga. must be supposed to exceed 10,000 years.

The earliest comparison between divine and human periods of duration of which I am aware is found in the text of the Taitt. Br. quoted above in a note to p. 42: "A year is one day of the gods. But so far as that passage itself shows, there is no reason to imagine that the statement it contains was anything more than an isolated idea, or that the conception had, at the time when the Brāhmanas were compiled, been developed, and a system of immense mundane periods, whether ⁸⁴ For the context of this line see Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1866, page 42.

^{}S An analogous idea is found in the S'atapatha Brāhmana xiv. 7, 1, 33 ff. (=Bṛi-hadāraṇyaka Upanishad pp. 817 ff. of Cal. ed.) atha ye śatam manushyāṇām ānandāḥ sa ekaḥ pitrīṇāmjitalokānām ānandāḥ | "now a hundred pleasures of men are one pleasure of the Pitṛis who have conquered the worlds." And so on in the same way; a hundred pleasures of the Pitṛis equalling one pleasure of the Karmadevas (or gods who have become so by works); a hundred pleasures of the latter equalling one pleasure of the gods who were born such, etc.

human or divine, had been elaborated. That, however, the authors of the Brāhmanas were becoming familiar with the idea of extravagantly large numbers is clear from the passage in the Taitt. Br. iii. 12, 9, 2, quoted above, p. 41, in the note on Manu xii. 50, where it is said that the creators were engaged in a sacrifice for 100,000 years.

Professor Roth is of opinion (see his remarks under the word Krita in his Lexicon) that according to the earlier conception stated in Manu i. 69, and the Mahābhārata (12,826 ff.), the four Yugas—Krita, Tretā, Dvāpara, and Kali, with their mornings and evenings, consisted respectively of no more than 4,800; 3,600; 2,400; and 1,200 ordinary years of mortals; and that it was the commentators on Manu, and the compilers of the Purāṇas, who first converted the years of which they were made up into divine years. The verse of Manu to which Professor Roth refers (i. 69), and the one which follows, are certainly quite silent about the years composing the Krita age being divine years:

Chatvāry āhuḥ sahasrāni varshānañ tu kritañ yugam | tasya tāvach-chhatī sandhyā sandhyāñśchaścha tathāvidhaḥ | 70. Itareshu sasandhyeshu sasandhāñśeshu cha trishu | ekāpāyena varttante sahasrāni śatāni cha | "They say that four thousand years compose the krita yuga, with as many hundred years for its morning and the same for its evening. 70. In the other three yugas, with their mornings and evenings, the thousands and hundreds are diminished successively by one."

Verse 71 is as follows: Yad etat parisankhyātam ādāv eva chaturyugam | etad dvādaśa-sāhasram devānām yugam uchyate | which, as explained by Medhātithi, may be thus rendered: "Twelve thousand of these periods of four yugas, as above reckoned, are called a Yuga of the gods." Medhātithi's words, as quoted by Kullūka, are these:
Chaturyugair eva dvādaśa-sahasra-sankhyair divyam yugam | "A divine Yuga is formed by four yugas to the number of twelve thousand."
Kullūka, however, says that his predecessor's explanation is mistaken, and must not be adopted (Medhātither bhrāmo nādarttavyaḥ).
His own opinion is that the system of yugas mentioned in vv. 69 and 71 are identical, both being made up of divine years. According to this view, we must translate v. 71 as follows: "The period of four yugas, consisting of twelve thousand years, which has been reckoned above, is called a Yuga of the gods." This certainly appears to be the preferable translation, and it is confirmed by the tenor of verse 79. Verse 71, however, may represent a later stage of opinion, as it is not found in the following passage of the Mahābhārata, where the previous verse (69) is repeated, and verse 70 is expanded into three verses, though without any alteration of the sense:

M. Bh. iii. 12826 ff. — Ādito manuja-vyāghra kritsnasya jagatah kshaye | chatvāry āhuḥ sahasrāni varshānām tat kritam yugam | tasya tāvachchhatī sandhyā sandhyāmscha tathāvidhaḥ |

"In the beginning, after the destruction of the entire universe, they say that there are four thousand years: that is the Krita Yuga, which has a morning of as many hundred years, and an evening of the same duration." And then, after enumerating in like manner the other three Yugas with their respective thousands and hundreds successively diminished by one, the speaker (the sage Mārkandeya) proceeds in verse 12831: Eshā dvādaśahasrī yugākhyā parikīrttitā | etat sahasraparyantam aho brāhmam udāhritam | "This period of twelve thousand years is known by the appellation of the Yugas. A period extending to a thousand of these is called a day of Brahmā."

Nowhere, certainly, in this passage is any mention made of the years being divine years.

The earliest known text in which the names of the four Yugas are found is a verse occurring in the story of Sunahsepha in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa vii. 15: Kaliḥ śayāno bhavati sanjihānas tu dvāparaḥ | uttishthams tretā bhavati kṛitam sampadyate charan | "A man while lying is the Kali; moving himself, he is the Dvāpara; rising, he is the Tretā; walking, he becomes the Kṛita." But this brief allusion leaves us Structure has been already translated no less than six times; twice into German by Weber and Roth (Ind. Stud. i. 286 and 460), once into Latin by Streiter (see Ind. Stud. ix. 315), and thrice into English, by Wilson (Journ. R. A. S. for 1851, p. 99), Müller (Anc. Sansk. Lit. p. 412), and Haug (Ait. Br. ii. 464). All these authors, except the last, concur in considering the verse as referring to the four Yugas. Dr. Haug, however, has the following note: "Säyana does not give any explanation of this important passage, where the names of the Yugas are mentioned for the first time. These four names are, as is well known from other sources, . . . names of dice, used at gambling. The meaning of this Gāthā is, There is every success to be hoped; for the unluckiest die, the Kali is lying, two others are slowly moving and half fallen, but the luckiest, the Krita, is in full motion. The position of dice here given is indicatory of a fair chance of winning the game." Both Dr. Haug's translation and note are criticised by Professor Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 319). Of the following verses, which occur in Manu ix. 301 f., the second is a paraphrase of that in the Aitareya Brāh-quite in the dark as to the duration which was assigned to these yugas in the age when the Brāhmana was compiled.

Sect. VII.—Account of the different creations, including that of the castes, according to the Vishnu Purāna.

I commence with the following general account of the cosmogony of the Vishnu Purāna, extracted from Professor Wilson's Preface to his translation of that work, vol. i. p. xciii.:

"The first book of the six, into which the work is divided, is occupied chiefly with the details of creation, primary (sarga), and secondary (pratisarga); the first explains how the universe proceeds from Prakriti, or eternal crude matter; 57 the second, in what manner the forms of things are developed from the elementary substances previously evolved, or how they re-appear after their temporary destruction. 58 Both these creations are periodical; but the termination of the first occurs only at the end of the life of Brahmā, when not only all the gods and all other forms are annihilated, but the elements are again merged into primary substance, besides which only one spiritual being exists. The latter takes place at the end of every Kalpa or day of Brahmā, and affects only the forms of inferior creatures and lower worlds, leaving the substances of the universe entire, and sages and gods unharmed." 59

mana: Kṛitam tretā-yugam chaiva dvāparam kalir eva cha | rājno vṛittāni sarvāṇi rājā hi yugam uchyate | 302. Kalih prasupto bhavati sa jāgrat dvāparam yugam | karmasv abhyudyatas tretā vicharams tu kṛitam yugam | "301. The Kṛita, Tretā, Dvāpara, and Kali yugas are all modes of a king's action; for a king is called a yuga. 302. While asleep he is the Kali; waking he is the Dvāpara age; intent upon action he is the Tretā, moving about he is the Kṛita." The former of these two verses of Manu is reproduced nearly verbatim in the M. Bh. xii. 3408; and the same idea is expanded in the same book of the same poem, vv. 2674 ff., 2682, 2684, 2686, 2693 ff. The words kṛita, tretā, dvāpara, and kali, are found in the Vāj.-Sanhitā, xxx. 18, and in the Taitt. Brāhmana, iii. 4, 1, 16; but in both places they denote dice, as does also the word kṛita in the Chhāndogya Upan. iv. 1, 4 (where see the commentary). On the Yugas the reader of German may also consult Weber's Indische Studien, i. pp. 39, 87 f., 282 ff.

87 [See Book i. chapter ii.]

88 [See the fourth and following chapters of Book i.]

⁸⁹ See Book i, at the close of chapter vii. p. 113 of vol. i. of Professor Wilson's translation, 2nd edition, and also p. 621 and 630 of the original 4to, edition. As regards,

I proceed with the details of the creation which took place in the Vārāha Kalpa, as described in book i. chapter 4, vv. 2, ff::

Atīta-kalpāvasāne niśā-suptotthitah prabhuh | sattvodriktas tato Brahmā śūnyam lokam avaikshata | 3. Nārāyanah paro 'chintyah pareshām api sa prabhuh | Brahma-svarūpī bhavagān anādih sarvasambhavah | . . . 6. Toyantah sa mahīm jnātvā jagaty ekārņave prabhuḥ | anumānād tad-uddhāram karttu-kāmaḥ prajāpatiḥ | 7. Akarot sa tanum anyam kalpādishu yathā purā | matsya-kurmādikām tadvad vārāham vapur āsthitah | 8. Veda-yajnamayam rūpam asesha-jagatah sthitau | sthitaķ sthirātmā sarvātmā paramātmā prajāpatiķ | 9. Janaloka-qataih siddhair Sanakādyair abhishthutah | praviveša tadā toyam ātmādhāro dharā-dharah | 45. Evam śamstūyamānastu paramātmā mahīdharah | ujjahāra mahīm kshipram nyastavāms cha mahāmbhasi | 46. Tasyopari jalaughasya mahatī naur iva sthitā | vitatatatvāt tu dehasya na mahī yāti samplavam | tataḥ kshitim samām kṛitvā pṛithivyām so 'chinod girīn | yathā-vibhāgam bhagavān anādih purushottamah | 47. Prāk-sarga-dagdhān akhilān parvatān prithivītale | amoghena prabhāvena sasarjāmogha-vāmchhitah | 48. Bhuvi bhāgam tatah kritvā sapta-dvīpān yathātathā | bhūr-ādyām's chaturo lokān pūrvavat samakalpayat | 49. Brahma-rūpadharo devas tato 'sau rajasā "vṛitaḥ | chakara srishtim bhagavams chatur-vaktra-dharo Harih | 50. nimittamātram evāsau srijyānām sarga-karmaņām | pradhāna-kāraṇībhūtā yato vai srijya-śaktayah | 51. Nimitta-mātram muktvaikam nānyat kinchid apekshyate | nīyate tapatām śreshtha sva-śaktyā vastu vastutām | "2. At the end of the past (or Pādma) Kalpa, arising from his night slumber, Brahmā, the lord, endowed predominantly with the quality of goodness, beheld the universe void. 3. He (was) the supreme lord Nārāyaṇa, who cannot even be conceived by other beings, the deity without beginning, the source of all things, existing in the form of Brahma." [The verse given in Manu i. 10, regarding the derivation of the word Nārāyana (see above p. 35) is here quoted]. "6. This lord of creatures, discovering by inference, -when the world had become one ocean,—that the earth lay within the waters, and being desirous to raise it up, (7) assumed another body. As formerly, at the beginnings of the Kalpas, he had taken the form of a fish, a tortoise, and so forth, 90 (so now) entering the body of a boar (8), a form composed of the vedas and of sacrifice,—the lord of creatures. who, throughout the entire continuance of the world, remains fixed, the universal soul, the supreme soul, self-sustained, the supporter of the earth (9),—being hymned by Sanaka and the other saints, who had (at the dissolution of the lower worlds) proceeded to Janaloka, entered the water." [He is then addressed by the goddess Earth in a hymn of praise, as Vishnu, and as the supreme Brahma, vv. 10-24. The boar then rises from the lower regions, tossing up the earth with his tusk, and is again lauded by Sanandana and other saints in a second hymn, in the course of which he himself is identified with sacrifice, and his various members with its different instruments and accompaniments, vv. 25-44]. "45. Being thus lauded, the supreme soul, the upholder of the earth, lifted her up quickly and placed her upon the great waters. 46. Resting upon this mass of water, like a vast ship, she does not sink, owing to her expansion. Then, having levelled the earth, the divine eternal Purushottasna heaped together mountains according to their divisions. 47. He whose will cannot be frustrated, by his unfailing power, created on the surface of the earth all those mountains which had been burnt up in the former creation. 48. Having then divided the earth, just as it had been, into seven dvīpas, he formed the four worlds Bhūrloka and others as before. 49. Becoming next pervaded with the quality of passion, that divine being Hari, assuming the form of Brahmā, with four faces, effected the creation. 50. But he is merely the instrumental cause of the things to be created and of the creative operations, since the properties of the things to be created arise from Pradhana as their (material) cause. 51. Excepting an instrumental cause alone, nothing else is required. Every substance (vastu) is brought into the state of substance (vastutā) by its own inherent power." 91

however, the statement with which the paragraph concludes, compare vol. i. p. 50, as well as vol. ii. p. 269, of the same work.

⁹⁰ No mention is made in the Brāhmaṇas (as I have already observed) of any such periods as the Kalpas. But here an attempt is made to systematize the different stories scattered through those older works which variously describe the manner in which the creation was effected—with the view, perhaps, of reconciling the discrepancies in those free and artless speculations which offended the critical sense of a later age.

⁹¹ See Professor Wilson's translation of these verses, and the new version proposed by the editor of the second edition, Dr. Hall, p. 66, note. I do not think the phrase [Before proceeding further with the narrative of the Vishnu Purāna, I wish to quote or refer to some passages from the Taittirīya Sanhitā and Brāhmana and from the Satapatha Brāhmana, which appear to furnish the original germs of the legends of the boar, fish, tortoise, and dwarf incarnations.

The first of these texts is from the Taittirīya Sanhitā, vii. 1, 5, 1 ff:

Āpo vai idam agre salilam ūsīt | tasmin Prajāpatir vāyur bhūtvā acharat | sa imām apaśyat | tam varāho bhūtvā āharat | tām Viśvakarmā bhūtvā vyamārṭ | sā aprathata | sā prithivy abhavat | tat prithivyai prithivitvam | tasyām aśrāmyat Prajāpatih | sa devān aṣrijata Vasūn Rudrān Ādityān | te devāḥ Prajāpatim abruvan "prajāyāmahai" iti | so 'bravīd "yathā aham yushmāms tapasā aṣrikshi evam tapasi prajananam ichchhadhvam" iti | tebhyo 'gnim āyatanam prāyachhad "etena āyatanena śrāmyata" iti | te 'gninā āyatanena aśrāmyan | te samvatsare ekām gām aṣrijanta |

"This universe was formerly waters, fluid. On it Prajāpati, becoming wind, moved." He saw this (earth). Becoming a boar, he took her up. Becoming Viśvakarman, he wiped (the moisture from) her. She extended. She became the extended one (prithivī). From this the earth derives her designation as the extended one. In her Prajāpati performed arduous devotion. He created gods, Vasus, Rudras, and Adityas. The gods said to Prajāpati, 'let us be propagated.' He answered, 'As I have created you through austere fervour, so do ye seek after propagation in austere fervour.' He gave them Agni as a resting-place (saying), 'With this as a resting-place perform your devotion.' They (accordingly) performed devotion with Agni as a resting-place. In a year they created one cow, etc." 183 sra-saktyā can be properly rendered, as Dr. Hall does, "by its potency." The reading of the MSS. in v. 50, pradhāna-kāranībhūtāh seems to me doubtful, as it would most naturally mean "have become the Pradhāna-cause." I conjecture pradhāna-kāranodbhūtah, which gives the sense which seems to be required.

s2' It is possible that the idea assigned to the word Nārāyana (see Manu i. 10, above), "he whose place of movement is the waters," may be connected with this passage. See also Genesis i. 2, "And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters."

⁹³ After having noticed this passage in the Taittirīya Sanhitā, I became aware that it had been previously translated by Mr. Colebrooke (Essays i. 75, or p. 44 of Williams & Norgate's edition). Mr. Colebrooke prefaces his version by remarking, "The pre-

The second passage is from the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, i. 1, 3, 5 ff. Āpo vai idam agre salilam āsīt | tena Prajūpatir aśrāmyat "katham idam syād" iti | so 'paśyat pushkara-parnam tishthat | so 'manyata " asti vai tād yasminn idam adhitishṭhati" iti | sa varāho rūpam kritvā upanyamajjat | sa pṛithivīm adhaḥ ārchhat | tasyā upahatya udamajjat | tat pushkara-parṇe 'prathayat | yad "aprathata" tat pṛithivyai pṛithivitvam | "abhūd vai idam" iti tad bhūmyai bhūmitvam | tām diśo'nu vātaḥ samavahat | tām śarkarābhir adṛimhat |

"This (universe) was formerly water, fluid." With that (water) Prajāpati practised arduous devotion (saying), 'how shall this (universe be (developed)?' He beheld a lotus-leaf standing. He thought, 'there is somewhat on which this (lotus-leaf) rests.' He as a boar—having assumed that form—plunged beneath towards it. He found the earth down below. Breaking off (a portion of) her, he rose to the surface. He then extended it on the lotus-leaf. Inasmuch as he extended it, that is the extension of the extended one (the earth). This became (abhūt). From this the earth derives its name of bhūmī. The wind carried her, to the four quarters. He strengthened her with gravel, etc., etc.

The Satapatha Brāhmana, xiv. 1, 2, 11, has the following reference to the same idea, although here Prajāpati himself is not the boar:

Iyatī ha vai iyam agre prithivy āsa prādeśa-mātrī | tām Emūshaḥ iti varāhaḥ ujjaghāna | so 'syāḥ patiḥ Prajāpatis tena eva enam etan-mithunena priyeṇa dhāmnā samardhayati kritsnam karoti |

"Formerly this earth was only so large, of the size of a span. A boar called Emūsha raised her up. Her lord Prajāpati, therefore, prospers him with (the gift of) this pair, the object of his desire, and makes him complete."

Another of the incarnations referred to in the preceding passage of sent extract was recommended for selection by its allusion to a mythological notion, which apparently gave origin to the story of the $Var\bar{a}ha-avat\bar{a}ra$, and from which an astronomical period, entitled Calpa, has perhaps been taken."

⁹⁴ The Commentator gives an alternative explanation, viz., that the word salila is the same as sarira, according to the text of the Veda, "these worlds are sarira" ("ime vai lokāh sariram" iti śruteh).

⁹⁵ "Supported upon the end of a long stalk" (dīrghanālāgre'vasthitam), according to the Commentator. In a passage from the Taitt. Āranyaka, already quoted (p. 32, above), it is said that Prajāpati himself was born on a lotus-leaf.

the Vishnu Purāna is foreshadowed in the following text from the Satapatha Brāhmana, vii. 5, 1, 5:

Sa yat kūrmo nāma | etad vai rūpam̃ kritvā Prajāpatiḥ prajāh asrijata | yad asrijata akarot tat | yad akarot tasmāt kūrmaḥ | kaśyapo vai kūrmaḥ | tasmād āhuḥ "sarvāḥ prajāh kāśyapyaḥ" iti | sa yaḥ sa kūrmo sau sa Ādityaḥ |

"As to its being called $k\bar{u}rma$ (a tortoise); Prajāpati having taken this form, created offspring. That which he created, he made (akarot); since he made, he is (called) $k\bar{u}rmah$. The word $ka\acute{s}yapa$ means tortoise; hence men say all creatures are descendants of Ka\acute{s}yapa. This tortoise is the same as \bar{A} ditya." ¹⁹⁶

The oldest version of the story of the fish incarnation, which is to be found in the Satapatha Brāhmana, i. 8, 1, 1 ff., will be quoted in the next chapter.

For the passages which appear to supply the germ of the dwarf incarnation, the reader may consult the fourth volume of this work, pp. 54-58 and 107 f.

It will have been noticed that in the passage above adduced from the Vishnu Purāṇa, the word Nārāyaṇa is applied to Vishnu, and that it is the last named deity who (though in the form of Brahmā) is said to have taken the form of a boar. In the verses formerly cited from Manu (i. 9, 10), however, Nārāyaṇa is an epithet, not of Vishnu, but of Brahmā; and in the following text, from the Rāmāyaṇa, xi. 110, 3, it is Brahmā who is said to have become a boar:

Sarvam salilam evāsīt prithivī tatra nirmitā | tatah samabhavad Brahmā svayambhūr daivataih saha ⁹⁷ | sa varāhas tato bhūtvā projjahāra vasundharām ityādi |

"All was water only, and in it the earth was fashioned. Then arose ⁹⁶ With this compare the mention made of a tortoise in the passage cited above, p. 32, from the Taitt. Aranyaka.

²⁷ Such is the reading of Schlegel's edition, and of that which was recently printed at Bombay, both of which, no doubt, present the most ancient text of the Rāmāyana. The Gauda recension, however, which deviates widely from the other, and appears to have modified it in conformity with more modern taste and ideas, has here also introduced a various reading in the second of the lines quoted in the text, and identifies Brahmā with Vishnu in the following manner: tatah samabhavad Brahmā svayambhūr Vishnur avyayah | "Then arose Brahmā the self-existent and imperishable Vishnu."

Brahmā, the self existent, with the deities. He then, becoming a boar, raised up the earth," etc.

I now return to the narrative of the Vishnu Purana.

The further process of cosmogony is thus described in chapter v.:

Maitreya uvācha | 1. Yathā sasarjja devo'sau devarshi-pitri-dānavān | manushya-tiryaq-vrikshādīn bhū-vyoma-salilaukasah | 2. Yad-qunam yat-svabhāvam cha yad-rūpam cha jagad dvija | sargādau srishtavān Brahmā tad mamāchakshva vistarāt | Parāśara uvācha | 3. Maitreya kathayāmy esha śrinushva susamāhitah | yathā sasarija devo 'sau devādīn akhilān vibhuh | srishţim chintayatas tasya kalpādishu yathā purā | abuddhi-pūrvakah sargah prādurbhūtas tamomayah | 4. Tamo moho mahāmohas tāmisro hy andha-saminitah | avidyā pancha-parvaishā prādurbhūtā mahātmanah | 5. Panchadhā 'vasthitah sargo dhyāyato 'pratibodhavān | vahir-anto-'prakāśaś cha samvrittātmā nagātmakah | 6. Mukhyā nagā yatas choktā mukhya-sargas tatas tv ayam | 7. Tam drishtvā 'sādhakam sargam amanyad aparam punaḥ | tasyābhidhyāyataḥ sargas tiryak-srotā 98 'bhyavarttata | 8. Yasmāt tiryak pravrittah sa tiryaksrotas tatah smritah | 9. Paśvādayas te vikhyātās tamah-prayāh hy avedinah | utpatha-grāhinas chaiva te 'jnāne jnāna-māninah | 10. Ahamkritā ahammānā ashtāvimsad-vadhānvitāh | antah-prakāsās te sarve āvritās cha parasparam | 11. Tam apy asādhakam matvā dhyāyato 'nyas tato 'bhavat | ūrdhvasrotas tritīyas tu sāttvikorddhvam avarttata 99 | 12. Te sukha-prītibahulā bahir antas cha nāvritāh 100 | prakāsā bahir antas cha ūrdhvasroto-bhavāh smritāh | 13. Tushty-ātmakas tritīyas tu deva-sargas tu yah smritah | tasmin sarge 'bhavat prītir nishpanne Brahmanas tadā | 14. Tato 'nyam sa tadā dadhyau sādhakam sargam uttamam | asādhakāms tu tān inātvā mukhya-sargādi-sambhavān | 15. Tathā 'bhidhyāyatas tasya satyābhidyāyinas tataḥ | prādurbhūtas tadā 'vyaktād arvāk-srotas tu sādhakah | 16. Yasmād arvāg vyavarttanta tato 'rvāk-srotasas tu te | te cha prakāśa-bahulā tamodriktā 101 rajo 'dhikāh | tasmāt te duhkhabahulā bhūyo bhūyaś cha kārinah | prakāśā bahir antaś cha manushyā sādhakās tu te | 23. Ity ete tu samākhyātā nava sargāh Prajā-

⁹⁸ iti sandhir ārshaḥ.—Comm.

⁹⁹ The reading of the Vāyu P., in the parallel passage, is tasyābhidhyāyato nityam sāttvikah samavarttata | ūrdhvasrotas tritīyas tu sa chaivordhvam vyavasthitah | The combination sūttvikordhvam in the text of the Vishnu P. must be ārsha.

¹⁰⁰ For navritah the Vayu P. reads samvritah.

¹⁰¹ Iti sandhirārshaḥ | Comm. But there is a form tama. The Vāyu P. has tamaḥ-saktāh.

pateḥ | prākṛitā vaikritāś chaiva jagato mūla-hetavaḥ | sṛijato jagadīśasya kim anyach chhrotum ichhasi | Maitreya uvācha | 24. Samkshepāt kathitah sargo devādīnām tvayā mune | vistarāch chhrotum ichhāmi tvatto munivarottama | Parāśara uvācha | karmabhir bhāvitāḥ pūrvaiḥ kuśalākuśalais tu tāḥ | khyātyā tayā hy anirmuktāḥ samhāre hy upasamhritāh | 25. Sthāvarāntāh surādyāścha prajā brahmams chaturvidhāḥ | Brahmanah kurvatah srishtim jajnire mānasīs tu tāḥ | 26. Tato devāsurapitrīn mānushāms cha chatushtayam | sisrikshur ambhāmsy etāni svam ātmānam ayūyujat | 27. Yuktātmanas tamomātrā udriktā 'bhūt Prajāpateḥ | sisrikshor jaghanāt pūrvam asurāḥ jajnire tataḥ | 28. Utsasaria tatas tām tu tamo-mātrātmikām tanum | sā tu tyaktā tanus tena Maitreyābhūd vibhāvarī | 29. Sisrikshur anya-deha-sthah prītim āpa tataḥ surāḥ | sattvodriktāḥ samudbhūtāh mukhato Brahmano dvija | 30. Tyaktā sā 'pi tanus tena sattva-prāyam abhūd dinam | tato hi balino rātrāv asurā devatā divā | 31. Sattvamātrātmikām eva tato 'nyam jagrihe tanum | pitrivad manyamanasya pitaras tasya jajnire | 32. Utsasarja pitrīn srishtvā tatas tām api sa prabhuh | sā chotsrishtä 'bhavat sandhyä dina-naktäntara-sthitih | 33. Rajo-mäträtmikām anyām jagrihe sa tanum tatah | rajo-mātrotkaṭā jātā manushyā dvija-sattama | tām apy āśu sa tatyāja tanum ādyah Prajāpatih | jyotsnā samabhavat sā 'pi prāk-sandhyā yā 'bhidhīyate | 34. Jyotsnodgame tu balino manushyāh pitaras tathā | Maitreya sandhyā-samaye tasmād ete bhavanti vai | 35. Jyotsnā-rātry-ahanī sandhyā chatvāry etāni vai vibhoḥ | Brahmanas tu śarīrāni trigunāpāśrayāni cha | 36. Rajo-mātrātmikām eva tato 'nyām jagrihe tanum | tatah kshud Brahmano jātā jajne kopas tayā tatah | 37. Kshut-khāmān andhakāre 'tha so 'srijad bhagavāms tatah | Virūpāh śmaśrulā jātās te 'bhyadhāvams tatah prabhum | 38. "Maivam bho rakshyatām esha" yair uktam rākshasās tu te | ūchuḥ "khādāma" ity anye ye te yakshās tu yakshanāt | "Maitreya said: 1. Tell me in detail how at the beginning of the "Maitreya said: 1. Tell me in detail how at the beginning of the creation that deity Brahmā formed the gods, rishis, fathers, dānavas, men, beasts, trees, etc., dwelling respectively on the earth, in the sky, and in the water; 2. and with what qualities, with what nature, and of what form he made the world. Parāsara replied: 3. I declare to thee, Maitreya, how that deity created the gods and all other beings; listen with attention. While he was meditating on creation, as at the beginnings of the (previous) Kalpas, there appeared an insentient creation, composed of gloom (tamas). 4. Gloom, illusion, great illusion. darkness, and what is called utter darkness-such was the five-fold ignorance, which was manifested from that great Being. 5. as he was meditating—an insensible creation. 102 under five conditions, devoid of feeling either without or within, 103 closed up, motionless. 6. And since motionless objects are called the primary objects, this is called the primary (mukhya) creation. 104 7. Beholding this creation to be ineffective. he again contemplated another. As he was desiring it the brute (tiryaksrotas) creation came forth. 8. Since (in its natural functions) it acts horizontally it is called Tirvaksrotas. 9. The (creatures composing it) are known as cattle, etc., distinguished mainly by darkness (tamas) ignorant, following irregular courses, 105 while in a state of ignorance having a conceit of knowledge, (10) self-regarding, self-esteeming, affected by the twenty-eight kinds of defects, endowed with inward feeling, and mutually closed. 11. As Brahmā, regarding this creation also as ineffective, was again meditating, another creation, the third, or urdhvasrotas, which was good, rose upward. 12. They (the creatures belonging to this creation) abounding in happiness and satisfaction, being unclosed both without and within, and possessed both of external and internal feeling, are called the offspring of the Urdhvasrotas creation. 13. This third creation, known as that of the gods, was one full of enjoyment. When it was completed, Brahmā was pleased. 14. He then contemplated another creation, effective and most excellent, since he regarded as ineffective the beings sprung from the primary and other creations. 15. While he, whose will is efficacious, was so desiring, the Arvāksrotas, an effective creation, was manifested. 16. They ¹⁰⁴ See Dr. Hall's note p. 70 on Professor Wilson's translation; and also the passage quoted above p. 16 from the Taitt. Sanh. vii. 1, 1, 4, where the word mukhya is otherwise applied and explained.

¹⁰² The Vāyu P. here inserts an additional line, sarvatas tamasā chaiva dīpaḥ kumbha-vad āvritaḥ | "and covered on all sides with darkness, as a lamp by a jar."

¹⁰³ Vahir-anto'prakāśascha appears to be the true reading, as the Commentator renders the last word by prakrishta-jnāna-śūnyaḥ, "devoid of knowledge." But if this be the correct reading, it is ungrammatical, as antah and aprakāśa would properly make antar-aprakāśa, not anto'prakāśa. But the Purānas have many forms which are irregular (ārsha, "peculiar to the rishis," "vedic," or "antiquated" as the Commentators style them). The Taylor MS. of the Väyu Purāna reads in the parallel passage bahir-antaḥ-prakāśascha.

¹⁰⁵ Bhakshyādi-vivekak-hīnāh | "Making no distinction in food, etc., etc." Comm.

¹⁰⁶ Compare M. Bh. xiv. 1038.

(the creatures belonging to it) are called Arvāksrotas, because (in their natural functions) they acted downwardly. And they abound in sensation (prakāśa) and are full of darkness (tamas) with a preponderance of passion (rajas). Hence they endure much suffering, and are constantly active, with both outward and inward feeling. These beings were men, and effective."¹⁰⁷

In the next following verses, 17–22, the names of the different creations, described in the first part of this section, and in the second chapter of the first book of the Vishnu Purāṇa, are recapitulated, and two others, the Anugraha and the Kaumāra, are noticed, but not explained. 108

The speaker Parāśara then adds: "23. Thus have the nine creations of Prajāpati, both Prākrita and Vaikrita, the radical causes of the world, been recounted. What else dost thou desire to hear regarding the creative lord of the world? Maitreya replies: 24. By thee, most excellent Muni, the creation of the gods and other beings has been summarily narrated: I desire to hear it from thee in detail. Parāśara rejoins: Called into (renewed) existence in consequence of former actions, good or bad, and unliberated from that destination when they were absorbed at the (former) dissolution of the world, (25) the four descriptions of creatures, beginning with things immovable and ending with gods, were produced, o Brāhman, from Brahmā when he was creating, and they sprang from his mind. 26. Being then desirous to create these streams (ambhāmsi)109—the four classes of Gods, Asuras, Fathers, and Men, he concentrated himself. 27. Prajāpati, thus concentrated, received a body, which was formed of the quality of gloom (tamas); and as he desired to create, Asuras were first produced from his groin. 28. He then abandoned that body formed entirely of gloom; which when abandoned by him became night. 29. Desiring to create, when he had occupied another body, Brahmā experienced pleasure; and then gods, full of the quality of goodness, sprang from his mouth. 30. That body

¹⁰⁷ The Vāyu P. adds here: Lakshanais tārakadyaischa ashṭadhā cha vyavasthitāḥ | siddhātmāno manushyās te gandharvā-saha-dharminah | ity esha taijasah sargo hy arvāksrotāḥ prakīrttitaḥ | "Constituted with preservative(?) characteristics, and in an eightfold manner. These were men perfect in their essence, and in nature equal to Gandharvas. This was the lustrous creation known as Arvāksrotas,"

¹⁰⁸ See Dr. Hall's edition of Wilson's V. P. pp. 32 ff.; and pp. 74 ff.

¹⁰⁹ This word is borrowed from the passage of the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, ii. 3, 8, 3, quoted above, p. 23. Most of the particulars in the rest of the narrative are imitated from another passage of the same Brāhmaṇa, ii. 2, 9, 5 ff., also quoted above, p. 28.

also, being abandoned by him, became day, which is almost entirely good. Hence the Asuras are powerful by night110 and the gods by day-31. He then assumed another body formed of pure goodness; and the Tathers were born from him, when he was regarding himself as a father. 111 32. The Lord, after creating the Fathers, abandoned that body also; which, when so abandoned, became twilight, existing between day and night. 33. He next took another body entirely formed of passion; and men, in whom passion is violent, were produced. The primeval Prajāpati speedily discarded this body also, which became faint light (jyotsnā), which is called early twilight. 34. Hence, at the appearance of this faint light, men are strong, while the fathers are strong at evening-twilight. 35. Morning-twilight, night, day, and evening-twilight, these are the four bodies of Brahmā, and the receptacles of the three qualities. 36. Brahmā next took another body entirely formed of passion, from which sprang hunger, and through it anger was produced. 37. The Divine Being then in darkness created beings emaciated with hunger, which, hideous of aspect, and with long beards, rushed against the lord. 38. Those who said, 'Let him not be preserved' (rakshyatām) were called Rākshasas, whilst those others who cried, 'Let us eat (him)' were called Yakshas from 'eating' (yakshanāt).112

It is not necessary for my purpose that I should quote at length the conclusion of the section. It may suffice to say that verses 39 to 51 describe the creation of serpents from Brahmā's hair; of Bhūtas; of Gandharvas; of birds (vayāmsi) from the creator's life (vayas), of sheep from his breast, of goats from his mouth, of kine from his belly and sides, and of horses, 113 elephants, and other animals from his feet; of plants from his hairs; of the different metres and vedas from his eastern, southern, western, and northern mouths. Verses 52 ff. contain a recapitulation of the creative operations, with some statement of the ¹¹⁰ In the Rāmāyaṇa, Sundara Kāṇḍa 82, 13 f. (Gorresio's edit.) we read: Rakshasām rajanī-kālah samyugeshu prasasyate | 14. Tasmād rājan niśā-yuddhe jayo 'smākam na samsayah | "Night is the approved time for the Rakshases to fight. We should therefore undoubtedly conquer in a nocturnal conflict."

¹¹¹ This idea also is borrowed from Taitt. Br. ii. 3, 8, 2.
112 See Wilson's V. P. vol. i. p. 83, and Dr. Hall's note.

¹¹³ See the passage from the Taitt. Sanh. vii. 1, 1, 4 ff. quoted above, p. 16, where the same origin is ascribed to horses.

principles according to which they were conducted. Of these verses I quote only the following: 55. Teshām ye yāni karmāni prāk-sristhyām pratipedire | tāny eva pratipadyante srijyamānāh punah punah | . . . 60. Yathārtāv ritu-lingāni nānārūpāni paryaye | driśyante tāni tānyevā tathā bhāvā yugādishu | 61. Karoty evamvidhām srishtim kalpādau sa punah punah | sisrikshāśakti-yukto'sau srijya-śakti-prachoditah | "These creatures, as they are reproduced time after time, discharge the same functions as they had fulfilled in the previous creation . . . 60. Just as, in each season of the year, all the various characteristics of that season are perceived, on its recurrence, to be the very same as they had been before; so too are the beings produced at the beginnings of the ages. 114 61. Possessing both the will and the ability to create, and impelled by the powers inherent in the things to be created, the deity produces again and again a creation of the very same description at the beginning of every Kalpa."

The sixth section of the same book of the V. P., of which I shall cite the larger portion, professes to give a more detailed account of the creation of mankind.

V. P. i. 6, 1. Maitreya uvācha | Arvāksrotas tu kathito bhavatā yas tu mānushah | brahman vistarato brūhi Brahmā tam asrijad yathā | 2. Yathā cha varnān asrijad yad-gunāms cha mahāmune | yachcha teshām smṛitam karma viprādīnam tad uchyatām | Parāsara uvācha | 3. Satyābhidhyāyinas tasya sisrikshor Brahmano jagat | ajāyanta dvijaśreshtha sattvodriktā mukhāt prajāļ | 4. Vakshaso rajasodriktās tathā 'nyā Brahmano 'bhavan | rajasā tamasā chaiva samudriktās tathorutah | 5. Padbhyām anyāḥ prajā Brahmā sasarjja dvija-sattama | tamaḥ-pradhānās tāh sarvāś chāturvarnyam idam tatah | brāhmanāh kshattriyā vaiśyāh śūdrāścha dvija-sattama | pādoru-vakshaḥ-sthalato mukhataś cha samudgatāh | 6. Yajna-nishpattaye sarvam etad Brahmā chakāra vai | chāturvarnyam mahābhāga yajna-sādhanam uttamam | 7. Yajnair āpyāyitä devä vrishty-utsargena vai prajäh | äpyäyayante dharma-jna yājnāḥ kalyāṇa-hetavaḥ | 8. Nishpadyante narais tais tu sva-karmābhirataih sadā | viruddhācharanāpetaih sadbhih sanmārga-gāmibhih | 9. Svargāpavargau mānushyāt prāpnuvanti narā mune | yach chābhiruchitam ethānam tad yānti manujā dvija | 10. Prajās tāḥ Brahmaṇā srishtāś chāturvarnya-vyavasthitau | samyak śraddhā-samāchāra-pra-114 Verses similar to this occur in Manu i. 30; and in the Mahābhārata xii. 8550 f.

vanā muni-sattama | 11. Yathechhā-vāsa-niratāh sarvābādha-vivarjitāh | śuddhāntah-karanāh śuddhāh sarvānushthāna-nirmalāh | 14.115 Suddhe cha tāsām manasi śuddhe 'ntah-samsthite Harau | śuddha-jnānam prapaśyanti Vishnv-ākhyam yena tatpadam | 15. Tatah kālātmako yo 'sau sa chāmsaḥ kathito Hareḥ | sa pātayaty agho ghoram alpam alpālpasāravat | 16. Adharma-vīja-bhūtam tu tamo-lobha-samudbhavam | prajāsu tāsu Maitreya rāgādikam asādhakam | 17. Tatah sā sahajā siddhis tāsām nātīva jāyate | rasollāsādayas chānyāh siddhayo 'shtau bhavanti yāh | 18. Tāsu kshīnāsv ašeshāsu varddhamāne cha pātake | dvandvādibhava-duḥkhārttās tā bhavanti tatah prajāh | 19. Tato durgāni tāś chakrur vārkshyam pārvatam audakam | kritimam cha tathā durgam purakarvatakādi yat | 20. Grihāni cha yathānyāyam teshu chakruh purādishu | śītātapādi-bādhānām praśamāya mahāmate | 21. Pratikāram imam kritvā šītādes tāh prajāh punah vārttopāyam tatas chakrur hasta-siddham cha karma-jam | . . . 26. Grāmyāranyāh smritā hy etā oshadhyaś cha chaturdaśa | yajna-nishpattaye yajnas tathā "sām hetur uttamah | 27. Etäś cha saha yajnena prajānām karānam param | parāpara-vidah prājnās tato yajnān vitanvate | 28. Ahany ahany anushthānam yajnānām munisattama | upakāra-karam pumsām kriyamānāch cha śānti-dam | 29. Teshām tu kāla-srishto 'sau pāpa-vindur mahāmate | chetassu vavridhe chakrus te na yajneshu mānasam | 30. Veda-vādāms tathā devān yajnakarmādikam cha yat | tat sarvam nindamānās te yajna-vyāsedha-kārinah | 31. Pravritti-mārga-vyuchchittikārino veda-nindakāh | durātmāno durāchārā babhūvuh kuţilāśayāh | 32. Samsiddhāyām tu vārttāyām prajāh srishtvā Prajāpatih | maryādām sthāpayāmāsa yathā-sthānam yathā-gunam | 34. Varnānām āśramānām cha dharman dharma-bhritām vara | lokāms sarva-varnānām samyaq dharmanupalinam | 35. Prajapatyam brahmananam smritam sthānam kriyāvatām | sthānam aindram kshattriyānām sangrāmeshv anivarttinām | 36. Vaišyānām mārutam sthānam sva-dharmam anuvarttinām | gandharvam śūdra-jātīnām paricharyāsu varttinām |

"Maitreya says: 1. You have described to me the Arvāksrotas, or human, creation: declare to me, o Brahman, in detail the manner in which Brahmā formed it. 2. Tell me how, and with what qualities, he created the castes, and what are traditionally reputed to be the functions of the Brāhmans and others. Parāśara replies: 3. When, true to his design, Brahmā became desirous to create the world, creatures in whom goodness (sattva) prevailed sprang from his mouth; (4) others in whom passion (rajas) predominated came from his breast; others in whom both passion and darkness (tamas) were strong, proceded from his thighs; (5) others he created from his feet, whose chief characteristic was darkness. Of these was composed the system of four castes, Brāhmans, Kshattrivas, Vaisvas, and Sudras, who had respectively issued from his mouth, breast, thighs, and feet. 6. Brahmā formed this 116 entire fourfold institution of classes for the performance of sacrifice, of which it is an excellent instrument. 7. Nourished by sacrifices, the gods nourish mankind by discharging rain. Sacrifices, the causes of prosperity, (8) are constantly celebrated by virtuous men, devoted to their duties, who avoid wrong observances, and walk in the right path. 9. Men, in consequence of their humanity, obtain heaven and final liberation; and they proceed to the world which they desire. 10. These creatures formed by Brahmā in the condition of the four castes, (were) perfectly inclined to conduct springing from religious faith, (11) loving to dwell wherever they pleased, free from all sufferings, pure in heart, pure, spotless in all observances. 14. And in their pure minds,—the pure Hari dwelling within them,—(there existed) pure knowledge whereby they beheld his highest station, called (that of) Vishnu. 117 15. Afterwards that which is described as the portion of Hari consisting of Time 118 infused into those beings direful sin, in the form of desire and the like, ineffective (of man's end), small in amount, but gradually increasing in force, (16) the seed of unrighteousness, and sprung from darkness and cupidity. 17. Thenceforward their innate perfectness was but slightly evolved: and as all the other eight perfections called rasollasa and the rest (18) declined, and sin increased, these creatures (mankind) were afflicted with suffering arising out of the pairs (of susceptibilities to pleasure and pain, etc., etc.) 19. They then constructed fastnesses among trees, on hills, or amid waters, as well as artificial fortresses, towns, villages, etc. 20. And in these towns, etc., they built houses on the proper plan, in order to counteract cold, heat, and other discomforts. 21. Having thus provided against cold, etc., they devised methods of livelihood depending upon labour, and executed by their hands." The kinds of grain which they cultivated are next described in the following verses 22 to 25. The text then proceeds, verse 26: "These are declared to be the fourteen kinds of grain, cultivated and wild, fitted for sacrifice; and sacrifice is an eminent cause of their existence. 27. These, too, along with sacrifice, are the most efficacious sources of progeny. Hence those who understand cause and effect celebrate sacrifices. 28. Their daily performance is beneficial to men, and delivers from sins committed. 29. But that drop of sin which had been created by time increased in men's hearts, and they disregarded sacrifice. 30. Reviling the Vedas, and the prescriptions of the Vedas, the gods, and all sacrificial rites, etc., obstructing oblations, (31) and cutting off the path of activity, 119 they became malignant, vicious, and perverse in their designs. 32. The means of subsistence being provided, Prajāpati, having created living beings, established a distinction according to their position and qualities (see verses 3 to 5 above), (and fixed) the duties of the castes and orders, and the worlds (to be attained after death) by all the castes which perfectly fulfilled their duties. 33. The world of Prajapati is declared to be the (future) abode of those Brāhmans who are assiduous in religious rites; the realm of Indra the abode of those Kshattriyas who turn not back in battle; (34) that of the Maruts the abode of those Vaisyas who fulfil their duties; and that of the Gandharvas the abode of the men of Sudra race who abide in their vocation of service." In the remaining verses of the chapter (35 to 39) the realms of blessedness destined for the reception of more eminent saints are briefly noticed, as well as the infernal regions, to which the wicked are doomed.

 $^{^{115}}$ There are no verses numbered 12 and 13, the MSS, passing from the 11th to the 14th.

117 This alludes to an expression in the Rig-veda, i. 22, 20. See the 4th vol. of this work, p. 54.

¹¹⁶ How does this agree with the statements made in the Taitt. Sanh. vii. 1, 1, 4 ff. as quoted above, p. 16, and in the Taitt. Br. iii. 2, 3, 9, p. 21, that the S'üdra is incapacitated for sacrifice, and that anything he milks out is no oblation?

¹¹⁸ In regard to Kūla, "Time," see Wilson's V. P. vol. i. p. 18 f., and the passages from the Atharva-veda, extracted in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1865, pp. 380 ff.

¹¹⁹ Pravritti-mārga-vyuchchhitti-kāriṇah. The Commentator ascribes this to the human race being no longer sufficiently propagated, for he adds the explanation: yajnānanushthāne devair avarshaṇād annābhāvena prajā-vriddher asiddheh | "because population did not increase from the want of food caused by the gods ceasing to send rain in consequence of the non-celebration of sacrifice."

At the beginning of the seventh section, without any further enquiry on the part of Maitreya, Parāśara proceeds as follows:

V. P. i. 7, 1. Tato 'bhidhyāyatas tasya jajnire mānasīh prajāh | tachchharīra-samutpannaih kāryais taih kāranaih saha | 2. Kshettrajnāh samavarttanta qūtrebhyas tasya dhīmatah \ te sarve samavarttanta ye mayā prāg udāhritāh | 3. Devādyāh sthāvarāntāś cha traigunyavishaye sthitāh | evam bhūtāni srishţāni charāni sthāvarāni cha | 4. Yadā 'sya tāḥ prajāḥ sarvā va vyavarddhanta dhīmataḥ | athānyān mānasān putrān sadriśān ātmano 'srijat | 5. Bhrigum Pulastyam Pulaham Kratum Angirasam tathā | Marīchim Daksham Atrim cha Vasishtham chaiva mānasān | nava brahmāna ity ete purāne niśchayam gatāh | 6. Sanandanādayo ye cha purvam srishtās tu Vedhasā | na te lokeshv asaijanta nirapekshāh prajāsu te | sarve te chāgata-jnānā vīta-rāgā vimatsarāh | 7. Teshv evam nirapeksheshu loka-srishtau mahātmanah | Brahmano 'bhūd mahākrodhas trailokya-dahana-kshamah | 8. Tasya krodhāt samudbhūta-jvālā-mālā-vidīpitam | Brahmano 'bhūt tadā sarvam trailokyam akhilam mune | 9. Bhrūkuţī-kuţilāt tasya lalāţāt krodhadīpitāt | samutpannas tadā Rudro madhyāhnārka-sama-prabhah | ardhanārī-nara-vapuh prachando 'tiśarīravān | vibhajātmānam ity uktvā tam Brahmā 'ntardadhe punah | 10. Tathokto 'sau dvidhā strītvam purushatvam tathā 'karot | bibheda purushtvam cha daśadhā chaikadhā cha sah | 11. Saumyāsaumyais tathā śāntāśāntaih strītvam cha sa prabhuh | bibheda bahudhā devah svarūpair asitaih sitaih | 12. Tato Brahmā "tmasambhūtam pūrvam̃ svāyambhuvam prabhum | ātmānam eva kritavān prajāpālam Manum dvija | 13. Satarūpām cha tām nārīm tapo-nirdhūtakalmashām | svāyambhuvo Manur devah patnyartham jagrihe vibhuh | 14. Tasmāch cha purushād devī Satarūpā vyajāyata | Priyavratottānapādau Prasūtyākūti-sanjnitam | kanyā-dvayam cha dharma-jna rūpaudārya-gunānvitam | 15. Dadau Prasūtim Dakshāyāthākūtim Ruchaye purā ityādi

"1. Then from him, as he was desiring, there were born mental sons with effects and causes 120 derived from his body. 2. Embodied spirits sprang from the limbs of that wise Being. All those creatures sprang forth which have been already described by me, (3) beginning with gods and ending with motionless objects, and existing in the condition of the three qualities. Thus were created beings moving and stationary. 4. When none of these creatures of the Wise Being multiplied, he next formed other, mental, sons like to himself, (5) Bhrigu, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu, Angiras, Marīchi, Daksha, Atri, and Vasishtha, all born from his mind. These are the nine Brahmas who have been determined in the Puranas. 6. But Sanandana and the others who had been previously created by Vedhas (Brahmā) had no regard for the worlds, and were indifferent to offspring. They had all attained to knowledge, were freed from desire, and devoid of envy. 7. As they were thus indifferent about the creation of the world, great wrath, sufficient to burn up the three worlds, arose in the mighty Brahmā. 8. The three worlds became entirely illuminated by the wreath of flame which sprang from his anger. 9. Then from his forehead, wrinkled by frowns and inflamed by fury, arose Rudra, luminous as the midday sun, with a body half male and half female, fiery, and huge in bulk. After saying to him, 'Divide thyself,' Brahma vanished. 10. Being so addressed, Rudra severed himself into two, into a male and a female form. The god next divided his male body into eleven parts, (11) beautiful and hideous, gentle and ungentle; and his female figure into numerous portions with appearances black and white. 12. Brahmā then made the lord Svayambhuva, who had formerly sprung from himself, and was none other than himself, to be Manu the protector of creatures. 13. The god Manu Svāyambhuva took for his wife the female Satarūpā, who by austere fervour had become freed from all defilement. 14. To that Male the goddess Satarūpā bore Privavrata and Uttānapāda, and two daughters called Prasūti and Ākūti, distinguished by the qualities of beauty and magnanimity. 15. He of old gave Prasūti in marriage to Daksha, and Ākūti to Ruchi."

¹²⁰ The Commentator explains these words kāryais tuih kāranaih saha to mean "bodies and senses."

From a comparison of the preceding narratives of the creation of mankind, extracted from the fifth and sixth chapters of the First Book of the Vishnu Purāna, it will be seen that the details given in the different accounts are not consistent with each other. It is first of all stated in the fifth chapter (verse 16) that the arvāksrotas, or human creation was characterized by the qualities of darkness and passion. In the second account (verse 33) we are told that Brahmā assumed a body composed of passion, from which men, in whom that quality is powerful, were produced. In neither of these narratives is the slightest allusion made to there having been any primeval and congenital distinction of classes. In the third statement given in the sixth chapter (verses 3 to 5) the human race is said to have been the result of a fourfold creation; and the four eastes, produced from different parts of the creator's body, are declared to have been each especially characterized by different qualities (gunas), viz., those who issued from his mouth by goodness (sattva), those who proceeded from his breast by passion (rajas), those who were produced from his thighs by both passion and darkness (tamas), and those who sprang from his feet by darkness. In the sequel of this account, however, no mention is made of any differences of conduct arising from innate diversities of disposition having been manifested in the earliest age by the members of the different classes. On the contrary, they are described (verses 10 ff.) in language applicable to a state of perfection which was universal and uniform, as full of faith, pure-hearted and devout. In like manner the declension in purity and goodness which ensued is not represented as peculiar to any of the classes, but as common to all. So far, therefore, the different castes seem, according to this account, to have been undistinguished by any variety of mental or moral constitution. And it is not until after the deterioration of the entire race has been related, that we are told (in verses 32 f.) that the separate duties of the several castes were fixed in accordance with their position and qualities. This sketch of the moral and religious history of mankind, in the earliest period, is thus deficient in failing to explain how beings, who were originally formed with very different ethical characters, should have been all equally excellent during their period of perfection, and have also experienced an uniform process of decline.

In regard to the variation between the two narratives of the creation found in the fifth chapter of the Vishnu Purāṇa, Professor Wilson remarks as follows in a note to vol. i. p. 80: "These reiterated, and not always very congruous, accounts of the creation are explained by the Purāṇas as referring to different Kalpas or renovations of the world, and therefore involving no incompatibility. A better reason for their appearance is the probability that they have been borrowed from different original authorities."122

¹²¹ Compare the passage given above at the close of Sect. V. pp. 41 ff., from Manu xii. 39 ff. and the remarks thereon.

As regards the first of these explanations of the discrepancies in question, it must be observed that it is inapplicable to the case before us, as the text of the Vishnu Purana itself says nothing of the different accounts of the creation having reference to different Kalpas: and in absence of any intimation to the contrary we must naturally assume that the various portions of the consecutive narration in the fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh chapters, which are connected with each other by a series of questions and answers, must all have reference to the creation which took place at the commencement of the existing or Vārāha Kalpa, as stated in the opening verse of the fourth chapter. Professor Wilson's supposition that the various and discrepant accounts "have been borrowed from different original authorities" appears to have probability in its favour. I am unable to point out the source from which the first description of the creation, in the early part of the fifth chapter, verses 1 to 23, has been derived. But the second account. given in verses 26 to 35, has evidently drawn many of its details from the passages of the Taittirīva Brāhmana ii. 2, 9, 5-9, and ii. 3, 8, 2 f., and Satapatha Brāhmana xi. 1, 6, 6 ff. which I have quoted above. And it is possible that the references which are found in the former of these descriptions in the Vishnu Purana to different portions of the creation

¹²² The discrepancies between current legends on different subjects are occasionally noticed in the text of the Vishnu Purana. Thus in the eighth chapter of the first book, v. 12. Maitreya, who had been told by Parasara that S'rī was the daughter of Bhrigu and Khyāti, enquires : Kshīrābdhau S'rīh purotpannā srūyate mrita-manthane | Bhrigoh Khyātyām samutpannety etad āha katham bhavān | "It is reported that S'rī was produced in the ocean of milk when ambrosia was churned. How do you say that she was born to Bhrigu by Khyāti?" He receives for answer: 13. Nityaiva sā jaganmātā Vishnoh S'rīr anapāyinī (another MS. reads anuyāyinī) yathā sarvagato Vishnus tathaiveyam dvijottama | "S'rī, the mother of the world, and wife of Vishnu, is eternal and undecaying" (or, according to the other reading, "is the eternal follower of Vishnu"). "As he is omnipresent, so is she," and so on. The case of Daksha will be noticed further on in the text. On the method resorted to by the Commentators in cases of this description Professor Wilson observes in a note to p. 203 (4to. edition), "other calculations occur, the incompatibility of which is said, by the Commentators on our text and on that of the Bhagavata, to arise from reference being made to different Kalpas; and they quote the same stanza to this effect: Kvachit kvachit puraneshu virodho yadi lakshyate | kalpa-bhedadibhis tatra virodhah sadbhir ishyate | 'Whenever any contradictions in different Puranas are observed, they are ascribed by the pious to differences of Kalpas and the like."

being ineffective may have been suggested by some of the other details in the Brāhmaṇas, which I shall now proceed to cite. At all events some of the latter appear to have given rise to the statement in the fourth verse of the seventh chapter of the Vishṇu P. that the creatures formed by Brahmā did not multiply, as well as to various particulars in the narratives which will be quoted below from the Vāyu and Mārkaṇ-deya Purāṇas. The Brāhmanas describe the creative operations of Pra-jāpati as having been attended with intense effort, and often followed by great exhaustion; and not only so, but they represent many of these attempts to bring living creatures of various kinds into existence, to sustain them after they were produced, and to ensure their propagation, as having been either altogether abortive, or only partially successful. The following quotations will afford illustrations of these different points:

Taitt. Br. i. 1, 10, 1. Prajāpatiķ prajāķ asrijata | sa ririchāno 'manyata | sa tapo 'tapyata | sa ātman vīryam apaśyat tad avarddhata |

"Prajāpati created living beings. He felt himself emptied. He performed austere abstraction. He perceived vigour in himself. It increased, etc."

Taitt. Br. i. 2, 6, 1. Prajāpatiķ prajāķ sriskţvā vritto¹²⁸ 'sayat | tam devāķ bhūtānām rasam tejaķ sambkritya tena enam abhishajyan "mahān avavartti" iti |

"Prajāpati after creating living beings lay exhausted. The gods, collecting the essence and vigour of existing things, cured him therewith, saying he has become great, etc."

Taitt. Br. ii. 3, 6, 1. Prajāpatih prajāh srishtvā vyasramsata | sa hridayam bhūto 'śayat |

"Prajāpati, after creating living beings, was paralysed. Becoming a heart, he slept."

S. P. Br. iii. 9, 1, 1. Prajāpatir vai prajāh sasrijāno ririchānah iva amanyata | tasmāt parāchyah prajāh āsuh | na asya prajāh śriye 'nnādyāya jajnire | 2. Sa aikshata "arikshy aham asmai (? yasmai) u kāmāya asrikshi na me sa kāmah samārdhi parāchyo mat-prajāh abhūvan na me prajāh śriye 'nnādyāya asthishata' iti | 3. Sa aikshata Prajāpatih "katham nu punar ātmānam āpyāyāyeya upa mā prajāh samāvartterams tishtheran me prajāh śriye annādyāya" iti | so 'rchhan śrāmyamś cha-

chāra prajā-kāmaḥ | sa etām ekādaśinīm apaśyat | sa ekādaśinyā ishṭvā Prajāpatiḥ punar ātmānam āpyāyayata upa enam prajāḥ samāvarttanta atishṭhanta asya prajāḥ śriye 'nnādyāya sa vasīyān eva ishṭvā 'bhavat |

"Prajāpati when creating living beings felt himself as it were emptied. The living creatures went away from him. They were not produced so as to prosper and to eat food. 2. He considered: 'I have become emptied: the object for which I created them has not been fulfilled: they have gone away, and have not gained prosperity and food.' 3. He considered: 'how can I again replenish myself; and how shall my creatures return to me, and acquire prosperity and food?' Desirous of progeny, he went on worshipping and performing religious rites. He beheld this Ekādaśinī (Eleven); and sacrificing with it, he again replenished himself; his creatures returned to him, and gained prosperity and food. Having sacrificed, he became more brilliant."

S. P. Br. x. 4, 2, 2. So'yam samvatsarah Prajāpatih sarvāni bhūtāni sasrije yach cha prāni yach cha aprānam ubhayān deva-manushyān | sa sarvāni bhūtāni srīshtvā ririchāna iva mene | sa mrityor bibhiyānchakāra | 2. Sa ha īkshānchakre "katham nv aham imāni sarvāni bhūtāni punar ātmann āvapeya punar ātman dadhīya katham nv aham eva eshām sarveshām bhūtānām punar ātmā syām" iti |

"This Year, (who is) Prajāpati, created all beings, both those which breathe and those that are without breath, both gods and men. Having created all beings he felt himself as it were emptied. He was afraid of death. 2. He reflected, 'How can I again unite all these beings with myself, again place them in myself? How can I alone be again the soul of all these beings?"

S. P. Br. x. 4, 4, 1. Prajapatim vai prajāh srijamānam pāpmā mrityur abhiparijaghāna | sa tapo 'tapyata sahasram samvatsarān pāpmānam vijihāsan |

"Misery, death, smote Prajāpati, as he was creating living beings. He performed austere abstraction for a thousand years, with the view of shaking off misery."

S. P. Br. ii. 5, 1, 1. Prajāpatir ha vai idam agre ekaḥ eva āsa | sa aikshata "katham nu prajāyeya" iti | so 'śrāmyat sa tapo 'tapyata | sa prajāḥ asrijata | tāḥ asya prajāḥ srishtāḥ parābabhūvuḥ | tāni imāni vayāmsi | purusho vai Prajāpater nedishṭham | dvipād vai ayam purushaḥ | tasmād dvipādo vayāmsi | 2. Sa aikshata Prajāpatiḥ | "yathā nv eva purā eko'bhūvam evam u nv eva apy etarhy eka eva asmi'' iti | sa dvitīyāh sasrije | tāḥ asya parā eva babhūvuḥ | tad idam kshudram sarīsripam yad anyat sarpebhyaḥ | tritīyāh sasrije ity āhus tāḥ asya parā eva babhūvuḥ | te ime sarpāḥ | 3 So'rchhan śrāmyan Prajāpatir īkshānchakre "katham nu me prajāh srishtāḥ parābhavanti" iti | sa ha etad eva dadarśa "anaśanatayā vai me prajāḥ parābhavanti" iti | sa ātmanaḥ eva agre stanayoḥ paya āpyāyayānchakre | sa prajāḥ asrijata | tāḥ asya prajāḥ srishtāḥ stanāv eva abhipadya tās tataḥ sambabhūvuḥ | tāḥ imāḥ aparābhūtāḥ |

"1. Prajāpati alone was formerly this universe. He reflected, 'How can I be propagated?' He toiled in religious rites, and practised austere fervour. He created living beings. After being created by him they perished. They were these birds. Man is the thing nearest to Prajāpati. This being, man, is two-footed. Hence birds are two-footed creatures. Prajāpati reflected, 'As I was formerly but one, so am I now also only one.' He created a second set of living beings. They also perished. This was the class of small reptiles other than serpents. They say he created a third set of beings, which also perished. They were these serpents . . . 3. Worshipping and toiling in religious rites, Prajāpati reflected, 'How is it that my creatures perish after they have been formed?' He perceived this, 'they perish from want of food.' In his own presence he caused milk to be supplied to breasts. He created living beings, which resorting to the breasts were then preserved. These are the creatures which did not perish."

Taitt. Br. i. 6, 2, 1. Vaiśvadevena vai Prajāpatiḥ prajāh asrijata | tāḥ srishtāḥ na prājāyanta | so'gnir akāmayata "aham imāḥ prajanayeyam" iti | sa Prajāpataye śucham adadhāt | so'śochat prajām ichhamānaḥ | tasmād yam cha prajā bhunakti yam cha na tāv ubhau śochataḥ prajām ichhamānau | tāsv Agnim apy asrijat | tā Agnir adhyait (2) Somo reto 'dadhāt Savitā prājanayat | Sarasvatī vācham adadhāt | Pūshā 'poshayat | te vai ete triḥ samvatsarasya prayujyante ye devāḥ pushṭipatayaḥ | samvatsaro vai Prajāpatiḥ | samvatsarena eva asmai prajāḥ prājanayat | tāḥ prājāḥ jātāḥ Maruto 'ghnan "asmān api na prāyukshata" iti | 3. Sa etam Prajāpatir mārutam saptakapālam apaśyat | tam niravapat | tato vai prajābhyo 'kalpata | . . . sa Prajāpatir aśochat "yāḥ pūrvāḥ prajāḥ asrikshi Marutas tāḥ avadhishuḥ katham aparāh

srijeya'' iti | tasya śushma āṇḍam bhūtam̃ niravarttata | tad vyudaharat | tad aposhayat | tat prājāyata |

"Prajāpati formed living creatures by the vaisvadeva (offering to the Viśvedevas). Being created they did not propagate. Agni desired' 'let me beget these creatures.' He imparted grief to Prajapati. He grieved, desiring offspring. Hence he whom offspring blesses, and he whom it does not bless, both of them grieve, desiring progeny. Among them he created Agni also. Agni desired (?) them. Soma infused seed. Savitri begot them. Sarasvatī infused into them speech. Pūshan nourished them. These (gods) who are lords of nourishment are employed thrice in the year. Prajāpati is the Year. It was through the year that he generated offspring for him. The Maruts killed those creatures when they had been born, saying 'they have not employed us also. 3. Prajāpati saw this Māruta oblation in seven platters. He offered it. In consequence of it he became capable of producing offspring Prajapati lamented, (saying) 'the Maruts have slain the former living beings whom I created. How can I create others?' His vigour sprang forth in the shape of an egg. He took it up. He cherished it. It became productive."

Taitt. Br. iii. 10, 9, 1. Prajāpatir devān asrijata | te pāpmanā sanditāḥ ajāyanta | tān vyadyat |

"Prajāpati created gods. They were born bound by misery. He released them."

Taitt. Br. ii. 7, 9, 1. Prajāpatiķ prajāķ asrijata | tāķ asmāt srishṭāḥ parāchīr āyan | sa etam Prajāpatir odanam apaśyat | so 'nnam bhūto 'tishṭhat | tāḥ anyatra annādyam avitvā Prajāpatim prajāh upāvarttanta |

"Prajāpati created living beings. They went away from him. He beheld this odana. He was turned into food. Having found food nowhere else, they returned to him."

Taitt. Br. i. 6, 4, 1. Prajāpatiḥ Savitā bhūtvā prajāḥ asrijata | tā enam atyamanyanta | ta asmād apākrāman | tā Varuno bhūtvā prajāḥ Varunena agrāhayat | tāḥ prajāḥ Varuna-grihītāḥ Prajāpatim punar upādhāvan nātham ichhamānāḥ |

"Prajāpati, becoming Savitri, created living beings. They disregarded him, and went away from him. Becoming Varuna he caused Varuna to seize them. Being seized by Varuna, they again ran to Prajāpati, desiring help."

Taitt. Br. ii. 2, 1, 1. Tato vai sa (Prajāpatiķ) prajāķ asrijata | tāķ asmat sriskţā apākrāman |

"Prajāpati then created living beings. They went away from him."

I have perhaps quoted too many of these stories, which are all similar in character. But I was desirous to afford some idea of their number as well as of their tenor.

As regards the legend of Satarūpā, referred to in the seventh chapter of the first book of the Vishnu Purāṇa, I shall make some further remarks in a future section, quoting a more detailed account given in the Matsya Purāṇa.

Of the two sons of Manu Svayambhuva and Satarupa, the name of the second, Uttanapada, seems to have been suggested by the appearance of the word Uttanapad in Rig-veda x. 72, 3, 4, as the designation (nowhere else traceable, I believe) of one of the intermediate agents in the creation. 124 A Privavrata is mentioned in the Aitareya Brāhmana vii. 34, and also in the Satapatha Brāhmana x. 3, 5, 14, (where he has the patronymic of Rauhināyana) but in both these texts he appears rather in the light of a religious teacher, who had lived not very long before the age of the author, than as a personage belonging to a very remote antiquity. Daksha also, who appears in this seventh chapter as one of the mindborn sons of Brahmä, is named in R. V. ii. 27, 1, as one of the Adityas, and in the other hymn of the R.V. just alluded to, x. 72, vv. 4 and 5, he is noticed as being both the son and the father of the goddess Aditi. In the S. P. ii. 4, 4, he is identified with Prajapati. 125 In regard to his origin various legends are discoverable in the Puranas. Besides the passage before us, there are others in the V.P. in which he is mentioned. In iv. 1, 5, it is said that he sprang from the right thumb of Brahmā, and that Aditi was his daughter (Brahmanaścha dakshinangushtha-janma Dakshah | Prajapater Dakshasyany Aditih). In another place, V. P. i. 15, 52, it is said that Daksha, although formerly the son of Brahmā, was born to the ten Prachetases by Mārishā (Daśabhyas tu Prachetobhyo Mārishāyām Prajāpatih | jajne Daksho mahābhāgo yah pūrvam Brahmano 'bhavat |). This double pa-

124 See the 4th vol. of this work, pp. 10 f.

¹²⁵ See the 4th vol. of this work, pp. 10 ff. 24, 101; Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, for 1865, pp. 72 ff.; Roth in the Journal of the German Oriental Society, vi. 75.

rentage of Daksha appears to Maitreya, one of the interlocutors in the Purāṇa, to require explanation, and he accordingly enquires of his informant, vv. 60 ff.: Angushṭhād dakshiṇad Dakshaḥ pūrvam jātaḥ śrutam mayā | katham Prāchetaso bhūyaḥ sa sambhūto mahāmune | esha me samsayo brahman sumahān hridi varttate | yad dauhitras cha somasya punaḥ śvasuratām gataḥ | Parāsara uvācha | utpattis cha nirodhas cha nityau bhūteshu vai mune | rishayo 'tra na muhyanti ye chānye divyachakshushaḥ | 61. Yuge yuge bhavanty ete Dakshādyā muni-sattama | punas chaiva nirudhyante vidvāms tatra na muhyati | 62. Kānishṭhyam jyaishṭhyam apy eshām pūrvam nābhūd dvijottama | tapa eva garīyo 'bhūt prabhūvas chaiva kāraṇam |

"60. I have heard that Daksha was formerly born from the right thumb of Brahmā. How was he again produced as the son of the Prachetases? This great doubt arises in my mind; and also (the question) how he, who was the daughter's son of Soma, 126 afterwards became his father-in-law. Parāśara answered: Both birth and destruction are perpetual among all creatures. Rishis, and others who have celestial insight, are not bewildered by this. In every age Daksha and the rest are born and are again destroyed: a wise man is not bewildered by this. Formerly, too, there was neither juniority nor seniority: austere fervour was the chief thing, and power was the cause (of distinction)."

The reader who desires further information regarding the part played by Daksha, whether as a progenitor of allegorical beings, or as a creator, may compare the accounts given in the sequel of the seventh and in the eleventh chapters of Book I. of the V. P. (pp. 108 ff. and 152 ff.) with that to be found in the fifteenth chapter (vol. ii. pp. 10 ff.).

I will merely add, in reference to Akūti, the second daughter of Manu Svāyambhuva and Satarūpā, that the word is found in the Rig-veda with the signification of "will" or "design;" but appears to be personified in a passage of the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, iii. 12, 9, 5 (the context of which has been cited above, p. 41), where it is said: Irā patnī viśvasrijām ākūtir apinaḍ haviḥ | "Irā (Iḍā) was the wife of the creators. Akūti kneaded the oblation."

¹²⁶ See Wilson's V. P. vol. ii. p. 2, at the top.

Sect. VIII.—Account of the different creations, including that of the castes, according to the Vayu and Markandeya Puranas.

I now proceed to extract from the Vāyu and Mārkandeya Purānas the accounts which they supply of the creation, and which are to the same effect as those which have been quoted from the Vishnu Purāna, although with many varieties of detail.

I shall first adduce a passage from the fifth chapter of the Vāyu (which to some extent runs parallel with the second chapter of the Vishnu Purāṇa 127), on account of its containing a different account from that generally given of the triad of gods who correspond to the triad of qualities (quas).

Vāyu Purāna, chapter v. verse 11. Ahar-mukhe pravritte cha parah prakriti-sambhavah | kshobhayāmāsa yogena parena parameśvarah | 12. Pradhānam purusham chaiva pravišyāndam Mahesvarah | 13. Pradhānāt kshobhyamānāt tu rajo vai samavarttata | rajah pravarttakam tatra vījeshv api yathā jalam | 14. Guna-vaishamyam āsādya prasūyante hy adhishthitāh | gunebhyah kshobhyamānebhyas trayo devā vijajnire | 15. Āśritāh 128 paramā guhyāh sarvātmānah śarīrinah \ rajo Brahmā tamo hy Agnih sattvam Vishnur ajāyata | 16. Rajah-prakāśako Brahmā srashtritvena vyavasthitah | tamah-prakāśako 'gnis tu kālatvena vyavasthitah | 17. Sattva-prakāśako Vishņur audāsīnye vyavasthitah | ete eva trayo lokā ete eva trayo gunāh | 18. Ete eva trayo vedā ete eva trayo 'gnayah | parasparāśritāh hy ete parasparam anuvratāh | 19. Parasparena varttante dharayanti parasparam | anyonya-mithuna hy ete hy anyonyam upajīvinah | 20. Kshanam viyogo na hy eshām na tyajanti parasparam | Īśvaro hi paro devo Vishnus tu mahatah parah | 21. Brahmā tu rajosadriktah sargāyeha pravarttate | parašcha purusho ineyah prakritišcha parā smritā |

"11, 12. At the beginning of the day, the supreme Lord Maheśvara, sprung from Prakriti, entering the egg, agitated with extreme intentness both Pradhāna (= Prakriti) and Purusha. 13. From ¹²⁷ See pp. 27 and 41 f. of Wilson's V. P. vol. i.

¹²⁸ The Gaikowar MS. of the India office, No. 2102, reads āsthitāh, instead of āśritāh, the reading of the Taylor MS.

Pradhāna, when agitated, the quality of passion (rajas) arose, which was there a stimulating cause, as water is in seeds. 14. When an inequality in the Gunas arises, then (the deities) who preside over them are generated. From the Gunas thus agitated there sprang three gods (15), indwelling, supreme, mysterious, animating all things, embodied. The rajas quality was born as Brahmā, the tamas as Agni, 129 the sattva as Vishnu. 16. Brahmā, the manifester of rajas, acts in the character of creator; Agni, the manifester of tamas, acts in the capacity of time; 17. Vishnu, the manifester of sattva, abides in a condition of indifference. These deities are the three worlds, the three qualities, (18) the three Vedas, the three fires; they are mutually dependent, mutually devoted. 19. They exist through each other, and uphold each other; they are twin-parts of one another, they subsist through one another. 20. They are not for a moment separated; they never abandon one another. Iśvara (Mahādeva) is the supreme god; and Vishnu is superior to Mahat (the principle of intelligence); while Brahma, filled with rajas, engages in creation. Purusha is to be regarded as supreme, as Prakriti is also declared to be."

The sixth section of the Vāyu P., from which the next quotation will be made, corresponds to the fourth of the Vishnu P. quoted above.

1. Āpo hy agre samabhavan nashţe 'gnau prithivī-tale | sāntarālaika-līne 'smin nashţe sthāvara-jangame | 2. Ekārṇave tadā tasmin na prājnā-yata kinchana | tadā sa bhagavān Brahmā sahasrākshaḥ sahasra-pāt | 3. Sahasra-śīrshā Purusho rukma-varṇo hy atīndriyaḥ | Brahmā Nārā-yaṇākhyaḥ sa sushvāpa salile tadā | 4. Sattvodrekāt prabuddhas tu śūn-yam lokam udīkshya saḥ | imam chodāharanty atra ślokam Nārāyaṇam prati | 5. Āpo nārā vai tanavah '300 ity apām nāma śuśruma | apsu śete cha yat tasmāt tena Nārāyaṇaḥ smṛitah | 6. Tulyam yuga-sahasrasya naiśam kālam upāsya saḥ | śarvary-ante prakurute brahmatvam sarga-kāraṇāt | 7. Brahmā tu salile tasmin vāyur bhūtvā tadā 'charat | niśāyām iva khadyotiḥ prāvṛiṭ-kāle tatas tataḥ | 8. Tatas tu salile tasmin vinā-yāntargatām mahīm | anumāṇād asammūḍho bhūmer uddharaṇam prati |

¹²⁹ The Mark. P. chap. 46, verse 18, has the same line, but substitutes Rudra for Agni, thus: Rajo Brahmā tamo Rudro Vishnuh sattvam jagat-patih | The two are often identified. See Vol. IV. of this work, 282 ff.

¹³⁰ See Wilson's Vishnu Purana, p. 57, with the translator's and editor's notes.
Verses 1 to 6 are repeated towards the close of the 7th section of the Vayu P. with variations.

9. Akarot sa tanum hy anyām kalpādishu yathā purā | tato mahātmā manasā divyam rūpam achintayat | 10. Salilenāplutām bhūmim drishtvā sa tu samantatah | "kim nu rūpam mahat kritvā uddhareyam aham mahām" | 11. Jala-krīdā-suruchiram vārāham rūpam asmarat | adhrishyam sarva-bhūtānām vānmayam dharma-sanjnitam |

"1. When fire had perished from the earth, and this entire world motionless and moving, together with all intermediate things, had been dissolved into one mass, and had been destroyed-waters first were produced. As the world formed at that time but one ocean, nothing could be distinguished. Then the divine Brahma, Purusha, with a thousand eyes, a thousand feet, (3) a thousand heads, of golden hue, beyond the reach of the senses—Brahmā, called Nārāyana, slept on the water. 4. But awaking in consequence of the predominance (in him) of the sattva quality, and beholding the world a void-: Here they quote a verse regarding Nārāyana: 5. 'The waters are the bodies of Nara: such is the name we have heard given to them; and because he sleeps upon them, he is called Nārāyana.' 6. Having so continued for a nocturnal period equal to a thousand Yugas, at the end of the night he takes the character of Brahmā in order to create. 7. Brahmā then becoming Vayu (wind) moved upon that water,131 hither and thither, like a firefly at night in the rainy season. 8. Discovering then by inference that the earth lay within the waters, but unbewildered, (9) he took, for the purpose of raising it up, another body, as he had done at the beginnings of the (previous) Kalpas. Then that Great Being devised a celestial form. 10. Perceiving the earth to be entirely covered with water, (and asking himself) 'what great shape shall I assume in order that I may raise it up?'-he thought upon the form of a boar, brilliant from aquatic play, invincible by all creatures, formed of speech, and bearing the name of righteousness."

The body of the boar is then described in detail, and afterwards the elevation of the earth from beneath the waters, and the restoration of its former shape, divisions, etc. 182—the substance of the account being ¹³¹ This statement, which is not in the corresponding passage of the Vishnu P., is evidently borrowed, along with other particulars, from the text of the Taittirīya Sanhitā, vii. 1, 5, 1, quoted above p. 52.

¹³² Following the passage of the Taittirīya Sanhitā, quoted above, the writer in one werse ascribes to Brahmā as Visvakarman the arrangement of the earth, tatas teshu vis rneshu lokodadhi-girishv atha | Visvakarmā vibhajate kalpādishu punah punah | much the same, but the particulars different from those of the parallel passage in the Vishnu Purāṇa.

Then follows a description of the creation coinciding in all essential points 133 with that quoted above, p. 55, from the beginning of the fifth chapter of the Vishuu Purāṇa.

The further account of the creation, however, corresponding to that which I have quoted from the next part of the same chapter of that Purāṇa, is not found in the same position in the Vāyu Purāṇa, ¹³⁴ but is placed at the beginning of the ninth chapter, two others, entitled Pratisandhi-kīrttana and Chaturāśrama-vibhāga, being interposed as the seventh and eighth. With the view, however, of facilitating comparison between the various cosmogonies described in the two works, I shall preserve the order of the accounts as found in the Vishṇu Purāṇa, and place the details given in the ninth chapter of the Vāyu Purāṇa before those supplied in the eighth.

The ninth chapter of the Vāyu Purāṇa, which is fuller in its details than the parallel passage in the Vishnu Purāṇa, begins thus, without any specific reference to the contents of the preceding chapter:

Sūta uvācha | 1. Tato 'bhidhyāyatas tasya jajnire mānasīḥ prajāḥ | tach-chharīra-samutpannaiḥ kāryais taiḥ kāraṇaiḥ saha | 2. Kshetrajnāḥ samavarttanta gātrebhyas tasya dhīmataḥ | tato devāsura-pitrīn mānavam cha chatushṭayam | 3. Sisrikshur ambhāmsy etāni svātmanā samayūyujat | yuktātmanas tatas tasya tanomātrā svayambhuvaḥ | 4. Tam abhidhyāyataḥ sargam prayatno 'bhūt Prajāpateḥ | tato 'sya jaghanāt pūrvam asurā jajnire sutāḥ | 5. Asuḥ prāṇaḥ smrito viprais taj-janmānas tato 'surāḥ | yayā srishṭāsurās tanvā tām tanum sa vyapohata 185 | 6. Sā 'paviddhā tanus tena sadyo rātrir ajāyata | sā tamo-bahulā yasmāt tato rātris triyāmikā | 7. Āvritās tamasā rātrau prajās tasmāt svapanty uta | drishṭvā 'surāms tu deveśas tanum anyām apadyata | 8. Avyaktām sattva-bahulām tatas tām so 'bhyayūyujat | tatas tām yunjatas tasya priyam āsīt prabhoḥ kila | 9. Tato mukhe samutpannā dīvyatas tasya devatāḥ | yato 'sya dīvyato jātās tena devāḥ ¹³³ This is also the case with the details given in the Märk. P. xlvii. 15-27 and ff.

¹³⁴ The Märk. P. however observes the same order as the Vishnu P.

¹³⁵ The reading in the passage of the Taitt. Br. ii. 2, 9, 6, from which this narrative is borrowed (see above, p. 28), is apāhata,—which, however, does not prove that that verb with vi prefixed should necessarily be the true reading here; as the Taylor and Gaikowar MSS. have vyapohata throughout, and in one place vyapohat.

prakīrttitāh | 10. Dhātur divīti yah proktah krīdāyām sa vibhāvyate | tasmāt (? yasmāt) tanvām tu divyāyām jamire tena devatāh | 11. Devān srishtvā 'tha devesas tanum anyām apadyata | sattva - mātrātmikām devas tato 'nyam so 'bhyapadyata 136 | 12. Pitrivad manyamanas tan putrān prādhyāyata prabhuh | pitaro hy upapakshābhyām 187 rātry-ahnor antarā 'srijat | 13. Tasmāt te pitaro devāh putratvam tena teshu tat | yayā srishtās tu pitaras tām tanum sa vyapohata | 14. Sā 'paviddhā tanus tena sadyah sandhyā prajāyata | tasmād ahas tu devānām rātrir yā sā "surī smritā | 15. Tayor madhye tu vai paitrī yā tanuh sā garīyasī | tasmād devāsurāh sarve rishayo manavas tathā | 16. Te yuktās tām upāsante rātry-ahnor 188 madhyamām tanum | tato 'nyām sa punar Brahmā tanum vai pratyapadyata | 17. Rajo-mātrātmikām yām tu manasā so'srijat prabhuḥ | rajaḥ-prāyān tataḥ so 'tha mānasān asrijat sutān | 18. Manasas tu tatas tasya mānasā jajnire prajāh | drishţvā punah prajāś chāpi svām tanum tām apohata | 19. Sā 'paviddhā tanus tena jyotsnā sadyas tv ajāyata | tasmād bhavanti samhrishtā jyotsnāyām udbhave prajāh | 20. Ity etās tanavas tena vyapaviddhā mahatmanā | sadyo rātry-ahanī chaiva sandhyā jyotsnā cha jajnire | 21. Jyotsnā sandhyā tathā 'haścha sattva-mātrātmakam svayam | tamo-mātrātmikā rātrih sā vai tasmāt triyāmikā | 22. Tasmād devā divya-tanvā 189 drishtāh srishtā mukhāt tu vai | yasmāt teshām divā janma balinas tena te divā | 23. Tanvā yad asurān rātrau jaghanād asrijat punah | prānebhyo rātri-janmāno hy asahyā niśi tena te | 24. Etāny evam bhavishyānām devānām asuraih saha | pitrīnām mānavānām cha atītānāgateshu vai | 25. Manvantareshu sarveshu nimittani bhavanti hi | jyotenā rātry-ahanī sandhyā chatvāry ambhāmsi tāni vai | 26. Bhānti yasmāt tato 'mbhāmsi bhā-śabdo 'yam manīshibhih | vyāpti-dīptyām nigadito pumāms chāha Prajāpatih | 27. So 'mbhāmsy etāni drishtvā tu deva-dānava-mānavān | pitrīms chaivās rijat so 'nyān ātmano vividhān punah | 28. Tām utsrijya tanum kritenām tato 'nyām asrijat prabhuh | mūrttim rajas-tama-prāyām vunar evābhyayūyujat | 29. Andhakāre kshudhāvishtas tato'nyām srijate punah | tena srishtah kshudhatmanas te 'mbhamsy adatum udyatah | 30. "Ambhāmsy etāni rakshāma" uktavantascha teshu ye | rākshasās te smritah loke krodhatmano niśacharah

¹³⁶ This line is omitted in the Gaikowar MS.

¹³⁷ The Gaikowar MS. seems to read upapārśvābhyām.

The Gaikowar MS. reads Brahmano madhyamām tanum.
 The Guikowar MS. reads divā tanvā.

"Sūta says: 1. Then, as he was desiring, there sprang from him mind-born sons, with those effects and causes derived from his body. 2. Embodied spirits were produced from the bodies of that wise Being. 3. Then willing to create these four streams (ambhāmsi) gods, Asuras, Fathers, and men, he fixed his spirit in abstraction. As Svayambhū was thus fixed in abstraction, a body consisting of nothing but darkness (invested him). 4. While desiring this creation, Prajapati put forth an effort. Then Asuras were first produced as sons from his groin. 5. Asu is declared by Brahmans to mean breath. From it these beings were produced; hence they are Asuras. 40 He cast aside the body with which the Asuras were created. 6. Being cast away by him, that body immediately became night. Inasmuch as darkness predominated in it, night consists of three watches. 7. Hence, being enveloped in darkness, all creatures sleep at night. Beholding the Asuras, however, the Lord of gods took another body, (8) imperceptible, and having a predominance of goodness, which he then fixed in abstraction. While he continued thus to fix it, he experienced pleasure. 9. Then as he was sporting, gods were produced in his mouth. As they were born from him, while he was sporting (dīvyataḥ), they are known as Devas (gods). 10. The root div is understood in the sense of sporting. As they were born in a sportive (divya)141 body, they are called Devatās. 11. Having created the deities, the Lord of gods then took another body, consisting entirely of goodness (sattva). 12. Regarding himself as a father, he thought upon these sons: he created Fathers (Pitris) from his armpits in the interval between night and day. 13. Hence these Fathers are gods: therefore that sonship belongs to them. He cast aside the body with which the Fathers were created. 14. Being cast away by him, it straightway became twilight. Hence day belongs to the gods, and night is said to belong to the Asuras. 15. The body intermediate between them, which is that of the Fathers, is the most important. Hence gods, Asuras, Fathers, and men (16) worship intently this intermediate body of Brahmā. He then took again another body. But from that body, composed altogether of passion (rajas), ¹⁴⁰ This statement, which is not found in the parallel passage of the Vishnu Purana, is borrowed from Taitt. Br. ii. 3, 3, 2, quoted above.

¹⁴¹ Divya properly means "celestial." But from the play of words in the passage, the writer may intend it to have here the sense of "sportive."

which he created by his mind, he formed mind-born 142 sons who had almost entirely a passionate character. 18. Then from his mind sprang mind-born sons. Beholding again his creatures, he cast away that body of his. 19. Being thrown off by him it straightway became morning twilight. Hence living beings are gladdened by the rise of early twilight. 20. Such were the bodies which, when cast aside by the Great Being, became immediately night and day, twilight and early twilight. 21. Early twilight, twilight, and day have all the character of pure goodness. Night has entirely the character of darkness (tamas); and hence it consists of three watches. 22. Hence the gods are beheld with a celestial body. and they were created from the mouth. As they were created during the day, they are strong during that period. 23. Inasmuch as he created the Asuras from his groin at night, they, having been born from his breath, during the night, are unconquerable during that season. 24, 25. Thus these four streams, early twilight, night, day, and twilight, are the causes of gods, Asuras, Fathers, and men, in all the Manyantaras that are past, as well as in those that are to come. 26. As these (streams) shine, they are called ambhāmsi. This root bhā is used by the intelligent in the senses of pervading and shining, and the Male, Prajapati, declares (the fact). 27. Having beheld these streams (ambhamsi), gods, Dānavas, men, and fathers, he again created various others from himself. 28. Abandoning that entire body, the lord created another, a form consisting almost entirely of passion and darkness, and again fixed it in abstraction. 29. Being possessed with hunger in the darkness, he then created another. The hungry beings formed by him were bent on seizing the streams (ambhañsi). 30. Those of them, who said 'let us preserve (rakshāma) these streams,' are known in the world as Rākshasas, wrathful, and prowling about at night."

This description is followed by an account of the further creation corresponding with that given in the same sequence in the Vishnu Purāṇa; and the rest of the chapter is occupied with other details which it is not necessary that I should notice. I therefore proceed to make some quotations from the eighth chapter, entitled Chaturāśramavibhāga, or "the distribution into four orders," which corresponds, in its general contents, with the sixth chapter of the Vishnu Purāṇa, book i., but is of far greater length, and, in fact, extremely prolix, as well as confused, full of repetitions, and not always very intelligible.

¹⁴² Mānasān. We might expect here however, mānavān or mānushān, "human," in conformity with the parallel passages both in the Vishnu Purāna (see above, p. 56), and the Mārkandeya Purāna, xlviii. 11.

The chapter immediately preceding (i.e. the seventh), entitled Pratisandhi-kīrttanam, ends with the words: "I shall now declare to you the present Kalpa; understand." Sūta accordingly proceeds at the opening of the eighth chapter to repeat some verses, which have been already quoted from the beginning of the sixth chapter, descriptive of Brahmā's sleep during the night after the universe had been dissolved, and to recapitulate briefly the elevation of the earth from beneath the waters, its reconstruction, and the institution of Yugas. At verse 22 the narrative proceeds:

Kalpasyādau kritayuge prathame so 'srijat prajāķ | 23. Prāg uktā yā mayā tubhyam pūrva-kūle prajās tu tāḥ | tasmin samvarttamāne tu kalpe dagdhās tadā 'gninā | 24. Aprāptā yās tapo-lokam jana-lokam samūśritāh | pravarttati punah sarge vījartham tā bhavanti hi | 25. Vījārthena sthitās tatra punah sargasya kāranāt | tatas tāh srijyamānās tu santānārtham bhavanti hi \ 26. Dharmārtha-kāma-mokshānām iha tāh sādhikāh smritāh | devāś cha pitaraśchaiva rishayo manavas tathā | 27. Tatas te tapasā yuktāh sthānāny āpūrayanti hi | Brahmano mānasās te vai siddhātmāno bhavanti hi | 28. Ye sangādvesha-yuktena karmanā te divam gatāh | āvarttamānā iha te sambhavanti yuge yuge | 29. Svakarma-phala-śeshena khyātyā chaiva tathātmikā (? tathātmakāh) | sambharanti janāl lokāt karma-samsaya-bandhanāt | 30. Āsayah kāranam tatra boddhavyañ karmanā tu saḥ | taiḥ karmabhis tu jāyante janāl lokāt -śubhāśubhaih | 31. Grihnanti te śarīrāni nānā-rūpāni yonishu | devādyāh sthāvarāntās cha utpadyante parasparam (? paramparam) | 32. Teshām ye yani karmani prāk-srishţau pratipedire | tany eva pratipadyante srijyamanah punah | 33. Himsrahimsre mridu-krure dharmādharme ritānrite | tadbhāvitāh prapadyante tasmāt tat tasya rochate | 34. Kalpeshv āsan vyatīteshu rūpa-nāmāni yāni cha | tāny evānāgate kāle prāyasah pratipedire | 35. Tasmāt tu nāma-rūpāni tāny eva pratipedire | punah punas te kalpeshu jayante nama-rupatah | 36. Tatah sarge hy avashtabdhe sisrikshor Brahmanas tu vai | 37.148 Prajās tā dhyāyatas

¹⁴³ The narrative in the 49th chapter of the Mārkandeya Purāna (verses 3-13) begins at this verse, the 37th of the Vāyu Purāna, and coincides, though with verbal differences, with what follows down to verse 47. After that there is more variation.

tasya satyābhidhyāyinas tadā | mithunānām sahasram tu so 'srijad vai mukhāt tadā | 38. Janās te hy upapadyante sattvodriktāh suchetasah 144 | sahasram anyad vakshasto mithunānām sasaria ha | 39. Te sarve rajasodriktāh sushminas chāpy asushminah 145 | srishtvā sahasram anyat tu dvandvānām ūrutah punah | 40. Rajas-tamobhyām udriktā īhāśilās tu te smrităh | padbhyām sahasram anyat tu mithunānām sasarja ha | 41. Udriktās tamasā sarve nihśrīkā hy alpa-tejasāh | tato vai harshamānās te dvandvotpannās tu prāninah | 42. Anyonya-hrichhayāvishţā maithunāyopachakramuh | tatahprabhriti kalpe 'smin maithunotpattir uchyate | 43. Māsi māsy ārttavam yat tu na tadā "sīt tu yoshitām 148 | tasmāt tadā na sushuvuh sevitair api maithunaih | 44. Ayusho 'nte prasuyante mithunāny eva tāh sakrit | kunthakāh kunthikas chaiva utpadyante mumūrshatām 147 | 45. Tatah prabhriti kalpe 'smin mithunānām hi sambhavah | dhyāne tu manasā tāsām prajānām jāyate sakrit | 46. Sabdādi-vishayah śuddhah pratyckam pancha-lakshanah | ity evam mānasī 148 pūrvam prāksrishtir yā Prajāpateh | 47. Tasyānvavāye sambhūtā yair idam pūritam jagat | sarit-saraḥ-samudrām̃ś cha sevante parvatān api | 48. Tadā nātyanta-śītoshnā yuge tasmin charanti vai | prithvī-rasodbhavam nāma āhāram hy āharanti vai 149 | 49. Tāh prajāh kāma-chārinyo mānasīm siddhim āsthitāḥ | dharmādharmau na tāsv āstām nirviśeshāh prajās tu tāḥ | 50. Tulyam āyuḥ sukham rūpam tāsām tasmin krite yuge | dharmādharmau na tāsv āstām kalpādau tu krite yuge | 51. Svena svenādhikārena jajnire te krite yuge | chatvāri tu sahasrāni varshānām divyasankhyayā | 52. Ādyam krita-yuqam prāhuh sandhyānām tu chatuhśatam | tatah sahasraśas tāsa prajāsu prathitāsv api | 53.150 Na tāsām pratighāto 'sti na dvandvam nāpi cha klamah | parvatodadhi-sevinyo hy aniketāśrayās tu tāḥ | 54. Viśokāh sattva-bahulāh hy ekānta-sukhitāh prajāh | tāh vai nishkāma-chārinyo nityam mudita-mānasāh | 55. Paśa-

145 For asushminah the Märk. P. reads amarshinah, "irascible."

¹⁴⁴ For suchetasah the Mark. P. reads sutejasah.

¹⁴⁶ I have corrected this line from the Märkandeya Purāna, 49, 9 b. The reading of the MSS. of the Vāyu Purāna cannot be correct. It appears to be: māse māse 'rttavam yad yat tat tadāsīd hi yoshitām | The negative particle seems to be indispensable here.

¹⁴⁷ This half verse is not found in the Mark. P.

¹⁴⁸ The Mark. P. has manushi, "human," instead of manasi, "mental."

¹⁴⁹ This verse is not in the Mark. P.; and after this point the verses which are common to both Puranas do not occur in the same places.

¹⁵⁰ Verses 53-56 coincide generally with verses 14-18 of the Mark. P.

vah pakshinas chaiva na tadāsan sarīsripāh | nodbhijjā nārakas 151 chaiva te hy adharma-prasūtayah | 56. Na mūla-phala-pushpam cha nārttavam ritavo na cha | sarva-kāma-sukhah kālo nātyartham hy ushna-śītatā 152 | 57. Manobhilashitāh kāmās tāsām sarvatra sarvadā | uttishthanti prithivyām vai tābhir dhyātā rasolvanāh | 58. Balavarna-karī tāsām siddhih sā roga-nāśinī | asamskāryyaih śarīraiś cha prajās tāh sthirayauvanāh | 59. Tāsām visuddhāt sankalpāj jāyante mithunāh prajāh | samam janma cha rūpam cha mriyante chaiva tāḥ samam | 60. Tadā satyam alobhaś cha kshamā tushţih sukham damah | nirviseshās tu tāh sarvā rūpāyuhśīla-cheshţitaih | 61. Abuddhipūrvakam vrittam prajānām jāyate svayam | apravrittih krita-yuge karmanoh subhapāpayoh | 62. Varnāsrama-vyavasthāś cha na tadā "san na sankarah | anichhādvesha-yuktās te varttayanti parasparam | 63. Tulya-rūpāyushah sarvāh adhamottama-varjitāh 153 | sukha-prāyā hy aśokāś cha udpadyante krite yuge | 64. Nityaprahrishta-manaso mahāsattvā mahābalāh | lābhālābhau na tāsv āstām mitrāmitre priyāpriye | 65. Manasā vishayas tāsām nirīhānām pravarttate | na lipsanti hi tā'nyoyam nānugrihnanti chaiva hi | 66. Dhyānam param krita-yuge tretayam jnanam uchyate | pravrittam dvapare yajnam dānam kali-yuge varam | 67. Sattvam kritam rajas tretā dvāparam tu rajas-tamau | kalau tamas tu vijneyam yuga-vritta-vasena tu | 68. Kālah krite yuge tv esha tasya sankhyām nibodhata | chatvāri tu sahasrāni varshānām tat kritam yugam | 69. Sandhyāmsau tasya divyāni satāny ashtau cha sankhyayā | tadā tāsām babhūvāyur na cha kleśa-vipattayah 154 | 70. Tatah kritayuge tasmin sandhyāmse hi gate tu vai | pādāvasishto bhavati yuga-dharmas tu sarvasah | 71. Sandhyāyām apy atītāyām anta-kāle yugasya vai | pādaśas chāvaśishte tu sandhyā-dharme yugasya tu | 72. Evam krite tu nihseshe siddhis tv antardadhe tadā | tasyām cha siddhau bhrashtāyām mānasyām abhavat tatah | 73. Siddhir

¹⁵¹ The Mark, P. has nakrah, "crocodiles," in its enumeration.

¹⁵² The Märk. P. here inserts some other lines, 18b-21a, instead of 57 and 58a of the Vāyu P.

¹⁵³ The Mārk. P. inserts here the following verses: 24. Chatvāri tu sahasrāņi varshāṇām mānushāṇi tu | āyuḥ-pramāṇām jīvanti na cha klešād vipattayaḥ | 25. Kvachit kvachit punaḥ sā bhūt kshitir bhāgyena sarvasaḥ | kālena gachhatā nāśam upayānti yathā prajāḥ | 26. Tathā tāḥ kramaśaḥ nāśam jagmuḥ sarvatra siddhayaḥ | tāsu sarvāsu nashṭāsu nabhasaḥ prachyutā narāḥ (latāḥ in one MS.) | prāyasaḥ kalpavrikshās te sambhūtā griha-samsthitāḥ |

¹⁵⁴ Instead of babhuvāyuh, etc., the Gaikowar MS. has prayuktāni na cha klešo babhūva ha

anyā yuge tasmims tretāyām antare kritā | sargādau yā mayā 'shṭau tu mānasyo vai prakīrttitāḥ | 74. Ashṭau tāh krama-yogena siddhayo yānti sankshayam | kalpādau mānasī hy ekā siddhir bhavati sā krite | 75. Manvantareshu sarveshu chatur-yuga-vibhāgaśaḥ | varnāśramāchāra-kṛitaḥ karma-siddhodbhavah (karma-siddhyudbhavah?) smritah | 76. Sandhyā kritasya pādena sandhyā pādena chāmsatah | krita-sandhyāmsakā hy ete trīms trīn pādān parasparam | 77. Hrasanti yuga-dharmais te tapahśruta-balāyushaih | tatah kritāmśe kshīne tu babhūva tad-anantaram | 78. Tretā-yugam amanyanta kritāmsam rishi-sattamāķ | tasmin kshīne kritāmše tu tach-chhishṭāsu prajāsv iha | 79. Kalpādau sampravrittāyās tretāyāḥ pramukhe tadā | pranasyati tadā siddhiḥ kāla-yogena nānyathā | 80. Tasyām siddhau pranashtāyām anyā siddhir avarttata | apām saukshmye pratigate tadā meghātmanā tu vai | 81. Meghebhyah stanayitnubhyah pravrittam vrishti-sarjjanam | sakrid eva tayā vrishtyā samyukte prithivī-tale | 82. Prādurāsams tadā tāsām vrikshās tu griha-samsthitāh 155 | sarva-pratyupabhogas tu tāsām tebhyah prajāyate | 83. Varttayanti hi tebhyas tas treta-yuga-mukhe prajah | tatah kalena mahata tāsām eva viparyayāt | 84. Rāgalobhātmako bhāvas tadā hy ākasmiko 'bhavat | yat tad bhavati nārīnām jīvitānte tad ārtavam | 85. Tadā tad vai na bhavati punar yuqa-balena tu | tāsām punah pravritte tu māse māse tad arttavam (-ve?) | 86. Tatas tenaiva yogena varttatām maithune tadā | tāsām tāt-kāla-bhāvitvād māsi māsy upayachhatām | 87. Akāle hy ārttavotpattir qarbhotpattir ajāyata | viparyyayena tāsām tu tena kūlena bhāvinā| 88. Pranasyanti tatah sarve vrikshās te grihasamsthitāh | tatas teshu pranashteshu vibhranta vyakulendriyah | 89. Abhidhyayanti tam siddhim satyābhidhyāyinas tadā | prādurbabhūvus tāsām tu vrikshās te grihasamsthitāh | 90.156 Vastrāni cha prasūyante phaleshv ābharanāni cha | teshv eva jäyate täsäm gandha-varna-rasänvitam | 91. Amākshikam mahāvīryam puṭake puṭake madhu | tena tā varttayanti sma mukhe tretāyugasya vai | 92. Hrishta-tushtās tayā siddhyā prajā vai vigata-įvarāh | punah kālāntarenaiva punar lobhāvritās tu tāh | 93. Vrikshāms tān paryagrihnanta madhu chāmākshikam balāt | tāsām tenāpachārena punar lobha-kritena vai | 94. Pranashtā madhunā sārdham kalpa-vrikshāh kva-

 $^{^{155}}$ Verses 27-35 of the Märk. P. correspond more or less to this and the following verses down to 98.

 $^{^{156}}$ This and the following verses correspond more or less closely to the Mark. P. 30 ff.

chit kvachit | tasyām evālpa-śishtāyām sandhyā-kāla-vaśāt tadā | 95. varttatām tu tadā tāsām dvandvāny abhyutthitāni tu | sītavātātapais tīvrais tatas tāh duḥkhitā bhriśam | 96. Dvandvais tāh pīdyamānās tu chakrur āvaranāni cha | kritvā dvandva-pratīkāram niketāni hi bhejire | 97. Pūrvam nikāma-chārās te aniketāśrayā bhriśam | yathā-yogyam yathā-prīti niketeshv avasan punah | 98. Maru-dhanvasu nimneshu parvateshu darīshu cha 157 | samsrayanti cha durgāni dhanvānam sūsvatodakam | 99. Yathā-yogam yathā-kāmam sameshu vishameshu cha | ārabdhās te niketā vai karttum sītoshņa-pāraņam | 100. Tatas tā māpayāmāsuh kheţāni cha purāni cha | grāmāms chaiva yathā-bhāgam tathaivāntah. purāni cha | . . . 123.158 Kriteshu teshu sthāneshu punaś chakrur grihāni cha | yathā cha pūrvam āsan vai vrikshās tu griha-samsthitāh | 124. Tathā karttum samārabdhāś chintayitvā punah punah | vriduhāś chaiva gatāh śākhā natāś chaivāparā gatāh | 125. Ata ūrdhvam gatās chānyā enam tiryaggatāh parāh | buddhyā 'nvishya tathā 'nyā yā vriksha-śākhā yathā gatāh | 126. Tathā kritās tu taih śākhās tāsmāch chhālās tu tāh smritāh | evam prasiddhāh śākhābhyah śālāś chaiva grihāni cha | 127. Tasmāt tā vai smritāh śālāh śālātvam chaiva tāsu tat | prasīdati manas tāsu manah prāsādayams cha tāh | 128. Tasmād grihāni śālāś cha prāsādāś chaiva sanjnitāh kritvā dvandvopaghātāms tān vārttopāyam achintayan | 129.159 Nashţeshu madhunā sārddham kalpa-vriksheshu vai tadā | vishāda-vyākulās tā vai prajās trishnā-kshudhānvitāh | 130. Tatah prādurbabhau tāsām siddhis tretā-yuge punah | vārttārtha-sādhikā hy anyā vrishţis tāsām hi kāmatah | 131. Tāsām vrishty-udakānīha yāni nimnair gatāni tu | vrishtyā nimnā(?) nirabhavan srotah-khātāni nimnagāh | 132. Evam nadyah pravrittās tu dvitīye vrishti-sarjane | ye purastād apām stokā āpannāh prithivītale | 133. Apām bhūmes cha samyogād oshadhyas tāsu chābhavan | pushpa-mūlaphalinyas tv oshadhyas tāh prajajnire | 134. Aphāla-krishtās chānuptā grāmyāranyas chaturdasa | ritu-pushpa-phalāśchaiva vrikshāh gulmāś cha jajnire | 135. Prādurbhavaś cha tretāyām ādyo'yam aushadhasya tu | tenaushadhena varttante prajās tretāyuge tadā | 136. Tatah punar abhūt tāsūm rāgo lobhas cha sarvasah | avasyam-

¹⁵⁷ I have corrected this line from Märk, P. xlix. 35.

¹⁵⁸ Verses 52-54 of the Märk. P. correspond in substance to verses 123-128 of the Vävu P.

¹⁵⁹ Verses 55-62 of the Mark. P. correspond to verses 129-137 of the Vayu P.

bhāvinā 'rthena tretā-yuga-vasena tu | 137. Tatas tāh paryagrihnanta nadīh kshetrāni parvatān | vrikshān gulmaushadhīś chaiva prasahya tu yathā-balam | 138. Siddhātmānas tu ye pūrvam vyākhyātah prāk krite mayā | Brahmano mānasās te vai utpannā ye janād iha | 139. Santāś cha sushminas chaira karmino duhkhinas tadā | tatah pravarttamānās te tretāyām jajnire punah | 140. Brāhmanāh kshattriyā vaisyāh śūdrā drohijanās tathā | bhāvitāḥ pūrva-jātīshu karmabhiś cha śubhāśubhaiḥ | 141. Itas tebhyo 'balā ye tu śatyaśīlā hy ahimsakāh | vīta-lobhā jitātmāno nivasanti sma teshu vai | 142. Pratigrihnanti kurvanti tebhyaś chānye 'lpa-tejasah | evam vipratipanneshu prapanneshu parasparam | 143. Tena doshena teshām tā oshadhyo mishatām tadā 160 | pranashtā kriyamānā vai mushtibhyām sikatā yathā | 144.161 Agrasad bhūr yuga-balād grāmyāranyāś chaturdaśa | phalam grihnanti pushpaiścha phalaih patraih punah punah | 145.162 Tatas tāsu praņashtāsu vibhrāntās tāh prajās tadā | Svayambhuvam prabhum jagmuh kshudhāvishţāh prajāpatim | 146. vritty-artham abhilipsantah ādau tretā-yugasya tu | Brahmā Svayambhūr bhagavān jnātvā tāsām manīshitam | 147. Yuktam pratyaksha-drishtena daršanena vichāryya cha | grastāḥ prithivyā oshadhyo jnātvā pratyaduhat punah | 148, Kritvā vatsam sumerum tu dudoha prithivīm imām | duqdheyam gaus tadā tena vījāni prithivī-tale | 149. Jajnire tāni vījāni grāmyāranyās tu tāḥ punaḥ | oshadhyaḥ phala-pākāntāḥ sana-saptadaśās tu tāḥ | . . . 155. Utpannāh prathamam hy etā ādau tretā-yugasya tu | 156. Aphāla-krishtā oshadhyo grāmyāranyās tu sarvaśah | vrikshā gulmalatā-vallyo vīrudhas trina-jātayah | 157. Mūlaih phalais cha rohinyo 'gṛihṇan pushpais cha yāḥ phalam | pṛithvī dugdhā tu vījāni yāni pūrvam Svayambhuvā | 158. Ritu-pushpa-phalās tā vai oshadhyo jajnire tv iha | 188 yadā prasrishtā oshadyo na prarohanti tāḥ punaḥ | 159. Tataḥ sa tāsām vritty-artham vārttopāyam chakāra ha | Brahmā Svayambhūr bhagaran hasta-siddham tu karma-jam | 160. Tatah-prabhrity athaushadhyah krishta-pachyas ta jajnire | samsiddhayam tu varttayam tatas tāsām Svayambhuvak | 161. Maryādāķ sthāpayāmāsa yathārabdhāķ parasparam | 164 ye vai parigrihītāras tāsām āsan badhātmakāḥ | 162. Itareshām krita-trānān sthāpayāmāsa kshattriyān | upatishthanti ye tān

¹⁶⁰ Mark. P. verse 63a.

¹⁶¹ Märk. P. verse 68b.

¹⁶² Verses 64-67 of the Mark. P. correspond to verses 145-149 of the Vayu P.

Verses 73-75 of the Märk. P. correspond to verses 1585-160a of the Väyu P.
 This with all what follows down to verse 171 is omitted in the Märk. P.

vai vāvanto nirbhavās tathā | 163. Satvam brahma yathā bhūtam bruvanto brāhmanās tu te | ye chānye 'py abalās teshām vaišasam karma samsthitāh | 164. Kīnāśā nāśayanti sma prithivyām prāg atandritāh | vaisyān eva tu tān āhuh kīnāśān vritti-sādhakān | 165. Sochantas cha dravantaś cha paricharyyūsu ye ratāḥ | nistejaso'lpa-vīryyūś cha śūdrān tān abravīt tu sah | 166. Teshām karmāni dharmāms cha Brahmā 'nuvyadadhāt prabhuh | samsthitau prakritāyām tu chāturvarnyasya sarvasah | 167. Punah prajās tu tā mohāt tān dharmān nānvapālayan | varna-dharmair ajīvantyo vyarudhyanta parasparam | 168. Brahmā tam artham buddhvā tu yāthātathyena vai prabhuh | kshattriyānām balam dandam yuddham ājīvam ādišat | 169. Yājanādhyayanam chaiva tritīyam cha parigraham | brāhmanānām vibhus teshām karmāny etāny athādiśat | 170. Pāśupālyam vanijyam cha krishim chaiva viśām dadau | śilpājīvam bhritim chaiva śūdrānām vyadadhāt prabhuh | 171. Sāmānyāni tu karmāni brahma-kshattra-viśām punah | yajanādhyayanam dānam sāmānyāni tu teshu vai | 172. Karmājīvam tato datvā tebhyaś chaiva parasparam | lokāntareshu sthānāni teshām siddhyāy 165 adāt prabhuh | 173.166 Prājāpatyam brāhmanānām smritam sthānam kriyāvatām | sthānam aindram kshattriyānām sangrāmeshv apalāyinām | 174. Vaiśvānām mārutam sthūnam sva-dharmam upajīvinām | gāndharvam śūdra-jātīnām pratichārena (parichārena?) tishthatām | 175. Sthānāny etāni varnānām vyasyāchāravatām svayam \ tatah sthiteshu varneshu sthāpayāmāsa chāśramān | 176. Grihastham brahmachāritvam vanaprastham sabhikshukam | āśramāmś chaturo hy etān pūrvam asthāpayat prabhuh | 177. Varna-karmāni ye kechit teshām iha na kurvate | krita-karmakshitih(?) prāhur āśrama-sthāna-vāsinah | 178. Brahmā tān sthāpāyāmāsa āśramān nāma nāmatah | nirdeśārtham tatas teshām Brahmā dharmān prăbhāshata | 179. Prasthānāni cha teshām vai yamāmscha niyamāms cha ha | chāturvarnyātmakah pūrvam grihasthas tv āśramah smritah | 180. Trāyānām āśramāṇām cha pratishthā yonir eva cha | yathākramam pravakshyāmi yamaiś cha niyamaiś cha taih | 190. Vedāh sāngāś cha yajnāś cha vratāni niyamāś cha ye | 191. Na siddhyanti prādushţasya bhāvadoshe upāgate | bahih-karmāni sarvāni prasiddhyanti (na siddhyanti?) kadāchana |

166 Verses 173 f. are found in the Mark. P. verses 77 f.; but all that follows down to verse 193 is omitted there.

¹⁶⁵ I conjecture siddhyāy adāt to be the proper reading. The MSS. have siddhyā-dadāt, or siddhyādadāt, etc.

192. Antar-bhāva-pradushṭasya kurvato'hi parākramāt | sarvasvam api yo dadyāt kalushenāntarātmanā | 193. Na tena dharma-bhāk sa syād bhāva eva hi kāraṇam | 199. Evam varṇāsramāṇām vai pratibhāge krite tadā | 200. Yadā 'sya na vyavardhanta prajā varnāśramatmikā $h \mid tato$ 'nyā mānasīh so 'tha tretā-madhye 'srijat prajā $h \mid 201$. Ātmanas tāh śarīrāchcha tulyāś chaivātmanā tu vai | tasmin tretā-yuge prāpte madhyam prāpte kramena tu | 202. Tato 'nyā manasīs tatra prajāh srashtum prachakrame | tatah satva-rajodriktāh prajāh so 'thāsrijat prabhuh | 203. Dharmartha-kama-mokshanam varttayas chaiva sadhikāh | derāś cha pitaraś chaiva rishayo manavas tathā | 204. Yugānurūpā dharmena yair imā vichitāh prajāh | upasthite tadā tasmin prajādharme (-sarge?) Svayambhuvah | 205. Abhidadhyau prajāh sarvā nānārūpās tu mānasīh | pūrvoktā yā mayā tubhyam jana-lokam samāsritāh | 206. Kalpe'tīte tu tā hy āsan devādyās tu prajā iha | dhyāyatas tasya tāh sarvāh sambhūty-artham upasthitāh | 207. Manvantara-krameneha kanishthe prathame matah | khyātyā 'nubandhais tais tais tu sarvārthair iha bhavitah | 208. Kuśalakuśala-prayaih karmabhis taih sada prajah | tat-karma-phala-seshena upashtabdhāh prajajnire | 209. Devāsura-pitritvais tu pašu-pakshi-sarīsripaih | vriksha-nāraka-kīţatvais tais tair bhāvair upasthitāḥ | ādhīnārtham prajānām cha ātmanā vai vinirmame |

"22. At the beginning of the Kalpa, in the first Krita age, he created those living beings (23) which I have formerly described to thee; but in the olden time, at the close of the Kalpa, those creatures were burnt up by fire. 24. Those of them who did not reach the Tapoloka took refuge in the Janaloka; and when the creation again commences, they form its seed. 25. Existing there as a seed for the sake of another creation, they then, as they are created, are produced with a view to progeny. 26. These are declared to accomplish, in the present state (the four ends of human life, viz.), duty, the acquisition of wealth, the gratification of love, and the attainment of final liberation, - both gods, Fathers, Rishis, and Manus. 27. They, then, filled with austere fervour, replenish (all) places. These are the mental sons of Brahmā, perfect in their nature. 28. Those who ascended to the sky by works characterized by devotion to external objects, but not by hatred, return to this world and are born in every age. 29. As the result of their works, and of their destination, (returning) from the Janaloka, they are born of the same character (as before), in consequence of the (previous) deeds by which they are bound. 167 30. It is to be understood that the cause of this is their tendency (or fate), which itself is the result of works. In consequence of these works, good or bad, they return from Janaloka and are born. (31) and receive various bodies in (different) wombs. They are produced again and again in all states, from that of gods to that of motionless substances. 32. These creatures, as they are born time after time, receive the same functions as they had obtained in each previous creation. 33. Destructiveness and undestructiveness, mildness and cruelty, righteousness and unrighteousness, truth and falsehood-actuated by such dispositions as these, they obtain (their several conditions); and hence particular actions are agreeable to particular creatures. 34. And in succeeding periods they for the most part obtain the forms and the names which they had in the past Kalpas. 35. Hence they obtain the same names and forms. In the different Kalpas they are born with the same name and form. 36. Afterwards, when the creation had been suspended, as Brahmā was desirous to create, (37) and, fixed in his design, was meditating upon offspring,he created from his mouth a thousand couples of living beings, (38) who were born with an abundance of goodness (sattra) and full of intelligence.108 He then created another thousand couples from his breast: (39) they all abounded in passion (rajas) and were both vigorous and destitute of vigour. 100 After creating from his thighs another thousand pairs, (40) in whom both passion and darkness (tamas) prevailed, and who are described as active,—he formed from his feet yet another thousand couples (41) who were all full of darkness, inglorious, and of little vigour. Then the creatures sprung from the couples (or thus produced in couples) rejoicing, (42) and filled with mutual love, began to cohabit. From that period sexual intercourse is said to have arisen in this Kalpa. 43. But at that time women had no monthly discharge: and they consequently bore no children, although cohabit-

¹⁶⁷ Karma-samsaya-bandhanāt. I am unable to state the sense of samsaya in this compound.

¹⁶⁸ Suchetasah. The reading of the Märk. P. sutejasah, "full of vigour," is recommended, as an epithet of the Brähmans, by its being in opposition to alpa-tajasah, "of little vigour," which is applied to the S'ūdras a few lines below.

¹⁰⁹ The reading of the Mark. P. amarshinah, "irascible," gives a better sense than asushminah, "devoid of vigour," which the Vayu P. has.

ation was practised. 44. At the end of their lives they once bore twins. Weak-minded boys and girls were produced when (their parents) were on the point of death. 45. From that period commenced, in this Kalpa, the birth of twins; and such offspring was once only born to these creatures by a mental effort, in meditation (46),—(offspring which was) receptive (?) of sound and the other objects of sense, pure, and in every case distinguished by five marks. Such was formerly the early mental creation of Prajapati. 47. Those creatures by whom the world was replenished, born as the descendants of this stock, frequented rivers, lakes, seas, and mountains. 48. In that age (yuga) they lived unaffected by excessive cold or heat, and appropriated the food which was produced from the essences of the earth. 49. They acted according to their pleasure, existing in a state of mental perfection. They were characterized neither by righteousness nor unrighteousness; were marked by no distinctions. 50. In that Krita yuga, in the beginning of the Kalpa, their age, happiness, and form were alike: they were neither righteous nor unrighteous. 51. In the Krita age they were produced each with authority over himself. Four thousand years, according to the calculation of the gods, (52) and four hundred years for each of the morning and evening twilights, are said to form the first, or Krita. age. 170 Then, although these creatures were multiplied by thousands, (53) they suffered no impediment, no susceptibility to the pairs of opposites (pleasure and pain, cold and heat, etc.) and no fatigue. They frequented mountains and seas, and did not dwell in houses. 54. They never sorrowed, were full of goodness (sattva), and supremely happy; acted from no impulse of desire, 171 and lived in continual delight. There were at that time no beasts, birds, reptiles, or plants. 178 (for these things are produced by unrighteousness), 173 (56) no roots, fruits, ¹⁷⁰ The first of the verses, which will be quoted below, in a note on verse 63, from the Märk. P., seems to be more in place than the description of the Krita age given here, of which the substance is repeated in verses 68 and 69.

¹⁷¹ Perhaps we should read here nikāma-chārinyo instead of nishkāma-: if so, the sense will be, "they moved about at will."

¹⁷² The text adds here nārakāḥ or narakāḥ, which may mean "hellish creatures."
173 This, although agreeing with what is said further on in verses 82, 133, and 155, does not seem in consonance with what is stated in the Vishnu Purāṇa, verse 45, where it is declared: oshadhyaḥ phala-mūlinyo romabhyas tasya jajnire | tretā-yugamukhe Brahmā kalpasyādau dvijottama | srishṭvā paśv-oshadhīḥ samyag yuyoja sa
tadā 'dhvare | "Plants bearing roots and fruits sprang from his hairs. At the com-flowers, productions of the seasons, nor seasons. The time brought with it every object of desire and every enjoyment. There was no excess of heat or cold. 57. The things which these people desired sprang up from the earth everywhere and always, when thought of. and had a powerful relish. 58. That perfection of theirs both produced strength and beauty, and annihilated disease. With bodies, which needed no decoration, they enjoyed perpetual youth. 59. From their pure will alone twin children were produced. Their form was the same. They were born and died together. 60. Then truth, contentment. patience, satisfaction, happiness, and self-command prevailed. They were all without distinction in respect of form, term of life, disposition and actions. 61. The means of subsistence were produced spontaneously without forethought on their parts. In the Krita age they engaged in no works which were either virtuous or sinful. 62. And there were then no distinctions of castes or orders, and no mixture of castes. Men acted towards each other without any feeling of love or hatred. 63. In the Krita age they were born alike in form and duration of life, without any distinction of lower and higher,174 with abundant happiness, free from grief, (64) with hearts continually exulting, great in dignity mencement of the Treta age Brahma-having at the beginning of the Kalpa created animals and plants -employed them in sacrifice." Although the order of the words renders the sense in some degree uncertain, it appears to be that which Prof. Wilson assigns in his translation (i. 84), "Brahma, having created, in the commencement of the Kalpa, various [animals and] plants, employed them in sacrifices in the beginning of the Treta age." This interpretation is supported by the Commentator, who remarks: Tad evam kalpasyādāv eva pašūn oshadhīs cha srishtvā 'nantaram tretā-yuga-mukhe prapte sati sumyag gramyaranya-vyasthaya tada 'dhvare sanataya (samyaktaya?) yuyoja krita-yuge yajnasyapravritteh | "Having then thus at the very beginning of the Kalpa created animals and plants, he afterwards, when the commencement of the Treta age arrived, employed them properly, according to the distinction of domestic and wild, in sacrifice, -since sacrifice did not prevail in the Krita age." This agrees with the course of the preceding narrative which makes no allusion to plants and animals having been produced in a different Yuga from the other beings whose creation had been previously described. (See Wilson i. 82-84.) The parallel passage in the Vayu P. x. 44-46, is confused.

174 The Mark. P. xlix. 24 inserts here the following lines: "They lived for four thousand years of mortals, as the measure of their existence, and suffered no calamities from distress. 25. In some places the earth again enjoyed prosperity in every respect. As through lapse of time the creatures were destroyed, so too those perfections everywhere gradually perished. 26. When they had all been destroyed, creeping plants fell from the sky, which had nearly the character of Kalpa-trees (i.e. trees which yield all that is desired), and resembled houses."

and in force. There existed among them no such things as gain or loss, friendship or enmity, liking or dislike. 65. It was through the mind (alone, i.e. without passion?) that these disinterested beings acted towards each other. They neither desired anything from one another; nor shewed any kindness to each other. 175 Contemplation is declared to be supreme in the Krita age, knowledge in the Treta; sacrifice began in the Dvapara; liberality is the highest merit in the Kali. 67. The Krita age is goodness (sattva), the Tretā is passion (rajas), the Dvāpara is passion and darkness (tamas), in the Kali it is to be understood that darkness (prevails), according to the necessary course of these ages. 68. The following is the time in the Krita age: understand its amount. Four thousand years constitute the Krita; (69) and its twilights endure for eight hundred divine years. Then their life was (so long?) 176 and no distresses or calamities befel them. 70. Afterwards, when the twilight in the Krita was gone, the righteousness peculiar to that age was in all respects reduced to a quarter (of its original sum). 71. When further the twilight had passed, at the close of the Yuga, and the righteousness peculiar to the twilight had been reduced to a quarter, (72) and when the Krita had thus come altogether to an end, - then perfection vanished. When this mental perfection had been destroyed, there arose (73) another perfection formed in the period of the Treta age. The eight mental perfections, which I declared (to have existed) at the ereation, (74) were gradually extinguished. At the beginning of the Kalpa mental perfection alone (existed), viz., that which existed in the Krita age. 75. In all the Manvantaras there is declared to arise a perfection proceeding from works, produced by the discharge of the duties belonging to castes and orders, according to the fourfold division of Yugas. 76. The (morning) twilight (deteriorates) by a quarter of the (entire) Krita,—and the evening twilight by (another) quarter; -(thus) the Krita, the morning twilight, and the evening

¹⁷⁶ This representation of the condition of mankind during the Krita age, the period of ideal goodness, was no doubt sketched in conformity with the opinions which prevailed at the period when the Purana was compiled; when dispassion was regarded as the highest state of perfection.

¹⁷⁶ It would seem as if the writer here meant to state that the period of life was that which in the verse of the Märk. P. (xlix. 24), quoted in the note on verse 63, it is declared to have been. But the expression here is, from some cause or other, imperfect.

twilight (together) deteriorate successively to the extent of three quarters, in the duties peculiar to the Yuga, and in austere fervour. sacred knowledge, strength, and length of life.177 Then after the evening of the Krita had died out, (78) the Treta age succeeded,-(which) the most excellent rishis regarded as the evening of the Krita. But when the evening of the Krita had died out, (79) from the influence of time, and for no other reason, perfection disappeared from among the creatures who survived at the commencement of the Treta age which ensued at the beginning of the Kalpa. 80. When that perfection had perished, another perfection arose. The subtile form of water having returned in the form of cloud (to the sky), 178 (81) rain began to be discharged from the thundering clouds. The earth having once received that rain, (82) trees resembling houses 179 were provided for these creatures. From them all means of enjoyment were produced. 83. Men derived their subsistence from them at the beginning of the Treta. Subsequently, after a great length of time, owing to their ill fortune, (84) the passions of desire and covetousness arose in their hearts uncaused. The monthly discharge, which occurred at the end of women's lives, (85) did not then take place: but as it commenced again, owing to the force of the age (yuga), (86) and as the couples, in consequence of it, began to cohabit, and approached each other monthly, from necessity occasioned by the time, -(87) an unseasonable 179 a production of the monthly discharge, and of pregnancy ensued. Then through their misfortune, and owing to that fated time, (88) all those house-like trees perished. When these had been destroyed, men disturbed and agitated, (89) but genuine in their desire, longed after that perfection (which they had lost). Then those houselike trees appeared to them; (90) and among their fruits yielded clothes and jewels. On these trees too, in the hollow of every leaf, there was produced, (91) without the aid of bees, honey of great poteney, having scent, colour, and flavour. By this means they subsisted at the beginning of the Treta, (92) delighted with this per-¹⁷⁷ Such is the only sense I can extract from these rather obscure lines.

¹⁷⁸ Such is the only sense of the words here rendered which occurs to me.

¹⁷⁹ Griha-samsthitah. Professor Wilson, in his Dictionary, gives "like, resembling," among the meanings of samsthita.

 $^{^{179}}a$ Instead of $\check{a}k\check{a}le$, "out of season," Professor Aufrecht suggests $\check{a}k\check{a}le$, "in season," as the proper reading.

fection and free from trouble. Again, through the lapse of time, becoming greedy, (93) they seized by force those trees, and that honey produced without bees. And then, owing to that misconduct of theirs, occasioned by cupidity, (94) the Kalpa trees, together with their honey, were in some places destroyed. As but little of it 180 remained, owing to the effects of the period of twilight, (95) the pairs (of opposites, as pleasure and pain, etc.) arose in men when existing (in this state); and they became greatly distressed by sharp cold winds, and heats. 96. Being thus afflicted by these opposites, they adopted means of shelter: and to counteract the opposites they resorted to houses. 97. Formerly they had moved about at their will, and had not dwelt at all in houses: but subsequently they abode in dwellings, as they found suitable and pleasant, (98) in barren deserts, in valleys, on mountains, in caves; and took refuge in fortresses,—(in a) desert with perpetual water. 181 99. As a protection against cold and heat they began to construct houses on even and uneven places, according to opportunity and at their pleasure. 100. They then measured out towns, cities, villages, and private apartments, according to the distribution of each." [The following verses 101-107 give an account of the different measures of length and breadth, which is followed, in verses 108-122, by a description of the various kinds of fortresses, towns, and villages, their shapes and sizes, and of roads. The author then proceeds in verse 123:7 "These places having been made, they next constructed houses; and as formerly trees existed, formed like houses, 182 (124) so did they (now) begin to erect them, after repeated consideration. (Some) boughs are spread out, others are bent down, (125) others rise upwards, while others again stretch horizontally. After examining thus by reflection how the different boughs of trees branch out, (126) they constructed in like manner the apartments $(\hat{s}akhah)$ (of their houses): hence they ¹⁸⁰ "Perfection" seems to be here intended. If so, it would seem as if this line had been separated from its proper context.

¹⁸¹ Dhanvānam sāsvatodakam. Perhaps we should read here with the Mārk. P. xlix. 35, vārkshyam pārvatam audakam "(fortresses) protected by trees, built on mountains, or surrounded by water."

¹⁸² Whatever may be thought of this rendering of the phrase, <code>crikshāh gṛihasam-sthitāh</code>, the Mārk. P. (xlix. 52), at least, is quite clear: <code>gṛihākārā yathā pūrvam teshām āsan mahīruhāh | tathā samsmritya tat sarvam chakrur vesmāni tāḥ prajāḥ | "As they had formerly had trees with the shape of houses, so recalling all that to mind, these people built their dwellings."</code>

are called rooms (śālāħ).188 In this way rooms and houses derive their appellation from branches. 127. Hence rooms are called śālā, and in that their character as rooms (sālātvam) consists. And inasmuch as the mind takes pleasure in them, and as they have gladdened (prāsādayan), the mind, (128) houses, rooms, and palaces are termed respectively griha, śālā, and prāsāda. Having adopted these means of defence against the 'opposites,' they devised methods of subsistence. 129. The kalpa-trees having been destroyed along with their honey, those creatures, afflicted with thirst and hunger, became disquieted by dejection. 130. Then again another perfection arose for them in the Tretā age, - which fulfilled the purpose of subsistence, -viz., rain at their pleasure. 131. The rain-water, which flowed into the hollows, burst out in the form of springs, water-courses, and rivers, 184 through the rain. 132. Thus at the second fall of rain rivers began to flow. When the drops of water first reached the ground, then (133) from the conjunction of the waters and the earth plants sprang up among them, which bore both flowers, roots, and fruits. 134. Fourteen kinds of plants, cultivated and wild, were produced without ploughing or sowing, as well as trees and shrubs which bore flowers and fruit at the proper season. 135. This was the first appearance of plants in the Tretā age, and by them men subsisted at that period. 136. Then there again arose among them, universally, desire and cupidity, through a necessary process, and as a result of the Treta age. 137. They then appropriated to themselves, by force and violence, rivers, fields, hills, trees, shrubs, and plants. 138. Those perfect beings, who were described by me as existing formerly in the Krita, - the mind-born children of Brahma, who had been produced in this world when they came from the Janaloka, -(139) who were (some) tranquil, (some) fiery, (some) active, and (others) distressed,—were again born in the Tretā. (140) as Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, Sūdras, and injurious men. governed by the good and bad actions (performed) in former births. 141. Then those who were weaker than they, being truthful and innocent, dwelt among them, free from cupidity, and self-restrained; (142) whilst others, less glorious than they, took and did. When they had thus become opposed to each other,—(I43) through their misconduct, while they struggled together, the plants were destroyed, being seized with their fists like gravel. 144. Then the earth swallowed up the fourteen kinds of cultivated and wild plants, in consequence of the influence exerted by the Yuga: for men had seized again and again the fruit, together with the flowers and leaves. 145. After the plants had perished, the famished people, becoming bewildered, repaired to Svayambhū the lord of creatures, (146) in the beginning of the Tretā age, seeking the means of subsistence. Learning what they desired, (147) and determining by intuition what was proper to be done, the Lord Brahmā Svayambhū, knowing that the plants had been swallowed up by the earth, milked them back. 148. Taking Sumeru as a calf, he milked this earth. When this earth (or cow) 157 was milked by him, roots were produced again in the ground,—(149) those plants, whereof hemp is the seventeenth, which end with the ripening of fruits." The plants fit for domestic use, and for sacrifice are then enumerated in verses 150-155.] "155. All these plants, domestic and wild, were for the first time 188 produced at the beginning of the Treta age, (156) without cultivation, trees, shrubs, and the various sorts of creepers and grasses, both those which produce roots as their fruits, and those which bear fruit after flowering. The seeds for which the earth was formerly milked by Svayambhū (158) now became plants bearing flowers and fruits in their season. When these plants, though created, did not afterwards grow, (159) the divine Brahmā Svayambhū devised for the people means of subsistence depending on labour effected by their hands. 160. From that time forward the plants were produced and ripened through cultivation. The means of subsistence having been provided, Svayambhū (161) established divisions among them according to their tendencies. 189 Those of them who were rapacious, and destructive, (162) he ordained to be Kshattriyas, protectors of the others.100 As many men as attended on these, fearless, (163) speaking truth and propounding sacred knowledge (brahma) with exactness, (were made) Brāhmans. Those others of them who had previously been feeble, engaged in the work of slaughter,191 who, as cultivators (kīnāśāḥ), had been destructive, and were active in connection with the ground, were called Vaisyas, husbandmen (kīnāśān), providers of subsistence. 165. And he designated as Sudras those who grieved (sochantah), and ran (dravantah), 192 who were addicted to menial tasks, inglorious and feeble.

¹⁸³ The reasoning here does not seem very cogent, as the two words $s\bar{a}kh\bar{a}$ and $s\bar{a}t\bar{a}$ do not appear to have any close connection. But such unsuccessful attempts at etymology are frequent in Sanskrit works.

¹⁸⁴ The text here does not seem to be in a satisfactory state. The Calc. edition of the Märk. P. reads vrishtyävaruddhair abhavat, etc.

185 It is difficult to extract any satisfactory sense out of this line.

187 Gauh means both.

¹⁸⁶ The S'. P. Br. ii. 4, 2, 1, also speaks of different classes of creatures applying to the creator for food: Prajapatim vai bhūtany upasīdan | prajah vai bhūtani | "vi no dhehi yatha jivama" iti | tato deva yajnopavitino bhutva dakshinam janv achya upasīdan | tān abravīd " yajno vo 'nnam amritatvam va ūrg vah sūryo vo jyotir" iti | 2. Atha enam pitarah prachinavitinah savyam janv achya upasidan | tan abravid "māsi māsi vo 'sanām svadhā vo manojavo vas' chandramā vo jyotir" iti | 3. Atha enam manushyāh prāvritāh upastham kritvā upāsīdan | tān abravīt "sāyam prātar vo'sanam prajah vo mrityur vo'gnir vo jyotir" iti | 4. Atha enam pasavah upasidan | tebhyah svaisham eva chakara " yada eva yuyam kadacha labhadhvai yadi kale yady anākāle atha eva asnātha" iti | tasmād ete yadā kadācha labhante yadi kāle yady anākāle atha eva asnanti | 5. Atha ha enam sas'vad apy asurāh upasedur ity āhuh | tebhyas tamas cha māyām cha pradadāu | asty aha eva asura-māyā iti iva | parābhūtā ha tv eva tāḥ prajāḥ | tāḥ imāḥ prajās tathaiva upajīvanti yathaiva ābhyaḥ Prajāpatir adadāt | "All beings resorted to Prajāpati, - (creatures are beings), - (saving) 'provide for us that we may live.' Then the gods, wearing the sacrificial cord, and bending the right knee, approached him. To them he said, 'let sacrifice be your food, your immortality your strength, the sun your light.' 2. Then the Fathers, wearing the sacrificial cord on their right shoulders, and bending the left knee, approached him. To them he said, 'you shall eat monthly, your oblation (svadha) shall be your rapidity of thought, the moon your light.' 3. Then men, clothed, and inclining their bodies, approached him. To them he said, 'ye shall eat morning and evening, your offspring shall be your death, Agni your light.' 4. Then cattle repaired to him. To them he accorded their desire, (saying), 'Whensoever ye find anything, whether at the proper season or not, eat it.' Hence whenever they find anything, whether at the proper season or not, they eat it. 5. Then they say that the Asuras again and again resorted to him. To them he gave darkness (tamas) and illusion. There is, indeed, such a thing as the illusion, as it were, of the Asuras. But those creatures succumbed. These creatures subsist in the very manner which Prajapati allotted to them."

¹⁵⁸ See the note on verse 55, above.

¹⁸⁹ Yathārarabhāḥ. The Mark. P. has yathā-nyāyam yathā-guṇam, "according to fitness and their qualities."

¹⁹⁰ Itareshām krita-trāṇān. The M. Bh. xii. 2247, thus explains the word Kshattriya: brāhmaṇānām kshata-trāṇāt tataḥ kshattriya uchyate | "(a king) is called Kshattriya because he protects Brāhmans from injuries."

¹⁹¹ Vaisasam karma. The former word has the senses of (1) "hindrance, impediment," and (2) "slaughter," assigned to it in Wilson's Dictionary.

Professor Wilson's Dictionary on Indian authority, will not be surprised at the absurdity of the attempts made here by the Purana-writer to explain the origin of the words Kshattriya, Vaisya and S'ūdra. To account for the last of these names he combines the roots s'uch, "to grieve," and dru, "to run," dropping, however, of necessity the last letter (ch) of the former. The word kshattriya is really derived from kshattra, "royal power;" and vaisya comes from vis, "people," and means "a man of the people."

166. Brahmā determined the respective functions and duties of all these persons. But after the system of the four castes had been in all respects established, (167) those men from infatuation did not fulfil their several duties. Not living conformably to those class-duties, they came into mutual conflict. 168. Having become aware of this fact, precisely as it stood, the Lord Brahmā prescribed force, criminal justice, and war, as the profession of the Kshattriyas. 169. He then appointed these, viz., the duty of officiating at sacrifices, sacred study, and the receipt of presents, to be the functions of Brahmans. 170. The care of cattle, traffic, and agriculture, he allotted as the work of the Vaisyas; and the practice of the mechanical arts, and service, he assigned as that of the Südras. 171. The duties common to Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, and Vaisyas were the offering of sacrifice, study, and liberality. 172. Having distributed to the classes their respective functions and occupations, the Lord then allotted to them abodes in other worlds for their perfection. 173. The world of Prajapati is declared to be the (destined) abode of Brāhmans practising rites; Indra's world that of Kshattriyas who do not flee in battle; (174) the world of the Maruts that of Vaisvas who fulfil their proper duty; the world of the Gandharvas that of men of Sūdra birth who abide in the work of service. 175. Having allotted these as the future abodes of (the men of the different) classes, who should be correct in their conduct, he ordained orders (āśramas) in the classes which had been established. 176. The Lord formerly instituted the four orders of householder, religious student, dweller in the woods, and mendicant. 177. To those of them who do not in this world perform the duties of their castes, the men who dwell in hermitages apply the appellation of 'destroyer of works.' 178. Brahmā established these orders by name, and in explanation of them he declared their duties, (179) their methods of procedure, and their various rites. First of all there is the order of householder, which belongs to all the four classes, (180) and is the foundation and source of the other three orders. I shall declare them in order with their several obserservances." [The following verses 181-189, which detail these duties, need not be cited here. I shall, however, quote verses 190 ff. for their excellent moral tone. 7 "190. The Vedas, with their appendages, sacrifices, fasts, and ceremonies, (191) avail not to a depraved man, when his disposition has become corrupted. All external rites are fruitless (192) to one who is inwardly debased, however energetically he may perform them. A man who bestows even the whole of his substance with a defiled heart will thereby acquire no merit-of which a good disposition is the only cause." [After giving some further particulars about the celestial abodes of the righteous, verses 194-198, the writer proceeds: "199. When-after the division into castes and orders had thus been made—(200) the people living under that system did not multiply, Brahmā formed other mind-born creatures in the middle of the Treta (201) from his own body and resembling himself. When the Tretā age had arrived, and had gradually reached its middle, (202) the Lord then began to form other mind-born creatures. next formed creatures in whom goodness (sattva) and passion (rajas) predominated, (203) and who were capable of attaining (the four objects of human pursuit) righteousness, wealth, love, and final liberation, together with the means of subsistence. Gods, too, and Fathers, and Rishis, and Manus (were formed), (204) by whom these creatures were classified (?) according to their natures in conformity with the Yuga. When this character(?) of his offspring had been attained, Brahmā (205) longed after mental offspring of all kinds and of various forms. creatures, whom I described to you as having taken refuge in Janaloka, (206) at the end of the Kalpa, all these arrived here, when he thought upon them, in order to be reproduced in the form of gods and other beings. 207. According to the course of the Manvantaras the least were esteemed the first (?), being swayed by destiny, and by connections and circumstances of every description. 208. These creatures were always born, under the controlling influence of, and as a recompence for their good or bad deeds. 209. He by himself formed those creatures which arrived in their several characters of gods, asuras, fathers, cattle, birds, reptiles, trees, and insects, in order that they might be subjected (anew) to the condition of creatures."198

The substance of the curious speculations on the origin and primeval condition of mankind contained in the preceding passage may be stated as follows: In verses 22-34 we are told that the creatures, who at the close of the preceding Kalpa had been driven by the mundane conflagration to Janaloka, now formed the seed of the new creation, which took place in the Krita Yuga, at the commencement of the present 193 I confess that I have had great difficulty in attaching any sense to the last words.

Kalpa. These were mind-born sons of Brahmā, perfect in nature, and they peopled the world. As a rule, we are informed, those beings who have formerly been elevated from the earth to higher regions, return again and again to this world, and, as a result of their previous works, are born in every age, in every possible variety of condition, exhibiting the same dispositions and fulfilling the same functions as in their former states of existence. It is next stated, verses 35-40, that when creation had, in some way not explained, come to a stand-still, four classes of human beings, consisting each of a thousand pairs of males and females, characterized respectively by different qualities, physical and moral, were produced from different members of the Creator's body. 194 These creatures sought to propagate the race, but abortively, for the reason specified (43). Children however were produced by mental effort (45 and 59), and in considerable numbers (52). The state of physical happiness, absolute and universal equality, moral perfection, and complete dispassion, in which mankind then existed, is depicted (48-65). The means of subsistence and enjoyment, which they are said to have drawn from the earth (48 and 57), were not, of the ordinary kind, as we are informed (55 f.) that neither animals nor plants, which are the products of unrighteousness, existed at that period. No division into castes or orders prevailed during that age of perfection (62). A gradual declension, however, had been going on, and at the end of the Krita Yuga, the perfection peculiar to it had altogether disappeared (70-79). Another kind of perfection, peculiar to the Treta, however, subsequently arose (73 and 80), and in the different Yugas there has existed a perfection springing from the performance of the duties belonging to each caste and order (75). The perfection described as prevailing in the Treta was of a physical kind, consisting in the production of rain and the growth of trees, shaped like houses, which at the same time vielded the materials of all sorts of enjoyments (80-82). Passion, however, in its various forms began to take the place of the previous dispassion (84). The constitution of women, which had formerly incapacitated them for effective impregnation, became ultimately so modified as to ensure the successful propagation of the species, which accordingly proceeded (84-87).195 We have then the destruction, and subsequent reproduction of the trees, formed like houses, described (88-91). These trees now produced clothes and jewels, as well as honey without bees, and enabled mankind to live in happiness and enjoyment. Again, however, the trees disappeared in consequence of the cupidity which led to their misuse (92-94). The absence of perfection occasioned suffering of various kinds, from moral as well as physical causes, and men were now driven to construct houses, which they had hitherto found unnecessary (96-99 and 123), and to congregate in towns and cities (100). Their houses were built after the model furnished by trees (123-128). The hunger and thirst which men endured from the loss of the trees which had formerly yielded all the means of subsistence and enjoyment, were relieved by means of a new perfection which appeared in the shape of rain, and the streams thereby generated, and by the growth of plants, which now sprang up for the first time as a result of the conjunction of water and earth (130-135 and 155). Desire and cupidity, however, now again arose and led to acts of violent appropriation (136 f.). At this juncture the perfect mindborn sons of Brahma, of different dispositions, who had formerly existed in the Krita age, were reproduced in the Treta as Brahmans, Kshattrivas, Vaisvas, Sūdras, and destructive men, as a result of their actions in their former existence (138-140). But in consequence of their dissensions and rapacity, the earth swallowed up all the existing plants (142-144). Under the pressure of the distress thus occasioned the inhabitants of the earth resorted to Brahmā, who milked the earth, through the medium of mount Sumeru acting as a calf, and recovered the plants which had disappeared (145-149). As, however, these plants did not propagate themselves spontaneously, Brahmā introduced agriculture (158-160). Having thus provided the means of subsistence, he divided the people into classes according to their characteristics (160-165). But as these classes did not perform their several duties, and came into mutual conflict, Brahmā prescribed their respective functions with greater precision (166-171); and assigned the future celestial abodes which the members of each class might attain by their fulfilment (172-174). He then ordained the four orders of householder, religious student, etc. (175-190). After a few verses in praise of moral purity (190-193), the abodes and destinies of the eminently righteous are set forth (194-199). Just when we had arrived at a point in the narrative, from which we might have imagined that it had only to be carried on further to afford us a sufficient explanation of the state of things existing up to the present age, we are suddenly arrested (199-202) by being informed that the people distributed according to the system of castes and orders did not multiply, and are introduced to a new mindborn creation, which took place in the Treta age, to remedy this failure. We are next told (203) of what appears to be another creation of beings endowed with goodness and passion. And, finally, a yet further re-incorporation of previously existing souls is described as having taken place (205-209). It would thus seem that after all we are left without any account of the origin of the system of castes which prevailed when the Purana was compiled. The only suppositions on which this conclusion can be avoided are either (1) that the cessation in the increase of the generation alluded to in verse 200, which led to the new creation, was not universal, that the race than existing did not entirely die out, but that the old blood was re-invigorated by that of the newly created beings; or (2) that the other set of creatures, mentioned in verse 203, as characterized by goodness and passion, were the progenitors of the present race of men. On these points, however, the text throws no light.

¹⁹⁴ This statement agrees with that in the Märk. P. xlix. 3 ff. but differs from that already given from the Vishnu P. in so far as the latter does not specify the numbers created, or say anything about pairs being formed.

¹⁹⁵ It is not quite clear, however, what is intended by the word akāle, "out of season," in verse 87. See the emendation proposed above in the note on that verse.

The preceding account of the creation of mankind and of the vicissitudes and deterioration of society, is in some places obscure and confused, and its several parts do not appear to be consistent with each other. At the outset the writer describes the creation of four thousand pairs of human beings, of whom each separate set of one thousand is distinguished by widely different innate characters, the first class having the quality of goodness, the second that of passion, the third those of passion and darkness, and the fourth that of darkness. Nevertheless (as in the parallel passage of the Vishnu Purāṇa) we cannot find in the narrative the least trace of those inherent differences of character having for a long time manifested themselves by producing dissimilarity either of moral conduct or of physical condition; for the perfection, which is described as existing in the Kṛita age, is spoken of as if it was universal; and not only is no distinction alluded to as prevailing at this period between the component parts of society, but we are expressly told that no castes or orders then existed. The deterioration also, which ensued towards the end of the Krita age, is described as general, and not peculiar to any class. How is this complete uniformity, first of perfection, and afterwards of declension, which, for anything that appears to the contrary, is predicated of the descendants of the whole of the four thousand pairs, to be reconciled with the assertion that each thousand of those pairs was characterized by different innate qualities? The difficulty is not removed by saying that the writer supposed that these inherent varieties of character existed in a latent or dormant state in the different classes, and were afterwards developed in their descendants; for he distinctly declares (verse 54) in general terms that mankind were at that period sattva-bahulah, i.e. "possessed the quality of goodness in abundance;" and in the earlier part of the subsequent narrative no allusion is made to the different qualities at first ascribed to the four sets of a thousand pairs being separately developed in the members of the four classes respectively. In verse 74, indeed, it appears to be assumed that the division into castes had existed from the creation; for we there find an assertion that in "all the Manvantaras, according to the division of the four yugas," (including apparently the Krita) "there is declared to have existed a perfection effected by the observances of the castes and orders, and arising from the fulfilment of works;" but how is this to be reconciled with the express statement of verses 60 and 61, that "in the Krita age no works were performed which were either virtuous or sinful," and that "there then existed neither distinctions of caste or order, nor any mixture of castes?" In the Treta age the state of deterioration continued, but no reference is made of any separation of classes till we come to verse 138, where it is said that the beings who in the Krita age had existed as the perfect mind-born sons of Brahmā, were now, as a consequence of their former actions, recalled into human existence, and in conformity with their previous characters as calm, fiery, laborious, or depressed, became Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaisyas, Sūdras, and men of violence. These creatures, after they had been furnished with the means of subsistence, were eventually divided into classes, according to their varieties of disposition, character, and occupation; and as at first they did not fulfil their proper duties, but encroached upon each others' provinces, their functions were afterwards more stringently defined and the means of enforcing obedience were provided. Here it is intimated that different sets of beings were born as Brahmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and Sudras, on account of the different qualities which they had manifested in a previous existence, and that in conformity with those same characteristics they were afterwards formally distributed into castes. This description is therefore so far consistent with itself. The difference of caste is made to depend upon the dispositions of the soul. But how are we to reconcile this postulation of different characters formerly exhibited with the description given in the previous part of the narrative, where we are informed that, in the earlier parts, at least, of the Krita age, all men were alike perfect, and that no actions were performed which were either virtuous or vicious? If such was the case at that period, how could the beings who then existed have manifested those differences of disposition and character which are asserted to have been the causes of their being subsequently reborn as Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Sūdras, and Vaisvas? It may be admitted that the differences of character, which are attributed in the Purana to the four primeval sets of a thousand pairs of human beings, correspond to those qualities which are described as having subsequently given rise to the division into castes; but the assertion of such a state of uniform and universal perfection, as is said to have intervened between the creation of mankind and the realization of caste, seems incompatible with the existence of any such original distinctions of a moral character.

As regards this entire account when compared with the other two descriptions of the creation given in the previous part of this section, the same remarks are applicable as have been made in the last section, p. 65 f., on the corresponding passages from the Vishnu Purāna.

The chapter which I have just translated and examined, is followed immediately by the one of which I have already in a preceding page quoted the commencement, descriptive of the creation of Asuras, Gods, Fathers, etc., from the different bodies assumed and cast off successively by Brahmā.

I shall now give an extract from the following, or tenth chapter, in which the the legend of Satarūpā is related.

Sūta uvācha | 1. Evambhūteshu lokeshu Brahmanā loka-karttṛiṇā 198 (

¹⁹⁶ This form karttrinā (one which, as is well known, may be optionally employed in yadā tāh na pravarttante prajāh kenāpi hetunā \ 2. Tamo-mātrāvrito Brahmā tadā-prabhriti duhkhitah | tatah sa vidadhe buddhim arthaniśchaya-gāminīm | 3. Athātmani samasrākshīt tamo-mātrām nijātmikām | rajah-sattvam parājitya varttamānam sa dharmatah | 4. Tapyate tena duhkhena śokam chakre jagat patih | tamas tu vyanudat tasmād rajas tach cha samāvrinot | 5. Tat tamah pratinuttam vai mithunam samryajāyata | adharmas charanāj jajne himsā sokād ajāyata | 6. Tatas tasmin samudbhūte mithune charanātmani \ tatas cha bhagavān āsīt prītischainam asisriyat \ 7. Svām tanum sa tato Brahmā tām apohad abhāsvarām | dvidhā 'karot sa tam deham ardhena purusho 'bhavat | 8. Ardhena nārī sā tasya Satarūpā vyajāyata | prākritūm bhūta-dhātrīm tām kāmād vai srishtavān vibhuh | 9. Sā divam prithivīm chaiva mahimnā vyāpya dhishthitā | Brahmanah sā tanuh pūrvā divam āvritya tishthati | 10. Yā tv ardhāt srijate nārī S'atarūpā vyajāyata | sā devī niyatam taptvā tapah parama-duścharam | bharttūram dīptayaśasam Purusham pratyapadyata | 11. Sa vai Svāyambhuvah pūrvam Purusho Manur uchyate | tasyaikasaptati-yugam Manvantaram ihochyate | 12. Labdhvā tu purushah patnīm Satarūpām ayonijām | tayā sa ramate sārddham tasmāt sā Ratir uchyate | 13. Prathamah samprayogah sa kalpādau samavarttata | Virājam asrijad Brahmā so 'bhavat Purusho Virāt | 14. Sa samrāt māsarūpāt tu vairājas tu Manuh smritah | sa vairājah prajā-sargah sa sarge purusho Manuh | 15. Vairājāt purushād vīrāch chhatarūpā vyajāyata | Priyavratottānapādau putrau putravatām varau |

"1. When the worlds had thus been formed by Brahmā their creator, but the creatures, for some reason did not engage in action, ¹⁹⁷ (2) Brahmā, enveloped in gloom, and thenceforward dejected, formed a resolution tending to ascertain the fact. 3. He then created in himself (a body) of his own, formed of pure gloom (tamas), having overpowered the passion (rajas) and goodness (sattva) which existed (in him) naturally.

4. The Lord of the world was afflicted with that suffering, and lathe neuter, but not in the masculine) is here used for metrical reasons. Such irregularities are, as we have seen, designated by the Commentators as $\tilde{a}rsha$. It is unlikely that Brahman should be here used in a neuter sense.

¹⁹⁷ The true reading here may be pravarddhante, in which case the sense will be "did not multiply." Compare the parallel passage in the Vishnu Purana, i. 7, 4, p. 64.

mented.198 He then dispelled the gloom, and covered over the passion. 5. The gloom, when scattered, was formed into a pair. 100 Unrighteousness arose from activity (?), and mischief sprang from sorrow. 6. That active (?) pair having been produced, he became glorious (?) and pleasure took possession of him. 7. Brahmā after that cast off that body of his, which was devoid of lustre, and divided his person into two parts; with the half he became a male (purusha) (8) and with the half a female: it was Satarūpā who was so produced to him. Under the impulse of lust he created her a material supporter of beings. 9. By her magnitude she pervaded both heaven and earth. That former body of Brahmā invests the sky. 10. This divine female Satarūpā, who was born to him from his half, as he was creating, by incessantly practising austere fervour of a highly arduous description, acquired for herself as a husband a Male (purusha) of glorious renown. He is called of old the Male, Manu Svayambhuva; and his period (manvantara) is declared to extend to seventy-one Yugas. 12. This Male, having obtained for his wife, Satarūpā, not sprung from any womb, lived in dalliance with her (ramate); and from this she is called Rati (the female personification of sexual love). 13. This was the first cohabitation practised in the beginning of the Kalpa. created Virāj; he was the Male, Virāj. 14. He is the sovereign (samrāj), from his having the form of a month; and Manu is known as the son of Virāj.200 This creation of living beings is called that of Virāj. In this creation Manu is the male. 15. Satarūpā bore to the heroic Purusha, son of Virāj, two sons, Privavrata and Uttānapāda, the most eminent of these who have sons." This is followed by a further genealogy, into which I will not enter.

By comparing this account with the one extracted above, p. 64 f., from the Vishnu Purāṇa, i. 7, 1 ff., it will be seen that while it makes no allusion to the production of Rudra, as related in the Vishnu Purāṇa (which, as well as the birth of the mental sons of Brahmā, the Vāyu Purāṇa had described in the preceding chapter, verses 67-83), it is somewhat fuller in regard to the legend of Satarūpā; and although it does not allow that Brahmā cohabited with his daughter, and assigns to her another husband, Manu Svāyambhūva, it describes the creator as having been actuated by carnal desire in generating her. I shall give further illustrations of this story in the next section.

¹⁹⁸ With this account of Brahma's dejection and grief the accounts quoted above pp. 68 ff. from the Brahmanas may be compared.

Compare the narrative of the Vishnu Purānu i. 7, 9 ff. quoted in p. 64 f.
 Compare the account given in Manu's Institutes, above, p. 36.

Sect. IX.—Legend of Brahmā and his daughter, according to the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, and of S'atarūpā, according to the Matsya Purāṇa.

The story which forms the subject of the present section is noticed at some length in the fourth volume of this work, pp. 38-46, where one of the oldest passages in which it is related, is quoted from the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, i. 7, 4, 1 ff., together with one of a comparatively late age from the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, iii. 12, 28 ff. As however the legend, though repulsive in its character, is not without interest as illustrating the opinions which Indian mythologists have entertained regarding their deities, I shall quote two other texts in which it is narrated.

The first, from the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iii. 33, has, no doubt (along with the passage of the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa just referred to, and another from the same work, xiv. 4, 2, 1 ff., quoted above, in p. 24 ff.), furnished the ideas which are expanded in the later versions of the story. It is as follows:

Prajāpatir vai svām duhitaram abhyadhyāyat | Divam ity anye āhur Ushasam ity anye | tām riśyo bhūtvā rohitām bhūtām abhyait | tam devā apaśyan | "akritam vai Prajāpatih karoti" iti | te tam aichhan yah enam ārishyati | etam anyonyasmin na avindan | teshām yā eva ghoratamās tanvah āsams tāh ekadhā samabharan | tāh sambhritāh esha devo'bhavat | tad asya etad bhūtavan-nāma | bhavati vai sa yo'sya etad evam nāma veda | tam devā abruvann "ayam vai Prajāpatir akritam akar imam vidhya" iti | sa "tathā" ity abravīt | "sa vai vo varam vrināi" iti | "vrinīshva" iti | sa etam eva varam avrināta paśūnām ādhipatyam | tad asya etat paśuman-nāma | paśumān bhavati yo'sya etad evam nāma veda | tam abhyāyatya avidhyat | sa viddhah ūrddhve udaprāpatad ityādi²oi |

²⁰¹ See the translation of this passage given by Dr. Haug in his Aitareya Brāhmana

"Prajāpati lusted after his own daughter. Some call her the Sky, others Ushas. Becoming a buck, he approached her after she had become a doe. The gods saw him; (and said) Prajāpati does a deed which was never done (before). They sought some one who should take vengeance on him. Such a person they did not find among themselves. They then gathered together their most dreadful bodies. These when combined formed this god (Rudra). Hence (arises) his name connected with Bhūta (Bhūtapati). That man flourishes some one who thus knows this name of his. The gods said to him, 'This Prajāpati has done a deed which was never done before: pierce him.' He replied, 'so be it,' (adding), 'let me ask a boon of you.' They rejoined, 'ask.' He asked for this boon, viz., lordship over cattle. Hence arises his name connected with Paśu (Paśupati). He who thus knows his name, becomes the owner of cattle. He then attacked (Prajāpati) and pierced him. He, when pierced, soared upwards," etc. etc.

The second passage I proposed to cite is from the Matsya Purāṇa, chapter iii. verses 32 ff.: Etad tattvātmakam kritvā jagad dvedhā ajījanat | 33. Sāvitrīm loka-siddhyartham hridi kritvā samāsthitah | tatah sanjapatas tasya bhitvā deham akalmasham | 34. strī-rūpam arddham akarod arddham purusha-rūpavat | S'atarūpā cha sā khyātā Sāvitrī cha nigadyate | 35. Sarasvaty atha Gāyatrī Brahmāṇī cha parantapa | tatah sa Brahmadevās tām ātmajām ity akalpayat | 36. Drishtvā tām vyathitas tāvat kāma-vāṇārdito vibhuh | "aho rūpam aho rūpam" ity uvācha tadā 'vyayah | 37. Tato Vasishtha-pramukhā "bhaginīm" iti chukruśuḥ | Brahmā na kinchid dadrise tan-mukhālo-kanād rite | 38. "Aho rūpam aho rūpām" iti āha punah punah | tatah praṇāma-namrām tām punas tām abhyalokayat | 39. Atha pradakshiṇām chakre sā pitur varavarṇinī | putrehhyo lajjitasyāsya tad-rūpālokanechhayā | 40. Āvirbhūtam tato vaktram dakshiṇam pāṇḍu-gaṇḍavat |

vol. ii. pp. 218 ff.; and the remarks on this translation by Professor Weber, Indische Studien, ix. 217 ff.; and also Professor Roth's explanation of the word bhūtavat in his Lexicon.

²⁰² This seems to be imitated in the line of the Bhāgavata Purāṇa iii. 12, 30, quoted in vol. iv. of this work, p. 40: naitat pūrvaiḥ kritam tvad ye na karishyanti chāpare | "This was never done by those before thee, nor will those after thee do it."

²⁰³ Bhavati. In the Brähmanas this verb has frequently the sense of prospering, as opposed to parābhavati, "he perishes." See Böthlingk and Roth's Lexicon, s. v., and the passages there referred to.

vismaya-sphurad-oshtham cha pāśchātyam udagāt tatah | 41. Chaturthum abhavat paśchād vāmam kāma-śarāturam | tato 'nyad abhavat tasya kāmāturatayā tathā | 42. Utpatantyās tadā "kāśe ālokena kutūhalāt | srishty-artham yat kritam tena tapah paramadārunam | 43. Tat sarvam nāśam agamat sva-sutopagamechhayā | tenāśu²⁰⁴ vaktram abhavat panchamam tasya dhimatah | 44. Āvirbhavaj jaṭābhiścha tad vaktranchāvrinot prabhuh | tatas tān abravīd Brahmā putrān ātma-samudbhavān | 45. "Prajāh srijadhvam abhitah sa-devāsura-mānushāh" | evam uktās tatah sarve sasrijur vividhah prajah | 46. Gateshu teshu srishtyartham pranāmāvanatām imām | upayeme sa viśvātmā S'atarūpām aninditām | 47. Sambabhūva tayā sārddham atikāmāturo vibhuh | salajjām chakame devah kamalodara-mandire | 48. Yāvad abda-satam divyam yathā 'nyah prākrito janah | tatah kālena mahatā tasyāh putro 'bhavad Manuh | 49. Svāyambhuva iti khyātah sa Virād iti nah śrutam | tad-rūpa-guna-sāmānyād adhipūrusha uchyate | 50. Vairājā yatra te jātāh bahavah samsitavratāh | Svāyambhuvā mahābhāgāh sapta sapta tathā 'pare | 51. Svārochishādyāh sarve te Brahma-tulya-svarūpinah | Auttami-pramukhās tadvad yeshām tvam saptamo 'dhunā | (Adhyāya. 4.) Manur uvācha | 1. Aho kashtataram chaitad angajagamanam vibhoh | Katham na dosham agamat karmanā tena Padmajah | 2. Parasparancha sambandhah saqotrānām abhūt katham | vaivāhikas tat-sutānām chhindi me samsayam vibho | Matsya uvācha | 3. Divyeyam ādi-srishţis tu rajo-guna-samudbhavā | atīndriyendriyā tadvad atīndriya-śarīrikā | 4. Divya-tejomayī bhūpa divya-jnāna-samudbhavā | na chānyair abhitah śakyā jnātum vai māmsa-chakshushā | 5. Yathā bhujangāh sarpānām ākāśe sarva-pakshinām | vidanti mārgām divyānām divyā eva na mānavāķ | 6. Kāryākāryena devāścha śubhāśubha-phala-pradāh | yasmāt tasmād na rājendra tad-vichāro nṛiṇām śubhaḥ | 7. Anyachcha sarva-devānām adhishṭhātā chaturmukhah | gāyatrī Brahmanas tadvad anga-bhūtā nigadyate | 8. Amūrtta-mūrttimad vāpi mithunancha prachakshate | Viranchir yatra bhagavāns tatra devī Sarasvatī | 9. Bhāratī yatra yatraiva tatra tatra Prajāpatih | yathātapena rahitā chhāyā vai (? na) driśyate kvachit | 10. Gāyatrī Brahmanah pārśvam tathaiva na vimunchati | veda-rāśih smrito Brahmā Sāvitrī tad-adhishthitā | 11. Tasmād na kaśchid doshah syāt Sāvitrī-gamane vibhoh | tathāpi lajjāvanatah Prajāpatir abhūt purā | 12. Sva-sutopagamād Brāhmā śaśāpa Kusumāyudham | yasmād mamāpi

²⁰⁴ Instead of tenāśu the Gaikowar MS. reads tenordhva.

bhavatā manaḥ samkshobhitam śaraiḥ | 13. Tasmāt tvad-deham achirād Rudro bhasmīkarishyati | tataḥ prasādayāmāsa Kāmadevas Chaturmu-kham | 14. "Na mām akāraṇam śaptum tvam ihārhasi mām ava | aham evam-vidhaḥ srishṭas tvayaiva chaturānana | 15. Indriya-kshobha-janakaḥ sarveshām eva dehinām | strī-pumsor avichāreṇa mayā sarvatra sarvadā | 16. Kshobhyam manaḥ prayatnena tvayaivoktam purā vibho | tasmād anaparādhena tvayā śaptas tathā vibho | 17. Kuru prasādam bhagavan sva-śarīrāptaye punaḥ | Brahmā uvācha | 18. Vaivasvate 'ntare prāpte Yādavānvaya-sambhavaḥ | Rāmo nāma yadā martyo mat-sattva-balam āśritaḥ | 19. Avatīryyāsura-dhvamsī Dvārakām adhivatsyati | taddhātus tat-samaścha 205 tvam tadā putratvam eshyasi ityādi |

"32. Having thus formed the universe, consisting of the principles, he generated a twofold creation, (33) having, with a view to the completion of the world, placed and kept Sāvitrī in his heart. Then as he was muttering prayers, he divided his spotless body (34) and gave to the half the form of a woman, and to the half that of a male. (This female) is called Satarūpā, Sāvitrī, (35) Sarasvatī, Gāvatrī, and Brahmānī. Brahmā then took her for his daughter. 36. Beholding her, the imperishable deity, distressed, tortured with the arrows of love, exclaimed, 'o what beauty! o what beauty!' 37. Then (his sons) headed by Vasishtha, cried aloud, '(our) sister.' Brahmā saw nothing else, looking only at her face; (38) and exclaimed again and again, 'o what beauty! o what beauty!' He then again gazed upon her, as she bend forward in obeisance. 39. The fair woman then made a circuit round her father. As on account of his sons he felt ashamed; from his desire of gazing on her beauty (40) there appeared (on his head) a southern face with pale cheeks; and there was afterwards manifested a western face with lips quivering with astonishment. 41. A fourth was subsequently formed, beautiful, disquieted by the arrows of love. Then another was produced from the disturbing influence of the same passion, (42) and from eagerness in gazing after her as she rose upwards in the sky. That austere fervour, extremely dreadful, which Brahmā had practised with a view to creation, (43) was entirely lost through his desire to approach his daughter (carnally). Through this was produced speedily the fifth face (or, according to one MS., the upper.

²⁰⁵ Such appears to be the reading of the Gaikowar MS. The original reading of the Taylor MS. has been erased, and another substituted, tatas tat-samaye tvam cha.

the fifth face) of the wise deity, (44) which appeared with matted hair, and which he covered up. Brahmā then said to the sons who had sprung from him, (45) 'create living beings everywhere, gods, asuras, and men.' They, being thus addressed, created beings of various kinds. 46. When they had gone away for the purpose of creating, he, who is the universe, took for his wife the unblamed Satarupa. 47. Sickened with love, he cohabited with her: like any ordinary being, he loved her,-though she was full of shame-embowered in the hollow of a lotus, (48) for a hundred years of the gods. A long time after, a son was born to her, Manu (49) called Svāyambhuva, who, as we have heard, is Virāj. From their community of form and qualities he is called Adhipūrusha.206 50. From him were sprung those numerous Vairājas, steadfast in religious observances, those seven glorious sons of Svayambhū, and those other seven Manus, (51) beginning with Svārochisha and Auttami, in form equal to Brahmā, of whom thou 207 art now the seventh. (4th chapter) 1. Manu says: 'Ah! this is most afflicting, this entrance of love into the god. How was it that the lotus-born did not incur guilt by that act? 2. And how did a matrimonial connection take place between persons of the same family who were sprung from him? Solve this doubt of mine, o Lord. The Fish replied: 3. This primeval creation was celestial, produced from the quality of passion (rajas); it had senses removed beyond the cognizance of sense, and bodies of the same description, (4) was possessed of celestial energy, derived from celestial knowledge, and cannot be perfectly perceived by others with the eye of flesh. 5. Just as serpents know the path of serpents, and (beings living) in the sky know the path of all sorts of birds, so too the celestials alone, and not men, know the way of celestials. 6. And since it is the gods who award the recompence, favourable or unfavourable, according as good or bad deeds have been done,—it is not good for men to examine this (question). 7. Furthermore, the four-faced (Brahmā) is the ruler of all the gods, and in like manner the Gāyatrī is delared to be a member of Brahmā. 8. And, as they say, there is a pair consisting of the formless, and of that which has form. Wherever the divine Viranchi (Brahmā) is, there is also the goddess Sarasvatī. 9. Wherever Bhāratī (a name of Sarasvatī) is, there is also Prajāpati. Just as shadow is nowhere seen without sunshine, (10) so Gāyatrī never forsakes the side of Brahmā. He is called the collected Veda, and Savitri rests upon him; (11) there can therefore be no fault in his approaching her. Nevertheless, Brahmā, the lord of creatures, was bowed down with shame, (12) because he had approached his own daugther, and cursed Kusumāyudha 208 (Kāma), (in these words) 'As even my mind has been agitated by thy arrows, Rudra shall speedily reduce thy body to ashes.' Kāmadeva then propitiated the four-faced deity, saying, (14) 'Thou oughtest not to curse me without cause: preserve me. It is by thee thyself that I have been created with such a character, (15) an agitator of the organs of sense of all embodied creatures. The minds both of men and women must always and everywhere (16) be energetically stirred up by me with out hesitation: this thou thyself hast formerly declared. It is therefore without any fault of mine that I have been thus cursed by thee. 17. Be gracious, lord, that I may recover my body.' Brahmā answered: 18. 'When the Vaivasvata Manvantara shall have arrived, a mortal, named Rāma, sprung from the Yādava race, deriving force from my essence, (19) and, becoming incarnate as a destroyer of Asuras, shall inhabit Dvārakā. Thou shalt then become a son of his substance and like to him," etc.

²⁰⁵ Compare the Purusha Sukta, above p. 8, in the fifth verse of which the words $Vir\bar{q}jo$ $a\bar{d}hi$ $p\bar{u}rushah$ occur. If the last two words are combined they give the name in the text.

²⁰⁷ This account is given by the deity represented as incarnate in a Fish, to Manu Vaivasvata.

The narrator of this legend does not hesitate to depict in the strongest colours (though without the least approach to grossness) the helpless subjection of Brahmā to the influence of sexual desire. This illicit indulgence was regarded by the authors of the Satapatha and Aitareya Brāhmaṇas as in the highest degree scandalous, and they do not attempt to palliate its enormity by any mystical explanation, such as that which we find in the Matsya Purāṇa. Whether this apology proceeded from the original narrator, or from a later writer of a more sensitive disposition, who perceived its inconsistency with any elevated idea of the superior powers, is difficult to say. It is quite possible that the same writer who gave his fancy scope in describing the unbecoming scene, of which the substance had been handed down in works regarded as authoritative, may also have thought it necessary to discover some device for counteracting the scandal. On the other hand, the original writer seems to cut himself off from the privilege of resorting to any mystical refinements to explain away the offence, by having in the first instance represented Brahmā's indulgence as on a level with that of ordinary beings. And even after the apology has been concluded, we are still told that Brahma could not help feeling ashamed of what he had done. The writer of the explanation ought to have perceived that if his defence was of any value, the deity for whom he was apologizing had no ground for humiliation. But he did not venture to expunge the popular features of the story. The grounds on which the apology proceeds are partly of the same character as those which the writer of the Bhagavata Purana assumes in the passage (x. 33, 27 ff.) which is given in the fourth volume of this work, pp. 42 f., viz., that the gods are not to be judged on the same principles as men,—that "the celestials have laws of their own" (sunt superis sua jura). The Bhagavata Purāna has, however, different measures for Brahmā and for Krishna; for whilst the adultery of the latter is defended in the verses just referred to, no desire is shown to vindicate the former in the other passage, iii. 12, 28 ff., adduced in the same volume, page 40.

²⁰⁸ The word means "He whose weapons are flowers."

As regards the details of the story according to the different Purāṇas, I may observe that while the Vishṇu, the Vāyu (see above, pp. 65, and 106), and the Mārkanḍeya Purāṇas, xl. 13 f., represent Satarūpā as the wife of Manu Svāyambhuva, the Matsya Purāṇa, as we have just seen, declares her to have been the spouse of Brahmā himself, and the mother of Manu Svāyambhuva. This is repeated in the twenty-sixth verse of the fourth chapter:

Yā sā dehārddha-sambhūtā Gāyatrī brahma-vādinī | jananī yā Manor devī S'atarūpā S'atendriyā | 27. Ratir Manas Tapo Buddhir mahad-ādisamudbhavā 210 | tataḥ sa S'atarūpāyām̃ saptāpatyāny ajījanat | 28. Ye Marīchyādayaḥ putrāh mūnasās tasya dhīmataḥ | teshām ayam abhūl lokaḥ sarva-jnānātmakaḥ purā | 29. Tato 'srijad Vāmadevam triśūlavara-dhārinam | Sanatkumārancha vibhum pūrveshām api pūrvajam | 30.

²⁰⁰ Compare the account given in Manu's Institutes (above, p. 36), which does not coincide in all particulars with any of the Purāṇas here quoted.

²¹⁰ In this line the original readings are in several places erased in the Taylor MS. I have endeavoured to restore it with the help of the Gaikowar MS.

Vāmadevaš tu bhagavān asrijad mukhato dvijān | rājanyān asrijad bāhvor Viţ-śūdrāv ūru-pādayoḥ | 35. Svāyambhuvo Manur dhīmāms tapas taptvā suduścharam | patnīm avāpa rūpādhyām Anantām nāma nāmataḥ | Priyavratottānapādau Manus tasyām ajījanat |

"She who was produced from the half of his body, Gayatrī the declarer of sacred science, she who was the mother of Manu, the goddess Satarūpā (i.e. having a hundred forms), Satendriyā (i.e. having a hundred senses), (27) (was also) Rati, Mind, Austere Fervour, Intellect, sprung from Mahat and the other principles. He then begot upon Satarūpā seven sons. 28. This world, composed of all knowledge, sprang from Marīchi, and the others who were the mind-born sons of that wise Being. He next created Vāmadeva (Mahādeva), the wielder of the excellent trident, and the lord Sanatkumāra, born before the 30. Then the divine Vāmadeva created Brāhmans from his earliest. mouth, Rajanyas from his breast, the Vis and the Sūdra from his thighs and feet." [After describing in the following verses some other creations of Vāmadeva, the writer proceeds in verse 35:7 "The wise Manu Svāyambhuva, having practised austere fervour of the most arduous kind, obtained a beautiful wife named Ananta. On her he begot Privavrata and Uttānapāda."

Having made Manu the son of Satarūpā, the writer was obliged to give him another female for a wife, as we see he has here done.

It will be observed that in this passage Vāmadeva—and not Brahmā, as in the other Purāṇas—is described as the creator of the four castes.

Sect. X.— Quotations from the Rāmāyaṇa on the Creation, and on the Origin of Castes.

The substance of the first of the following passages has already been stated above in a note on page 36. Part of it is also quoted in p. 54, and it is more fully cited in the fourth volume of this work, p. 29, but for facility of reference I repeat it here.

Rāmāyaṇa (Bombay edition) ii. 110, 1. Kruddham ājnāya Rāmam tu Vasishṭhaḥ pratyuvācha ha | Jābālir api jānīte lokasyāsya gatāgatim | 2. Nivarttayitu-kāmas tu tvām etad vākyam abravīt | imām loka-samutpattim loka-nātha nibodha me | 3. Sarvam salilam evāsīt prithivī tatra nirmitā | tataḥ samabhavat Brahmā Svayambhūr daivataiḥ saha | 4. Sa varāhas tato bhūtvā projjahāra vasundharām | asrijach cha jagat sarvam saha putraiḥ kritātmabhiḥ | 5. Ākāśaprabhavo Brahmā śāśvato nitya avyayaḥ | tasmād Marīchiḥ sanjajne Marīcheḥ Kaśyapaḥ sutaḥ | 6. Vivasvān Kaśyapāj jajne Manur Vaivasvataḥ svayam | sa tu prajāpatiḥ pūrvam Ikshvākus tu Manoḥ sutaḥ | 7. Yasyeyam prathamam dattā samriddhā Manunā mahī | tam Ikshvākum Ayodhyāyām rājānam viddhi pūrvakam |

"1. Perceiving Rāma to be incensed 211 Vasishtha replied: 'Jābāli also knows the destruction and renovation of this world. 2. But he spoke as he did from a desire to induce you to return. Learn from me, lord of the earth, this (account of) the origin of the world. 3. The universe was nothing but water. In it the earth was fashioned. Then Brahmā Svayambhū came into existence, with the deities. He next, becoming a boar, raised up the earth, and created the entire world, with the saints his sons. 5. Brahmā, the eternal, unchanging, and undecaying, was produced from the æther (ākāśa). From him sprang Marīchi, of whom Kaśyapa was the son. 6. From Kaśyapa sprang Vivasvat: and from him was descended Manu, who was formerly the lord of creatures (prajāpati). Ikshvāku²¹² was the son of Manu (7) and to him this prosperous earth was formerly given by his father. Know that this Ikshvāku was the former king in Ayodhyā."

The account which I next quote does not agree with the last in its details, as, besides representing the Prajāpatis or sons of Brahmā to be seventeen in number, it places Marīchi, Kaśyapa, and Vivasvat in the same rank as contemporaries, while the former narrative declares them to have been respectively father, son, and grandson.

Rāmāyaṇa iii. 14, 5. Rāmasya vachanañ śrutvā kulam ātmānam eva cha | āchachakshe dvijas tasmai sarva-bhūta-samudbhavam | 6. Pūrva-kāle mahābāho ye prajāpatayo 'bhavan | tān me nigadataḥ sarvān āditaḥ śriṇu Rāghava | 7. Kardamaḥ prathamas teshāñ Vikṛitas tad-anantaram | S'eshaś cha Saṃśrayaś chaiva Bahuputraś cha vīryavān | 8.

²¹² The name Ikshväku occurs in R. V. x. 60, 4. See Professor Max Müller's article in Journ. Roy. As. Soc. for 1866, pp. 451 and 462.

²¹¹ On account of a materialistic and immoral argument which had been addressed to him by Jābāli to induce him to disregard his deceased father's arrangements regarding the succession to the throne. See Journ. Roy. As. Soc. vol. xix. pp. 303 ff.

Sthānur Marīchir Atriś cha Kratuś chaiva mahābalaḥ | Pulastyaś chānairās chaiva Prachetāh Pulahas tathā | 9. Daksho Vivasvān aparo 'rishtanemiś cha Rāghava | Kaśyapaś cha mahatejās teshām āsīch cha paśchimah | 10. Prajāpates tu Dakshasya babhūvur iti viśrutāh | shashtir duhitaro Rāma yaśasvinyo mahāyasāḥ | 11. Kaśyapah pratijagrāha tāsām ashtau sumadhyamāh | Aditim cha Ditim chaiva Danām api cha Kālakām | 12. Tāmrām Krodhavaśām chaiva Manum 213 chāpy Analām api | tās tu kanyās tatah prītah Kasyapah punar abravīt | 13. Putrāms trailokya-bhartrīn vai janayishyatha mat-samān | Aditis tan-mānāh Rāma Ditischa Danur eva cha | 14. Kālakā cha mahābāho seshās tv amanaso 214 'bhavan | Adityām jajnire devās trayastrimsad arindama | 15. Ādityā Vasavo Rudrā Aśvinau cha parantapa | 29. Manur manushyān janayat Kāśyapasya mahātmanah | brāhmanān kshattriyān vaiśyān śūdrāńś cha manujarshabha | 30. Mukhato brāhmanā jātāh urasah kshattriyas tatha | urubhyam jajnire vaisyah padbhyam śudra iti śrutih | 31. Sarvān punya-phalān vrikshān Analā 'pi vyajāyata |

"5. Having heard the words of Rāma, the bird (Jaṭāyus) made known to him his own race, and himself, and the origin of all beings. 6. Listen while I declare to you from the commencement all the Prajāpatis (lords of creatures) who came into existence in the earliest time. 7. Kardama was the first, then Vikṛita, Sesha, Sam̃sraya, the energetic Bahuputra, (8) Sthānu, Marīchi, Atri, the strong Kratu, Pulastya, Angiras, Prachetas, Pulaha, (9) Daksha, then Vivasvat, Arishṭanemi, and the glorious Kaśyapa, who was the last. 10. The Prajāpati Daksha is famed to have had sixty daughters. 11. Of these Kaśyapa took in marriage eight elegant maidens, Aditi, Diti, Danū, Kālakā, (12) Tāmrā, Krodhavaśā, Manu, 215 and Analā. Kaśyapa, pleased, then said to these maids, (13) 'ye shall bring forth sons like to me, preservers of the three worlds.' Aditi, Diti, Danū, (14) and Kālakā assented; but the others did not agree. Thirty-three gods were borne by Aditi, the Ādityas, Vasus, Rudras, and the two Aśvins." [The following verses 15–28 detail the offspring of Diti, Danū, Kālakā, Tāmrā, Krodhavaśā, as well as of Kraunchī, Bhāsī, Syenī, Dhritarāshṭrī, and S'ukī the daughters of Kālakā, and of the daughters of Krodhavaśā. (Compare the Mahābharata, i. 2620–2635; and Wilson's Vishnu Purāṇa, vol. ii. pp. 72 f.) After this we come upon Manu and the creation of mankind.] "29. Manu, (wife) of Kaśyapa, 216 produced men, Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and Sūdras. 30. 'Brāhmans were born from the mouth, Kshattriyas from the breast, Vāiśyas from the thighs, and Sūdras from the feet,' so says the Veda. 31. Analā gave birth to all trees with pure fruits."

²¹³ Balām Atibalām api.—Gorr. 214 Manoratha-hīnāh.—Comm.

²¹⁵ I should have doubted whether Manu could have been the right reading here, but that it occurs again in verse 29, where it is in like manner followed in verse 31 by Analā, so that it would certainly seem that the name Manu is intended to stand for a female, the daughter of Daksha. The Gauḍa recension, followed by Signor Gorresio (iii. 20, 12), adopts an entirely different reading at the end of the line, viz. Balām Atibalām api, "Balā and Atibalā," instead of Manu and Analā. I see that Professor Roth s.v. adduces the authority of the Amara Kosha and of the Commentator on Pāṇini for stating that the word sometimes means "the wife of Manu." In the following text of the Mahābhārata i. 2553, also, Manu appears to be the name of a female: Anavadyām Manum Vamšām Asurām Mārganapriyām | Anūpām Subhagām Bhāsīm tit Prādhā vyajāyata | "Prādhā (daughter of Daksha) bore Anavadyā, Manu, Vansa, Asurā, Mārganapriyā, Anūpā, Subhagā, and Bhāsī.

It is singular to observe that in this passage, after having represented men of all castes as sprung from Manu, the writer next adds a verse to state, on the authority of the Veda, that the different castes were produced from the different parts of the body out of which they issued. Unless Manu's body be here meant, there is a contradiction between the two statements. If Manu's body is meant, the assertion conflicts with the common account. And if the Manu here mentioned is, as appears from the context, a woman, we should naturally conclude that her offspring was born in the ordinary way; especially as she is said to have been one of the wives of Kasyapa.

The next passage from the Uttara Kānda of the Rāmāyana, 74, 8 f., describes the condition of men in the Krita age, and the subsequent introduction of the caste system in the Tretā. The description purports to have been occasioned by an incident which had occurred just before. A Brāhman had come to the door of Rāma's palace in Ayodhyā, carrying the body of his dead son,²¹⁷ and bewailing his loss, the blame ²¹⁶ The text reads Kāsyapa, "a descendant of Kāsyapa," who, according to Rām. ii. 110, 6, ought to be Vivasvat. But as it is stated in the preceding part of this passage iii. 14, 11 f. that Manu was one of Kāsyapa's eight wives, we must here read Kāsyapa. The Gauda recension reads (iii. 20, 30) Manur manushyāms cha tathā janayāmāsa Rāghava, instead of the corresponding line in the Bombay edition.

²¹⁷ The boy is said, in 73, 5, to have been aprāpta-yauvanam bālam pancha-varsha-sahasrakam | "a boy of five thousand years who had not attained to puberty!" The Commentator says that varsha here means not a year, but a day (varsha-śubdo 'tra of which (as he was himself unconscious of any fault) he attributed to some misconduct on the part of the king. Rāma in consequence convoked his councillors, when the divine sage Nārada spoke as follows:

8. S'rinu rājan yathā 'kāle prāpto bālasya sankshayaḥ | śrutvā karttavyatām rājan kurushva Raghunandana | 9. purā krita-yuge rājan brāhmanā vai tapasvinah | 10. Abrāhmanas tadā rājan na tapasvī kathanchana | tasmin yuge prajvalite brahmabhūte tv anāvrite | 11. Amrityavas tadā sarve jajnire dīrgha-daršinah | tatas tretā-yugam nāma mānavānām vapushmatām | 12. Kshattriyā yatra jāyante pūrveņa tapasā 'nvitāh | vīryyena tapasā chaiva te 'dhikāh pūrva-janmani | mānavā ye mahātmānas tatra tretā-yuge yuge | 13. Brahma kshattram cha tat sarvam yat pūrvam avaram cha yat | yugayor ubhayor asīt sama-vīryyasamanvitam | 14. Apaśyantas tu te sarve viśesham adhikam tatah | sthāpanam chakrire tatra chāturvarnyasya sammatam | 15. Tasmin yuge prajvalite dharmabhute hy anavrite | adharmah padam ekam tu patayat prithivītale | 19. Pātite tv anrite tasminn adharmena mahītale śubhāny evācharal lokah satya-dharma-parāyanah | 20. Tretā-yuge cha varttante brāhmaṇāḥ kshattriyāś cha ye | tapo'tapyanta te sarve śuśrūshām apare janāh | 21. Sva-dharmah paramas teshām vaisya-śūdram tadā "gamat | pūjūm cha sarva-varnānām śūdrāś chakrur višeskatah | 23. Tatah pādam adkarmasya dvitīyam avätārayat | tato dvāpara-sankhyā sā yugasya samajāyata | 24. Tasmin dvāparā-sankhye tu varttamāne yuga-kshaye | adharmas chānritam chaiva vavridhe purusharshabha | 25. Asmin dvāpara-sankhyāte tapo vaisyān samāvišat | tribhyo yugebhyas trīn varnān kramād vai tapa āviśat | 26. Tribhyo yugebhyas trīn varnān dharmascha parinishthitah | na sūdro labhate dharmañ yugatas tu nararshabha | 27. Hīna-varno nripa-śreshtha tapyate sumahat tapah | bhavishyachchhūdrayonyām hi tapaś-charyā kalau yuge | 28. adharmah paramo rājan dvāpare śūdra-janmanah | sa vai vishaya-paryante tava rājan mahātapāh | 29. Adya tapyati durbuddhis tena bāla-badho hy ayam |

Nārada speaks: 8. "Hear, o king, how the boy's untimely death occurred: and having heard the truth regarding what ought to be dinaparak),—just as it does in the ritual prescription that a man should perform a sacrifice lasting a thousand years ("sahasra-sañvatsarañ satram upāsīta" iti vat),—and that thus some interpreters made out the boy's age to be sixteen, and others under fourteen. But this would be a most unusual mode of reckoning age.

done, do it. 9. Formerly, in the Krita age, Brāhmans alone practised austere fervour (tapas). 10. None who was not a Brāhman did so in that enlightened age, instinct with divine knowledge (or, with Brahma), unclouded (by darkness). 11. At that period all were born immortal, and far-sighted. Then (came) the Treta age, the era of embodied men, (12) in which the Kshattriyas were born, distinguished still by their former austere fervour; although those men who were great in the Treta age had been greater, both in energy and austere fervour, in the former birth. 13. All the Brāhmans and Kshattriyas, both the former and the later, were of equal energy in both Yugas.218 14. But not perceiving any more distinction (between the then existing men) they all 219 next established the approved system of the four castes. 15. Yet in that enlightened age, instinct with righteousness, unclouded (by darkness), unrighteousness planted one foot upon the earth." [After some other remarks (verses 16-18), which are in parts obscure, the writer proceeds:] 19. "But, although this falsehood had been planted upon the earth by unrighteousness, the people, devoted to true righteousness, practised salutary observances. 20. Those Brāhmans and Kshattriyas who lived in the Treta practised austere fervour, and the rest of mankind obedience. 21. (The principle that) their own duty was the chief thing pervaded the Vaisyas and S'ūdras among them: and the S'ūdras especially paid honour to all the (other) classes. 23. Next the second foot of unrighteousness was planted on the earth, and the number of the Dvapara (the third yuga) was produced. 24. When this deterioration of the age numbered as the Dvapara, had come into existence, 210 Manu and other legislators of that age, according to the Commentator (Manvādayaḥ sarve tāthālikāḥ dharma-pravarttanādhikritāḥ). He adds that in the Krita age all the castes were spontaneously devoted to their several duties, although no fixed system had been prescribed (krite tu vinaiva sthāpanam svayam eva sarve varnāḥ svasva-dharma-ratāh).

²¹⁵ The Commentator says, this means that in the Krita age the Brūhmans were superior, and the Kshattriyas inferior (as the latter had not then the prerogative of practising tapas), but that in the Tretā both classes were equal (ubhayor yugayor madhye krita-yuge brahma pūrvam tapo-vīryābhyām utkrishtam kshattram chāvaram cha tābhyām tapo-vīryābhyām nyūnam āsīt | krita sarvam brahma-kshattra-rūpam ubhayam tretāyām sama-vīrya-samanvitam āsīt | krite kshattriyāmān tapasy anadhi-kārāt tadyugīyebhyo brāhmanebhyas teshām nyūnatā | tretāyām tu ubhayo rapi tapo-vāhikārād ubhāv api tapo-viryābhyām samau | But in the previous verse (12) it is said that the Kshattriyas were born in the Tretā distinguished by their former tapas. But perhaps they were formerly Brahmans, according to verses 9, 10, and 12.

unrighteousness and falsehood increased. 25. In this age, numbered as the Dvāpara, austere fervour entered into the Vaiśyas. Thus in the course of three ages it entered into three castes; (26) and in the three ages righteousness (dharma) was established in three castes. But the Sūdra does not attain to righteousness through the (lapse of these three) ages. 27. A man of low caste performs a great act of austere fervour. Such observance will belong to the future race of Sūdras in the Kali age, (28) but is unrighteous in the extreme if practised by that caste in the Dvāpara. On the outskirts of thy territory such a foolish person, of intense fervour, is practising austerity. Hence this slaughter of the boy."

Here then was a clue to the mystery of the young Brāhman's death. A presumptuous Sūdra, paying no regard to the fact that in the age 220 in which he lived the prerogative of practising self-mortification had not yet descended to the humble class to which he belonged, had been guilty of seeking to secure a store of religious merit by its exercise. Rāma mounts his car Pushpaka, makes search in different regions, and at length comes upon a person who was engaged in the manner alleged. The Sūdra, on being questioned, avows his caste, and his desire to conquer for himself the rank of a god by the self-mortification he was undergoing. Rāma instantly cuts off the offender's head. The gods applaud the deed, and a shower of flowers descends from the sky upon the vindicator of righteousness. Having been invited to solicit a boon from the gods, he asks that the Brāhman boy may be resuscitated, and is informed that he was restored to life at the same moment when the Sūdra was slain. (Sections 75 and 76.)²²¹

The following curious account of the creation of mankind, among whom it states that no distinction of class (or colour) originally existed, is given in the Uttara Kānda, xxx. 19 ff., where Brahmā says to Indra:

Amarendra mayā buddhyā prajāh srishtās tathā prabho | eka-varnāh sama-bhāshā eka-rūpāś cha sarvaśah | 20. Tāsām nāsti višesho hi darśane lakshane 'pi vā | tato 'ham ekāgramanās tāh prajāh samachintayam | 21. So 'ham tāsām višeshārtham striyam ekām vinirmame | yad yat prajānām pratyangam višishtam tat tad uddhritam | 22. Tato mayā ²²⁰ The Treta, according to the Commentator.

²²¹ See the Rev. Professor Banerjea's Dialogues on the Hindu philosophy, pp. 44 ff., where attention had previously been drawn to the story.

rūpa-qunair ahalyā strī vinirmitā | halam nāmeha vairūpyam halyam tat-prabhavam bhavet | 23. Yasyā na vidyate halyam tenāhalyeti viśrutā | Ahalyety eva cha mayā tasyā nāma prakīrttitam | 24. Nirmitāyām cha devendra tasyām nāryām surarshabha | bhavishyatīti kasyaishā mama chintā tato 'bhavat | 25. Tvam tu S'akra tadā nārīm jānīshe manasā prabho | sthānādhikatayā patnī mamaisheti purandara | 26. Sa mayā nyāsa-bhūtā tu Gautamasya mahātmanah | nyastā bahūni varshāni tena niryātitā cha ha | 27. Tatas tasya parijnāya mahāsthairyam mahāmuneh | jnātvā tapasi siddhim cha patny-artham sparšitā tadā | 28. Sa tayā saha dharmātmā ramate sma mahāmunih | āsan nirāśā devās tu Gautame dattayā tayā | 29. Tvam kruddhas tv iha kāmātmā gatvā tasyāśramam muneh | drishţavāmś cha tadā tām strīm dīptām agniśikhām iva | 30. Sā tvayā dharshitā S'akra kāmārttena samanyunā ; drishtas tvam cha tadā tena āśrame paramarshinā | 31. Tatah kruddhena tenāsi śaptah paramatejasā | gato 'si yena devendra daśā-bhāga-viparvayam

"19. O chief of the immortals (Indra) all creatures were formed by my will of one class (or colour), with the same speech, and uniform in every respect. 20. There was no distinction between them in appearance, or in characteristic marks. I then intently reflected on these creatures. 21. To distinguish between them I fashioned one woman. Whatever was most excellent in the several members of different creatures was taken from them, (22) and with this (aggregate) I formed a female, faultless in beauty and in all her qualities. Hala means 'ugliness,' and halya, 'what is produced from ugliness.' 23. The woman in whom there is no halva, is called Ahalvā. And this was her name to which I gave currency. 24. When this female had been fashioned, I anxiously considered to whom she should belong. 25. Thou, Indra, didst, from the eminence of thy rank, determine in thy mind, 'She must be my spouse.' 26. I, however, gave her in trust to the great Gautama; and after having retained her in charge for many years, he restored her. 27. Knowing then the great steadfastness of that distinguished Muni, and the perfection of his austere fervour, I, in due form, gave her to him for his wife. 28. The holy sage lived with her in the enjoyment of connubial love. But the gods were filled with despair when she had been given away to Gautama. 29. And thou, Indra, angry, as well as inflamed with lust, wentest to the Muni's hermitage, and didst behold that female brilliant as the flame of fire. 30. She was then corrupted by thee who wert tormented by lust, as well as heated by anger.²²² But thou wert then seen by the eminent rishi in the hermitage, (31) and cursed by that glorious being in his indignation. Thou didst in consequence fall into a reverse of condition and fortune," etc., etc.

Sect. XI.—Extracts from the Mahābhārata on the same subjects.

The first passage which I shall adduce is from the Ādi Parvan, or first book, verses 2517 ff.:

Vaišampāyana uvācha | hanta te kathayishyāmi namaskritya Svayambhuve | surādīnām aham samyak lokānām prabhavāpyayam | Brahmano mānasāh putrāh viditāh shan-maharshayah | Marīchir Atry-angirasau Pulastyah Pulahah Kratuh | Marīcheh Kašyapah putrah Kašyapāt tu prajā imāh | prajajnire mahābhāgā Daksha-kanyās trayodaśa | 2520. Aditir Ditir Danuh Kālā Danāyuh Simhikā tathā | Krodhā Pradhā eha Visvā cha Vinatā Kapilā Munih | Kadrūś cha manujavyāghra Daksha-kanyaiva Bhārata | etāsām vīrya-sampannam putra-pautram anantakam |

"Vaisampayana said: I shall, after making obeisance to Svayambhū, relate to thee exactly the production and destruction of the gods and other beings. Six 223 great rishis are known as the mind-born sons

222 In regard to this story of Indra and Ahalyā, as well as to that of Brahmā and his daughter, above referred to, see the explanation given by Kumārila Bhatta, as quoted by Professor Max Müller in his Hist. of Anc. Sansk. Lit. p. 529 f. The name of Ahalyā is there allegorically interpreted of the night, to which this name is said to have been given because it is absorbed in the day (ahani līyamānatayā). Indra is the sun.

223 Another passage (S'ānti-p. 7569 ff.) raises the number of Brahmā's sons to seven by adding Vasishtha: Ekah Svayambhūr bhagavān ādyo Brahmā sanātanaḥ | Brahmanah sapta vai putrā mahātmānah Svayambhuvaḥ | Marīchir Atry-Angirasau Pulastyaḥ Pulahaḥ Kratuḥ | Vasishthascha mahāthāgāh sadriso vai Svayambhuvā | sapta Brahmāna ity ete purāne nischayam gatāḥ | "There is one primeval eternal lord, Brahmā Svayambhū; who had seven great sons, Marīchi, Atri, Angiras, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu, and Vasishtha, who was like Svayambhū. These are the seven Brahmās who have been ascertained in the Puranic records." In another part of the same S'antiparvan, verses 12685 ff., however, the Prajāpatis are increased to twenty-one: Brahmā Sthānur Manur Daksho Bhrigur Dharmas tathā Yamah | Marīchir Angirā 'trischa Pulastyaḥ Pulahaḥ Kratuḥ | Vasishthah Parameshthī cha Vivasvān Soma eva cha | Kardamas chāpi yaḥ proktaḥ Krodho Vikrīta eva cha | ekavimšatir utpannās te prajāpatayah smritāḥ | "There are reputed to have been twenty-one Prajāpatis produced, viz. Brahmā, Sthānu, Manu, Daksha, Bhrigu, Dharma, Yama, Marīchi, of Brahmā, viz., Marīchi, Atri, Angiras, Pulastya, Pulaha, and Kratu. Kasyapa was the son of Marīchi; and from Kasyapa sprang these creatures. There were born to Daksha thirteen daughters of eminent rank, (2520) Aditi, Diti, Danu, Kālā, Danāyu, Simhikā, Krodhā, Pradhā, Visvā, Vinatā, Kapilā, and Muni. Madrū also was of the number. These daughters had valorous sons and grandsons innumerable."

Daksha, however, had other daughters, as we learn further on in verses 2574 ff., where the manner of his own birth also is related:

Dakshas tv ajāyatāngushthād dakshinād bhagavān rishih | Brahmanah pṛithivīpāla śāntātmā sumahātapāḥ | vāmād ajāyatāngushṭhād bhāryā tasya mahātmanah | tasyām panchāśatam kanyāh sa evājanayad munih | 2577. Dadau cha dasa Dharmāya saptavimsatim Indave | divyena vidhina rājan Kaśyapāya trayodaśa | 2581. Paitāmahah Manur devas tāsya putrah prajāpatih | tasyāshţau Vasavah putrās teshām vakshyāmi vistaram | 2595. Stanam tu dakshinam bhitvā Brahmano nara-vigrahah | nissrito bhagavān Dharmah sarva-loka-sukhāvahah | trayas tasya varāh putrāh sarva-bhūta-manoharāh | S'amah Kāmaś cha Harsha's cha tejasā loka-dhārinah | 2610. Ārushī to Manoh kanyā tasya patnī manīshinah | 2614. Dvau putrau Brahmanas tv anyau yayos tishthati lakshanam | loke Dhātā Vidhātā cha yau sthitau Manunā saha | tayor eva svasā devī Lakshmī padma-grihā subhā | tasyās tu mānasāḥ putrās turagāḥ vyoma-chārinaḥ | 2617. Prajānām annakāmānām anyonya-paribhakshanāt | Adharmas tatra sanjātah sarvabhūta-vināśakah | tasyāpi Nirritir bhāryā nairritā yena Rākshasāh | ghorās tasyās trayah putrāh pāpa-karma-ratāh sadā | Bhayo Mahābhayas chaiva Mrityur bhūtāntakas tathā | na tasya bhāryā putro vā kaśchid asty antako hi sah |

Angiras, Atri, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu, Vasishtha, Parameshthin, Vivasvat, Soma, the person called Kardama, Krodha, and Vikrīta." (Here, however, only twenty names are specified including Brahmā himself.) Compare this list with those quoted above, p. 116, from the Rāmāyaṇa, iii. 14, 7 ff., from Manu in p. 36, and from the Vishnu P. in p. 65.

That Muni is a name, and not an epithet, is shown (1) by the fact that we have otherwise only twelve names; and (2) by her descendants, both gods and gandharvas, being afterwards enumerated in verses 2550 ff. (ity ete deva-gandharvā Mauneyāh parikīrttitāh). Kapilā, another of the thirteen daughters of Daksha is said to have been the mother of Ambrosia, Brāhmans, kine, Gandharvas and Apsarasas (amritam brāhmaṇā gāvo gandharvāpsarasas tathā | apatyam kapilāyās tu purāne parikīrttitam |).

"2574. Daksha, the glorious rishi, tranquil in spirit, and great in austere fervour, sprang from the right thumb of Brahmā. 225 From the left thumb sprang that great Muni's wife, on whom he begot fifty 226 daughters. Of these he gave ten to Dharma, twenty-seven to Indu (Soma),227 and according to the celestial system, thirteen to Kasyapa." I proceed with some other details given in the verses I have extracted: 2581. "Pitāmaha's descendant, Manu, the god and the lord of creatures, was his (it does not clearly appear whose) son. The eight Vasus, whom I shall detail, were his sons. 2595. Dividing the right breast of Brahmā, the glorious Dharma (Righteousness), issued in a human form, bringing happiness to all people. He had three eminent sons, Sama, Kāma, and Harsha (Tranquillity, Love, and Joy), who are the delight of all creatures, and by their might support the world. 2610. Arushī, the daughter of Manu, was the wife of that sage (Chyavana, son of Bhrigu). 2614. There are two other sons of Brahmā, whose mark remains in the world, Dhātri, 228 and Vidhātri, who remained with Manu. Their sister was the beautiful goddess Lakshmī, 229 whose home is in the lotus. Her mind-born sons are the steeds who move in the sky. 2617. When the creatures who were desirous of food, had devoured one another, Adharma (Unrighteousness) was produced, the destroyer of all beings. His wife was Nirriti, and hence the Rākshasas are called Nairritas, or the offspring of Nirriti. She had three dreadful sons, continually addicted to evil deeds, Bhaya Mahābhaya (Fear and Terror) and Mrityu (Death) the ender of beings. He has neither wife, nor any son, for he is the ender."230

The next passage gives a different account of the origin of Daksha; and describes the descent of mankind from Manu:

Adip. 3128. Tejobhir uditāḥ sarve maharshi-sama-tejasaḥ | daśa Pra-

²²⁵ See above, p. 72 f. The Matsya P. also states that Daksha sprang from Brahmā's right thumb, Dharma from his nipple, Kāma from his heart, etc.

²²⁶ The passage of the Rāmāyaṇa, quoted above, p. 116, affirms that they were sixty in number. Compare Wilson's Vishnu P. vol. i. pp. 109 ff., and vol. ii. pp. 19 ff.

²²⁷ The Taitt. Sanhitū, ii. 3, 5, 1, says Prajāpati had thirty-three daughters, whom he gave to King Soma (Prajāpates trayastrimsād duhitara āsan | tāḥ Somāya rājne 'dadāt).

²²⁸ Dhātri had been previously mentioned, in verse 2523, as one of the sons of Aditi. See also Wilson's Vishnu P. ii. 152.

²²⁹ See Wilson's Vishnu P. i. pp. 109, 118 ff., 144 ff. and 152.

²⁸⁰ The Vishnu P. (Wilson, i. 112) says he had five children.

chetasah putrāh santah punya-janāh smritāh \ mukhajenāgninā yais te pūrvam dagdhā mahaujasah | tebhyah Prāchetaso jajne Daksho Dakshād imāḥ prajāḥ | sambhūtāḥ purusha-vyāghra sa hi loka-pitāmahah | Vīrinyā saha sangamya Dakshah Prāchetaso munih | ātma-tulyān ajanayat sahasram samsita-vratān | sahasra-sankhyān sambhūtān Dakshaputrāms cha Nāradah | moksham adhyāpayāmāsa sānkhya-jnānam anuttamam | tatah panchāśatam kanyāh putrikāh abhisandadhe | Prajāpatih prajāh Dakshah sisrikshur Janamejaya | dadau cha daśa Dharmāya Kaśyapāya trayodaśa | kālasya nayane yuktāh saptavimśatim Indave | 3135. Trayodaśānām patnīnām yā tu Dākshāyanī varā | Mārīchah Kaśyapas tasyām Ādityān samajījanat | Indrādīn vīryya-sampannān Vivasvantam athāpi cha | Vivasvatah suto jajne Yamo Vaivasvatah prabhuh | Mārtandasya Manur dhīmān ajāyata sutah prabhuh | Yamaś chāpi suto jajne khyātas tasyānujah prabhuh | dharmātmā sa Manur dhīmān yatra vamsah pratishthitah | Manor vamso mānavānām tato 'yam prathito'bhavat | brahma-kshatrādayas tasmād Manor jātās tu mānavāḥ | tato 'bhavad mahārāja brahma kshattrena sangatam | 3140. Brāhmanā mānavās teshām sāngam vedam adhārayan | Venam Dhrishnum Narishyantam Nābhāgekshvākum eva cha | Kārūsham atha S'āryatim tathā chaivāshtamīm Ilām | Prishadhram navamam prāhuh kshattra-dharmaparāyanam | Nābhāgārishṭa-daśamān Manoḥ putrān prachakshate | panchāśat tu Manoh putrās tathaivānye 'bhavan kshitau | anyonya-bhedāt te sarve vinesur iti nah srutam | Purūravas tato vidvān Ilāyam samapadyata | sā vai tasyābhavad mātā pitā chaiveti naḥ śrutam |

"3128. Born all with splendour, like that of great rishis, the ten sons of Prachetas are reputed to have been virtuous and holy; and by them the glorious beings²³¹ were formerly burnt up by fire springing from their mouths. From them was born Daksha Prāchetasa;²³² and from Daksha, the Parent of the world (were produced), these creatures. Cohabiting with Vīrinī, the Muni Daksha begot a thousand sons like himself, famous for their religious observances, to whom Nārada taught the doctrine of final liberation, the unequalled knowledge of the Sānkhya. Desirous of creating offspring, the Prajapati Daksha next formed fifty daughters, of whom he gave ten to Dharma, thirteen to Kasyapa, and twenty-seven, devoted to the regulation of time, 288 to Indu (Soma). 3135. On Dākshāvanī,284 the most excellent of his thirteen wives, Kaśyapa, the son of Marīchi, begot the Ādityas, headed by Indra and distinguished by their energy, and also Vivasvat.255 To Vivasvat was born a son, the mighty Yama Vaivasvata. To Martanda (i.e. Vivasvat, the Sun) was born the wise and mighty Manu, and also the renowned Yama, his (Manu's) younger brother. Righteous was this wise Manu, on whom a race was founded. Hence this (family) of men became known as the race of Manu. Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, and other men sprang from this Manu. From him, o king, came the Brāhman conjoined with the Kshattriva. 3140. Among them the Brāhmans, children of Manu, held the Veda with the Vedangas. The children of Manu are said to have been Vena, Dhrishnu, Narishyanta, Nābhāga, Ikshvāku, Kārusha, Saryāti, Ilā the eight, Prishadra the ninth, who was addicted to the duties of a Kshattriya, and Nābhāgārishta the tenth. Manu had also fifty other sons; but they all, as we have heard, perished in consequence of mutual dissensions. Subsequently the wise Pururavas was born of Ila, who, we heard, was both his mother and his father."

²³¹ "Trees and plants," according to the Commentator (mahāprabhāvā vrikshaushayāh). Compare Wilson's Vishnu P. ii. p. 1.

²⁸³ The same account of Daksha's birth is given in the Santip. 7573: Daśānām tanayas tv eko Daksho nāma prajāpatih | tasya dve nāmanī loke Dakshah Ka iti chochyate | "These ten Prachetases had one son called Daksha, the lord of creatures. He is commonly called by two names, Daksha and Ka." (Compare vol. iv. of this work, p. 13, note 30, and p. 24; and the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, vii. 4, 1, 19, and ii. 4, 4, 1, there quoted.) The following verse 7574 tells us that Kasyapa also had two names, the other being Arishtanemi. See Rām. iii. 14, 9, quoted above.

The tradition, followed in this passage, which assigns to all the castes one common ancestor, removed by several stages from the creator, is, of course, in conflict with the account which assigns to them a fourfold descent from the body of Brahmā himself.

The Santiparvan, verses 2749 ff., contains an account of the origin of castes which has evidently proceeded from an extreme assertor of the dignity of the Brahmanical order. The description given of the prerogatives of the priestly class is precisely in the style, and partly in almost the identical words, of the most extravagant declarations of ²³³ This phrase kālasya nayane yuktāḥ had previously occurred in verse 2580, where it is followed by the words sarvā nakshatra-yoginyo loka-yātrā-vidhānataḥ | "all identified with the lunar asterisms, and appointed to regulate the life of men." See also Vishnu P. i. 15, 56, and Professor Wilson's translation ii. p. 10, note 1, and p. 28, note 1.

²⁸⁴ i.e. Aditi. See verses 2520, 2522, and 2600 of this same book.

²³⁵ The account in the Rāmāyaṇa, ii. 110, 5 ff., agrees with this in making Kasyapa son of Marīchi, and father of Vivasvat.

Manu (i. 99 f.) on the same subject. In other places, however, the Mahābhārata contains explanations of a very different character regarding the origin of the distinctions, social and professional, which prevailed at the period of its composition. A comparison of these various passages will afford an illustration of the fact already intimated in p. 6,236 that this gigantic poem is made up of heterogeneous elements. the products of different ages, and representing widely different dogmatical tendencies, the later portions having been introduced by successive editors of the work to support their own particular views, without any regard to their inconsistency with its earlier contents. In fact, a work so vast, the unaided compilation of which would have taxed all the powers of a Didymus Chalkenterus, could scarcely have been created in any other way than that of gradual accretion. And some supposition of this kind is certainly necessary in order to explain such discrepancies as will be found between the passages I have to quote, of which the three first are the productions of believers (real or pretended) in the existence of a natural distinction between their own Brahmanical order and the other classes of the community, while the two by which these three are followed have emanated from fair and moderate writers who had rational views of the essential unity of mankind, and of the superiority of moral and religious character to any factitious divisions of a social description.

In the first passage, Bhīshma, the great uncle of the Pāndus, when describing to Yudhishthira the duties of kings, introduces one of those ancient stories which are so frequently appealed to in the Mahābhārata. Without a minute study of the poem it would be difficult to say whether these are ever based on old traditions, or are anything more than mere vehicles invented to convey the individual views of the writers who narrate them. Bhīshma says, S'āntiparvan, 2749:

Ya eva tu sato rakshed asataś cha nivarttayet | sa eva rājnā karttavyo rājan rāja-purohitaḥ | 2750. Atrāpy udāharantīmam itihāsam purātanam | Purūravasa Ailasya samvādam Mātariśvanaḥ | Purūravā uvācha | Kutaḥ svid brāhmano jūta varnāś chāpi kutas trayaḥ | kasmāchcha bhavati śreshṭhas tan me vyākhyātum arhasi | Mātariśvovācha | Brahmano mukhataḥ srishṭo brāhmano rāja-sattama | bāhubhyām kshattriyaḥ srishṭa ūrubhyām vaiśya eva cha | varnānām parichūryyārtham trayānām Bha-

²³⁶ See also the fourth volume of this work, pp. 141 ff. and 152.

ratarshabha | varnaś chaturthaḥ sambhūtaḥ padbhyām śūdro vinirmitaḥ | brāhmano jāyamāno hi prithivyām anujāyate²³⁷ | īśvaraḥ sarva-bhūtānām dharma-koshasya guptaye | 2755. Ataḥ prithivyā yantāram kshattriyam danda-dhārane | dvitīyam Dandam akarot prajānām anutriptaye | vaiśyas tu dhana-dhānyena trīn varnān bibhriyād imān | śūdro hy etān parichared iti Brahmānuśāsanam | Aila uvācha | dvijasya kshattrabandhor vā kasyeyam prithivī bhavet | dharmataḥ saha vittena samyag Vāyo prachakshva me | Vāyur uvācha | viprasya sarvam evaitad yat kinchij jagatīgatam | jyeshṭhenābhijaneneha tad dharma-kuśalā viduḥ | svam eva brāhmano bhunkte svam vaste svam dadāti cha | gurur hi sarva-varnānām jyeshṭhaḥ śreshṭhaś cha vai dvijaḥ | 2760. Paty-abhāve yathaiva strī devaram kurute patim | esha te prathamaḥ kalpaḥ āpady anyo bhaved ataḥ |

"2749. The king should appoint to be his royal priest²⁸⁸ a man who will protect the good, and restrain the wicked. 2750. On this subject they relate this following ancient story of a conversation between Purūravas the son of Ilā, and Mātariśvan (Vāyu, the Windgod). Purūravas said: You must explain to me whence the Brāhman, and whence the (other) three castes were produced, and whence the superiority (of the first) arises. Mātariśvan answered: The Brāhman was created from Brahmā's mouth, the Kshattriya from his arms, the Vaiśya from his thighs, while for the purpose of serving these three 237 Manu, i. 99, has adhi jayate.

²³³ Rāja-purohitah. The king's priest (rāja-purohitah) is here represented as one who should be a confidential and virtuous minister of state. Such is not, however, the character always assigned to this class of persons. In Manu xii. 46, quoted above (p. 41f.), the purchita is placed in a lower class than other Brahmans. And in the following verse (4527) of the Anus'asanaparvan, taken from a story in which the Rishis utter maledictions against anyone who should have stolen certain lotus roots, part of the curse spoken by Visvāmitra is as follows: varshācharo'stu bhritako rājnas chāstu purohitah | ayājyasya bhavatv ritvig visa-stainyam karoti yah | "Let the man who steals lotus roots be a hireling trafficker in rain incantations (?) and the domestic priest of a king, and the priest of one for whom no Brahman should officiate." Again, in verse 4579, the same person says: karotu bhritako'varshām rājnas chāstu purohitah | ritvig astu hy ayājyasya yas te harati pushkaram | "Let him who steals thy lotus perform as a hireling incantations to cause drought, and be a king's domestic priest, and the priest of one for whom no Brahman should officiate." I have had partly to guess at the sense of the words varshācharah and avarshām. The Commentator does not explain the former; and interprets the latter (for which the Edinburgh MS. reads avarshāh) by vrishti-nibandham, "causing drought." He adds, papishthah eva avarshah, "those who cause drought are most wicked."

castes was produced the fourth class, the S'ūdra, fashioned from his The Brahman, as soon as born, becomes the lord of all beings upon the earth, for the purpose of protecting the treasure of righteous-2755. Then (the creator) constituted the Kshattriya the controuler of the earth, a second Yama to bear the rod, for the satisfaction of the people. And it was Brahmā's ordinance that the Vaisya should sustain these three classes with money and grain, and that the S'ūdra should serve them. The son of Ilā then enquired: Tell me, Vāvu, to whom the earth, with its wealth, rightfully belongs, to the Brähman or the Kshattriya? Vāyu replied: All this, whatever exists in the world, is the Brāhman's property 239 by right of primogeniture: this is known to those who are skilled in the laws of duty. It is his own which the Brahman eats, puts on, and bestows. He is the chief of all the castes, the first-born and the most excellent. Just as a woman when she has lost her (first) husband, takes her brother in law for a second; so the Brahman is thy first resource in calamity; afterwards another may arise.2'

A great deal is shortly afterwards added about the advantages of concord between Brāhmans and Kshattriyas. Such verses as the following (2802): "From the dissensions of Brāhmans and Kshattriyas the people incur intolerable suffering" (mitho bhedād brāhmaṇa-kshattriyāṇām prajā duḥkham dussaham chāvišanti) afford tolerably clear evidence that the interests of these two classes must frequently have clashed.

In the same strain as the preceding passage is the following:

Vanaparvan, 13436. Nādhyāpanād yājanād vā anyasmād vā pratigrahāt | dosho bhavati viprānām jvalitāgni-samā dvijāh | durvedā vā suvedā vā prākritāh samskritās tathā | brāhmaṇā nāvamantavyā bhasmachannā ivāgnayah | yathā śmaśāne dīptaujāh pāvako naiva dushyati | evam vidvān avidvān vā brāhmaṇo daivatam mahat | prākāraiś cha puradvāraih prāsādaiś cha prithag-vidhaih | nagarāni na śobhante hīnāni brāhmaṇottamaih | vedāḍhyā vritta-sampannā jnānavantas tapasvinah | yatra tishthanti vai viprās tan-nāma nagaram nripa | vraje vā py athavā

²³⁹ Kullūka, the Commentator on Manu (i. 100), is obliged to admit that this is only spoken in a panegyrical or hyperbolical way, and that property is here used in a figurative sense, since theft is afterwards predicated by Manu of Brāhmans as well as others ("svam" iti stutyā uchyate | svam iva svam na tu svam eva | brāhmanasyāpi Manunā steyasya vakshyamānatvāt).

'ranye yatra santi bahu śrutāḥ | tat tad nagaram ity āhuḥ pārtha tīrtham cha tad bhavet |

"No blame accrues to Brāhmans from teaching or sacrificing, or from receiving money in any other way: Brāhmans are like flaming fire. Whether ill or well versed in the Veda, whether untrained or accomplished, Brāhmans must never be despised, like fires covered by ashes. Just as fire does not lose its purity by blazing even in a cemetery, so too, whether learned or unlearned, a Brāhman is a great deity. Cities are not rendered magnificent by ramparts, gates, or palaces of various kinds, if they are destitute of excellent Brāhmans. 13440. The place where Brāhmans, rich in the Veda, perfect in their conduct, and austerely fervid, reside, is (really) a city (nagara). Wherever there are men abounding in Vedic lore, whether it be a cattle-pen, or a forest, that is called a city, and that will be a sacred locality."

The following verses from the Anuśāsanap. 2160 ff. are even more extreme in their character, and are, in fact, perfectly sublime in their insolence:

Brāhmaṇānām paribhavād asurāḥ salile śayāḥ | brāhmaṇānām prasādāch cha devāḥ svarga-nivāsinaḥ | aśakyam̃ srashṭum ākāśam achālyo himavān giriḥ | adhāryyā setunā Gangā durjayā brāhmaṇā bhuvi | na brāhmaṇa-virodhena sakyā śāstum̃ vasundharā | brāhmaṇā hi mahātmāno devānām api devatāḥ | tān pūjayasva satatam̃ dānena paricharyyayā | yadīchhasi mahīm bhoktum imām sāgara-mekhalām |

"Through the prowess of the Brāhmans the Asuras were prostrated on the waters; by the favour of the Brāhmans the gods inhabit heaven. The ether cannot be created; the mountain Himavat cannot be shaken; the Gangā cannot be stemmed by a dam; the Brāhmans cannot be conquered by any one upon earth. The world cannot be ruled in opposition to the Brāhmans; for the mighty Brāhmans are the deities even of the gods. If thou desire to possess the sea-girt earth, honour them continually with gifts and with service."

The next passage seems to be self-contradictory, as it appears to set out with the supposition that the distinction of castes arose after the creation; while it goes on to assert the separate origin of the four classes:

Santiparvan, 10861. Janaka uvācha | varno višesha-varnānām maharshe kena jāyate | etad ichhāmy aham jnātum tad brūhi vadatām vara | yad etaj jāyate 'patyam sa evāyam iti śrutih | katham brūhmanato jāto višeshe grahanam gatah | Parāšara uvācha | Evam etad mahārāja yena Jātah sa eva sah | tapasas tv apakarshena jātigrahanatām gatah | sukshettrāchcha suvījāch cha punyo bhavati sambhavah | ato 'nyatarato hīnād avaro nāma jāyate | 10865. Vaktrād bhujābhyām ūrubhyām padbhyām chaivātha jajnire | srijatah Prajāpater lokān iti dharmavido viduh | mukhajā brāhmanās tāta bāhujāh kshattriyāh smritāh | ūrujāh dhanino rājan pādajāh parichārakāh | chaturnām eva varnānām āgamah purusharshabha | ato 'nye vyatiriktā ye te vai sankarajāh smritāh | 10870. Janaka uvācha | Brahmanaikena jātānām nānātvam gotratah katham | bahūnīha hi loke vai gotrāni muni sattama | yatra tatra katham jātāḥ svayonim (? suyonim) munayo gatāḥ | śuddha-yonau samutpannā viyonau cha tathā'pare | Parāśara uvācha | rājan naitad bhaved grāhyam apakrishtena janmanā | matātmanām samutpattis tapasā bhāvitatmanām | utpādya putrān munayo nripate yatra tatra ha | svenaiva tapasā teshām rishitvam pradadhuh punah | 10876. Ete svām prakritim prāptā Vaideha tapasośrayāt | pratishthitā veda-vido damena tapasaiva hi |

"Janaka asks: 10861. How, o great rishi, does the caste of the separate classes arise? Tell me, as I desire to know. According to the Veda, the offspring which is born (to any one) is the very man How does offspring born of a Brāhman fall into distinct classes? Parāśara replied: It is just as you say, o great king. A son is the very same as he by whom he was begotten; but from decline of austere fervour, (men) have become included under different classes. And from good soil and good seed a pure production arises, whilst from those which are different and faulty springs an inferior production. Those acquainted with duty know that men were born from the mouth, arms, thighs, and feet of Prajapati when he was creating the worlds. The Brāhmans sprang from his mouth, the Kshattriyas from his arms, the merchants from his thighs, and the servants from his feet. The scriptural tradition speaks only of four classes. The men not included in these are declared to have sprung from a mixture (of the four). 10870. Janaka asked: How is there a difference in race between men sprung from one and the same Brahmā? for there are now many races in the world. How have Munis born anywhere (indiscriminately) entered into a good family; some of them having sprung from a pure source and others from an inferior stock? Parāśara replied: It would not be credible that noble-minded men, whose souls had been perfected by austere fervour, should have been the offspring of a degraded birth. Munis who had begotten sons in an indiscriminate way conferred on them the position of rishis by their own austere fervour." The speaker then names a number of sages (10876) "famed for their acquaintance with the Veda, and for their self-command and austere fervour," as "having all attained to their respective conditions by practising the latter observance."

In the latter verses the speaker appears to admit, at the very moment that he denies, the degraded origin of some of the renowned saints of Indian antiquity. What else is the meaning of the verse, "Munis who had begotten sons in an indiscriminate way conferred on them the position of rishis by their own austere fervour?" No doubt it is intended to represent those as exceptional times: but while we refuse to admit this assumption, we may find some reason to suppose that the irregularities, as they were afterwards considered to be, which this assumption was intended to explain away, were really samples of the state of things which commonly prevailed in earlier ages.

The next extract declares that there is a natural distinction between the Brāhmans and the other castes; and appears to intimate that the barrier so constituted can only be overpassed when the soul re-appears in another body in another birth:

Anuśāsana-parva, 6570. Deva uvācha | Brāhmaṇyam devi dushprāpyam nisargād brāhmaṇaḥ śubhe | kshattriyo vaiśyaśūdrau vā nisargād
iti me matiḥ | karmaṇā dushkriteneha sthānād bhraśyati vai dvijaḥ |
jyeshṭham varṇam anuprāpya tasmād raksheta vai dvijaḥ | sthito brāhmaṇa-dharmeṇa brāhmaṇyam upajīvati | kshattriyo vā 'tha vaiśyo vā
brahmabhūyam sa gachhati | yas tu brahmatvam utsrijya kshāttram dharmam nishevate | brāhmaṇyāt sa paribhrashṭaḥ kshattra-yonau prajāyate | vaiśya-karma cha yo vipro lobha-moha-vyapāśrayaḥ | brāhmaṇyam
durlabham prāpya karoty alpa-matiḥ sadā | sa dvijo vaiśyatām eti vaiśyo vā śūdratām iyat | sva-dharmāt prachyuto vipras tataḥ śūdratvam āpnute | 6590. Ebhis tu karmabhir devi śubhair ācharitais tathā |
śūdro brāhmaṇatām yāti vaiśyaḥ kshattriyatām vrajet | śūdra-karmāṇi
sarvāṇi yathānyāyam yathāvidhi | śuśrūshām paricharyyām cha jyeshṭhe
varne prayatnataḥ | kuryād ityādi |

Mahādeva says: 6570. "Brāhmanhood, o fair goddess, is difficult to be attained. A man, whether he be a Brāhman, Kshattriya, Vaisya. or Sudra, is such by nature; this is my opinion. By evil deeds a twiceborn man falls from his position. Then let a twice-born man who has attained to the highest caste, keep it. The Kshattriya, or Vaiśya, who lives in the condition of a Brāhman, by practising the duties of one, attains to Brāhmanhood. But he who abandons the state of a Brāhman and practises the duty of a Kshattriya, falls from Brāhmanhood and is born in a Kshattriya womb. And the foolish Brahman, who, having attained that Brāhmanhood which is so hard to get, follows the profession of a Vaisya, under the influence of cupidity and delusion, falls into the condition of a Vaisya. (In like manner) a Vaisya may sink into the state of a S'ūdra. A Brāhman who falls away from his own duty becomes afterwards a Sudra. 6590. But by practising the following good works, o goddess, a S'ūdra becomes a Brāhman, and a Vaisya becomes a Kshattriya: Let him actively perform all the functions of a S'ūdra according to propriety and rule, i.e. obedience and service to the highest caste," etc.

The next passage is the first of those which I have already noted, as in spirit and tenor very different from the preceding. The conversation which it records arose as follows: Yudhishthira found his brother Bhīmasena caught in the coils of a serpent, which, it turned out, was no other than the famous king Nahusha, who by his sacrifices, austerities, etc., had formerly raised himself to the sovereignty of the three worlds; but had been reduced to the condition in which he was now seen, as a punishment for his pride and contempt of the Brāhmans. He promises to let Bhīmaseva go, if Yudhishthira will answer certain questions. Yudhishthira agrees, and remarks that the serpent was acquainted with whatever a Brāhman ought to know. Whereupon the Serpent proceeds:

Vana-parva, verses 12469 ff: Sarpa uvācha | brāhmaṇaḥ ko bhaved rājan vedyam kim cha Yudhishṭhira | 12470. Bravīhy atimatim tvām hi vākyair anumimīmahe | Yudhishṭhira uvācha | satyam dānam kshamā śīlam ānṛiśamsyam tapo ghṛiṇā | dṛiśyante yatra nāgendra sa brāhmaṇah iti smṛitiḥ | vedyam sarpa param Brahma nirduḥkham asukham cha yat | yatra gatvā na śochanti bhavataḥ kim vivakshitam | Sarpa uvācha | chāturvarṇyam pramāṇam cha satyam cha brahma chaiva hi | Sūdreshv apī cha satyam cha dānam akrodha eva cha | ānṛiśamsyam ahimsā cha ghṛiṇā chaiva Yudhishṭhira | vedyām yach chātra nirduḥkham asukham cha narādhipa | tābhyām hīnam padam chānyad na tad astīti lakshaye | Yudhishthira uvācha | 12475. Sūdre tu yad bhavel lakshma dvije tach cha na vidyate | na vai śūdro bhavech chhūdro brāhmano na cha brāhmanah | yatraital lakshyate sarpa vrittam sa brāhmanah smritah | yatraitad na bhavet sarpa tam śūdram iti nirddiśet | yat punar bhavatā proktam na vedyam vidyatīti cha | tābhyām hīnam ato 'nyatra padam nāstīti ched api | evam etad matam sarpa tābhyām hīnam na vidyate | yathā śītoshnayor madhye bhaved noshnam na śītatā | evam vai sukha-duhkhābhyām hīnam nāsti padam kvachit | eshā mama matih sarpa yathā vā manyate bhavān | Sarpa uvācha | 12480. Yadi te vrittato rājan brāhmanah prasamīkshitah | vrithā jātis tadā "yushman kritir yāvad na vidyate | Yudhishthira uvācha | jātir atra mahāsarpa manushyatve mahāmate | sankarāt sarva-varnānām dushparīkshyeti me matih | sarve sarvāsv apatyāni janayanti sadā narāḥ | vāñ maithunam atho janma maranam cha samam nrinām | idam ārsham pramānam cha "ye yajāmahe" ity api | tasmāch chhīlam pradhāneshṭam vidur ye tattvadarśinah | "prāñ nābhi-varddhanāt pumso jāta-karma vidhīyate" | "tadā 'sya mātā sāvitrī pitā tv āchāryya uchyate" | 12485. "Tāvach chhūdra-samo hy esha yāvad vede na jāyate" | tasminn evam mati-dvaidhe Manuh Svāyambhuvo 'bravīt | krita-krityāh punar varnā yadi vrittam na vidyate | sankaras tatra nāgendra balavān prasamīkshitaḥ | yatredānīm mahāsarpa samskritam vrittam ishyate | tam brāhmanam aham pūrvam uktavān bhujagottama |

"12469. The Serpent said: Who may be a Brāhman, and what is the thing to be known, o Yudhishthira;—tell me, since by thy words I infer thee to be a person of extreme intelligence. Yudhishthira replied: 12470. The Smriti declares, o chief of Serpents, that he is a Brāhman, in whom truth, liberality, patience, virtue, innocence, austere fervour, and compassion are seen. And the thing to be known is the supreme Brahma, free from pain, as well as from pleasure,—to whom, when men have attained, they no longer sorrow. What is your opinion? The Serpent replied: The Veda (brahma) is beneficial to all the four castes and is authoritative and true. And so we find in

240 Such is the sense assigned by the Commentator to this line, the drift of which is not very clear. The comment runs thus: Sarpas tu brāhmaṇa-padena jāti-mātram vivakshitvā śūdre tal lakshaṇaṃ vyabhichārayati "chāturvarnyam" iti sārddhena | chaturṇāṃ varṇānaṃ hitam | saiyam pramānaṃ cha dharma-vyapasthāpakam brahma vedaḥ | śūdrāchāra-smriter api veda-mūlakatvāt sarvo py āchārādiḥ śruti-mūlakah

Sudras also truth, liberality, calmness, innocence, harmlessness, and compassion. And as for the thing to be known, which is free from pain and pleasure, I perceive that there is no other thing free from these two influences. Yudhishthira rejoined: 12475. The qualities characteristic of a S'udra do not exist in a Brahman (nor vice versa). (Were it otherwise) the Südra would not be a Südra, nor the Brāhman a Brāhman.241 The person in whom this regulated practice is perceived is declared to be a Brāhman; and the man, in whom it is absent, should be designated as a Sudra. And as to what you say further, that there is nothing other than this (Brahma) to be known, which is free from the susceptibilities in question; this is also (my own) opinion, that there is nothing free from them. Just as between cold and heat there can be neither heat nor cold, so there is nothing free from the feeling of pleasure and pain. Such is my view; or how do you consider? The Serpent remarked: 12480. If a man is regarded by you as being a Brāhman only in consequence of his conduct, then birth is vain until action is shown. Yudhishthira replied: O most sapient Serpent, birth is difficult to be discriminated in the present condition

ity arthah | evam cha satyādikam yadi śūdre'py asti tarhi so'pi brāhmaṇa eva syād iti āha "śūdreshv api" iti | "The serpent, however, understanding by the term Brāhman mere birth, shows in a sloka and a half that Yudhishthira's definition fails by being applicable also to a S'ūdra. Chāturvarnya means 'beneficial to the four castes.' (Such is the Veda), which is also 'true' and 'authoritative,' as establishing what is duty. Inasmuch as the Smṛiti which prescribes a S'ūdra's conduct is itself founded on the Veda; all conduct, etc., is based on the Veda. And so if (the characters of) truth, etc., are found also in a S'ūdra, he too must be a Brāhman—such is his argument in the words 'In S'ūdras also.'" According to this explanation the connection between the first line and the second and third may be as follows: The Veda is beneficial to all the castes, and therefore S'ūdras also, having the advantage of its guidance, although at second hand, may practise all the virtues you enumerate; but would you therefore call them Brāhmans?

241 This verse is not very lucid; but the sense may be that which I have assigned. The Commentator says: Itaras tu brāhmaṇa-padena brahma-vidam vivakshitvā s'ūdrāder api brāhmaṇatvam abhyupagamya pariharati "Sūdre tv" iti | S'ūdra-lakshya-kāmādikam na brāhmaṇa'sti na brāhmaṇa-lakshya-samādikam sūdre'sti ity arthaḥ | śūdro'pi śamādy-upeto brāhmaṇaḥ | brāhmaṇa'pi kāmādy-upetaḥ śūdra eva ity arthaḥ | "The other (Yudhishthira), however, understanding by the word Brāhmaṇa one who knows the Veda (or, Brahma), and conceding the fact of a S'ūdra's Brāhmanhood, obviates by the words 'but in a S'ūdra,' etc. (the objection thence drawn). The qualities, lust, etc., distinctive of a S'ūdra, do not exist in a Brāhman, nor do the qualities tranquillity, etc., characteristic of a Brāhman exist in a S'ūdra. A S'ūdra distinguished by the latter is a Brāhman; while a Brāhman characterized by lust, etc., is a S'ūdra."

of humanity, on account of the confusion of all castes.242 All (sorts of)

242 In the tenth vol. of his Indische Studien, p. 83, Professor Weber adduces some curious evidence of the little confidence entertained in ancient times by the Indians in the chastity of their women. He refers to the following passages: (1) Nidana Sutra, iii. 8. Uchchavacha-charanah striyo bhavanti | saha deva-sakshye cha manushya-sakshye cha yesham putro vakshye tesham putro bhavishyami | yams'cha putran vakshye te me putrāh bhavishyanti | "Women are irregular in their conduct. Of whatsoever men, I, taking gods and men to witness, shall declare myself to be the son, I shall be their son; and they whom I shall name as my sons shall be so." (2) S'atapatha Brahmana, iii. 2, 1, 40. Atha yad "brahmanah" ityaha | anaddha iva vai asya atah purā jānam bhavati | idam hy āhuh "rakshāmsi yoshitam anusachante tad uta rakshāmsy eva reta ādadhati iti | atha atra addhā jāyate yo brahmano yo yajnāj jāyate | tosmād api rājanyam vā vais'yam vā "brāhmanah" ity eva brūyāt | brahmano hi jāyate yo yajnāj jāyate | tasmād āhuḥ "na savana-kritam hanyad enasvī ha era savana-kritā" iti | "Now as regards what he says (this) Brāhman (has been consecrated): 'before this his birth is uncertain. For they say this that 'Rakshases follow after women, and therefore that it is Rakshases who inject seed into them." (Compare what it said of the Gandharvas in Atharva V. iv. 37, 116, and Journ. Roy. As. Soc. for 1865, p. 301.) So then he is certainly born who is born from sacred science (brahma) and from sacrifice. Wherefore also let him address a Rajanya or a Vaisya as 'Brāhman,' for he is born from sacred science (brāhma, and consequently a Brāhman) who is born from sacrifice. Hence they say 'let no one slay an offerer of a libation, for he incurs (the) sin (of Brahmanicide?) by so doing." (3) On the next passage of the S'. P. Br. ii. 5, 2, 20, Professor Weber remarks that it is assumed that the wife of the person offering the Varuna praghasa must have one or more paramours: Atha pratipras'hātā pratiparaiti | sa patnīm udāneshyan prichhati 'kena (jāreņa Comm.) charasi' iti | Varunyam vai etat strī karoti yad anyasya saty anyena charati | atho " na id me 'ntah-śalpā juhuvad" iti tasmāt prichhati | niruktam vai enah kanīyo bhavati | satyam hi bhavati | tasmād vā iva prichhati | sā yad na pratijānīta jnātibhyo ha asyai tad ahitam syāt | "The pratiprasthātri (one of the priests) returns. Being about to bring forward the wife, he asks her, 'with what (paramour) dost thou keep company?' For it is an offence incurring punishment from Varuna that being the wife of one man she keeps company with another. He enquires 'in order that she may not sacrifice with me while she feels an inward pang.' For a sin when declared becomes less: for it is not attended with falsehood. Therefore he enquires. If she does not confess, it will be ill for her relations." (This passage is explained in Kātyāyana's S'rauta Sūtras, v. 5, 6-11.) (4) S'. P. Br. i. 3, 2, 21, Tad u ha uvācha Yājnavalkyo "yathādishtam patnyāh astu | kas tad ādriyeta yat parapumsā vā patnī syāt" | "Yājnavalkya said this (in opposition to the doctrine of some other teachers): 'let the prescribed rule be followed regarding a wife. Who would mind his wife consorting with other men?" The last clause has reference to the consequence which the other teachers said would follow from adopting the course they disapproved, viz., that the wife of the man who did so would become an adulteress. (5) Taitt. S. v. 6, 8, 3. Na agniñ chitvā rāmām upeyād "ayonau reto dhasyāmi" iti | na dvitīyam chitvā 'nyasya striyam upeyāt | na tritīyam chitvā kānchana upeyāt | reto vui etad nidhatte yad agnim chinute | yad upeyad retasa vyridhyeta | "Let not a man. after preparing the altar for the sacred fire, approach a woman (a S'ūdra-woman. according to the Commentator), (considering) that in doing so, he would be discharging seed into an improper place. Let no man, after a second time preparing the firemen are continually begetting children on all (sorts of) women. The speech, the mode of propagation, the birth, the death of all mankind are alike. The text which follows is Vedic and authoritative: 'We who (are called upon) we recite the text.' Hence those men who have an insight into truth know that virtuous character is the thing chiefly to be desired. 'The natal rites of a male are enjoined to be performed before the section of the umbilical cord (Manu, ii. 29). Then Sāvitrī (the Gāyatrī, Manu ii. 77) becomes his mother and his altar, approach another man's wife. Let no man, after a third time preparing the fire-altar, approach any woman: for in preparing the fire-altar he is discharging seed. Should he approach (a woman in these forbidden cases) he will miscarry with his seed." This prohibition of adultery in a certain case, seems to prove that it was no uncommon occurrence, and is calculated, as Professor Weber remarks, to throw great doubt on the purity of blood in the old Indian families.

²⁴⁸ To explain the last elliptical expression I will quote part of the Commentator's remarks on the beginning of Yudhishthira's reply: Vagadīnām iva maithunasyāpi sādhāranyāj jātir durjneyā | tathā chā śrutih "na chaitad vidmo brāhmanāh smo vayam abrāhmanā vā" iti brāhmanya-samšayam upanyasyati | nanu jūty-anišchaye katham "brāhmano 'ham" ityādy abhimāna-purassaram yāgādau pravartteta ity āśankyāha "idam ārsham" iti \ atra "ye yajāmahe" ity anena cha ye vayam smo brāhmanāh anye vā te vayam yajāmahe iti brāhmanye navadhāranam darsitam | mantra-lingam api "ya evāsmi sa san yaje" iti | Tasmād āchāra eva brāhmanya-nischayahetur veda-prāmānyād ity upasamharati | "As the mode of propagation is common to all the castes, just as speech, etc. are, birth is difficult to be determined. And accordingly, by the words: 'We know not this, whether we are Brāhmans or no Brāhmans,' the Veda signifies a doubt as to Brāhmanhood. Then, having raised the difficulty 'how, if birth is undetermined, can a man engage in sacrifice, etc., with the previous consciousness that he is a Brāhman, etc.?' the author answers in the words 'this text is Vedic, etc.' It is both shewn by the words 'we who . . . recite,' (which mean) 'we, whoever we are, - Brāhmans or others, -we recite,' that the fact of Brahmanhood is unascertained; and this is also a characteristic of the formula, 'whosoever I am, being he who I am, I recite.'" The comment concludes: "Hence he briefly infers from the authoritative character of the Veda, that conduct is the cause of certainty in regard to Brahmanhood." Prof. Aufrecht has pointed out to me that the words ye yajāmahe occur in S'. P. Br. i. 5, 2, 16, and in Taitt. S. i. 16, 11, 1. The Commentator on the last-named passage refers in explanation of them to As'valāyana's S'rauta Sūtras, i. 5, 4 f., where it is said that these two words constitute the formula called aguh, which comes in at the beginning of all the yājyās which are unaccompanied by any anuyāja. The Commentator interprets the two words thus: sarve "ye" vayam hotaro'dhvaryuna "yaja" iti preshitās te vayam "yajāmahe" yājyām pathāmah | "All we hotri priests who are called upon by the adhvaryu by the word 'recite,' we recite, i.e. repeat the yājyā." (See Haug's Ait. Br. ii. p. 133, and note 11.) Prof. Aufrecht thinks the words in the Commentator's note ya evāsmi sa san yaje may be a free adaptation of Atharva V. vi. 123, 3, 4. It does not appear from what source the words na chaitad vidmah etc. are derived.

religious teacher his father (Manu, ii. 170, 225). 12485. Until he is born in the Veda, he is on a level with a Sūdra' (Manu, ii. 172);—so, in this diversity of opinions did Manu Svāyambhuva declare. The castes (though they have done nothing) will have done all they need do,²⁴⁴ if no fixed rules of conduct are observed. In such a case there is considered to be a gross confusion of castes. I have already declared that he is a Brāhman in whom purity of conduct is recognized."

The next passage from the Santiparvan, verses 6930 ff., is even more explicit than the last in denying any natural distinction between the people of the different castes:

Bhrigur uvācha | Asrijad brāhmanān evam pūrvam Brahmā prajāpatīn | ātma-tejo'bhinirvrittān bhāskarāgni-sama-prabhān | tatah satyañ cha dharmam cha tapo brahma cha śāśvatam | āchāram chaiva śaucham cha svargāya vidadhe prabhuh | deva-dānava-gandharvā daityāsura-mahoragāh | yaksha-rākshasa-nāgāś cha piśāchā manujās tathā | brāhmanāh kshattriyā vaisyāh śūdrās cha dvija-sattama \ ye chānye bhūta-sanghānām varnās tāms chāpi nirmame | brāhmanānām sito varnah kshattriyānam cha lohitah | vaiśyānām pītako varnah śūdrānām asitas tatha | 6935. Bharadvāja uvācha | Chāturvarnyasya varnena yadi varno vibhidyate | sarveshām khalu varnānām drišyate varna-sankarah | kāmah krodho bhayam lobhah sokas chintā kshudhā sramah | sarveshām nah245 prabhavati kasmād varno vibhidyate | sveda-mūtra-purīshāni śleshmā pittam sa-sonitam | tanuh ksharati sarveshām kasmād varno vibhajyate | jangamānām asamkhyeyāh sthāvarānām cha jātayah | teshām vividha-varnānām kuto varna-vinischayah | Bhrigur uvācha | Na višesho 'sti varnānām sarvam brāhmam idam jagat | Brahmanā pūrva srishtam hi karmabhir varnatām gatam | 6940. Kāma-bhoga-priyās tīkshnāh krodhanāh priya-sāhasāh |

²⁴⁵ The Calcutta edition reads na, "not," which cannot be right. The MS. in the Library of the Edinburgh University has nah, "of us."

The Commentator thus explains the word krita-kritya: Krita-krityāh śūdra-tulyāh | tathā cha smritih "na śūdre pātakam kinchid na cha samskāram arhati" iti teshām samskārāmarhatva-nishpāpatvābhidānat krita-krityatvam darśayati | tadvat traivarnikā api syur ity arthah | "Krita krityāh (lit. having done what was to be done) means, like S'ūdras; so the Smriti (when it says), 'No sin exists in a S'ūdra, nor is he fit for purificatory rites,' shews, by declaring the unfitness of this class for such rites, and its freedom from sin, that it has the character of krita-krityatvatva, i.e. of having done all it had to do. And such (in the event supposed) would be the case with men of the three (upper) classes also."

tyakta-svadharmā raktāngās te dvijāh kshattratām gatāh \ gobhyo vrittim samāsthāya pītāķ krishy-upajīvinah | sva-dharmān nānutishthanti te dvijā vaišyatām gatāh | himsānrita-priyā lubdhāh sarva-karmopajīvinah | kṛishṇāḥ śaucha-paribhrashṭās te dvijāḥ śūdratām gatāḥ \ ity etaiḥ karmabhir vyastā dvijā varnāntaram gātāh | dharmo yajna-kriyā teshām nityam na pratishidhyate | ity ete chaturo varnā yeshām brūhmī sarasvatī | vihitā Brahmanā pūrvam lobhāt tv ajnānatām gātāh | 6945. Brāhmanā brahma-tantra-sthās248 tapas teshām na nasyati | brahma dhārayatām nityam vratāni niyamāms tathā | brahma chaiva param srishtam ye na jānanti te 'dvijāh | teshām bahuvidhāś tv anyās tatra tatra hi jātayaḥ | piśāchā rākshasāḥ pretā vividhā mlechha-jātayaḥ | pranashṭajnāna-vijnānāh svachhandāchāra-cheshţitāh | prajā brāhmana-samskārāh sva-karma-krita-niśchayāḥ | rishibhih svena tapasā srijyante chāpare paraih | ādi-deva-samudbhūtā brahma-mūlā 'kshayā 'vyayā | sā srishţir mānasī nāma dharma-tantra-parāyanā | 6950. Bharadvāja uvācha | Brāhmanah kena bhavati kshattriyo vā dvijottama | vaisyah sūdras cha viprarshe tad brūhi vadatām vara | Bhrigur uvācha | Jata-karmādibhir yas tu sañskāraih sañskritah śuchih | vedādhyayana-sampannah shatsu karmasv avasthitah | śauchāchāra-sthitah samyag vighasāśī guru-priyah | nitya-vratī satyaparah sa vai brāhmana uchyate | satyam dānam athādroha ānriśamsyam trapā ghrinā | tapaś cha driśyate yatra sa brāhmana iti smritah | kshattra-jam sevate karma vedādhyayana-sangatah | dānādāna-ratir yas tu sa vai kshattriya uchyate | 6955. Viśaty āśu paśubhyaś cha krishy-ādāna-ratih śuchih | vedādhyayana-sampannah sa vaiśyah iti saninitāh | sarva-bhakshya-ratir nityam sarva-karma-karo 'śuchih | tyakta-vedas tv anāchārah sa vai śūdrah iti smritah | śūdre chaitad bhavel lakshyam dvije tach cha na vidyate | sa vai śūdro bhavech chhūdro brāhmano brāhmano na cha |

"Bhṛigu replied: 6930. Brahmā thus formerly created the Prajāpatis, Brahmanic, 247 penetrated by his own energy, and in splendour equalling the sun and fire. The lord then formed truth, righteousness, austere fervour, and the eternal veda (or sacred science), virtuous practice, and purity for (the attainment of) heaven. He also formed the gods, Dānavas, Gandharvas, Daityas, Asuras, Mahoragas, Yakshas, ²⁴⁶ Brahma-tantram = vedoktānushthānam | Comm.

²⁴⁷ Brāhmaṇān, "Brāhmans," is the word employed. It may mean here "sons of Brahmā."

Rākshasas, Nāgas, Piśāchas, and men, Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and Sūdras, as well as all other classes (varnāh) of beings. The colour (varna) of the Brāhmans was white; that of the Kshattriyas red; that of the Vaiśyas yellow, and that of the Sūdras black.' 248 6 935. Bharadvāja here rejoins: 'If the caste (varna) of the four classes is distinguished by their colour (varna), then a confusion of all the castes is observable. Desire, anger, fear, cupidity, grief, apprehension, hunger, fatigue, prevail over us all: by what, then, is caste discriminated? Sweat, urine, excrement, phlegm, bile, and blood (are common to all); the bodies of all decay: by what then is caste discriminated? There are innumerable kinds of things moving and stationary: how is the class (varna) of these various objects to be determined?' Bhṛigu replies: 'There is no difference of castes: 240 this world, having been at first created by Brahmā entirely Brahmanic, 250

248 It is somewhat strange, as Professor Weber remarks in a note to p. 215 of his German translation of the Vajra Sūchī, that in the passage of the Kāṭhaka Brāhmaṇa xi. 6, which he there quotes, a white colour is ascribed to the Vais'ya and a dark hue to the Rājanya. The words are these: Yach chhuklānām (brihīnām) ādityebhyo nirvapati tasmāch chhukla iva vaisyo jāyate | yat kṛishṇāṇām vāruṇām tasmād dhūmra iva rājanyaḥ | "Since the Vais'ya offers an oblation of white (rice) to the Ādityas, he is born as it were white; and as the Vāruṇa oblation is of black (rice) the Rājanya is as it were dusky."

240 Compare with this the words attributed in S'āntiparvan, verses 2819 ff., to King Muchukunda, who had been reproached by the god Kuvera with trusting for victory to the aid of his domestic priest instead of to his own prowess: Muchukundas tataḥ krudhah pratywācha Dhaneśvaram | nyāya-pūrvam asamrabdham asambhrūntam idam vachaḥ | brahma kshattram idam srishtam eka-yoni svayambhwvā | prithag-bala-vidhānam tanna lokam paripālayet | tapo-mantra-balam nityam brūhmaneshu pratishthitam | astra-bāhu-balam nityam kshattriyeshu pratishthitam | tābhyām sambhūya karttavyam prajānām paripālanam | "Muchukunda then, incensed, addressed to the Lord of riches these reasonable words, which did not partake of his anger or excitement: 'Brāhmans and Kshattriyas were created by Brahmā from the same womb (or source) with different forces appointed to them: this cannot (neither of these separate forces can?) protect the world. The force of austere fervour and of sacred texts abides constantly in the Brahmans; and that of weapons and their own arms in the Kshattriyas. By these two forces combined the people must be protected."

250 Brāhmam is the word employed. That it is to be understood in the sense of "Brāhmanical" appears from the following lines in which the word dvijāh must be taken in the special signification of Brāhmans and not of "twice-born men" (who may be either Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, or Vais'yas) in general. The Brāhman is considered to have been formed of the essence of Brahma, and to represent the original type of perfect humanity as it existed at the creation. The Commentator takes the word brāhman as = brāhmana-jātimat, "having the easte of Brāhmans;" and he explains the different colours mentioned in the next verses as follows: red (rakta) became (afterwards) separated into castes in consequence of works. 6940. Those Brāhmans (lit. twice-born men), who were fond of sensual pleasure, fiery, irascible, prone to violence, who had forsaken their duty, and were red-limbed, fell into the condition of Kshattriyas. Those Brāhmans, who derived their livelihood from kine, who were yellow, who subsisted by agriculture, and who neglected to practise their duties, entered into the state of Vaisyas. Those Brahmans, who were addicted to mischief and falsehood, who were covetous, who lived by all kinds of work, who were black and had fallen from purity, sank into the condition of Sudras. Being separated from each other by these works, the Brāhmans became divided into different castes. Duty and the rites of sacrifice have not been always forbidden to (any of) them. Such are the four classes for whom the Brahmanic 251 Sarasvatī was at first designed by Brahmā, but who through their cupidity fell into ignor-6945. Brāhmans live agreeably to the prescriptions of the Veda; while they continually hold fast the Veda, and observances, and ceremonies, their austere fervour (tapas) does not perish. And sacred science was created the highest thing: they who are ignorant of it are no twice-born men. Of these there are various other classes in different places, Piśāchas, Rākshasas, Pretas, various tribes of Mlechhas, who have lost all knowledge sacred and profane, and practise whatever observances they please. And different sorts of creatures with the purificatory rites of Brāhmans, and discerning their own duties, are created by different rishis through their own austere fervour. This creation, sprung from the primal god, having its root in Brahma, undecaying, imperishable, is called the mind-born creation, and is devoted to the prescriptions of duty.' 6950. Bharadvaya again enquires: 'What is that in virtue of which a man is a Brāhman, a Kshattriya, means "formed of the quality of passion" (rajo-guṇa-maya); yellow (pīta) "formed of the qualities of passion and darkness" (rajas-tamo-maya), and black (krishṇa or asita) "formed of darkness only" (kevala-tamomaya).

²⁵¹ Brāhmī. This word is thus interpreted by the Commentator: vedamayī | chaturnām api varnānām Brahmanā pūrvam vihitā | lobha-doshena tu ajnānatām tamo-bhāvam gatāh śūdrāh anadhikārino vede jātāh | "Sarasvatī, consisting of the Veda, was formerly designed by Brahmā for all the four castes: but the S'ūdras having through cupidity fallen into 'ignorance,' i.e. a condition of darkness, lost their right to the Veda." See Indische Studien, ii. 194, note, where Professor Weber understands this passage to import that in ancient times the S'ūdras spoke the language of the Āryas.

a Vaiśya, or a Sūdra; tell me, o most eloquent Brahman rishi.' Bhrigu replies: 'He who is pure, consecrated by the natal and other ceremonies, who has completely studied the Veda, lives in the practice of the six ceremonies, performs perfectly the rites of purification, who eats the remains of oblations, is attached to his religious teacher, is constant in religious observances, and devoted to truth, -is called a 6953. He in whom are seen truth, liberality, inoffensive-Brāhman. ness, harmlessness, modesty, compassion, and austere fervour, -is declared to be a Brahman. He who practises the duty arising out of the kingly office, who is addicted to the study of the Veda, and who delights in giving and receiving, 253—is called a Kshattriya. 6955. He who readily occupies himself with cattle, 253 who is devoted to agriculture and acquisition, who is pure, and is perfect in the study of the Veda,—is denominated a Vaiśya. 6956. He who is habitually addicted to all kinds of food, performs all kinds of work, who is unclean, who has abandoned the Veda, and does not practise pure observances,—is traditionally called a Sudra. And this (which I have stated) is the mark of a Sūdra, and it is not found in a Brāhman: (such) a Sūdra will remain a Sudra, while the Brahman (who so acts) will be no Brāhman."254

The passage next to be quoted recognizes, indeed, the existence of castes in the Krita age, but represents the members of them all as having been perfect in their character and condition, and as not differing from one another in any essential respects.

It is related in the Vanaparvan that Bhīmasena, one of the Pāndus, ²⁵² Dānam viprebhyaḥ | ādānam prajabhyaḥ, "Giving to Brāhmans, receiving from his subjects."—Comm.

²⁵³ Paśūn vānijyāya upayoginah upalabdhvā višati pratishthām labhate | "Who perceiving cattle to be useful for trade, 'enters,' obtains a basis (for his operations)."
—Comm. As we have seen above p. 97, these etymologies are frequently far-fetched and absurd.

²⁵⁴ On this verse the Commentator annotates as follows: etat satyādi-saptakam dvije traivarnike | dharma eva varna-vibhāge kāranam na jātir ity arthah | "These seven virtues, beginning with truth (mentioned in verse 6953), exist in the twice-born man of the first three classes. The sense is that righteousness, and not birth, is the cause of the division into classes." This explanation is not very lucid. But the sense seems to be that the seven good qualities referred to are the proper characteristics of the three upper castes, while the defects specified in verse 6956 are the proper distinctive marks of the S'ūdras. Thus the S'ūdra who has the four defects will remain a S'ūdra, but a Brāhman who has them will be no Brāhman.

in the course of a conversation with his brother ²⁵⁵ Hanumat the monkey chief, had requested information on the subject of the Yugas and their characteristics. Hanumat's reply is given in verses 11234 ff.:

Kritam nāma yugam tāta yatra dharmah sanātanah kritam eva na karttavyam tasmin kāle yugottame | na tatra dharmāh sīdanti kshīyante na cha vai prajāḥ | tataḥ krita-yugam nāma kālena gunatām gatam | deva-dānava-gandharva-yaksha-rākshasa-pannagāh | nāsan krita-yuge tāta tadā na kraya-vikrayah 256 | na sāma-rig-yajur-varnāh 257 kriyā nāsīch cha mānavī i abhidhyāya phalam tatra dharmah sannyāsa eva cha | na tasmin yuga-samsarge vyādhayo nendriya-kshayah | nāsūyā nāpi ruditam na darpo nāpi vaikritam 258 | na vigrahah 250 kutas tandrī na dvesho na cha paiśunam | 11240. Na bhayam nāpi santāpo na chershyā na cha matsaraḥ | tatah paramakam Brahma sā gatir yoginām parā | ātmā cha sarva-bhūtānām śuklo Nārāyanas tadā | brāhmanāh kshattriyāh vaiśyāh śūdrāścha kṛita-lakshaṇāḥ | kṛite yuge samabhavan sva-karma-niratāḥ prajāḥ | samāśrayam samāchāram sama-jnānam cha kevalam | tadā hi sāmakarmāno varnā dharmān avāpnuvan | eka-deva-sadā-yuktāh eka-mantra-vidhi-kriyāh | prithagdharmās tv eka-vedā dharmam ekam anuvratāh | chāturaśramya-yuktena karmanā kāla-yoginā | 11245. Akāma-phala-samyogāt prāpnuvanti parām gatim | ātma-yoga-samāyukto dharmo 'yam kritalakshanah | krite yuge chatushpādăś chāturvarnyasya śāśvatah | etat kritayugam nāma traigunya-parivarjjitam | tretām api nibodha tvam tasmin sattram pravarttate | pādena hrasate dharmo raktatām yāti chāchyutah | satya-pravrittāś cha narāh kriyā-dharma-parāyanāh | tato yajnāh pravarttante dharmāścha vividhāh kriyāh | tretāyām bhāva - sankalpāh kriyā-dāna-phalopagāh | prachalanti na vai dharmāt tapo-dāna-parāyanāh | 11250. Sva-dharma-sthāh kriyāvanto narās tretā-yuge 'bhavan | dvāpare tu yuge dharmo dvibhāgonah pravarttate | Vishnur vai pītatām yāti chaturdhā veda eva cha | tato 'nye cha chatur-vedās trivedās cha tathā pare | dvi-vedās chaika-vedās chāpy anrichas cha tathā pare | evam śāstreshu bhinneshu bahudhā nīyate kriyā | tapo-dāna-pravrittā cha rājasī bhavati prajā | eka-vedasya chājnānād vedās te bahavah

²³⁵ Both were sons of Vāyu. See verses 11134, 11169 f. and 11176 f. of this same book. The Rāmāyana is mentioned in verse 11177.

²⁵⁰ The MS. in the Edinburgh University Library reads as the last pāda: dānā-dhyayana-viśramāḥ.

²⁵⁷ The Edinburgh MS. reads vedāḥ instead varnāḥ.

²⁵⁸ Kapatam—Comm.

²⁵⁹ Vairam-Comm.

kṛitāḥ | sattvasya cheha vibhramśāt satye 260 kaśchid avasthitaḥ | sattvāt prachyavamānānām vyādhayo bahavo 'bhavan | 11255. Kāmāś chopadravāśchaiva tadā vai daiva-kāritāḥ | yair ardyamānāḥ subhriśam tapas tapyanti mānavāḥ | kāma-kāmāḥ svarga-kāmā yajnām̃s tanvanti chāpare | evam dvāparam āsādya prajāḥ kshīyanty adharmataḥ | pādenaik-na Kaunteya dharmah kali-yuge sthitaḥ | tāmasam yugam āsādya krishno bhavati Keśavaḥ | vedāchārāḥ praśāmyanti dharma-yajna-kriyās tathā | ītayo vyādhayas trandrī doshāh krodhādayās tathā | upadravāś cha varttante ādhayah kshud bhayam tathā | yugeshv āvarttamāneshu dharmo vyāvarttute punaḥ | dharme vyāvarttamāne tu loko vyāvarttate punaḥ | loke kshīne kshayam yānti bhāvā loka-pravarttakāḥ | yuga-kshaya-kritā dharmāḥ prārthanāni vikurvate | etat kaliyugam nāma achirād yat pravarttate | yugānuvarttanam tv etat kurvanti chirājīvinah |

"11234. The Krita is that age in which righteousness is eternal. In the time of that most excellent of Yugas (everything) had been done (krita), and nothing (remained) to be done. Duties did not then languish, nor did the people decline. Afterwards, through (the influence of) time, this yuga fell into a state of inferiority. In that age there were neither Gods, 263 Dānavas, Gandharvas, Yakshas, Rākshasas, nor Pannagas; no buying or selling went on; the Vedas were not classed 263 as Sāman, Rich, and Yajush; no efforts were made by men: 264 the fruit (of the earth was obtained) by their mere wish: righteousness and abandonment of the world (prevailed).

260 The Edinburgh MS. reads sattve instead of satye.

²⁶¹ In thus rendering, I follow the Commentator, whose gloss is this: Mukhyam apy amukhyatām gatam | "although the chief, it fell into inferiority." In Böhtlingk and Roth's Lexicon this line is quoted under the word gunatā, to which the sense of "superiority, excellence," is assigned.

202 Compare with this the verses of the Vāyu Purāna quoted in p. 90, which state that in the Krita age there were neither plants nor animals; which are the products of unrighteousness.

263 I do not venture to translate "there was then no [division of the Veda into] Sāman, Rich, and Yajush, nor any castes," (1) because the Edinburgh MS. reads vedāḥ instead of varṇāḥ, and the Commentator does not allude to the word varṇāḥ; and (2) castes (varṇāḥ) are referred to below (verses 11242 f.) as existing, though without much distinction of character. The Commentator explains: trayī-dharmasya chitta-suddhy-arthatvāt tasyāś cha tadānīm svabhāvatvāt na sāmādīny āsan | "As the object of the triple veda is purity of heart, and as that existed naturally at that period, there were no (divisions of) Sāman, etc."

284 I follow the Commentator whose gloss is: "Mānavī kriyā" krishy-ādy-āram-bha-bhūta | kintu "abhidhyāya phalom," sankalpād eva sarvam sampadyate [

No disease or decline of the organs of sense arose through the influence of the age; there was no malice, weeping, pride, or deceit; no contention, and how could there be any lassitude? no hatred, cruelty, (11240) fear, affliction, jealousy, or envy. Hence the supreme Brahma was the transcendent resort of those Yogins. Then Nārāyana, the soul of all beings, was white.265 Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas and Sudras possessed the characteristics of the Krita.266 In that age were born creatures devoted to their duties. They were alike in the object of their trust, in observances and in their knowledge. At that period the castes, alike in their functions, fulfilled their duties, were unceasingly devoted to one deity, and used one formula (mantra), one rule, and one rite. Though they had separate duties, they had but one Veda, and practised one duty.207 By works connected with the four orders, and dependent on conjunctures of time, 268 (11245) but unaffected by desire, or (hope of) reward, they attained to supreme felicity. This complete and eternal righteousness of the four castes during the Krita was marked by the character of that age and sought after union with the supreme soul. The Krita age was free from the three qualities.200 Understand now the Treta, in which sacrifice commenced, 270 righteousness decreased by a fourth, Vishnu became red;

265 In verse 12981 of this same Vanaparvan the god says of himself: śvetaḥ kṛitayuge varṇah pītas tretāyuge mama | rakto dvāparam āsādya kṛishṇaḥ kali-yuge tathā | "My colour in the Kṛita age is white, in the Tretā yellow, when I reach the Dvāpara it is red, and in the Kali black."

268 The Commentator's gloss is: kṛitāni svatah siddhāni lakshaṇāni samo damas taṇa ity-ādīni yeshām te | "They were men whose characteristics, tranquillity, etc, were effected, spontaneously accomplished." On verse 11245 he explains the same term kṛita-lakshaṇaḥ by kṛita-yuga-sūchakaḥ, "indicative of the Kṛita age."

267 The different clauses of this line can only be reconciled on the supposition that the general principle of duty, and the details of the duties are distinguished. Dharma is the word used in both parts of the verse for "duty."

208 Kāla-yoginā. The Commentator explains: kālo daršādih | tad-yuktena | "connected with time, i.e. the appearance of the new moon, etc."

²⁶⁹ And yet we are told in the Vāyu P. that the creation itself proceeded from the influence of the quality of passion (see above, p. 75), and that the four castes when originally produced were characterized in different ways by the three qualities, pp. 62 and 89.

²⁷⁰ Compare S'ānti-parva, 13088. Idam krita-yugam nāma kālah śreshthah pravarttitah | ahimsyā yajna-pasavo yuge'smin na tad anyathā | chatushpāt sakalo dharmo bhavishyaty atra vai surāh | tatas tretā-yugam nāma trayī yatra bhavishyati | prokshitā yatra pasavo badham prāpsyanti vai makhe | "This Krita age is the most excellent of periods: then victims are not allowed to be slaughtered; complete and and men adhered to truth, and were devoted to a righteousness dependent on ceremonies. Then sacrifices prevailed, with holy acts and a variety of rites. In the Treta men acted with an object in view, seeking after reward for their rites and their gifts, and no longer disposed to austerities and to liberality from (a simple feeling of) duty. 11250. In this age, however, they were devoted to their own duties, and to religious ceremonies. In the Dvapara age righteousness was diminished by two quarters, Vishnu became yellow, and the Veda fourfold. studied four Vedas, others three, others two, others one, and some none at all.271 The scriptures being thus divided, ceremonies were celebrated in a great variety of ways; and the people being occupied with austerity and the bestowal of gifts, became full of passion (rajasī). Owing to ignorance of the one Veda, Vedas were multiplied. And now from the decline of goodness (sattva) few only adhered to truth. When men had fallen away from goodness, many diseases, (11255) desires and calamities, caused by destiny, assailed them, by which they were severely afflicted, and driven to practice austerities. Others desiring enjoyments and heavenly bliss, offered sacrifices. Thus, when they had reached the Dvapara, men declined through unrighteousness. the Kali righteousness remained to the extent of one-fourth only. Arrived in that age of darkness. Vishnu became black: practices enjoined. by the Vedas, works of righteousness, and rites of sacrifice, ceased. Calamities, diseases, fatigue, faults, such as anger, etc., distresses, anxiety, hunger, fear, prevailed. As the ages revolve, righteousness again declines. When this takes place, the people also decline. When they decay, the impulses which actuate them also decay. The practices generated by this declension of the Yugas frustrate men's aims. Such is the Kali Yuga which has existed for a short time. Those who are long-lived act in conformity with the character of the age."

The next passage from the same book (the Vana-parvan) does not make any allusion to the Yugas, but depicts the primeval perfection of mankind with some traits peculiar to itself, and then goes on to describe their decline. Mārkandeya is the speaker.

perfect righteousness will prevail. Next is the Tretā in which the triple veda will come into existence; and animals will be slain in sacrifice." See note 65, page 39, above.

²⁷¹ The Commentator explains anrichas ("without the Rig-veda") by krita-krityāh. On the sense of the latter word see above.

12619. Nirmalāni śarīrāni viśuddhāni śarīrinām | sasarja dharmatantrāni pūrvotpannaḥ Prajāpatiḥ | amogha-phala-sankalpāḥ suvratāḥ satyavādinaḥ | brahma-bhūtā narāḥ puṇyāḥ purāṇāḥ kuru-sattama | sarve devaih samāḥ yānti svachhandena nabhas-talam | tataś cha punar āyānti sarve svachhanda-chāriṇaḥ | svachhanda-maraṇāś chāsan narāḥ svachhanda-chāriṇaḥ | alpa-bādhā nirātankāḥ siddhārthā nirupadravāḥ | drashṭāro deva-sanghānām rishīṇām cha mahātmanām | pratyakshāḥ sarvadharmāṇām dāntā vigata-matsarāḥ | āsan varsha-sahasrīyās tathā putra-sahasriṇaḥ | 12625. Tataḥ kālāntare 'nyasmin prithivī-tala-chāriṇaḥ | kāma-krodhādhibhūtās te māyā-vyājopajīviṇaḥ | lobha-mohābhibhūtās te saktā dehais tato narāḥ | aśubhaiḥ karmabhiḥ pāpās tiryañ-niraya-gāminaḥ |

"The first-born Prajāpati formed the bodies of corporeal creatures pure, spotless, and obedient to duty. The holy men of old were not frustrated in the results at which they aimed; they were religious, truth-speaking, and partook of Brahma's nature. Being all like gods they ascended to the sky and returned at will. They died too when they desired, suffered few annoyances, were free from disease, accomplished all their objects, and endured no oppression. Self-subdued and free from envy, they beheld the gods 272 and the mighty rishis, and had an intuitive perception of all duties. 273 They lived for a thousand years, and had each a thousand sons. Then at a later period of time, the inhabitants of the earth became subject to desire and anger, and subsisted by deceit and fraud. Governed by cupidity and delusion, devoted to carnal pursuits, sinful men by their evil deeds walked in crooked paths leading to hell," etc., etc.

272 See the passage from S'ankara's Commentary on the Brahma Sūtras i. 3, 32, in the 3rd vol. of this work, pp. 49 f., and note 49 in p. 95; and S'atapatha Brāhmaṇa, ii. 3, 4, 4, ubhaye ha vai idam agre saha āsur devāš cha manushyās cha | tad yad ha sma manushyānām na bhavati tad ha devān yāchante "idam vai no nāsti idam no 'stv" iti | te tasyai eva yāchnyāyai dveshena devās tirobhūtā "na id hinasāni na id dveshyo 'sani" iti ("Gods and men, together, were both originally (component parts of) this world. Whatever men had not they asked from the gods, saying, We have not this; let us have it.' From dislike of this solicitation the gods disappeared, (saying each of them) 'let me not hurt (them), let me not be hateful." Compare also the passage of the S'. P. Br. iii. 6, 2, 26, referred to by Professor Weber in Indische Studien, x. 158: Te ha sma ete ubhaye deva-manushyāh pitarah sampibante | sā eshā sampā | te ha sma drisyamānā eva purā sampibante uta etarhy adrisyamānāḥ | "Both gods, men, and fathers drink together. This is their symposium. Formerly they drank together visibly: now they do so unseen." Compare also Plato, Philebus, 18: Καὶ δι μέν παλαιοί, κρείττονες ἡμῶν κὰι ἐγγυτέρω θεῶν δικοῦντες, ταυτην φημην παρέδοσαν, "And the ancients who were better than ourselves, and dwelt nearer to the gods, have handed down this tradition."

278 Compare the passage of the Nirukta, i. 20, beginning, sākshāt-krita-dharmāṇa rishayo babhūvuḥ, quoted in the 2nd vol. of this work, p. 174.

At the end of the chapter of the Bhīshmaparvan, entitled Jambū-lihanda-nirmāna, there is a paragraph in which Sanjaya gives an account of the four yugas in Bhāratavarsha (Hindustan), and of the condition of mankind during each of those periods. After stating the names and order of the yugas, the speaker proceeds:

389. Chatvāri tu sahasrāni varshānām Kuru-sattama | āyuḥ-sankhyā krita-yuge sankhyātā rāja-sattama | tathā trīni sahasrāni tretāyām manujādhipa | dve sahasre dvāpare cha bhuvi tishthanti sāmpratam | na pramāna-sthitir hy asti tishye 'smin Bharatarshabha | garbha-sthāś cha mriyante cha tatha jata mriyanti cha | mahabala mahasattvah prajnaguna-samanvitāh | prajāyante cha jūtāś cha śataśo 'tha sahasraśaḥ | jūtāḥ krita-yuge rājan dhaninah priya-darsinah | prajāyante cha jātās cha munayo vai tapodhanāh | mahotsāhāh mahātmāno dhārmikāh satya-vādinah | priyadarsanā vapushmanto mahāvīryā dhanurdharāh | varārhā yudhi jāyante kshattriyāh śūra-sattamāh | tretāyām kshattriyā rājan sarve vai chakravarttinah | āyushmanto mahāvīrā dhanurdhara-varā yudhi | jāyante kshattriyā vīrās tretāyām vasa-varttinah | sarve varnā mahārāja jāyante dvāpare sati | mahotsāhā vīryavantah paraspara-jayaishinah | tejasā 'lpena samyuktāh krodhanāh purushā nripa | lubdhā anritakāś chaiva tishye jäyanti Bhārata | īrshā mānas tathā krodho māyā 'sūyā tathaiva cha | tishye bhavati bhūtūnām rāgo lobhaś cha Bhārata | sankshepo vartrājan dvāpare 'smin narādhipa |

"389. Four thousand years are specified as the duration of life in the Krita age, 274 three thousand in the Tretā, and two thousand form the period at present established on earth in the Dvāpara. There is no fixed measure in the Tishya (Kali): embryos die in the womb, as well as children after their birth. Men of great strength, goodness, wisdom, and virtue were born, and born too in hundreds and thousands. In the Krita age men were produced opulent and beautiful, as well as munis rich in austere fervour. Energetic, mighty, righteous, veracious, beautiful, well-formed, valorous, bow-carrying, (395) heroic Kshattriyas, distinguished in battle, were born.²⁷⁵ In the Tretā all sovereigns were Kshattriyas. Heroic Kshattriyas were born in the Tretā, long-lived, great warriors, carrying bows in the fight, and living subject to authority. During the Dvāpara all castes are produced, energetic, valorous, striving for victory over one another. In the Tishya age are born men of little vigour, irascible, covetous, and mendacious. During that period, envy, pride, anger, delusion, ill-will, desire, and cupidity prevail among all beings. During this Dvāpara age there is some restriction."

As it is here stated that men of all castes were born in the Dvāpara, while Brāhmans and Kshattriyas only are spoken of as previously existing, it is to be presumed that the writer intends to intimate that no Vaiśyas or Sūdras existed during the Krita and Tretā ages. This accords with the account given in the passage quoted above from the Uttara Kānda of the Rāmāyana, chapter 74, as well as with other texts which will be quoted below.

The following verses might be taken for a rationalistic explanation of the traditions regarding the yugas; but may be intended as nothing more than a hyperbolical expression of the good or bad effects of a king's more or less active discharge of his duties:

S'anti-parva, 2674. Kālo vā kāraṇam rājņo rājā vā kāla-kāraṇam | iti te samśayo mā bhūd rājā kālasya kāraṇam | daṇḍa-nītyām yadā rājā samyak kārtsnyena varttate | tadā krita-yugam nāma kāla-srishṭam pravarttate | 2682. Daṇḍa-nītyām yadā rājā trīn amśān anuvarttate | chaturtham amśam utsrijya tadā tretā pravarttate | 2684. Arddham tyaktvā yadā rājā nīty-artham anuvarttate | tatas tu dvāparam nāma sa kālaḥ sampravarttate | 2686. Daṇḍa-nītim parityajya yadā kārttsnyena bhūmipaḥ | projāḥ kliśnāty ayogena pravartteta tadā kaliḥ | 2693. Rājā krita-yuga-srashṭā tretāyā dvāparasya cha | yugasya cha chaturthasya rājā bhavati kāraṇam |

"2674. The time is either the cause of the king, or the king is the cause of the time. Do not doubt (which of these alternatives is true): the king is the cause of the time. When a king occupies himself fully in criminal justice, then the Krita age, brought into existence by time, prevails." [Then follows a description of the results of such good government: righteousness alone is practised; prosperity reigns; the seasons are pleasant and salubrious; longevity is universal; no widows are seen; and the earth yields her increase without cultivation.] "2682. When the king practises criminal justice only to the extent of three parts, abandoning the fourth, then the Tretā prevails." [Then evil is introduced to the extent of a fourth, and the earth has to be tilled.] "2684. When the king administers justice with the omission of a half, then the period called the Dvāpara prevails." [Then evil is increased to a half, and the earth even when tilled yields only half her produce.] "2686. When, relinquishing criminal law altogether, the king actively oppresses his subjects, then the Kali age prevails." [Then the state of things, which existed in the Krita age, is nearly reversed.] "2693. The king is the creator of the Krita, Tretā, and Dvāpara ages, and the cause also of the fourth yuga."

²⁷⁵ It does not appear clearly whether we are to suppose them to have been produced in the Krita, or in the Tretā, as in the passage of the Rāmāyaṇa, quoted in page 119.

The next extract is on the same subject of the duties of a king, and on the yugas as forms of his action (see Manu, ix. 301, quoted above, p. 49):

Sănti-parvan, 3406. Karma sădre krishir vaisye danda-nītis cha rājani | brahmacharyyam tapo mantrāh satyam chāpi dvijātishu | teshām yah kshattriyo veda vastrānām iva sodhanam²⁷⁶ | sīla-doshān vinirharttum su pitā sa prajāpatih | kritam tretā dvāparam cha kalis Bharatarshabha | rāja-vrittāni sarvāni rājaiva yugam uchyate | chāturvarnyam tathā vedās chāturāśramyam eva cha | sarvam pramuhyate hy etad yadā rājā pramādyati |

"3406. Labour (should be found) in a Sūdra, agriculture in a Vaiśya, criminal justice in a King, continence, austere fervour, and the use of sacred texts in a Brāhman. The Kshattriya, who knows how to separate their good and bad qualities, (as (a washerman) understands the cleansing of clothes), is a father and lord of his subjects. The Krita, Tretā, Dvāpara, and Kali, are all modes of a King's action. It is a King who is called by the name of Yuga. The four castes, the Vedas, and the four orders, are all thrown into disorder when the king is regardless."

²⁷⁶ This comparison is more fully expressed in a preceding verse (3404): Yo na jānāti nirharttum vastrānām rajako malam | raktānām vā sodhayitum yathā nāsti tathaiva saḥ |

In two of the preceding passages different colours are represented as characteristic either of particular castes (Sänti-p. verses 6934 ff.), or of particular yugas (Vana-p. verses 11241 ff.). Colours (though not ranked in the same order of goodness) are similarly connected with moral and physical conditions in verses 10058 ff. of the Säntiparvan, of which 1 shall offer a few specimens:

Shad jīva-varnāh paramam pramānam krishno dhūmro nīlam athāsya madhyam | raktam punah sahyataram sukham tu hāridra-varnam susukham cha śuklam | parantu śuklam vimalam viśokam gata-klamam siddhyati dānavendra | gatvā tu yoni-prabhavāni daitya sahasraśah siddhim upaiti jīvah | 10060. Gatih punar varna-kritā prajānām varnas tathā kāla-krito 'surendra | 10062. Krishnasya varnasya gatir nikrishtā sa sajate narake pachyamānah |

"10058. Six colours of living creatures are of principal importance, black, dusky, and blue which lies between them; then red is more tolerable, yellow is happiness, and white is extreme happiness. White is perfect, being exempted from stain, sorrow, and exhaustion; (possessed of it) a being going through (various) births, arrives at perfection in a thousand forms. 10060. Thus destination is caused by colour, and colour is caused by time. 10062. The destination of the black colour is bad. When it has produced its results, it clings to hell."

The next passage, from the Harivansa, assigns to each of the four castes a separate origin, but at the same time gives an explanation of their diversity which differs from any that we have yet encountered: unless, indeed, any one is prepared to maintain that the four principles, out of which the castes are here represented to have arisen, are respectively identical with the mouth, arms, thighs, and feet of Brahmā! This passage, however, corresponds with one of those already quoted in associating different colours with the several castes. The question with which the passage opens refers to an account which had been given in the preceding section (verses 11799 ff.) of the creation of Bhṛigu and Angiras, to both of whom the epithet "progenitor of Brāhmans" (brahma-vaṃśa-kara) is applied. No mention is made there of Kshattriyas or any other castes. M. Langlois, the French translator of the Harivanśa, remarks that the distinction between the age of the Brāhmans and that of the Kshattriyas is an unusual one, and receives no explanation in the context. But in two of the passages which have been quoted above (1) from the Uttara Kāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa, chapter 74 (p. 119), and (2) from the Bhīshma-parva of the Mahābhārata, verses 393 ff. (p. 149), I think we find indications that the Kṛita Yuga was regarded as an age in which Brāhmans alone existed, nd that Kshattriyas only began to be born in the Tretā.

Harivamsa, 11808. Janameya uvācha | Srutam brahma-yugam brahman yuganam prathamam yugam | kshattrasyapi yugam brahman śrotum ichhāmi tattvatah | sasamskshepam savistaram niyamaih bahubhiś chitam | upāya-jnais cha kathitam kratubhis chopasobhitam | Vaisampāyana uvācha | 11810. Etat te kathayishyāmi yajna-karmabhir architam | dāna-dharmais cha vividhaih prajābhir upasobhitam | te 'ngushtha-mātrā munayah ādattāh sūrya-raśmibhih | moksha-prāptena vidhinā nirābādhena karmanā | pravritte chāpravritte cha nityam Brahma-parāyanāḥ | parāyanasya sangamya Brahmanas tu mahīpate | śrī-vrittāh pāvanāś chaiva brāhmanāś cha mahīpate | chārita-brahmacharyyāś cha brahmajnānena bodhitāh | pūrne yuga-sahasrānte prabhāve pralayām gatāh | brāhmanā vritta-sampannā jnāna-siddhāh samāhitāh | 11815. Vyatiriktendriyo Vishnur yogātmā brahma-sambhavah | Dakshah prajāpatir bhūtvā srijate vipulāh prajāh | aksharād brāhmanāh saumyāh ksharāt kshattriya-bandhavah | vaisya vikaratas chaiva sadrah dhama-vikaratah | śveta-lohitakair varnaih pitair nīlaiś cha brāhmanāh | abhinirvarttitāh varnāms chintayānena Vishnunā | tato varnatvam āpannāh prajā loke chaturvidhāh | brāhmanāh kshattriyā vaisyāh śūdrās chaiva mahīpate | ekalingāh prithag-dharmā dvipādāḥ paramādbhutāḥ | yātanayā 'bhisampannā gati-jnāh sarva-karmasu | trayānām varna-jātānām veda-proktāh kriyāh smṛitāh | tena brāhmaṇa-yogena vaishnavena mahīpate | prajnayā tejasā yogāt tasmāt Prāchetasah prabhuh | Vishnur eva mahāyogī karmaṇām antaram gataḥ | tato nirvāṇa-sambhūtāḥ śūdrāḥ karma-vivarjitāḥ | tasmād nārhanti samskāram na hy atra brahma vidyate | yathā 'gnau dhūma-sanghāto hy aranyā mathyamānayā | prādurbhūto visarpan vai nopayujyati karmani | evam śūdrā visarpanto bhuvi kārtsnyena janmanā | na samskritena 277 dharmena veda-proktena karmanā |

"Janamejaya says: 11808. I have heard, o Brāhman, the (description of the) Brahma Yuga, the first of the ages. I desire also to be accurately informed, both summarily and in detail, about the age of the ²⁷⁷ The printed text reads nasamskritena; but na samskritena seems necessary.

Kshattriyas, with its numerous observances, illustrated as it was by sacrifices, and described as it has been by men skilled in the art of narration. Vaisampāyana replied: 11810. I shall describe to you that age revered for its sacrifices and distinguished for its various works of liberality, as well as for its people. Those Munis of the size of a thumb had been absorbed by the sun's rays. Following a rule of life leading to final emancipation, practising unobstructed ceremonies, both in action and in abstinence from action constantly intent upon Brahma, united to Brahma as the highest object, -Brāhmans glorious and sanctified in their conduct, leading a life of continence, disciplined by the knowledge of Brahma, -Brāhmans complete in their observances, perfect in knowledge, and contemplative,—when at the end of a thousand yugas, their majesty was full, these Munis became involved in the dissolution of the world. 11815. Then Vishnu sprung from Brahma, removed beyond the sphere of sense, absorbed in contemplation, became the Prajāpati Daksha, and formed numerous creatures. The Brāhmans, beautiful (or, dear to Soma),278 were formed from an imperishable (akshara), the Kshattriyas from a perishable (kshara), element, the Vaisyas from alteration, the Sūdras from a modification of smoke. While Vishnu was thinking upon the eastes (varnan), Brahmans were formed with white, red, yellow, and blue colours (varnaih).279 Hence in the world men have become divided into castes, being of four descriptions, Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaisyas, and Sūdras, one in form, distinct in their duties, two-footed, very wonderful, full of energy(?), skilled in expedients in all their occupations. 11820. Rites are declared to be prescribed by the Vedas for the three (highest) castes. By that contemplation practised by the being sprung from Brahma (see v. 11815) -by that practised in his character as Vishnu,—the Lord Prāchetasa (Daksha), i.e. Vishnu the great contemplator (yogin), passed through his wisdom and energy from that state of meditation into the sphere of works.280 Next the Sūdras, produced from extinction, are destitute of rites. Hence they are not entitled to be admitted to the purificatory ceremonies, nor does sacred science belong to them. Just as the cloud of smoke which rises from the fire on the friction of the fuel, and is dissipated, is of no service in the sacrificial rite, so too the Sūdras wandering over the earth, are altogether (useless for purposes of sacrifice) owing to their birth, their mode of life devoid of purity and their want of the observances prescribed in the Veda."

²⁷⁸ In verse 11802, we read abhishichya tu Somam cha yauvarājye Pitāmahah | brāhmaṇāmām cha rājānam sāsvatam rajanī-charam | "Brahmā also inaugurated Soma as the heir to the kingdom, as the king of the Brāhmans who walks eternally through the night."

²⁷⁹ This play upon the two senses of the word varna will be noticed.

²⁸⁰ I do not profess to be certain that I have succeeded in discovering the proper meaning of this last sentence.

The next extract gives an account at variance with all that precedes, as it does not assign to all the Brāhmans themselves the same origin, but describes the various kinds of officiating priests as having been formed from different members of Vishnu's body:

Harivamsa, 11355. Evam ekārnave bhūte sete loke mahādyutih | prachhādya salilam sarvam Harir Nārāyanah prabhuh | mahato rajaso madhye mahārnava-samasya vai | virajasko mahābāhur aksharam brāhmanā viduḥ | ātma-rūpa-prakāsena tapasā samvritah prabhuh | trikam āchhādya kālam tu tatah sushvapa sas tada | purusho yajna ity evam yat param parikirttitam | yach chānyat purushākhyam tu tat sarvam purushottamah | ye cha yajnaparā viprā ritvijā iti sanjnitāh | ātma-dehāt purā bhūtā yajnebhyah śrūyatām tadā | 11360. Brahmānam paramam vaktrād udgātāram cha sāma-qām | hotāram atha chādhvaryyum bāhubhyām asrijat prabhuh | brăhmano brahmanatvach cha prastotaram cha sarvaśah | tam maitravarunam srishtvā pratishthātāram eva cha | udarāt pratiharttāram potāram chaiva Bhārata | achhāvākam athorubhyām neshtāram chaiva Bhārata | pānibhyām athachāgnīdhram brahmanyam chaiva yajniyam | grāvānam atha bāhubhyām unnetāram cha yājnikam | evam evaisha bhagavān shodaśaitān jagatpatih | pravaktrīn sarva-yajnānām ritvijo 'srijad uttamān | tad esha vai yajnamayah purusho veda-saminitah | vedāś cha tanmayāh sarve sāngopanishada-kriyāh

Vaisampāyana said: 1135. "Thus the glorious Lord Hari Nārāyana, covering the entire waters, slept on (the world) which had become one sea, in the midst of the vast expanse of fluid 251 (rajas), resembling a mighty ocean, himself free from passion (virajaskah), with mighty arms:—Brāhmans know him as the undecaying. Invested through austere fervour with the light of his own form, and clothed with triple time (past, present, and future), the Lord then slept. Purushottama

²⁸¹ Rajas is said in two places of the Nirukta, iv. 19, and x. 44, to have the sense of "water."

Sect. XII.—Extracts from the Bhagavata Purana on the same subject.

I will conclude my quotations from the Purāṇas on the subject of the origin of mankind and of castes with a few passages from the Bhāgavata Purāṇa. The first extract reproduces some of the ideas of the Purusha Sūkta²⁸³ more closely than any of the Puranic accounts yet given.

ii. 5, 34. Varsha-pūga-sahasrānte tad andan udake śayam | kāla-karma-svabhāva-stho jīvo 'jīvam ajīvayat | 35. Sa eva Purushas tasmād andam nirbhedya nirgataḥ | sahasrorv-anghri-bāhv-akshaḥ sahasrānana-śīrshavān | 36. Yasyehāvayavair lokān kalpayanti manīshinaḥ | katy-

282 I am unable to make a proper sense out of the words brahmano brāhmanatvāch cha, which, however, as I learn from Dr. FitzEdward Hall, are found (with only a difference of long and short vowels) in the best MSS. to which he has access, as well as in the Bombay edition. One of the sixteen priests, the Brāhmanāchnañsin, is not found in the enumeration, and his name may therefore have stood at the beginning of the line. Instead of the inept reading sarvašah, at the end, the author may perhaps have written vakshasah, "from his chest," as, indeed, one MS. reads in the next line. The Bombay edition reads prishthāt, "from the back," instead of srishtvā.

283 M. Burnouf remarks in the Preface to the first vol. of his edition of the Bhāgavata, pp. exxii. ff., on the manner in which its author has gone back to Vedic sources for his materials. The same thing is noticed by Professor Weber, Indische Studien, i. 286, note.

ādibhir adhah sapta saptordhvam jaghanādibhih | 37. Purushasya mukham brahma kshatram etasya bāhavah | ūrvor vaišyo bhagavatah padbhyām šūdro vyajāyata | 38. Bhūrlokah kalpitah padbhyām bhuvarloko 'sya nābhitah | hridā svarloka urasā maharloko mahātmanah |

"34. At the end of many thousand years the living soul which resides in time, action, and natural quality gave life to that lifeless egg floating on the water. 35. Purusha then having burst the egg, issued from it with a thousand thighs, feet, arms, eyes, faces, and heads. 36. With his members the sages fashion the worlds, the seven lower worlds with his loins, etc., and the seven upper worlds with his groin, etc. 37. The Brāhman (was) the mouth of Purusha, the Kshattriya his arms, the Vaiśya was born from the thighs, the Sūdra from the feet of the divine being. The earth was formed from his feet, the air from his navel; the heaven by the heart, and the maharloka by the breast of the mighty one."

In the following verse the figurative character of the representation is manifest:

ii. 1, 37. Brahmānanam kshattra-bhujo mahātmā viḍ-ūrur anghri-śrita-kṛishṇa-varṇaḥ |

"The Brāhman is his mouth; he is Kshattriya-armed, that great One, Vaisya-thighed, and has the black caste abiding in his feet."

The next passage is more in accord with the ordinary representation, though here, too, the mystical view is introduced at the close:

iii. 22, 2. Brahmā 'srijat sva-mukhato yushmān ātma-parīpsayā | chhandomayas tapo-vidyā-yoga-yuktān alampaṭān | 3. Tat-trānāyā-srijach chāsmān doḥ-sahasrāt sahasra-pāt | hridayam tasya hi brahma kshattram angam prachakshate |

"Brahmā, who is formed of the Veda (chhandas), with a view to the recognition of himself, created you (the Brāhmans) who are characterized by austere fervour, science, devotion and chastity, from his mouth. For their protection he, the thousand-footed, created us (the Kshattriyas) from his thousand arms: for they declare the Brāhman to be his heart, and the Kshattriya his body."

iii. 6, 29 ff. contains another reference to the production of the castes:

29. Mukhato'varttata brahma Purushasya Kurūdvaha | yastūn-mukhatvād varnānām mukhyo'bhūd brāhmano guruh | 30. Bāhubhyo'varttata kshattram kshattriyas tad-anuvratah | yo jūtas trāyate varnān

paurushah kantaka-kshatāt | 31. Viśo 'varttanta tasyorvor loka-vṛitti-karīr vibhoḥ | vaiśyas tad-udbhavo vārttām nrinām yaḥ samavarttayat | 32. Padbhyām bhagavato jajne śuśrūshā dharma-siddhaye | tasyām jātaḥ purā śūdro yad-vṛittyā tushyate Hariḥ | 33. Ete varnāḥ sva-dharmeṇa yajanti sva-gurum Harim | śraddhayā "tma-viśuddhyartham yaj jātāḥ saha vṛittibhiḥ |

"29. From the mouth of Purusha, o descendant of Kuru, issued divine knowledge (brahma), and the Brāhman, who through his production from the mouth became the chief of the castes and the preceptor. 30. From his arms issued kingly power (kshattra), and the Kshattriya devoted to that function, who, springing from Purusha, as soon as born defends the castes from the injury of enemies. 31. From the thighs of the Lord issued the arts, 254 affording subsistence to the world; and from them was produced the Vaisya who provided the maintenance of mankind. 32. From the feet of the divine Being sprang service for the fulfilment of duty. In it the Sūdra was formerly born, with whose function Hari is well satisfied. By fulfilling their own duties, with faith, for the purification of their souls, these castes worship Hari their parent, from whom they have sprung together with their functions."

In viii. 5, 41, we find the following:

Vipro mukhād brahma eha yasya guhyam rājanya āsīd bhujayor balam eha | ūrvor viḍ ojo'nghrir aveda-śūdrau prasīdatām naḥ sa mahā-vibhūtiḥ |

"May that Being of great glory be gracious to us, from whose mouth sprang the Brāhman and the mysterious Veda, from whose arms came the Rājanya and force, from whose thighs issued the Viś and energy, and whose foot is no-veda (aveda) and the Sūdra."

The same work gives the following very brief account of the Arvāk-srotas creation, which is described with somewhat more detail in the passages extracted above from the Vishnu and Väyu Purānas:

iii. 20, 25. Arvāk-srotas tu navamah kshattar eka-vidho nrinām | rajo 'dhikāh karma-parāh duhkhe cha sukha-māninah |

284 The word so rendered is viśah, which in the hymns of the Rig-veda has always the sense of "people." Here, however, it seems to have the sense assigned in the text, if one may judge from the analogy of the following verse, in which the S'ūdra is said to be produced from his special function, śuśrūshā, "service." The Commentator explains viśah = kṛishy-ādi-vyavasāyāḥ, "the professions of agriculture," etc.

"The Arvaksrotas creation was of one description, 285 viz., of men, in whom the quality of passion abounded, who were addicted to works, and imagined that in pain they experienced pleasure."

In vi. 6, 40, a new account is given of the origin of mankind. We are there told:

Aryamno Mātrikā patnī tayoś Charshanayah sutāh | yatra vai mānushī jātir Brahmanā chopakalpitā |

"The wife of Aryaman (the son of Aditi) was Mātrikā. The Charshanis were the sons of this pair, and among them the race of men was formed by Brahmā." The word charshani signifies "men," or "people" in the Veda.

In the following verse (which forms part of the legend of Purūravas, quoted in the 3rd vol. of this work, pp. 27 ff.) it is declared that in the Krita age there was only one caste:

ix. 14, 48. Eka eva purā vedaļ pranavaļ sarva-vānmayaļ | devo Nārāyano nānya eko'gnir varņa eva cha | Purūravasa evāsīt trayī tretā-mukhe nripa |

"There was formerly but one Veda, the pranava (the monosyllable Om), the essence of all speech; only one god, Nārāyaṇa, one Agni, and (one) caste. From Purūravas came the triple Veda, in the beginning of the Tretā."

Some of the Commentator's remarks on this text will be found in vol. iii. p. 29. He says the one caste was called "Hansa" (varnaś cha eka eva hamso nāma), and concludes his note by remarking: "The meaning is this: In the Krita age when the quality of goodness predominated in men, they were almost all absorbed in meditation; but in the Tretā, when passion prevailed, the method of works was manifested by the division of the Vedas, etc."

285 The Sānkhya Kārikā, 53, says: ashta-vikalpo daivas tairyagyonyas cha panchadhā bhavati mānushyas chaika-vidhah samāsato bhautikah sargah; which is thus translated by Mr. Colebrooke (in Wilson's Sānkhya Kārikā, p. 164): "The divine kind is of eight sorts; the grovelling is five-fold; mankind is single in its class. This, briefly, is the world of living beings." The Commentator Gaudapāda shortly explains the words mānushyas chaikavidhah by mānushayonir ekaiva, "the source of production of mankind is one only." Vijnāna Bhikshu, the Commentator on the Sānkhya Pravachana, iii. 46, paraphrases the same words thus, mānushya-sargas chaika-prakārah, "the human creation is of one sort."

SECT. XIII.—Results of this Chapter.

The details which I have supplied in the course of this chapter must have rendered it abundantly evident that the sacred books of the Hindus contain no uniform or consistent account of the origin of castes; but, on the contrary, present the greatest varieties of speculation on this subject. Explanations mystical, mythical, and rationalistic, are all offered in turn; and the freest scope is given by the individual writers to fanciful and arbitrary conjecture.

First: we have the set of accounts in which the four castes are said. to have sprung from progenitors who were separately created; but in regard to the manner of their creation we find the greatest diversity of statement. The most common story is that the castes issued from the mouth, arms, thighs, and feet of Purusha, or Brahmā. The oldest extant passage in which this idea occurs, and from which all the later myths of a similar tenor have no doubt been borrowed, is, as we have seen, to be found in the Purusha Sükta; but it is doubtful whether, in the form in which it is there presented, this representation is anything more than an allegory. In some of the texts which I have quoted from the Bhāgavata Purāna, traces of the same allegorical character may be perceived; but in Manu and the Puranas the mystical import of the Vedic text disappears, and the figurative narration is hardened into a literal statement of fact. In other passages, where a separate origin is assigned to the castes, they are variously said to have sprung from the words Bhūh, Bhuvah, Svah; from different Vedas; from different sets of prayers; from the gods, and the asuras; from nonentity (pp. 17-21), and from the imperishable, the perishable, and other principles (Harivamśa, 11816). In the chapters of the Vishnu, Vāyu, and Mārkandeya Purānas, where castes are described as coeval with the creation, and as having been naturally distinguished by different gunas, or qualities, involving varieties of moral character, we are nevertheless allowed to infer that those qualities exerted no influence on the classes in whom they were inherent, as the condition of the whole race during the Krita age is described as one of uniform perfection and happiness; while the actual separation into castes did not take place, according to the Vāyu Purāna, until men had become deteriorated in the Tretā age.

Second: in various passages from the Brāhmanas, Epic poems, and Puranas, the creation of mankind is, as we have seen, described without the least allusion to any separate production of the progenitors of the four castes (pp. 23-27, and elsewhere). And whilst in the chapters where they relate the distinct formation of the castes, the Puranas, as has been observed, assign different inatural dispositions to each class, they elsewhere represent all mankind as being at the creation uniformly distinguished by the quality of passion. In one of the texts I have quoted (p. 26 f.) men are said to be the offspring of Vivasvat; in another his son Manu is said to be their progenitor; whilst in a third they are said to be descended from a female of the same name. The passage which declares Manu to have been the father of the human race explicitly affirms that men of all the four castes were descended from. him. In another remarkable text the Mahābhārata categorically asserts that originally there was no distinction of classes, the existing distribution having arisen out of differences of character and occupation. Similarly, the Bhagavata Purana in one place informs us that in the Krita age there was but one caste; and this view appears also to be taken in some passages which I have adduced from the Epic poems.

In these circumstances we may fairly conclude that the separate origination of the four castes was far from being an article of belief universally received by Indian antiquity.

I shall now proceed to enquire what opinion the writers of the older Vedic hymns appear to have entertained in regard to the origin of the race to which they themselves belonged.

CHAPTER II.

TRADITION OF THE DESCENT OF THE INDIAN RACE FROM MANU.1

It appears from the considerations urged in the preceding chapter that in all probability the Purusha Sükta belongs to the most recent portion of the Rig-veda Sanhitā, and that it is at least doubtful whether the verse in which it connects the four castes with the different members of the creator's body is not allegorical. And we have seen that even if that representation is to be taken as a literal account of the creation of the different classes, it cannot, in the face of many other statements of a different tenor, and of great antiquity, be regarded as expressing the fixed belief of the writers of the period immediately succeeding the collection of the hymns in regard to the origin of the social divisions which prevailed in their own time. But the notions entertained of the origin of caste at the date of the Purusha Sūkta, whatever they may have been, will afford no criterion of the state of opinion on the same subject in an earlier age; and it therefore remains to enquire whether those hymns of the Rig-veda, which appear to be the most ancient, contain either (1) any tradition regarding the origin of mankind, or of the Indian tribes; or (2) any allusion to the existence, in the community contemporary with their composition, of separate classes corresponding to those afterwards known as Brahmans, Kshattriyas, Vaisyas, and S'ūdras; and if they embrace any reference of the latter kind, whether they afford any explanation of the manner in which these orders of men came to occupy their respective positions in society. We shall find on examination that the hymns supply some information on both these branches of enquiry.

¹ On the subjects treated in this chapter compare my article in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, vol. xx. for 1863, pp. 406 ff., where a reference is made to the other writers who had previously treated of them, such as M. Nève, Mythe des Ribhavas, etc.

Numerous references are undoubtedly to be found in all parts of the hymn-collection to a variety of ranks, classes, and professions; of which an account will be given in the next chapter; but no hint is anywhere discoverable, except in the single text of the Purusha Sūkta, of those classes being distinguished from each other by any original difference of race. If, however, the early Vedic Indians had all along believed in the quadruple production of their nation from the different members of Purusha, one might naturally have expected to find allusions to such a variety of birth running through the hymns. But nothing, I repeat, of this kind is to be traced. On the contrary it appears from a considerable number of passages that at least the superior ranks of the community were regarded as being of one stock, the Aryan, and as having one common ancestor. This chapter will therefore embrace, First, the texts which are found in the hymns regarding the origin of the Indian tribes, and the history of their progenitor, and Secondly those passages which occur in the Brāhmanas, and other later works in which the statements of the early Vedic poets on these subjects are reechoed or developed.

Sect. I.—Manu as the progenitor of the \bar{A} ryan Indians and the institutor of religious rites according to the Hymns of the Rig-veda.

In this section I shall first quote the texts which allude to Manu as father (which must of course be understood to designate him as the actual human progenitor of the authors of the hymns, and of the bulk of the people to whom they addressed themselves); and then adduce those which speak of him as the institutor of religious rites, or as the object of divine protection.

- (1) The following texts are of the first class:
- i. 80, 16. Yām Atharvā Manush pitā Dadhyañ dhiyam atnata | tasmin brahmāni pūrvathā Indre ukthā samagmata |
- "Prayers and hymns were formerly congregated in that Indra, in the teremony which Atharvan, father Manu, and Dadhyanch celebrated."

² This verse is quoted in the Nirukta, xii. 34, where the words Manush pitā,

- i. 114, 2. Yat śam cha yoś cha Manur āyeje pitā tad aśyāma tava Rudra pranītishu |
- "Whatever prosperity or succour father Manu obtained by sacrifice, may we gain all that under thy guidance, O Rudra."
- ii. 33, 13. Yā vo bheshajā Marutaḥ śuchīni yā śantamā vṛishaṇo yā mayobhū | yāni Manur avṛiṇīta pitā naḥ tā śam̃ cha yoś cha Rudrasya vaśmi |
- "Those pure remedies of yours, O Maruts, those which are most auspicious, ye vigorous gods, those which are beneficent, those which our 3 father Manu chose, those, and the blessing and succour of Rudra, I desire."
- viii. 52, 1 (Sāma-veda, i. 355). Sa pūrvyo mahānām veno kratubhir ānaje | yasya dvārā Manush pitā deveshu dhiyaḥ ānaje |
- "That ancient friend hath been equipped with the powers of the mighty (gods). Father Manu has prepared hymns to him, as portals of access to the gods."

"father Manu," are explained as meaning Manuscha pitā mānavānām, "Manu the father of men." Sayana, the Commentator on the Rig-veda, interprets them as meaning sarvāsām prajānām pitribhūto Manuscha, "Manu the father of all creatures." In R.V., x. 82, 3, the words "our father and generator" (yo nah pitā janita), are applied to Vis'vakarman, the creator of the universe. The word "father" in the R.V. is often applied to Dyaus, the Sky, and "mother" to the Earth, as in vi. 51 5. (Compare Journ. Roy. As. Soc. for 1864, pp. 55 ff.) But in these passages it is not necessary to suppose that the words are employed in any other than a figurative sense; although in a hymn to the Earth in the Atharva-veda, xii. 1, we find the following verse (the 15th): Tvaj-jātas tvayi charanti martyās tvam bibharshi dvipadas tvam chatushpadah | taveme prithivi pancha-mānavāh yebhyo jyotir amritam martyebhyah udyan sūryo rasmibhir ātanoti | "Mortals born of thee live on thee: thou supportest both bipeds and quadrupeds. Thine, o Earth, are these five races of men, these mortals on whom the sun rising, sheds undying light with his rays:"where it might almost appear as if the poet meant to represent mankind as actually generated by the earth. Brihaspati (iv. 50, 6; vi. 73, 1) and the other gods, as Indra, are called "father," or compared to fathers (vii. 52, 3); as are Rudra, vi. 49, 10; and the Rishi, R.V., x. 81, 1; x. 82, 1, 3, 4. S. P. Br., i. 5, 3, 2, has Prajāpatau pitari; and Taitt. Br. iii. 9, 22, 1, Prajāpatim pitaram. In both the last places Prajāpati is referred to as the father of the gods.

³ It is to be observed that while in the two preceeding passages Manu is styled merely "father Manu," he is here called "our father Manu" (Manuh pitā nah).

⁴ I am indebted to Professor Aufrecht for the above translation of this, to me, obscure verse. Sāyaṇa explains it thus: Sa pūrvyo mukhyo mahānām pūjyānām yajamānānām kratubhih karmabhir nimittabhūtair venah kāntas teshām havih kāmayamānah ānaje āgachhati | yasyendrasya dvārā dvārāṇi prāptyupāyāni dhiyah karmaṇi deveshv eteshu madhye pitā sarveshām pālako Manur ānaje prāpa | ānajih prāpti-

The sense of the next text is less clear, but it appears at least to allude to the common designation of Manu as a father:

x. 100, 5. Yajno Manuh pramatir nah pitā hi kam |

"Sacrifice is Manu, our protecting father."

The following verse, according to the Commentator at least, speaks of the paternal or ancestral path of Manu. Professor Aufrecht thinks it need not mean more than the ancestral human path:

viii. 30. 3. Te nas trādhvam te avata te u no adhi vochata | mā naḥ pathaḥ pitryād mānavād adhi dūram naishṭa parāvatah |

"Do ye (gods) deliver, protect, and intercede for us; do not lead us far away from the paternal path of Manu.⁵

As in the preceding passages Manu is spoken of as the progenitor of the worshippers, so in the following the same persons may perhaps be spoken of as his descendants, although it is also true that the phrases employed may be merely equivalent to "children of men."

i. 68, 4. Hotā nishatto Manor apatye sa chit nu āsām patiḥ rayīnām | "He (Agni) who abides among the offspring of Manu as the invoker (of the gods), is even the lord of these riches." 6

karmā | "This chief one, in consequence of the rites of the venerable sacrificers, desiring their oblation, comes,—he (Indra) as means of attaining whom Manu the preserver of all has obtained rites among these gods." Professor Benfey renders the verse, where it occurs in the Sāma-veda, thus: "He is the chief of the rich, through works the dear one enlightens him, whose doors father Manu has, and illuminates observances towards the gods." From Prof. Benfey's note to the passage (p. 230) it appears that the Commentator on the Sāma-veda explains ānaje by vyaktīkaroti āt-mānam, "makes himself distinct" (herein differing from Sāyana), Manu by jnātā sarvasya = Indrah, "the knower of all, Indra," and ānaje, where it occurs the second time, by āgamayati, "causes to come." Such are the differences of opinion regarding the interpretation of some parts of the hymns.

on this verse Säyana comments thus: Sarveshām Manuh pitā tatah āgatāt | parāvatah | pitā Manur dūram mārgam chakre | tasmāt patho mārgāt no asmān mā naishta mā nayata | apanayanam mā kuruta ity arthah | sarvadā brahmacharyyāgnihotrādi-karmāni yena mārgeņa bhavanti tam eva asmān nayata | kintu dūram ya etad-vyatirikto viprakrishto mārgo 'sti tasmād adhi adhikam ity arthah asmān apanayata | "Of Manu' means, come from Manu who is the father of all. 'Distant:' Father Manu journeyed along a distant path. Do not lead us away from that path. Lead us along that path in which continence, the agnihotra sacrifice, and other duties have always been practised. But lead us away from the distant path which is different from that."

⁶ The Commentator here explains "the offspring of Manu" as offspring or creatures in the form of worshippers (yajamāna-svarūpāyām prajāyām); and adds that according to a Brāhmaṇa "creatures are sprung from Manu" ("Mānavyo hi prajāh,"

iii. 3, 6. Agnir devebhir manushascha jantubhis tanvāno yajnam purupešasam dhiyā |

"Agni, together with the gods, and the children (jantubhih) of Manush, celebrating a multiform sacrifice with hymns," etc.

In the following texts reference is made to the people of Manu, the word for "people" being vis, from which vaisya, "a man of the people," is derived:

iv. 37, 1. Upa no Vājāḥ adhvaram Ŗibhukshāḥ devāḥ yāta pathibhir devayānaiḥ | yathā yajnam manusho vikshu āsu dadhidve raṇvāh sudineshu ahnām |

"Ye gods, Vājas, and Ribhukshans, come to our sacrifice by the path travelled by the gods, that ye, pleasing deities, may institute a sacrifice among these people of Manush (Manusho vikshu) on auspicious days."

vi. 14, 2. Agnim hotāram īļate yajneshu manusho viśah |

"The people of Manush praise in the sacrifices Agni the invoker."

viii. 23, 13. Yad vai ū viśpatiķ śitaķ suprīto manusho viśi | viśvā id Agniķ prati rakshām̃si sedhati |

"Whenever Agni, lord of the people," kindled, abides gratified among the people of Manush, he repels all Rakshases."

(2.) From the preceding texts it appears that the authors of the hymns regarded Manu as the progenitor of their race. But (as is clear from many other passages) they also looked upon him as the first person by whom the sacrificial fire had been kindled, and as the institutor of the ceremonial of worship; though the tradition is not always consistent on this subject. In one of the verses already quoted (i. 80, 16) Manu is mentioned in this way, along with Atharvan and tit hi brāhmaṇam). Yāska (Nir. iii. 7) gives the following derivations of the word manushya, "man:" Manushyāḥ kasmāt | matvā karmāṇi sīvyanti | manasyamānena srishtāḥ | Manor apatyam Manusho vā | "From what are men (named)? Because after reflection they sew together works; (or) because they were created by one who reflected (or, according to Durga, "rejoiced") (or) because they are the offspring of Manu, or Manush."

⁷ Vispati. Compare vi. 48, 8, where it is said: visvāsām grihapatir visām asi tvam Agne mānushīnam | "Agni, thou art the master of the house of all human people (or, people sprung from Manush);" and x. 80, 6, Agnim visāh īlate mānushir yāh Agnim Manusho Nahusho vi jātāh | "Human people (or, people descended from Manush) praise Agni: (people) sprung from Manush, from Nahush, (praise) Agni." Or if manushah be the nom. plur. the last clause will run thus: "men sprung from

Nahush (praise) Agni."

Dadhyanch, as having celebrated religious rites in ancient times. The following further passages refer to him as a kindler of fire, and offerer of oblations:

- i. 36, 19. Ni tvām Agne Manur dadhe jyotir janāya śaśvate |
- "Manu has placed (or ordained) thee, Agni, a light to all the people."
- i. 76, 5. Yathā viprasya Manusho havirbhir devān ayajaḥ kavibhiḥ kaviḥ san | eva hotaḥ satyatara tvam adya Agne mandrayā juhvā yajasva |
- "As thou, thyself a sage, didst, with the sages, worship the gods with the oblations of the wise Manush, so to-day, Agni, most true invoker, worship them with a cheerful flame."
- au. 45, 6. $ar{A}$ ita dhiyam kri \underline{n} av $ar{a}$ ma sakh $ar{a}$ yah yay $ar{a}$ Manur Vi \dot{s} i- \dot{s} ipram jig $ar{a}$ ya
- "Come, friends, let us perform the prayer whereby Manu conquered Visisipra
- viii. 10. 2. Yad vā yajnam Manave samminikshathur eva it Kānvasya bodhatam |
- "Or if ye (Aśvins) sprinkled the sacrifice for Manu, think in like manner of the descendant of Kanva."
- ix. 96, 11. Tvayā hi naḥ pitarah Soma pūrve karmāṇi chakruḥ pavamāna dhīrāḥ | 12. Yathā apavathāḥ Manave vayodhāh amitrahā varivovid havishmān | eva pavasva
- "For through thee, O pure Soma, our early fathers, who were wise, performed their rites . . . 12. As thou didst flow clear for Manu, thou upholder of life, destroyer of foes, possessor of wealth, rich in oblations, so (now) flow clear."
- x. 63, 7. Yebhyo hotrūm prathamām āyeje Manuḥ samiddhāgnir manasā sapta hotrībhiḥ | tā Ādityā abhayam śarma yachhata
- "O ye Ādityas, to whom Manu, when he had kindled fire, presented along with seven hotri priests the first oblation with a prayer, bestow on us secure protection."
- x. 69, 3. "Yat te Manur yad anīkam Sumitrah samīdhe Agne tad idam navīyah" |
- ⁸ The S'atapatha Brāhmaṇa (i. 4, 2, 5) thus explains the words deveddho Manviddhah:—Manviddhaḥ iti | Manur hy etam agre ainddha | tasmād āha "Manviddhaḥ" iti | "The gods formerly kindled it (fire): hence it is called 'god-kindled.' Manu formerly kindled it: and hence it is called 'kindled by Manu.'" The Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (ii. 34), however, explains the word Manv-iddhah from the fact that "men kindle it" (imam hi manushyā indhate).

"That lustre of thine which Manu, which Sumitra, kindled is this same which is now renewed."

In conformity with the preceding texts, the following may be understood as declaring that the sacrificial fire had been first kindled by Manu:

- i. 13, 4 (= S.V. ii. 700). Agne sukhatame rathe devān īļitaḥ ā vaha | asi hotā Manurhitaḥ |
- "O Agni, lauded, bring the gods hither in a most pleasant chariot. Thou art the invoker (of the gods) placed by Manush." ⁹
- i. 14, 11. Tvam hotā Manurhito 'gne yajneshu sīdasi | saḥ imam no adhvaram yaja |
- "Thou, Agni, the invoker placed by Manush, art present at the sacrifices: do thou present this our oblation." (See also R.V. iii. 2, 15.)
 - vi. 16, 9. Tram hotā Manurhitah
 - "Thou art the invoker placed by Manush "
- viii. 19, 21. Īle girā Manurhitam yam devā dūtam aratim ni erire | yajishtham havya-vāhanam |
- "With a hymn I laud that adorable bearer of oblations placed by Manush, 10 whom the gods have sent as a ministering messenger."
- 9 The compound word which I have here rendered "placed by Manush" is in the original Manur-hita. Professor Aufrecht would render it "given to man," and quotes i. 36, 10, in support of this view. The sense I have given is supported by i. 36, 19, where the same root, dha, from which hita (originally dhita) comes, is used, joined with the particle ni. The same participle hita is used in vi. 16, 1, where it is said: Tvam Agne yajnānām hotā sarveshām hitaḥ | devebhir mānushe jane | "Thou, Agni, hast been placed, or ordained, among the race of Manush by the gods as the invoker at all sacrifices." The fact that Agni is here said to have been placed by the gods among the race of Manush does not forbid us to suppose that there are other passages in which, either inconsistently, or from a different point of view, Agni may have been said to be placed by Manu. The compound manur-hita occurs also in the following texts, where, however, it has probably the sense of "good for man," viz. : i. 106, 5. Brihaspate sadam id nah sugañ kridhi s'añ yor yat te manur-hitam tad mahe | "Brihaspati, do us always good: we desire that blessing and protection of thine which is good for man." (Sayana says that here manur-hitam means either "placed in thee by Manu, i.e., Brahmā," or, "favourable to man." Benfey, in loco, renders "destined for man.") vi. 70, 2. Rajantī asya bhuvanasya rodasī asme retaķ sinchatam yad manur-hitam | "Heaven and earth, ruling over this world, drop on us that seed which is good for man." x. 26, 5. Rishih sa yo manur-hitah | "He (Püshan) who is a rishi kind to man," etc. Professor Roth s.v. gives only the latter sense.

Though the word manur-hita is here interpreted by Sayana as meaning "placed by Manu Prajapati who sacrificed," it might also signify "friendly to men," as Agni is also said to have been sent by the gods.

viii. 34, 8. Ā tvā hotā Manurhito devatrā vakshad īdyaķ |

"May the adorable invoker placed by Manu bring thee (Indra) hither among the gods," etc.

There is also a class of passages in which the example of Manush may be referred to by the phrase manush-vat, "like Manush," or, "as in the case of Manush." Thus in i. 44, 11, it is said:

Ni tvā yajnasya sādhanam Agne hotāram ritvijam manushvad deva dhīmahi |

"Divine Agni, we, like Manush, place thee, the accomplisher of the sacrifice, the invoker, the priest," etc.

v. 21, 1. Manushvat tvā ni dhīmahi Manushvat sam idhīmahi | Agne Manushvad Angiro devān devayate yaja |

"Agni, we place thee like Manush, we kindle thee like Manush. Agni, Angiras, worship the gods like Manush, for him who adores them."

vii. 2, 3. Manushvad Agnim Manunā samiddham sam adhvarāya sadam in mahema |

"Let us, like Manush, continually invoke to the sacrifice Agni who was kindled by Manu."

viii. 27, 7. Suta-somāso Varuṇa havāmahe Manushvad iddhāgnayah | "We invoke thee, Varuṇa, having poured out soma, and having kindled fire, like Manush."

viii. 43, 13. Uta tvā Bhṛiguvat śuche Manushvad Agne āhuta | Angirasvad havāmahe | 27. Yam tvā janāsa indhate Manushvad Angirastama | Agne sa bodhi me vachaḥ |

"Like Bhrigu, like Manush, like Angiras, we invoke thee, bright Agni, who hast been invoked. 27. Agni, most like to Angiras, whom men kindle like Manush, attend to my words."

The Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, i. 5, 1, 7, explains thus the word Manushvat: 12—Manur ha vai agre yajnena īje | tad anukritya imāh prajāḥ ya-

¹¹ I should observe that Prof. Aufrecht thinks the phrase—except perhaps with the single exception of viii. 43, 13—means "amongst men." Prof. Roth gives only the sense "like men," "as among, or for, men."

12 The same work in the same passage thus explains the phrase Bharata-vat. "He bears (bharati) the oblation to the gods; wherefore men say, Bharata (or 'the bearer') is Agni. Or, he is called Bharata (the 'sustainer') because, being breath, he sustains these creatures." This phrase may, however, refer to the example of King Bharata. See S'atapatha Brāhmaṇa, xiii. 5, 4, 14.

jante | tasmād āha "Manush-vad" iti | "Manor yajnah" iti u vai āhuḥ | tasmād vā iva āhur "Manushvad" iti | "Manu formerly sacrificed with a sacrifice. Imitating this, these creatures sacrifice. He therefore says, Manushvat, 'like Manu.' Or, they say 'like Manu,' because men speak of the sacrifice as being Manu's."

It must, however, be admitted that Manu is not always spoken of in the hymns of the first, or only, kindler of fire or celebrator of religious rites. In i. 80, 16, already quoted, Atharvan and Dadhyanch are specified along with him as having offered sacrifice in early times.

In the following verses Atharvan is mentioned as having generated fire:

vi. 16, 13. Imam tu tyam Atharva-vad Agnim mathanti vedhasah | "The wise draw forth this Agni, as Atharvan did."

vi. 16, 13 (= S. V. i. 9; Vāj. Sanh. xi. 32). Tvām Agne pushkarād adhy Atharvā nir amanthata | 14. Tam u tvā Dadhyaññ rishih putrah īdhe Atharvaṇah |

"Agni, Atharvan drew thee forth from the lotus leaf," etc. 14. "Thee the rishi Dadhyanch, son of Atharvan, kindled," etc.

[In the Vājasaneyi Sanhitā, the first of these verses is immediately preceded by the following words (xi. 32): Atharvā tvā prathamo nir amanthad Agne | "Atharvan was the first who drew thee forth, Agni."]

Again it is said in the Rig-veda, x. 21, 5. Again jāto Atharvanā vidad višvāni kāvyā | bhuvad dūto Vivasvatah | "Agai, produced by Atharvan, knows all wisdom, and has become the messenger of Vivaswat."

In i. 83, 5, Atharvan is mentioned as the earliest institutor of sacrifice: Yajnair Atharvā prathamah pathas tate tatah sūryo vratapāh venah ājani | "Atharvan was the first who by sacrifices opened up paths; then the friendly Sun, the upholder of ordinances, was produced," etc.: so too in x. 92, 10. Yajnair Atharvā prathamo vi dhārayad devā dakshair Bhrigavah sam chikitrire | "Atharvan, the first, established (all things) with sacrifices. The divine Bhrigus co-operated with their powers." 15

¹³ These two texts might, though not very probably, be understood to mean not that Atharvan was the first to employ sacrifice, but to use it for the purpose referred to in the context.

The next texts speak of the Bhrigus as the institutors of sacrifice by fire:

- i. 58, 6. Dadhus tvā Bhrigavo mānusheshv ā rayim na chārum suhavam janebhyah | hotāram Agne |
- "The Bhrigus have placed thee, o Agni, among men, as an invoker, like a beautiful treasure, and easily invoked for men," etc.
- ii. 4, 2. Imam vidhanto apām sadasthe dvitā adadhur Bhrigavo vikshu $ar{A}$ yoh |
- "Worshipping him (Agni) in the receptacle of waters, the Bhrigus placed him among the people of Ayu."
- x. 46, 2. Imam vidhanto apām sadasthe paśum na nashṭam padair anu gman | guhā chatantam uśijo namobhir ichhanto dhīrā Bhrigavo avindan |
- "Worshipping him in the receptacle of waters, and desiring him with prostrations, the wise and longing Bhrigus followed him with their steps, like a beast who had been lost, and found him lurking in concealment" 14 (i. 65, 1).

In other places, the gods, as well as different sages, are mentioned as introducing or practising worship by fire, or as bringing down the sacred flame from heaven:

- i. 36, 10. Yam tvā devāso manave dadhur iha yajishṭham havyavāhana | yam Kaṇvo Medhyātithir dhanaspṛitam yam Vṛishā yam Upastutaḥ |
- "Thou, o bearer of oblations, whom the gods placed here as an object of adoration to man (or Manu); whom Kanva, whom Medhyātithi, whom Vṛishan, whom Upastuta (have placed) a bringer of wealth," etc. Compare vi. 16, 1, quoted above, p. 167, note 9.
- iii. 5, 10. Yadī Bhrigubhyah pari Mātariśvā guhā santam havyavāham samīdhe |
- "When Mātariśwan kindled for the Bhṛigus Agni, the bearer of oblations, who was in concealment."
- x. 46, 9. Dyāvā yam Agnim prithivī janishṭām āpas Tvashṭā Bhrigavo yam sahobhiḥ | īlenyam prathamam Mātariśvā devās tatakshur manave yajatram |
- "Mātariśwan and the gods have made, as the first adorable object of worship to man (or Manu), that Agni whom heaven and earth, whom
- 14 In the following passages also the Bhrigus are mentioned as connected with the worship of Agni: i. 71, 4; i. 127, 7; i. 143, 4; iii. 2, 4; iv. 7, 1; vi. 15, 2; viii. 43, 13; viii. 91, 4; x. 122, 5.

the waters, whom Tvashtri, whom the Bhrigus, have generated by their powers."

In the 8th verse the Ayus, and in the 10th the gods, as well as men, are said to have placed Agni.

In i. 60, 1; i. 93, 6; i. 148, 1; iii. 2, 13; iii. 5, 10; iii. 9, 5; vi. 8, 4, Mātariśvan is again spoken of as the bringer or generator of fire. (Compare note 1, in p. 416, of my article "On Manu the progenitor of the Āryan Indians," in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, vol. xx. for 1863.)

But to return to Manu. Although the distinction of having been the first to kindle fire is thus, in various passages, ascribed to Atharvan or the Bhrigus, this does not disprove the fact that in other places, it is, somewhat inconsistently, assigned to Manu; and none of these other personages is ever brought forward as disputing with Manu the honour of having been the progenitor of the Aryan race. In this respect the Vedic tradition exhibits no variation, except that Yama also seems in some places to be represented as the first man. (See my article in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, for 1865, pp. 287 ff., and especially the words of the Atharva-veda, xviii. 3, 14. Yo mamāra prathamo marttyānām | "Who (Yama) died first of men.")

(III.) The following passages describe Manu as being the object of special favour or intervention on the part of some of the gods:

i. 112, 16. Yābhir narā Sayave yābhir Atraye yābhiḥ purā Manave gātum īshathuḥ | yābhiḥ śārīr ājatam Syūmaraśmaye tābhir u shu ūtibhir Aśvinā gatam | 18. Yabhir Manum śūram ishā samāvatam |

"Come, Aświns, with those succours, whereby, o heroes, ye effected deliverance for Sayu, for Atri, and formerly for Manu, whereby ye shot arrows for Syūmaraśmi. 18.... whereby ye preserved the hero Manu with food." ¹⁵

viii. 15, 5. Yena jyotīm̃shi $\bar{A}y$ ave Manave cha viveditha | mandāno asya barhisho vi rājasi |

"Exulting in this (exhilaration), wherewith thou didst make known the luminaries to Ayu, and to Manu, thou art lord of the sacrificial grass."

15 This passage, as far as it concerns Manu, is thus explained by Sāyana: "And with those succours, whereby ye made a path, a road which was the cause of escape from poverty, by sowing barley and other kinds of grain, etc., for Manu, the royal rishi of that name; according to another text" (i. 117, 21).

When compared with the preceding verse it seems not improbable that the following text may refer to the same tradition, and that instead of $V\bar{a}yave$ we should read $\bar{A}yave$:

vii. 91, 1. Kuvid anga namasā ye vridhāsah purā devā anavadyāsah āsan | te Vāyave (\bar{A} yave?) Manave bādhitāya avāsayan Ushasam Sūryena | *

"Certainly those gods who were magnified by worship were of old faultless. They displayed the dawn with the sun to $V\bar{a}yu$ ($\bar{A}yu$?), to Manu when distressed.

There is also a reference to the sky being displayed to Manu in the following verse, unless the word (manu) is to be there taken as an epithet of Purūravas, which does not seem a probable supposition:

i. 31, 4. Tvam Agne Manave dyām avāśayaḥ Purūravase sukrite sukrittaraḥ |

"Thou, Agni, didst display the sky to Manu, to the beneficent Purūravas, (thyself) more beneficent."

If Manu be taken for a proper name in vii. 91, 1, it may reasonably be understood in the same way in vi. 49, 13, where the person referred is similarly spoken of as distressed:

vi. 49, 13. Yo rajām̃ši vimame pārthivāni triš chid Vishnur Manave bādhitāya

"Vishnu who thrice measured the terrestrial regions for Manu when distressed."

And in that case the word Manu may perhaps also be taken to denote a person in vii. 100, 4, Vichakrame prithivīm esha etām kshetrāya Vishnur Manave daśasyan | "This Vishnu strode over this earth, bestowing it on Manu for an abode." Although here the general sense of "man" would make an equally good sense.

I may introduce here another text in which, from its conjunction with other proper names, it must be held that the word Manu denotes a person.

i. 139, 9. Dadhyañ ha me janusham pūrvo Angirāḥ Priyamedhaḥ Kaṇvo Atrir Manur vidus te me pūrve Manur viduḥ |

"Dadhyanch, the ancient Angiras, Priyamedha, Kanva, Atri, Manu, know my (Paruchhepa's?) birth; they, my predecessors, Manu, know it."

There are, as we have seen, some passages in the hymns in which it is doubtful whether the words manu and manush denote an individual, or stand for man in general; and there are also texts in which the latter sense is clearly the only one that can be assigned. Such are the following:

- (1.) Manu in the singular:
- i. 130, 5. Dhenur iva manave viśvadohaso janāya viśvadohasaḥ |
- "All-productive as a cow to man, all-productive to a person."
- v. 2, 12. Barhishmate manave śarma yam̃sad havishmate manave śarma yam̃sat |
- "That he may bestow protection on the man who sacrifices, on the man who offers oblations."
 - viii. 47, 4. Manor viśvasya gha id ime Ādityāḥ rāya īśate |
 - "These Adityas are lords of every man's riches". . . .
 - (2.) Manu in the plural:
- viii. 18, 22. Ye chid hi mrityubandhavah Ādityāh manavah smasi | pra su nah āyur jīvase tiretana |
- "O ye Ādityas, prolong the days of us who are men who are of kin to death, that we may live."
- x. 91, 9. Yad devayanto dadhati prayāmsi te havishmanto manavo vrikta-barhishah |
- "When these pious men sacrificing, and spreading the sacrificial grass, offer thee oblations."
 - (3.) Manush in the singular:
 - i. 167, 7. Guhā charantī manusho na yoshā |
 - "Like the wife of a man moving secretly."
 - vii. 70, 2. . . . atāpi gharmo manusho durone |
 - "Fire has been kindled in the man's abode."

The same phrase manusho durone occurs also in viii. 76, 2; x. 40, 13; x. 104, 4; x. 110, 1. In x. 99, 7, we find the words druhvane manushe, "against the injurious man."

- (4.) Manush in the plural:
- iv. 6, 11. Hotāram Agnim manusho nishedur namasyanta uśijaḥ śamsam āyoḥ |
- "Men offering worship, and eager, attend upon Agni the invoker, the object of man's (or Āyu's) praises."

In the following passages, if the word Manu is not to be understood as denoting a person, the progenitor of men, it seems, at all events, to designate his descendants, the favoured race to which the authors of the hymns believed themselves to belong, and appears to be in some cases at least nearly synonymous with Ārya, the name by which they called men of their own stock and religion, in contradistinction to the Dasyus, a term by which we are either to understand hostile demons, or the rude aboriginal tribes:

i. 130, 8. Indrah samatsu yajamānam āryam prāvad višveshu šatamūtir ājishu | manave šāsad avratān tvacham krishnām arandhayat | 16

"Indra who bestows a hundred succours in all conflicts has preserved the Ârya in the fights. Chastising the lawless, he has subjected the black skin to the man (manave)."

Compare i. 117, 21, where instead of manu, or manush, the word manusha is employed:

Yavam vrikena Aśvinā vapantā isham duhantā manushāya dasrā | abhi dasyum bakurena dhamantā uru jyotiś chakrathur āryāya |

"Sowing barley with the wolf, ye, o potent Asvins, milking out food for man (manusha), blowing away the Dasyu with the thunder-bolt (?), have made a broad light for the Ārya." 17

i. 175, 3. Tvam hi śūrah sanitā chodayo manusho ratham | sahāvān dasyum avratam oshah pātram na śochishā |

"Thou, a hero, a benefactor, hast impelled the chariot of man: victorious, thou hast burnt up the rite-less Dasyu, as a vessel is consumed by a blaze."

ii. 20, 6. Sa ha śruta Indro nāma deva ūrddhvo bhuvad manushe dasmatamah | ava priyam arśasānasya sahvān śiro bharad dāsasya svadhāvān | 7. Sa vrittrahā Indrah krishnayonīh purandaro dāsīr airayad vi | ajanayad manave kshām apaścha satrā śamsam yajamānasya tūtot |

"The god renowned as Indra hath arisen most mighty for the sake of man. Violent, self-reliant, he has smitten down the dear head of the destructive Dāsa. 7. Indra, the slayer of Vrittra, the destroyer of cities, has scattered the Dasyu (hosts) sprung from a black womb. He 17 See Prof. Roth's explanation of this passage as given in a note to the article on Manu the progenitor of the Aryan Indians, Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, vol. xx. p. 418.

¹⁶ A similar opposition between the word $\bar{a}yu$, "man," and aasyu is to be noted in the following passage, vi. 14, 3: $n\bar{a}n\bar{a}$ hi Agne avase spardhante $r\bar{a}yo$ aryah | $t\bar{u}r$ -vanto dasyum $\bar{a}yavo$ vrataih $s\bar{i}kshanto$ avratam | "In various ways, o Agni, the riches of the enemy emulously hasten to the help (of thy worshippers). The men destroy the Dasyu, and seek by rites to overcome the riteless."

has produced for man the earth 18 and the waters; he has perfectly fulfilled the aspiration of his worshipper."

- vi. 21, 11. Nu me ā vācham upa yāhi vidvān viśvebhiḥ sūno sahaso yajatraiḥ | ye agnijihvāḥ ritasāpaḥ āsur ye manum chakrur uparam dasāya |
- "Do thou, o wise god, son of strength, approach my hymn with all the adorable (deities), who were fire-tongued, rite-frequenting, and made man superior to the Dāsa."
- viii. 87, 5. Abhi hi satya somapāḥ ubhe babhūtha rodasī | Indrāsi sunvato vridhaḥ patir divaḥ | 6. Tvam hi śaśvatīnām Indra dartā purām asi | hantā dasyor manor vridhaḥ patir divaḥ |
- "5. For thou, o true soma-drinker, hast overcome both worlds. Indra, thou art the prosperer of him who makes libations, the lord of the sky. 6. Thou, Indra, art the destroyer of all the cities, the slayer of the Dasyu, the prosperer of man, the lord of the sky."
- ix. 92, 5. Tan nu satyam pavamānasya astu yatra viśve kāravaḥ sam-nasanta | jyotir yad ahne akrinod u lokam prāvad manum dasyave kar abhīkam |
- "Let this be the true (abode) of the pure god (Soma) where all the sages have assembled; since he has made light and space for the day, has protected man, and repelled the Dasyu."
- x. 49, 7. Yad mā sāvo manushaḥ āha nirnije ridhak krishe dāsam krit-vyam hathaiḥ |
- "When the libation of man calls me to splendour, I tear in pieces (?) with blows the vigorous Dāsa."
- x. 73, 7. Tvam jaghantha Namuchim makhasyum dāsam krinvānah rishaye vimāyam | tvam chakartha manave syonān patho devatrā anjasā iva yānān |
- "Thou hast slain the lusty Namuchi, making the Dāsa bereft of magic against the rishi: thou made for man beautiful paths leading as it were straightway to the gods."

It is to be observed that in none of these passages is the Brahmanical, or any other, caste singled out as having been the special object of divine protection. Men, or Āryas, are the favourites of the gods. And even in such hymns as R.V. i. 112; i. 116; i. 117; i. 119, etc., where the Aśvins are celebrated as having interposed for the deliverance of many of their worshippers, whose names are there specified, we are nowhere informed that any of these were Brāhmans, although reference is often made to their being rishis.¹⁹

18 In iv. 26, 7, Indra says: "Aham bhumim adadam aryaya aham vrishtim da-sushe martyaya | "I gave the earth to the Arya; I gave rain to the sacrificing mortal."

There is one other text of considerable interest and importance, R.V. iii. 34, 9, which, although it is unconnected with Manu, may be here cited, as it connects the word ārya with the term varna, "colour," which in later times came to signify "caste," as applied to the Brāhmans and other classes. It is this:

Sasānātyān uta sūryam sasāna Indrah sasāna purubhojasam gām | hiranyayam uta bhogam sasāna hatvī dasyūn pra āryam varnam āvat |

"Indra bestowed horses, he bestowed the sun, he bestowed the many-nourishing cow, he bestowed golden wealth: having slain the Dasyu, he protected the Āryan colour."

It is to be observed that here the word varna is used in the singular. Thus all the persons coming under the designation of Ārya, are included under one class or colour, not several.²⁰

We shall see in the next chapter that, irrespective of the verse of the Purusha Sūkta, there are in the Rig-veda Sanhitā a few texts in which the Brāhmans are mentioned alone of all the four castes, without any distinct reference being found anywhere to the second class as Rājanyas, or Kshattriyas, or to the third and fourth as Vaiśyas and Sūdras.

In the mean time I shall advert to some other phrases which are employed in the hymns, either to denote mankind in general, or to signify certain national or tribal divisions. The most important of these is that of the "five tribes," who are frequently referred to under the appellations of pancha-krishtayah, pancha-kshitayah, pancha-kshitayo mānushyyah (vii. 97, 1), pancha-charshanayah, pancha-janāh, pānchajanyā viś (viii. 52, 7), pancha bhūma (vii. 69, 2), pancha jātā (vi. 61, 12).

19 See Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1866, pp. 7 ff.

21 In iii. 49, 1, mention is made not of the five tribes, but of all the tribes: S'amsa

²⁰ Sāyaṇa, indeed, interprets the word āryam varṇam by uttamam varṇam traivar-nikam | "the most excellent class consisting of the three upper castes;" but he of course explains according to the ideas of his own age. In the S'atapatha Brāhmaṇa, Kāṇva S'ākhā (Adhvara Kāṇḍa, i. 6) it is stated that the upper three castes only were Āryas and fit to offer sacrifice (ārya eva brāhmaṇo vā kshāttriyo vā vaiśyo vā te hi yajniyāh) see Journ. Roy. As. Soc. for 1866, p. 281.

Some of these terms are occasionally used of the gods, as in x. 53, 4: ūrjāda uta yajniyāsah panchajanā mama hotram jushadhvam | "Ye five tribes who eat (sacrificial) food, and are worthy of adoration, receive my oblation with favour." 22

On this verse Yāska remarks, Nirukta, iii. 8: "Gandharvāḥ pitaro devā asurā rakshāmsi" ity eke | "chatvāro varṇā nishādaḥ panchamaḥ" ity Aupamanyavaḥ | "Some say the word denotes the Gandharvas, fathers, gods, asuras, and rakshases. Aupamanyava says it denotes the four castes and the Nishādas." ²³

If Aupamayava was right, the Nishādas also were admissible to the worship of the gods in the Vedic age, as the "five classes" are represented in various texts as votaries of Agni. Such are the following:

vi. 11, 4. Āyum na yam namasā rātahavyāḥ anjanti suprayasam pancha janāḥ |

"Agni, whom, abounding in oblations, the five tribes, bringing offerings, honour with prostrations, as if he were a man."

Sāyana here defines the five tribes as "priests and offerers of sacrifices" (ritvig-yajamāna-lakshanāh).

ix. 65, 22. Ye somāsah . . sunvire . . | 23. Ye vā janeshu panchasu |

mahām Indram yasmin visvā ā krishtayah somapāh kāmam avyan | "Praise the great Indra, in whom all the tribes drinking soma have obtained their desire."

²² Compare x. 60, 4. "In whose worship Ikshvāku prospers, wealthy and foedestroying, like the five tribes in the sky (divīva pancha krishṭayah). Sāyaṇa, however, renders "His five tribes (the four castes and the Nishādas) are as (happy as) if in heaven." Prof. Müller, Journ. Roy. As. Soc. for 1866, p. 462, renders, "as the five tribes in heaven."

23 In his note on this passage in his "Illustrations of the Nirukta," p. 28, Prof. Roth remarks: "The conception of the five races which originally comprehended all mankind... is here transferred to the totality of the divine beings. Hence also arises the diversity of understanding, when the number has to be indicated." Prof. Roth then quotes part of Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iii. 31, which I give a little more fully from Dr. Haug's edition: Pānchajanyam vai etad uktham yad vaisvadevam | sarveshām vai etat panchajanānām uktham deva-manushyānām gandharvāpsarasām sarpāṇām cha pitrīṇām cha | eteshām vai etat panchajanānām uktham | sarve enam panchajanā viduḥ | ā enam panchinyai janatāyai havino gachhanti ya evam veda | "This Vais'vadeva uktha belongs to the five classes of beings. It belongs to all the five classes of gods, men, gandharvas and apsarases, serpents, and fathers. To these five classes belongs this uktha. All these five classes know him (who uses it). Those of this five-fold set of beings who are skilled in invocation come to the man who knows this." See Dr. Haug's Ait. Br. ii. 214, where it is said that Gandharvas and Apsarases are counted as one class.

"Or those soma-libations which have been poured out . . (23) among the five tribes."

x. 45, 6. Vīļum chid adrim abhinat parāyan janāh yad agnim ayajanta pancha |

"He (Agni), travelling afar, clove even the strong mountain, when the five tribes worshipped Agni."

vii. 15, 2. Yah pancha charshanīr abhi nishasāda dame dame | kavir grihapatir yuvā |

"The wise and youthful master of the house (Agni) who has taken up his abode among the five tribes in every house."

In vi. 61, 12, Sarasvatī is spoken of as "augmenting or prospering the five tribes" (pancha jātā vardhayantī).

In viii. 52, 7, it is said: Yat pānchajanyayā višā Indre ghoshāḥ asrikshata | "When shouts were uttered to Indra by the people of the five tribes," etc.

In R.V. i. 117, 3, Atri is styled rishim pāñchajanyam, "a rishi belonging to the five tribes." In v. 32, 11, the epithet satpatih pāñchajanyah, "the good lord of the five tribes," is applied to Indra. And in ix. 66, 20, Agni is called the purified rishi, the priest of the five tribes (pāñchajayah purohitah).²⁴

In other passages, however, it is far from clear that the "five races" are intended to be identified with the Aryas, or people of honourable race, to whom the authors of the hymns belonged. Such, perhaps, is the case in the following verse: ii. 2, 10. Asmākam dyumnam adhi pancha krishtishu uchchā svar na śuśuchīta dushtaram | "May our glory shine aloft among the five tribes, like the heaven unsurpassable." See also vi. 46, 7, to be quoted below.

On the same subject, Professor Roth remarks as follows in his Lexicon under the word krishti: "The phrase five races is a designation of all nations, not merely of the Aryyan tribes. It is an ancient enumeration, of the origin of which we find no express explanation in the Vedic texts. We may compare the fact that the cosmical spaces or points of the compass are frequently enumerated as five, especially in ²⁴ See Mahābhūrata, iii. 14160, as referred to by Roth under jana, where the birth of a being of five colours, apparently a form of Agni, is described, who was generated by five rishis, and who was known as the god of the five tribes (pānchajanya) and the producer of five races.

the following text of the A.V. iii. 24, 2: imā yāḥ pancha pradiśo mā-navīḥ pancha krishṭayaḥ | 'these five regions; the five tribes sprung from Manu'; among which (regions) we should have here to reckon as the fifth the one lying in the middle (dhruvā dik, A.V. iv. 14, 8; xviii. 3, 34), that is, to regard the Aryyas as the central point, and round about them the nations of the four regions of the world. According to the Vedic usage, five cannot be considered as designating an indefinite number."

We cannot therefore regard the use of the term "five races" as affording any evidence of the existence of a rigidly defined caste-system at the period when it was in frequent use. The frequent reference to such a division, which fell into disuse in later times, rather proves the contrary. The caste-system was always a quadruple, not a quintuple, one; and although the Nishādas are added by Aupamanyava as a fifth division of the population, this class was esteemed too degraded to allow us to suppose that they could ever have formed part of a universally recognized five-fold division, of which all the parts appear to be regarded as standing on an equal, or nearly equal, footing.

It is supposed by Dr. Kuhn²⁵ that the "five tribes" are to be identified with the clans whose names are mentioned in the following verse:

i. 108, 8. Yad Indrāgnī Yadushu Turvašeshu yad Druhyushv Anushu Pūrushu sthaḥ | ataḥ pari vṛishaṇāv ā hi yātam athā somasya pibatañ sutasya |

"If, o Indra and Agni, ye are abiding among the Yadus, Turvaśas, Druhyus, Anus, Pūrus,—come hither, vigorous heroes, from all quarters, and drink the Soma which has been poured out."

Although, however, these tribes are often mentioned separately in the Rig-veda, this is either the only, or almost the only, text in which they are all connected with one another. Their identity with the "five classes" is therefore doubtful.

There is another word employed in the Rig-veda to designate a race well known to the authors of the hymns, viz., nahush. We have already met with this term in a verse (x. 80, 6) I have quoted above, where it appears clearly to denote a tribe distinct from the descendants of Manush; and the adjective derived from it occurs in vi. 46, 7 (=

²⁵ See Weber's Indische Studien, i. 202, where Dr. Kuhn's paper in the Hall. Allg. Lit. Z. for 1846, p. 1086, is referred to.

S.V. i. 262), where also the tribes of Nahush appear to be discriminated from the five tribes, whoever these may be supposed to be. The words are these: Yad Indra nāhushīshv ā ojo nrimnam cha krishṭishu | yad vā pancha kshitīnām dyumnam ā bhara satrā viśvāni paumsyā | "Indra, whatever force or vigour exists in the tribes of Nahush, or whatever glory belongs to the five races, bring it (for us); yea all manly energies together."

Professor Roth (see his Lexicon, s.v.) regards the people designated by the word nahush as denoting men generally, but with the special sense of stranger, or neighbour, in opposition to members of the speaker's own community; and he explains the words of x. 80, 6, twice referred to above, as signifying "the sons of our own people, and of those who surround us."

These descendants of Nahush, whoever they may have been, are, however, distinctly spoken of in x. 80, 6 (the passage just adverted to), as worshippers of Agni, and can scarcely, therefore, have been regarded by the Aryas as altogether aliens from their race and worship.

Setting aside, as before, the Purusha Sūkta, there are few distinct references in the hymns of the Rig-veda to the creation of men, and none at all to the separate creation of castes. The following text ascribes the generation of mankind to Agni, R.V. i. 96, 2: Sa pūrvayā nividā kavyatā āyor imāh prajāh ajanayad manūnām | vivasvatā chakshasā dyām apaś cha devā Agnim dhūrayan dravinodām | "By the first nivid, by the wisdom of Āyu, he (Agni) created these children of men; by his gleaming light the earth and the waters: the gods sustained Agni the giver of riches." 26

The Aitareya Brāhmaṇa introduces this verse by the following passage: Prajāpatir vai idam eka eva agre āsa | so 'kāmayata "prajāyeya bhūyān syām" iti | sa tapo 'tapyata | sa vācham ayachhat | sa sañvatsarasya parastād vyāharad dvādaśa kritvaḥ | dvādaśapadā vai eshā nivit | etām vāva tām nividam vyāharat | tām sarvāṇi bhūtāny anvasrijyanta | tad etad rishiḥ paśyann abhyanūvacha "sa pūrvayā" ityādinā | "Prajāpati alone was formerly this universe. He desired 'may I be propagated, and multiplied.' He practised austere fervour. He suppressed his voice. After a year he spoke twelve times. This nivid consists of twelve words. This nivid he uttered. After it all beings were created. Beholding this the rishi uttered this verse, 'by the first nivid,'" etc.

²⁶ See Dr. Haug's translation in his Ait. Br. ii. 143; and Benfey's German version in his Orient und Occident, ii. 512.

The generation of "creatures" (prajāḥ) is ascribed in various texts to different gods, in iii. 55, 19 to Tvashtri Savitri; in ix. 86, 28 to Soma; in viii. 85, 6 (ya imā jajāna viśvā jātāni) to Indra. In x. 54, 3 Indra is said to have "generated the father and mother (heaven and earth) from his own body" (yan mātaram cha pitaram cha sākam ajanayathās tanvaḥ svāyāḥ); while Viśvakarman, who in x. 81, 2, 3 is said to have generated heaven and earth, is also in x. 82, 3 called "our father and generator" (yo naḥ pitā janitā). All these passages are, however, too vague to afford us any insight into the ideas of their authors regarding the creation of the human race.

Sect. II.—Legends and Notices regarding Manu from the Satapatha, Aitareya, and Taittirīya Brāhmaṇas, the Taittirīya Sanhitā, and the Chhāndogya Upanishad.

The first passage which I adduce contains the very important legend of the deluge, which has already been quoted in the 2nd vol. of this work, pp. 324 ff., and which has also been rendered into English by Professor Max Müller (Anc. Sansk. Lit. pp. 425 ff.) and by Professor M. Williams (Ind. Epic Poetry, p. 34), as well as into German by its earliest translator, Professor Weber, in the year 1849 (Ind. Studien, i. 163 f.).

Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, i. 8, 1, 1. Manave ha vai prātar avanegyam udakam ājahrur yathā idam pāṇibhyām avanejanāya āharanti | evam tasya avanenijānasya matsyah pāṇī āpede | 2. Sa ha asmai vācham uvāda "bibhrihi mā pārayishyāmi tvā" iti | "kasmād mā pārayishyasi" iti | "aughah imāḥ sarvāḥ prajāh nirvoḍhā tatas tvā pārayitāsmi" iti | "Katham te bhritir" iti | 3. Sa ha uvācha "yāvad vai kshullakāḥ bhavāmo bahvī vai nas tāvad nāshtrā bhavaty uta matsya eva matsyam gilati | kumbhyām mā agre bibharāsi | sa yadā tām ativarahā atha karshūm khātvā tasyām mā bibharāsi | sa yadā tām ativardhā atha mā samudram abhyavaharāsi | tarhi vai atināshtro bhavitāsmi" iti | 4. Saśvad 28 ha

²⁷ Perhaps, however, we are to understand Tvashtri's function of aiding in procreation to be here referred to.

²⁸ S'aśvat-s'abdo 'tra sāmarthyāt kshipra-vachanaḥ.—Comm.

jhasha 29 āsa sa hi jyeshtham 30 vardhate | " atha itithīm samām tad aughah āgantā tad mā nāvam upakalpya upāsāsai | sa aughe utthite nāvam āpadyāsai tatas tvā pārayitāsmi" iti | 5. Tam evam bhritvā samudram abhyavajahāra | sa yatithīm tat samām paridideša tatithīm samām nāvam upakalpya upāsānchakre | sa aughe utthite nāvam āpede | tam sa matsyaḥ upanyāpupluve | tasya śringe nāvah pāśam pratimumocha | tena etam uttaram girim 31 atidudrāva 32 | 6. Sa ha uvācha "apīparam vai tvā vrikshe nāvam pratibadhnīshva | tam̃ tu tvā mā girau santam udakam antaschhaitsīd yāvad yāvad udakam samavāyāt tāvat tāvad anvavasarpāsi" iti | Sa ha tāvat tāvad eva anvavasasarpa | tad api etad uttarasya girer "Manor avasarpanam" iti | augho ha tāḥ sarvāh prajāḥ niruvāha atha iha Manur eva ekah pariśiśishe | 7. Sah archan śrāmyamś chachāra prajākāmah | tatra api pāka-yajnena īje | sa ghritam dadhi mastv āmikshām ity apsu Juhuvānchakāra | tatah samvatsare yoshit sambabhūva | sā ha pibdamānā 33 iva udeyāya | tasyai ha sma ghritam pade santishthate | tayā Mitrā-Varunau sanjagmāte | 8. Tām ha ūchatuh "kā asi" iti | "Manor duhitā" iti | "āvayor brūshva" iti | "na" iti ha uvācha "yah eva mām ajījanata tasya eva aham asmi" iti | tasyām apitvam 84 īshāte | tad vā jajnau tad vā na jajnāv 35 ati tu eva iyāya | sā Manum ājagāma | 9. Tām ha Manur uvācha "kā asi" iti | "tava duhitā" iti | "katham bhagavati mama duhitā" iti | "yāh amūr apsu āhutīr ahaushīr ghritam dadhi mastv āmikshām tato mām ajījanathāh | sā āśīr asmi tām mā yajne avakalpaya | yajne ched vai mā avakalpayishyasi bahuh prajayā paśubhir bhavishyasi yam u maya kancha asisham asasishyase sa te sarva samardhishyate" iti | tām etad madhye yajnasya avākalpayat | madhyam hi etad yajnasya yad antarā prayājānuyājān | 10. Tayā archan śrāmyams chachara prajakāmaķ | tayā imām prajatim prajajne yā iyam Manok prajātiķ | yām u enayā kāncha āśisham āśāsta sā asmai sarvā samārdhyata | sā eshā nidānena yad Idā | sa yo ha evam vidvān Idayā charati etām ha eva prajātim prajāyate yām Manuh prājāyata | yām u enayā kāncha āśisham āśāste sā asmai sarvā samridhyate ;

"1. In the morning they brought to Manu water for washing, as ²⁹ Jhasho mahā-matsyah.—Comm.

⁸⁰ Jyeshtham vriddhatamam.-Comm.

³¹ Uttaram girim Himavantam.—Comm. 32 Some MSS. read adhidudrava.

³⁸ Pibdamānā . . . ghrita-prabhavatvāt ghritam sravantī susnighdhā udakād utthitā.—Comm.

³⁴ Apitvam bhagah | tam prarthitavantau.—Comm.

³⁵ Pratijnātavatī cha na cha pratijnātavatī.—Comm.

men are in the habit of bringing it to wash with the hands. As he was thus washing, a fish36 came into his hands, (2) (which spake to him) 'preserve me; I shall save thee.' (Manu enquired) 'From what wilt thou save me?' (The fish replied) 'A flood shall sweep away all these creatures; 37 from it I will rescue thee.' (Manu asked) 'How (shall) thy preservation (be effected)?' 3. The fish said: 'So long as we are small, we are in great peril, for fish devours fish; thou shalt preserve me first in a jar. When I grow too large for the jar, then thou shalt dig a trench, and preserve me in that. When I grow too large for the trench, then thou shalt carry me away to the ocean. I shall then be beyond the reach of danger.' 4. Straightway he became a large fish; for he waxes to the utmost. (He said) 'Now in such and such a year, then the flood will come; thou shalt, therefore, construct a ship, and resort to me; thou shalt embark in the ship when the flood rises, and I shall deliver thee from it.' 5. Having thus preserved the fish, Manu carried him away to the sea. Then in the same year which the fish had enjoined, he constructed a ship and resorted to him. When the flood rose, Manu embarked in the ship. The fish swam towards him. He fastened the cable of the ship to the fish's horn. By this means he passed over 38 this northern mountain.39 6. The fish said, 'I have delivered thee; fasten the ship to a tree. But lest the water should cut thee off whilst thou art on the mountain, as much as the water subsides, so much shalt thou descend after it.' He accordingly descended after it as much (as it subsided). Wherefore also this, viz., 'Manu's descent' is (the name) of the northern mountain. Now the flood had swept away all these creatures; so Manu alone was left here. 7. Desirous of offspring, he lived worshipping and toiling in arduous religious rites. Among these he also sacrificed with the pāka offering. He cast clarified butter, thickened milk, whey and curds, as an oblation into the waters. Thence in a year a woman was produced.

⁵⁶ Bhavino'rthasya siddhyartham devata eva matsya-rupena ajagama | "To accomplish what was to follow, it was a deity which came in the form of a fish."—Comm.

⁸⁷ Aughah udaka-sanghātah | sa imāḥ Bharatavarsha-nivāsinīh prajāḥ niḥšesham vodhā | desāntaram prāpayitā | "The flood will entirely carry these creatures abiding in Bharatavarsha;—will convey them to another country."—Comm.—I do not see why the verb nirvodhā should have the sense here assigned to it: at all events we are afterwards told that Manu alone was left after the flood.

³⁸ Or, if adhidudrāva be the true reading, "he hastened to."

³⁹ The Himavat or Himalaya, according to the Commentator.

up as it were unctuous.40 Clarified butter adheres to her steps. Mitra and Varuna met her. They said to her, 'Who art thou?' 'Manu's daughter,' (she replied). 'Say (thou art) ours,' (they rejoined). 'No,' she said, 'I am his who begot me.' They desired a share in her. She promised that, or she did not promise that; but passed onward. 9. Manu said to her, 'Who art thou?' 'Thy came to Manu. daughter,' she replied. 'How, glorious one,' asked Manu, '(art thou) my daughter?' 'Thou hast generated me,' she said, 'from those oblations, butter, thick milk, whey and curds, which thou didst cast into the waters. I am a benediction. Apply me in the sacrifice. If thou wilt employ me in the sacrifice, thou shalt abound in offspring and cattle. Whatever benediction thou wilt ask through me, shall accrue He (accordingly) introduced her (as) that (which comes to thee.' in) the middle of the sacrifice; for that is the middle of the sacrifice which (comes) between the introductory and concluding forms. With her he lived worshipping and toiling in arduous religious rites, desirous of offspring. With her he begot⁴¹ this offspring which is this offspring of Manu.42 Whatever benediction he asked with her, was all vouchsafed to him. This is essentially that which is Ida. Whosoever, knowing this, lives with Ida, begets this offspring which Manu begot. Whatever benediction he asks with her, is all vouchsafed to him."

40 Such is the rendering of piòdamānā given by the Commentator, who is followed by Professors Weber and Müller. Professor Roth in his Lexicou, s. v., explains it by "firm," i.e. "the woman arose solid out of the fluid mass."

42 Compare Taitt. Sanhitā, v. 1, 5, 6. "Sivo bhava prajābhyām" ity āha prajābhya eva enam samayati | "mānushībhyas tvām angirah" ity āha mānavyo hi prajāh | "He says, 'be auspicious to the twain offspring;' for he pacifies him from (injuring) the offspring. He says, '(We pacify) thee from (injuring) the human offspring, o Angiras.' For creatures are descended from Manu."

⁴¹ I should observe that the same verb (prajajne) by which the generative act of Manu is here described, is in other passages of the same Brāhmana (ii. 2, 4, 1; ii. 5, 1, 1; vi. 1, 1, 8; vi. 1, 3, 1; vii. 5, 2, 6; xi. 5, 8, 1) applied in another tense to the god Prajāpati, of whom it is said that he considered how he should beget progeny (sa aikshata 'katham nu prajāyeya). (Compare xi. 1, 6, 1.) In other parts of the same work, however, it is said that Prajāpati created (asrijata) the waters (vi. 1, 1, 9), or creatures (prajāh asrijata, vii. 4, 3, 5; x. 2, 2, 1); and the fact of the word "beget" being applied to Prajāpati, either in a figurative, or anthropomorphic sense, does not authorize us to suppose that the author of the S'atapatha Brāhmana, in the passage before us (the legend of the deluge), intended to represent Manu as the creator of the human race, and not as their progenitor in the natural sense. (In R.V. ii. 33, 1; vi. 70, 3, we find the phrase prajāyemahi prajābhih | pra prajābhir jāyate | "let us beget children," "he begets children.")

From this interesting legend we learn that, according to its author's belief, Manu was not the creator of mankind, as some later accounts considered him to have been, but himself belonged to an earlier race of living beings, which was entirely destroyed by the deluge which is described. The legend regards him as a representative of his generation. who, for some reason, perhaps his superior wisdom, or sanctity, or position, was selected out of the crowd of ordinary mortals to be rescued from the impending destruction. That he was regarded as a mere man, and not as a being of a superior order, is shown by the fact of his requiring the aid of a higher power to preserve him. A supernatural fish, apparently some divine person, conceived as taking the form of a creature which would be perfectly secure and at home in the midst of the raging waters, undertook to deliver him, and guided the ship on which he was directed to embark, through all dangers to its destined haven. No one but Manu took refuge in the ship, for he alone, the story expressly records, was preserved, while all the other living beings were overwhelmed. Finding himself the sole surviver when the waters subsided, he became desirous of progeny; and with intense devotion performed certain religious rites in the hope of realizing his wish through their efficacy. As a result of his oblations, a woman arose from the waters into which they had been cast. A male and a female now existed, the destined parents of a new race of men who sprang from their union, - a union the fruitfulness of which was assured by their assiduous practice of sacred ceremonies. From Manu and Ida, we are expressly told, the race known as that of Manu, i.e. the race of men, was produced. The legend says nothing whatever of this race being originally characterized by any distinction of castes, or about four sons, the ancestors of Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and S'ūdras being born to Manu and Idā. We must therefore suppose that the author of the legend intends to represent the early race of mankind, or at least the first inhabitants of Bharatavarsha, as descended from one common progenitor without any original varieties of caste, however different the professions and social position of their descendants afterwards became. We are consequently entitled to regard this legend of the Satapatha Brāhmana as at variance with the common fable regarding the separate origin of the Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaisyas, and S'ūdras.

The following are some other passages in which Manu and Ida are both referred to:

Taitt. S. ii. 6, 7, 1. Manuh prithivyāh yajniyam aichhat | sa ghritam nishiktam avindat | so 'bravīt "ko 'sya īśvaro yajne 'pi karttor" iti | tāv abrūtām Mitrā-Varuṇau "gor eva āvām īśvarau karttoh svah" iti | tau tato gām śamairayatām | sā yatra yatra nyakrāmat tato ghritam apīḍ-yata | tasmād ghritapadī uchyate | tad asyai janma | . . . 3. Idām upahvayate | paśavo vai Idā | paśūn eva upahvayate | chatur upahvayate | chatur hyatayate | chatur upahvayate | chatur hyatayate | chatur upahvayate | rasmād hi paśavah | "Mānavī" ity āha | Manur hy etām agre 'paśyat | "ghritapadī" ity āha | yad eva asyai padād ghritam apīḍyata tasmād evam āha | "Maitrāvaruṇī" ity āha | Mitrāvaruṇau hy enām samairayatām |

"Manu sought whatever upon earth was fit for sacrifice. He found butter poured out. He said, 'Who has power to employ this in sacrifice also?' Mitra and Varuna replied, 'We two have power to employ the cow.' They then sent forth the cow. Wherever she went forth, butter was pressed out. Hence she is called the 'butter-footed.' This is her birth.... 3. He calls upon Idā. Animals are Idā. He calls upon animals. He calls upon them four times. For animals are four-footed. He says 'Mānavī.' For Manu first saw her. He says 'Butter-footed.' He says so, because butter was pressed from her foot. He says 'Maitrāvarunī.' For Mitra and Varuna sent her forth." (Comp. Taitt. Br. iii. 7, 5, 6.)

Taitt. Br. i. 1, 4, 4. Idā vai Mānavī yajnānukūšiny 43 āsīt | sā 'śrinod "Asurā agnim adadhate" iti | 6. Sā 'bravīd Idā Manum "tathā vai aham tava agnim ādhāsyāmi yathā pra prajayā paśubhir mithunair janishyase praty asmin loke sthāsyasi abhi suvargam lokam jeshyasi" iti | gārhapatyam agre ādadhāt | gārhapatyena eva asmai prajām paśūn prājanayat |

"Idā, the daughter of Manu, was a revealer of sacrifice. She heard, 'the Asuras are placing fire.' . . . 6. Idā said to Manu, 'I shall so place thy fire that thou shalt increase in offspring, cattle, and twins; thou shalt be firmly established in this world, and shalt conquer the heavenly world.' She first placed the garhapatya fire. It was ⁴³ Yajna-tattva-prakāsana-samarthā.—Comm.

⁴⁴ Compare the Kāthaka Br. viii. 4, quoted in Weber's Indische Studien, iii. 463, where Idā is said to have promised to Manu: tathā te Agnim ādhāsyāmi yathā ma-through the garhapatya that she produced for him offspring and cattle."

Taitt. S. i. 7. 1, 3. Sarvena vai yajnena devāḥ suvargam lokam āyan | pākayajnena Manur aśrāmyat | sā Iḍā Manum upāvarttata | tām devāsurāḥ vyahvayanta pratīchīm devāḥ parāchīm Asurāḥ | sā devān upāvarttata |

"The gods arrived at the heavenly world by the whole sacrifice. Manu worshipped with the $p\bar{a}kayajna$. That Ida came to Manu. The gods and asuras called her away in different directions, the gods in front, the asuras behind. She came to the gods."

The following texts refer to Manu alone, as a celebrator of religious ceremonies:

Taitt. S. ii. 5, 9, 1. "Agne mahān asi" ity āha | mahān hy esha yad Agniḥ | "brāhmaṇa" ity āha | brāhmaṇo hy esha | "bhārata" ity āha | esha hi devebhyo havyam bharati | "deveddha" ity āha | devāh hy etam aindhata | "Manviddha" ity āha | Manur hy etam uttaro devebhyaḥ aindha |

"He says, 'Agni, thou art great.' For this Agni is great. He says, 'o Brāhman.' For he is a Brāhman. He says, 'o Bhārata.' For he bears the oblation to the gods. He says, 'kindled by the gods.' For the gods kindled him. He says, 'kindled by Manu.' For Manu kindled him after the gods.'

Taitt. S. vi. 2, 5, 2 f. Trivrato vai Manur asīd dvivratā asurā ekavratā devāḥ | prātar madhyandine sāyam̃ tad Manor vratam āsīt pākayajnasya rūpam pushtyai | prātaścha sāyāncha asurānām̃ nirmadhyam kshūdho rūpam | tatas te parābhavan | madhyandine madhyarāttre devānām tatas te 'bhavan suvargam̃ lokam āyan |

"Manu performed three rites; the asuras two; the gods one. Manu's rite was in the morning, at noon, and in the evening, the form of a pākayajna for nourishment. That of the asuras was in the morning and evening, without any midday rite, a form of hunger. Hence they perished. That of the gods was at midday and midnight. Hence they prospered, and arrived at the heavenly world."

Taitt. S. vii. 5, 15, 3. Etayā (i.e. abhijityā) vai Indram devāh ayājayan | tasmād "Indrasavah" | etayā Manum manushyāh | tasmād "Manu-savah" |

 $nushy\bar{a}$ devān upaprajanishyante | "I will so place Agni for thee, than men shall be born among the gods."

yathā Indro devānām yathā Manur manushyāṇām eva bhavati yaḥ evam vidvān etayā ishṭyā yajate |

"With this (abhijiti) the gods sacrificed for Indra. Hence it is called 'Indra-sava.' Men sacrificed with it for Manu. Hence it is called 'Manu-sava.' As Indra is among gods, and Manu among men, so he becomes who thus knowing sacrifices with this oblation."

In Taitt. S. ii. 2, 10, 2, we find nearly the words which Kullūka quotes on Manu's Institutes, i. 1: Yad vai kincha Manur avadat tad bheshajam | "Whatever Manu said was a remedy."

In Satapatha Br. vi. 6, 1, 19, Manu is called a Prajāpati: "Prajāpataye Manave svāhā" iti | Prajāpatir vai Manuh | sa hi idam sarvam amanuta | Prajāpatir vai etad agre karma akarot | "Svāhā to Manu the lord of creatures. Manu is a lord of creatures (prajā-pati) for he thought (amanuta) all this. The lord of creatures (prajā-pati) formerly did all this work."

The following story in its different versions also connects Manu with religious observances and represents him as very devout:

S. P. Br. i. 1, 4, 14 ff. Manor ha vai rishabhah āsa | tasminn asuraghnī sapatna-ghnī vāk pravishṭā āsa | tasya ha sma śvasathād ravathād asura-răkshasāni mridyamānāni yanti | te ha asurāh samūdire "pāpam vata no 'yam rishabhah sachate katham nv imam dabhnuyama" iti "Kilātākulī" iti ha asura-brahmāv āsatuh | tau ha ūchatuḥ "śraddhādevo vai Manuh | āvăm nu vedāva" iti | tau ha āgatya ūchatur "Mano yājayāva tvā" iti | "kena" iti | "anena rishabhena" iti | "tathā" iti | tasya ālabdhasya sā vāg apachakrāma | sā Manor eva jāyām Manāvīm praviveśa | tasyai ha sma yatra vadantyai śrinvanti tato ha sma eva asura-răkshosāni mṛidyamānāni yanti | te ha asurāh samūdire "ito vai nah pāpīyah sachate bhūyo hi mānushī vāg vadati" iti | Kilātākulī ha eva ūchatuḥ "śraddhā-devo vai Manur āvăm nv eva vedāva" iti | tau ha agatya uchatur "Mano yajayava tva" iti | "kena" iti | "enaya eva jāyayā" iti | "tathā" iti | tasyai ālabdhāyai sā vāg apachakrāma sā yajnam eva yajna-pātrāni praviveśa | tato ha enām na śekatur nirhantum | sā eshā asura-ghnī vāg udvadati | sa yasya ha evam vidushah etām atra vācham pratyudvādayanti pāpīyāmso ha eva asya sapatnāḥ bhavanti |

"Manu had a bull. Into it an Asura-slaying, enemy-slaying voice had entered. In consequence of this (bull's) snorting and bellowing, Asuras and Rakshasas were continually destroyed. Then the Asuras said: 'This bull, alas, does us mischief; how shall we overcome him?' Now there were two priests of the Asuras called Kilāta and Akuli. They said: 'Manu is a devout believer: let us make trial of him.' They went and said to him, 'let us sacrifice for thee.' 'With what (victim)?' he asked. 'With this bull,' they replied. 'Be it so,' he answered. When it had been slaughtered, the voice departed out of it, and entered into Manu's wife Manavi. Wherever they hear her speaking, the Asuras and Rākshasas continue to be destroyed in consequence of her voice. The Asuras said: 'She does us vet more mischief; for the human voice speaks more.' Kilāta and Akuli said, 'Manu is a devout believer: let us make trial of him.' They came and said to him, 'Manu, let us sacrifice for thee.' 'With what (victim)?" he asked. 'With this (thy) wife,' they replied. 'Be it so,' he answered. When she had been slaughtered the voice departed out of her and entered into the sacrifice and the sacrificial vessels. Thence they were unable to expel it. This is the Asura-slaving voice which speaks out (when the two stones are struck with the $\acute{s}amy\bar{a}$, as a part of the ceremonial). Wretched become the enemies of that man for whom, when he knows this, they cause this voice here to reverberate."

Taitt. Br. iii. 2, 5, 9. Manoḥ śraddhā-devasya yajamānasya asura-ghnī vāg yajnāyudheshu pravishṭā āsīt | te 'surāḥ yāvanto yajnāyudhānām udvadatām upāśriṇvans te parābhavan |

"An asura-slaying voice had entered into the sacrificial implements of the devout believer and sacrificer Manu. The Asuras, as many as heard the sacrificial implements sounding, were overcome."

Kāṭhaka Br. ii. 30, 1.45 Manor vai kapālāny āsan | tair yāvato yāvato 'surān abhyupādadhāt te parābhavan | atha tarhi Trishṭhā-varūtrī 46 āstām asura-brahmau | tā asurāh abruvann "imāni shaṭ kapālāni yāche-thām" iti | tau prataritvānā abhiprāpadyetām "Vāyave Agne Vāyave Indra" iti | "kimkāmau sthaḥ" ity abravīt | "imāni nau kapālāni dehi" iti | tāny ābhyām adadāt | tāny aranyām parāhritya sama-pimshṭām | tad Manor gāvo 'bhivyatishṭhanta | tāni rishabhaḥ samaleṭ | tasya ruvato yāvanto 'surāh upāśrinvams te parābhavan |

46 Roth in his Lexicon s. v. reads Trishnavarutri.

⁴⁵ Extracted from Weber's Indische Studien, iii. 461 f. A translation of this, as well as of the next passage, is given by Prof. Weber in the Journal of the German Oriental Society, vol. xviii. 284 ff.

tau prātaritvānā abhiprāpadyetām "Vāyave Agne Vāyave Indra" iti | "kimkāmau sthah" ity abravīt | "anena tvā rishabhena yājayāva" iti | tat patnīm yajur vadantīm pratyapadyata | tasyāh dyām vāg ātishthat | tasyāh vadantyāh yāvanto 'surāh upāśrinvams te parābhavan | tasmād naktam strī chandrataram vadati | tau prātaritvānā abhiprāpadyetām "Vāyave Agne Vāyave Indra" iti | "kimkāmau sthah" ity abravīt | "anayā tvā patnyā yājayava" iti | sā paryagnikritā āsīt | atha Indro'chāyad "Manvam śraddhādevam Trishthāvarūtrī asura-brahmau jāyayā vyardhayatam" iti | sa āgachhat | so 'bravīd " ābhyām tvā yājavāni" iti | "na" ity abravīd "na vai aham anayor īśe" iti | atithipatir vāva atither īśe" ity abravīt | tā asmai prāyaśchhat | sa prativeśo vedim kurvann asta | ta apriśchhatam "ko'si" iti | "brahmanah" iti | "katamo brāhmanah" iti | "kim brāhmanasya pitaram kim u prichhasi mātaram | śrutam ched asmin vedyam sa pitā sa pitāmahah" iti | tā avittām "Indro vai" iti | tau prāpatatām | tayor yāh prokshanīr āpah āsams tābhir anuvisrijya śīrshe aśchhinat | tau vrishaś cha yavāshaś cha abhavatām | tasmāt tau varsheshu śushyatah | adbhir hi hatau | tām paryagnikritām udāsrijat | tayā "rdhnot | tāḥ imāḥ Mānavyaḥ prajāḥ | yat paryagni-kritam pātnīvatam utsrijati yām eva Manur riddhim ārdhnot tām ridhnoti

"Manu had platters. All the Asuras, against whom he laid out the sacrifice with these were destroyed. Now Trishtha and Varūtri were at that time the priests of the Asuras. The Asuras said to them, 'ask for these six platters.' These two arrived as morning guests, repeating the formula, 'To Vāyu, o Agni, to Vāyu, o Indra.' 'What do you desire?' asked Manu. 'Give us these platters,' they replied. He gave them to them. Taking them they smashed them in the forest. Then Manu's cattle were standing round. The bull licked the platters. As many Asuras as heard him bellowing were destroyed. The two Asura priests came as morning guests, repeating the formula, 'To Vāyu, o Agni, to Vāyu, o Indra.' 'What do you desire?' enquired Manu. 'Let us sacrifice for thee with this bull,' they answered. He then came to his wife who was uttering a yajush. Her voice reached to the sky. As many Asuras as heard her speaking were destroyed. Hence a woman speaks more pleasantly by night. The two Asura priests arrived as morning guests, repeating the formula, 'To Vāyu, o Agni, to Vāyu, o Indra.' 'What do you desire?' asked Manu. 'Let us sacrifice for thee with this thy wife (as the victim),' they replied. The fire was carried round her. Then Indra perceived, 'Trishtha and Varutri, the two Asura priests are depriving the devout believer Manu of his wife.' He came and said (to Manu), 'Let me sacrifice for thee with these two Asura priests (for victims).' 'No,' answered Manu, 'I am not their master.' 'The host is master of the guest,' rejoined Indra. Manu then gave them to him. (Standing) near them he was making an altar. They asked 'Who art thou?' 'A Brāhman,' he replied. 'What (class of) Brāhman,' they enquired. He rejoined (with a verse), 'Why askest thou the father or the mother of a Brahman? If Vedic tradition is to be discovered in him, that is his father, that his grandfather.' They knew, 'this is Indra.' They fled. He threw after them the water which was there for consecration, and therewith cut off their heads. They became, (the one) a vrisha, (the other) a yavāsha plant. Hence these (two plants) wither in the rains, because they were killed with water. He released her (Manu's wife) after the fire had been carried round her. By her he prospered. These are the creatures sprung from Manu. Whenever a man releases the victim offered to Agni Pātnīvata, after fire has been carried round it, he prospers with the same prosperity with which Manu prospered."

Compare with this a passage of the Taitt. Sanh. vi. 6, 6, 1. Indrah patniyā Manum ayājayat | tām paryagnikritām udasrijat | tayā Manur ārdhnot | yat paryagnikritam pātnīvatam utsrijati yām eva Manur riddhin ārdhnot tām eva yajamāna ridhnoti |

"Indra was sacrificing for Manu with his wife (as the victim). He released her after the fire had been carried round her. By her Manu prospered. Whenever the worshipper releases the victim offered to Agni Pātnīvata after fire has been carried round it, he prospers with the same prosperity with which Manu prospered."

I quote the following passages also from the interest which they possess as relating to a personage so ancient and venerable as Manu is reputed to be:

Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, v. 14. Nābhānedishṭhañ vai Mānavam brahmacharyyañ vasantam bhrātaro nirabhajan | so 'bravīd etya "kim mahyam abhākta" iti | "etam eva nishṭhāvam avavaditāram" ity abruvan | tasmād ha apy etarhi pitaram putrāḥ "nishṭhāvo 'vavaditā" ity eva āchakshate | sa pitaram etya abravīt "tvām ha vāva mahyañ tata abhākskur" iti | tam pitā 'bravīd "mā putraka tad ādrithāh | Angiraso vai ime svargāya lokāya satram āsate | te shashtham shashtham eva ahar āgatya muhyanti | tān ete sūkte shashthe 'hani śamsaya | teshām yat sahasram satra-pariveshaṇam̃ tat te svar yanto dāsyanti" iti | "tathā" iti | tān upait "pratigribhnīta Mānavam sumedhasaḥ" iti | tam abruvan "kimkāmo vadasi" iti | "idam eva vah shashtham ahah prajnāpayāni" ity abravīd "atha yad vai etat sahasram satra-pariveshanam tad me svar yanto datta" iti | "tatha" iti | tan ete sukte shashthe hany asamsayat | tato vai te pra yajnam ajānan pra svargam lokam | tad yad ete sūkte shashthe 'hani samsati yajnasya prajnātyai svargasya lokasya anukhyātyai | tam svar yanto 'bruvann "etat te brāhmana sahasram" iti | tad enam samākurvānam purushah krishnaśa-vāsy uttaratah upotthāya abravīd "mama vai idam mama vai vāstuham" iti | so 'bravīd "mahyam vai idam adur" iti | tam abravīt "tad vai nau tava eva pitari praśnah" iti | sa pitaram ait | tam pitā 'bravīd " nanu te putraka adur " iti | " adur eva me" ity abravīt "tat tu me purushah krishnasa-vāsy uttaratah upodatishthat 'mama vai idam mama vai vāstuham' iti ādita" iti | tam pitā 'bravīt " tasya eva putraka | tat tubhyam̃ sa dāsyati" iti | sa punar etya abravīt "tava ha vāva kila bhagavah idam iti me pitā āha" iti | 80 'bravīt " tad aham tubhyam eva dadāmi yah eva satyam avādīr" iti tasmād evam vidushā satyam eva vaditavyam \ sa esha sahasra-sanir mantro yad nābhānedishtham | upa enam sahasram namati pra shashthena ahnā svargam lokam jānāti yah evam veda | 47

"The brothers of Nābhānedishtha disinherited him whilst he was living in the state of a Brahmachārin. Coming (to them) he said: "What share have you given to me?" They replied, '(we have given thee) this judge and divider (as thy share)." In consequence sons even now speak of their father as the 'judge and divider." He came to his father and said, 'Father, they have given thee to me as my share.' His father answered, 'Do not, my son, care about that. These Angirases are performing a sacrifice in order to (secure) the heavenly world; but as often as they come to the sixth day (of the ceremony) they become perplexed. Make them recite these two hymns (R.V. x. 61 and 62) on the sixth day; and when they are going to heaven, they will give thee that provision of a thousand 48 which has been made for the sacrifice.' He said, 'So be it.' He approached them, saying, 'Receive me, the son of Manu, ye sages.' They replied, 'With what object dost thou speak?' He said, 'Let me make known to you this sixth day: and then you shall give me this sacrificial provision of a thousand, when ye are going to heaven.' 'Let it be so,' they answered. He made them repeat these two hymns on the sixth day. They then knew the sacrifice, and the heavenly world. Hence when any one repeats these two hymns on the sixth day, it is with a view to a knowledge of the sacrifice, and to the revelation of the heavenly world. When they were going to the heavenly world, they said to him, 'This thousand, o Brāhman, 40 is thine.' As he was collecting (the thousand) a man in dark clothing rose up before him from the north, and said, 'This is mine; what remains on the spot is mine.' Nābhānedishtha replied: 'But they have given it to me.' (The man) rejoined: 'It belongs to (one of) us; let thy father be asked.' He went to his father, who enquired: 'Have they not given thee (the thousand), my son?' 'They did give it to me,' he replied, 'but a man in dark clothes rose up before me from the north, and took it from me, saying, 'This is mine; what remains on the spot is mine." His father said: 'It is his; but he will give it to thee.' He returned, and said (to the man): 'This is thine, reverend sir, so my father says.' (The man) replied: 'I will give it to thee, who hast spoken the truth.' Wherefore one who has this knowledge should speak only truth. That is a hymn which bestows a thousand, that Nābhānedishtha hymn. A thousand falls to his lot, he knows the heavenly world on the sixth day-the man who knows this."

⁴⁷ This passage has been already translated into German by Prof. R. Roth, Journal of the German Oriental Society, vi. 244, and into English by Prof. Max Müller in his Anc. Sansk. Lit. p. 423 f., and by Dr. M. Haug in his Ait. Br. vol. ii. p. 341 f.

Taittirīya Sanhitā, iii. 1, 9, 4. Manuh putrebhyo dāyam vyabhajat | sa Nābhānedishṭham brahmacharryam vasantam nirabhajat | sa āgachhat | so 'bravīt "kathā mā nirabhāg" iti | "na tvā nirabhāksham" ity abravīd "Angirasah ime satram āsate te suvargam lokam na prajānanti | tebhyah idam brāhmanam brūhi | te suvargam lokam yanto ye eshām paśavas tāms te dāsyanti" iti | tad ebhyo 'bravīt | te suvargam

⁴⁸ See R.V. x. 62, 7.

⁴⁹ The application of this title to Nābhānedishtha is to be remarked, as his father Manu is recorded in the Puranic legends as ancestor of the solar race of kings. See the passage from the M. Bh. i. 3135 ff., quoted above, p. 126.

lokam yanto ye eshām paśavaḥ āsams tān asmai adaduḥ | tam paśubhiś charantam yajna-vāstau Rudraḥ āgachhat | so'bravīt "mama vai ime paśavaḥ" iti | "adur vai mahyam imān" ity abravīt | "na vai tasya te īśate" ity abravīt | "yad yajnavāstau hīyate mama vai tad" iti | tasmād yājnavāstu na abhyavetyam | so 'bravīt | "yajne mā bhaja atha te paśūn na abhimamsye" iti | tasmai etam manthinaḥ samsrāvam ajuhot | tato vai tasya Rudro paśūn na abhyamanyata | yatra etam eva vidvān manthinaḥ samsrāvam juhoti na tatra Rudraḥ paśūn abhimanyate |

"Manu divided his property among his sons. He disinherited his son Nābhānedishtha who was living as a Brahmachārin. He came and said, 'How hast thou disinherited me?' 'I have not disinherited thee,' replied (his father); 'these Angirases are celebrating a sacrifice: they do not know the heavenly world; declare to them this Brāhmana; and when they are going to heaven, they will give thee the cattle they have.' He declared the Brahmana to them, and when they were going to heaven they gave him the cattle they had. Rudra came to him as he was on the place of sacrifice employed with the cattle and said: 'These are my cattle.' 'But,' replied Nabhanedishtha. 'they have given them to me.' 'They have not power to do so; that which is left on the place of sacrifice is mine,' answered Rudra. Hence the place of sacrifice must not be approached. (Rudra further) said: 'Give me a share in the sacrifice, and I shall not injure thy cattle.' He offered him this libation of soma and flour. Then Rudra did not injure his cattle. Whenever any one knows this libation of soma and flour and offers it up, Rudra does not injure his cattle."50

A passage, quoted above, p. 26 f., from the Taittirīya Sanhitā, vi. 5,

The reader who knows German, and wishes to see an able discussion of the question, whether the legend of Nābhānedishtha, as given in the Aitareya Brāhmana, has any real connection with the two hymns of the Rig-veda (x. 61 and 62) which are referred to in it, and whether it contains any reminiscence, or symbolical representation, of ancient historical events, may consult Prof. Roth's paper on the subject, in the 6th vol. of the Journal of the German Oriental Society, pp. 243 ff. The learned writer settles both questions in the negative, maintaining that the legend is manufactured out of certain misinterpreted allusions in the hymns, with the view of asserting the superiority of priestly knowledge to earthly power and worldly wealth, and that there never existed either a Nābhānedishtha or a Manu. The object which I have in view in the collection of these texts does not require that I should express any opinion on these points. I only seek to ascertain what were the traditions received by the most ancient Indian writers themselves regarding the origin of their race, and not what was the historical value of those traditions.

6, 1 ff., may perhaps also be considered as affirming the descent of men from Manu when it declares them to be the offspring of Vivasvat; since the latter is regarded as the father of Manu.

In the Chhandogya Upanishad, iii. 11, 4 (p. 178 of Bibliotheca Indica, vol. iii.) the following reference to Manu occurs:

Tad ha etad Brahmā Prajāpataye Prajāpatir Manave Manuḥ prajā-bhyaḥ | tad ha etad Uddālakāya Āruṇaye putrāya jyeshṭhāya pitā brahma provācha |

"This (doctrine) Brahmā declared to Prajāpati, Prajāpati to Manu, Manu to (his) offspring. This sacred truth was declared to his eldest son Uddālaka Aruņi by his father."

The first half of this passage is repeated in viii. 15, 1, of the same work (p. 625).

In his commentary on the former of the two passages, Sankara Āchāryya gives this explanation:

Brahmā Hiranyagarbho Virūje Prajāpataye uvācha | soʻpi Manave | Manur Ikshvākv-ādibhyaḥ prajābhyaḥ provācha |

"Brahmā Hiranyagarbha declared it to the Prajāpati Virāj; he to Manu; and Manu declared it to his descendants Ikshvāku and the rest."

In his note on the second passage, viii. 15, 1, he varies somewhat in his explanation of the personages by whom the doctrine was transmitted:

Brahmā Hiranyagarbhah Parameśvaro vā tad-dvārena Prajāpataye Kaśyapāya uvācha | asāv api Manave sva-putrāya | Manuh prajābhyah |

"Brahmā Hiranyagarbha, or the supreme Lord (Parameśvara) through his instrumentality, declared it to the Prajāpati Kaśyapa; he to his son Manu; Manu to his descendants."

In these two passages of the Chhāndogya Upanishad Brahmā is distinguished from Prajāpati, and Prajāpati from Manu, who again is said to have handed down the doctrine, not to any one person in particular, but "to the offspring," or "descendants" (prajābhyaḥ), apparently his own descendants. This Upanishad therefore seems to coincide in the doctrine of the hymns, and of the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, that Manu was the progenitor of mankind. The Commentator, it will have been noticed, in one place delares that Prajāpati is identifiable with Virāj, and again that Kaśyapa is to be understood under that appellation. Virāj and Kaśyapa are not, however, generally regarded as the same.

Nor is Kaśyapa commonly considered to be Manu's father. In the passages from the Rāmāyana, ii. 110, and Mahābhārata, quoted above, pp. 115 and 126, Kaśyapa is said to be the father of Vivasvat, and he again of Manu.

However this may be, as Manu is said to have handed down the sacred tradition to his descendants, we must suppose that those descendants included the whole of the progenitors of the Aryan Indians who were worthy of being made the depositaries of such a tradition; and must therefore conclude that the Chhāndogya Upanishad agrees with the passage quoted above, p. 126, from the Mahābhārata, in recognizing Manu as the progenitor of the Brāhmans, as well as the other castes.

Sect. III.—Extracts from the Mahābhārata regarding Manu.

I have already adduced in the preceding chapter, page 126, an important passage of the Mahābhārata, Ādiparvan verses 3128 ff., in which Manu Vaivasvata is expressly declared to have been the progenitor of mankind including the four castes. A legend of the deluge, corresponding to the one which has been adduced from the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, in the last section, is also to be found in the Vana-parvan of the Mahābhārata, and although it does not represent Manu as the parent from whom the human race was reproduced, but as the creator by whom the world was renewed, after the flood, I shall extract the entire text. Its style of narration is tedious, when compared with the quaint brevity of the Brāhmaṇa; but I shall condense it as much as possible in the translation. It begins thus, verse 12747:

Mārkandeya uvācha | Vivasvatah suto rājan maharshih suprătāpavān | babhūva nara-śārdūla Prajāpati-sama-dyutih | ojasā tejasā lakshmyā tapasā cha viśeshatah | atichakrāma pitaram Manuh svam cha pitāmaham | ūrddhva-bāhur viśālāyām Badaryām sa narādhipah | eka-pāda-sthitas tīvram chachāra sumahat tapah | 12750. Avāk-śirās tathā chāpi netrair animishair driḍham | so 'tapyata tapo ghoram varshānām ayutam tadā | tam kadāchit tapasyantam ūrdrachīram jaṭā-dharam | Chīrinī-tīram āgamya matsyo vachanam abravīt | "bhagavan kshudra-matsyo 'smi balavadbhyo bhayam mama | matsyebhyo hi tato mām tvam trātum arhasi suvrata | durbalam balavanto hi matsyam matsyā višeshataḥ | āsvadanti sadā vrittir vihitā naḥ sanātanī | tasmād bhayaughād mahato majjantam mām višeshataḥ | trātum arhasi karttāsmi krite pratikritam tava" | 12755.

Sa matsya-vachanam śrutvā kripayā 'bhipariplutah | Manur Vaivasvato 'grihnāt tam matsyam pāninā svayam | udakāntam upānīya matsyam Vaivasvato Manuh | alinjire prākshipat tam chandrāmśu - sadriśa prabhe | sa tatra vavridhe rajan matsyah parama - satkritah | putravat svīkarot tasmai Manur bhāvam višeshatah | atha kālena mahatā sa matsyah sumahān abhūt | alinjire yathā chaiva nāsau samabhavat kila | atha matsyo Manum drishtvā punar evābhyabhāshata | "bhagavan sādhu me 'dyānyat sthānam sampratipādaya'' | 12760. Uddhrityālinjirāt tasmāt tatah sa bhagavān Manuh | tam matsyam anayad vāpīm mahutīm sa Manus tadā | tatra tam prākshipach chāpi Manuh para-puranjaya | athāvarddhata matsyah sa punar varsha-ganān bahūn | dvi-yojanāyatā vāpī vistritā chāpi yojanam | tasyām nāsau samabhavat matsyo rājīva-lochanah | vicheshtitum cha Kaunteya matsyo vāpyām viśāmpate | Manum matsyas tato drishtvā punar evābhyabhāshata | "naya mām bhagavan sādho samudra-mahishīm priyām | Gangām tatra nivatsyāmi yathā vā tāta mānyase | 12765. Nidese hi mayā tubhyam sthātavyam anasūyatā \ vriddhir hi paramā prāptā tvat-krite hi mayā 'nagha'' | evam ukto Manur matsyam anayad bhagavān vaśī | nadīm Gangām tatra chainam svayam prākshipad achyutah | sa tatra vavridhe matsyah kanchit kalam arindama | tatah punar Manum drishtva matsyo vachanam abravīt | "Gangāyām na hi śaknomi brihatvāch cheshţitum prabho | samudram naya mām āśu prasīda bhagavann" iti | uddhritya Gangā-salilāt tato matsyam Manuh svayam | samudram anayat pārtha tatra chainam avāsrijat | 12770. Sumahān api matsyas tu sa Manor nayatas tadā | āsīd yatheshṭa-hāryyaścha sparśa-gandha-sukhaścha var | yadā samudre prakshiptah sa matsyo Manunā tadā | tata enam idam vākyam smayamāna ivābravīt | " bhagavan hi kṛitā rakshā tvayā sarvā višeshatah | prāpta-kālam tu yat kāryyam tvayā tach chhrūyatām mama | achirād bhagavan bhaumam idam sthāvara-jangamam | sarvam eva mahābhāga pralayam vai gamishyati | samprakshālana-kālo 'yam lokānām samupasthitah | tasmāt tvām bodhayāmy adya yat te hitam anuttamam | trasanam sthavaranam cha yach chengam yach cha nengati | tasya sarvasya samprāptah kālah parama-dārunah | nauś cha kārayitavyā te dridhā yukta-vatārakā | tatra saptarshibhih sārddham āruhethā mahāmune | vījāni chaiva sarvāni yathoktāni dvijaih purā | tasyām ārohayer nāvi susanguptāni bhāgaśah | nau-sthaś cha mām pratīkshethās tato muni-jana-priya | āgamishyāmy aham śringī vijneyas tena tāpasa | evam etat tvayā kāryam āprishţo'si vrajāmy aham | tā na śakyā mahatyo vai āpas tarttum mayā vinā | 12780. Nābhiśankyam idam chāpi vachanam me tvayā vibho" | "evam karishye" iti tam sa matsyam pratyabhāshata | jagmatuś cha yathākāmam anujnāpya parasparam | tato Manur mahārāja yathoktam matsyakena ha | vījāny ādāya sarvāni sāgaram pupluve tadā | naukayā śubhayā vīra mahorminam arindama | chintayāmāsa cha Manus tam matsyam prithivīpate | sa cha tach-chintitam jnātvā matsyah parapuranjaya | śringī tatrājagāmāśu tadā Bharata-sattama | tam drishtvā manuja-vyāghra Manur matsyam jalarnave | 12785. Sringinam tam yathoktena rupenadrim ivochhritam | vaţārakamayam pāśam atha matsyasya mūrdhani | Manur manuja-śārdūla tasmin śringe nyaveśayat | samyatas tena pāśena matsyah para-puranjaya | vegena mahatā nāvam prākarshal lavanāmbhasi | sa cha tāms tārayan nāvā samudram manujesvara | nṛityamānam ivormībhir garjamānam ivāmbhasā | kshobhyamānā mahāvātaiḥ sā naus tasmin mahodadhau | ghurnate chapaleva strī mattā para-puranjaya | naiva bhūmir na cha diśah pradiśo vā chakāśire | 12790. Sarvam āmbhasam evāsīt kham dyaus cha narapungava | evambhūte tadā loke sankule Bharatarshabha | adrisyanta saptarshayah Manur matsyas tathaiva cha | evam bahūn varsha-ganān tām nāvam so'tha matsyakah | chakarshātandrito rājan tasmin salila-sanchaye | tato Himavatah śringañ yat param Bharatarshabha | tatrākarshat tato nāvam sa matsyah Kurunandana | athābravīt tadā matsyas tān rishīn prahasan śanaih \ "asmin Himavatah śringe nāvam badhnīta māchiram" | sā baddhā tatra tais tūrnam rishibhir Bharatarshabha | 12795. Naur matsyasya vachah śrutvā śringe Himavatas tadā | tach cha Naubandhanam nāma śringam Himavatah param | khyātam adyāpi Kaunteya tad viddhi Bharatarshabha | athābravīd anismishas tān rishīn sa hitas tadā | "aham Prajāpatir Brahmā yat-param nādhigamyate | matsya-rūpena yūyam̃ cha mayā 'smād mokshitā bhayāt | Manunā cha prajāḥ sarvāḥ sa-devāsura-mānushāḥ | srashṭavyāḥ sarva-lokāś cha yach chengam yach cha nengati | tapasā chāpi tīvrena pratibhā 'sya bhavishyati | mat-prasādāt prajā-sarge na cha moham gamishyati" | 12800. Ity uktvā vachanam matsyaķ kshanenādaršanam gataķ | srashţu-kāmaķ prajāś chāpi Manur Vaivasvatah svayam | pramūdho 'bhūt prajā-sarge tapas tepe mahat tatah | tapasā mahatā yuktah so 'tha srashtum prachakrame | sarvāḥ prajā Manuḥ sākshād yathāvad Bharatarshabha | ity etad mātsyakam nāma purānam parikīrttitam |

"12747. Markandeya said: There was a great rishi Manu, son of Vivasyat, majestic, in lustre equal to Prajapati. In energy, fiery vigour, prosperity, and austere fervour he surpassed both his father and his grandfather. Standing with uplifted arm, on one foot, on the spacious Badari, he practised intense austere fervour. 12750, This direful exercise he performed, with his head downwards, 51 and with unwinking eyes, for 10,000 years. Once, when, clad in dripping rags, with matted hair, he was so engaged, a fish came to him on the banks of the Chīrinī, and spake: 'Lord, I am a small fish; I dread the stronger ones, and from them you must save me. For the stronger fish devour the weaker; this has been immemorially ordained as our means of subsistence. Deliver me from this flood of apprehension in which I am sinking, and I will requite the deed.' 12755. Hearing this, Manu, filled with compassion, took the fish in his hand, and bringing him to the water threw him into a jar bright as a moonbeam. In it the fish, being excellently tended, grew; for Manu treated him like a son. After a long time he became very large, and could not be contained in the jar. Then, seeing Manu, he said again: 'In order that I may thrive, remove me elsewhere.' 12760. Manu then took him out of the jar, brought him to a large pond, and threw him in. There he continued to grow for very many years. Although the pond was two yojanas long, and one yojana broad, the lotus-eyed fish found in it no room to move; and again said to Manu: 'Take me to Ganga, the dear queen of the ocean-monarch; in her I shall dwell; or do as thou thinkest best, (12765) for I must contentedly submit to thy authority, as through thee I have exceedingly increased.' Manu accordingly took the fish and threw him into the river Gangā. he waxed for some time, when he again said to Manu: 'From my great bulk I cannot move in the Gangā; be gracious and remove me quickly to the ocean.' Manu took him out of the Gangā; and cast him into the sea. 12770. Although so huge, the fish was easily borne, and pleasant to touch and smell, as Manu carried him. When he had been thrown into the ocean he said to Manu: 'Great lord, thou hast in every way preserved me: now hear from me what thou must do when the time arrives. Soon shall all these terrestrial objects, both fixed and moving, be dissolved. The time for the purification of the worlds has now arrived. I therefore inform thee what is for thy greatest good. 12775. The period dreadful for the universe, moving and fixed, has come. Make for thyself a strong ship, with a cable attached; embark in it with the seven rishis, and stow in it, carefully preserved and assorted, all the seeds which have been described of old by Brāhmans.52 When embarked in the ship, look out for me: I shall come recognizable by my horn. So shalt thou do; I greet thee and depart. These great waters cannot be crossed over without me. 12780. Distrust not my word.' Manu replied, 'I shall do as thou hast said.' After taking mutual leave they departed each on his own way. Manu then, as enjoined, taking with him the seeds, floated on the billowy ocean in the beautiful ship. He then thought on the fish, which, knowing his desire, arrived with all speed, distinguished by a horn. When Manu saw the horned leviathan, lofty as a mountain, he fastened the ship's cable to the horn. Being thus attached, the fish dragged the ship with great rapidity, transporting it across the briny ocean which seemed to dance with its waves and thunder with its waters. Tossed by the tempests, the ship whirled like a reeling and intoxicated woman. Neither the earth, nor the quarters of the world appeared; (12790) there was nothing but water, air, and sky. In the world thus confounded, the seven rishis, Manu, and the fish were beheld. So, for very many years, the fish, unwearied, drew the ship over the waters; and brought it at length to the highest peak of Himavat. He then, smiling gently, said to the rishis, 'Bind the ship without delay to this peak.' They did so accordingly. 12795. And that highest peak of Himavat is still known by the name of Naubandhana ('the Binding of the Ship'). The friendly fish (or god, animisha) then said to the rishis, 'I am the Prajāpati Brahmā, than whom nothing higher can be reached. In the form of a fish I have delivered you from this great danger. Manu shall create all living beings, gods, asuras, MEN, with all worlds, and all things moving and fixed. By my favour and through severe austere fervour, he shall attain perfect insight into his creative work, and shall not be-

⁵¹ He could not have stood on one foot and with his head downwards (if this means standing on his head) at one and the same time. The text may mean that these attitudes were successively adopted.

⁵² The S'atapatha Brāhmaṇa is silent as to these seeds, as well as to the seven rishis; but it is possible that the reference here made to them may have been borrowed from some other ancient source.

come bewildered.' 12800. Having thus spoken, the fish in an instant disappeared. Manu, desirous to call creatures into existence and bewildered in his work, performed a great act of austere fervour; and then began visibly to create all living beings. This which I have narrated is known as the Mātsyaka Purāṇa (or 'Legend of the Fish').'

It will be observed that towards the close of this narrative it is stated that Manu (not Brahmā himself) was the creator of Men, as well of gods and asuras; and that no reference is made to the formation of separate castes.

The commentators seem disinclined to take this legend in its literal sense. We shall see below what reason the scholiast on the Bhāgavata Purāṇa assigns for this procedure. The following are some of the remarks of the Commentator Nīlakantha on the above passage of the Mahābhārata:

"Manoh" manute ity abhimānātmako 'hankāro Manuh | viseshena vaste āchhādayati chit-prakāśam iti viveka-jnānam tad-vān vivasvān māyāvī īśvaraḥ "māyinam tu maheśvaram" iti śruteḥ | tasya Vaivasvatasya charitam sancharanam | "avidyā-nāśe saty āvidyako hankārah katham sancharati | nahi tantu-dahe paṭas tishṭhati" ity akshepaḥ | atra para-brahmana eva rūpāntaram matsyākhyo jīvah | so 'hankārena Manunā uttarottara-śreshtheshu alinjirādi-rūpeshu sthūla-deheshu tapo-balād nipātyate | sa cha samudrākhye vairāje dehe nipătitas cha kalpānte avidyānāśa-rūpe saty api dādha-(dagdha?) -paṭa-nyāyena anuvarttamānam ahankāram saptarshi-sanjnakaih prānādibhih vīja-sanjnaih prārabdhakarmabhis cha sahitam charama-deha-nāvy ārūdham vāsanā-varatrayā jīvamatsyena pralaya-kāle 'py ūhyamānam meru-śringa same 'chale bhavato (Himavad-?) rūpe sadvāsanayā labdhāspadam vilīnam anulakshya jīvamatsyo'darśanam praptah | ati-viline hy ahankare jivatvam naśyati | sa punar nirasta-jīva-bhāvo 'hankāro brahma-rūpatām āpanno yathā pūrvam vāsanayā jagat srijati | nashte 'py avidyākhye kārane samsārabhāna-lakshanam kāryam chakra-bhramam iva kanchit kālam anuvarttate ity adhyāya-tātparyam | aksharārthas tv ityādi |

"'Manu,' that which imagines, denotes the consciousness of self (ahankāra), consisting in the idea that objects refer to one's self (abhināna). Vivasvat' is he who possesses the discriminating knowledge that (such and such a thing) obscures the light of the mind, i.e.

⁵⁸ See Colebrooke's Misc. Essays, vol. i. 212.

he is the Illuder, Iśvara, for the Veda 54 speaks of 'Maheśvara the Illuder.' It is the 'history,' the action, of this son of Vivasvat, that is related. It is objected, 'how can Ahankara, which arises from ignorance, operate when ignorance is destroyed?' for when the threads are burnt the cloth no longer remains' Here the embodied soul, called in this passage a 'Fish,' is only another form of the supreme Brahma. This 'Fish' is thrown by 'Manu,' who is Ahankara, through the power of austere fervour, into gross bodies, here represented by 'a jar,' 'a pond,' etc., which gradually rise in excellence. Being at last cast into the body of Virāj, called 'the ocean,' although 'the close of the Kalpa' means the destruction of ignorance, still the embodied soul denoted by the 'Fish,' contemplating Ahankāra still remaining like the ashes of burnt cloth, then entering, along with the breath and other vital airs named 'the seven rishis,' and the works of a former birth designated as 'seeds,' into the ship which signifies its last body, and then borne along even in the period of dissolution by the embodied soul itself symbolized as a 'Fish,' by means of the 'rope' of the remaining consciousness of past perceptions (vāsanā), obtaining at length through a consciousness of former perceptions, which were pure (sadvāsanā), a resting-place on a mountain like the peak of Meru, represented by the Himavat (?), and finally dissolved;—the embodied soul under the figure of a 'Fish' having contemplated all this, -vanishes. For when Ahankara has become entirely dissolved, the state of the embodied soul ceases. Then Ahankāra, after the state of the embodied soul has been dispelled, obtains the condition of Brahma; but by its consciousness of past perceptions creates the world as before. Even when the cause called ignorance has been destroyed, the effect in the shape of the semblance of the world continues for some time, like the revolution of a wheel. Such is signification of the section."

According to this allegorial interpretation "Vivasvat," father of Manu, represents Īśvara, the Illuder. "Manu" is Ahankāra, or self-consciousness. The "Fish" is the embodied soul, which fancies itself to be, but is not, distinct from the Supreme spirit. Ahankāra, denoted by 'Manu,' places the embodied soul, symbolized by the "Fish," in a variety of bodies gradually increasing in excellence, which are signified by the "jar," "pond," "Gangā," and "ocean." Although the end of the Kalpa means the removal of ignorance, still Ahankāra continues for a time; and along with the "seven rishis," who stand for the vital airs, and the "seeds," which are former works, embarks on the "ship," which is its last body, and is drawn over the ocean by the embodied soul by means of a "rope," which signifies the consciousness of former perceptions. Ahankāra at length finds a resting-place, denoted by Mount Himavat; and when it has been destroyed, the embodied soul vanishes. Ahankāra, however, passes into the form of Brahma, and, through the operation of the cause explained by the Commentator, creates the world anew.

⁵⁴ The words are taken from one of the Upanishads, to which, at the time of correcting this sheet, I am unable to give the necessary reference.

It is scarcely necessary to remark that the narrator of the legend himself appears to have had no idea of making it the vehicle of any Vedantic allegory such as is here propounded.

The following is another version of the same legend from the Matsya Purāna:

i. 12.55 Purā rājā Manur nāma chīrnavān vipulam tapah | putre rājyam samāropya kshamāvān Ravi-nandanah | 13. Malayasyaika-deśe tu sarvātmāguna-samyutah | sama-duhkha-sukho vīrah prāptavān yogam uttamam | 14. Vachanam 56 varadas chāsya varshāyuta-sate gate | "varam vrinīshva" provācha prītātmā Kamalāsanah | 15. Evam ukto bravīd rājā pranamya sa Pitāmaham | "ekam evāham ichhāmi tvatto varam anuttamam | 16. Bhūta-grāmasya sarvasya sthāvarasya charasya cha | bhaveyam rakshanāyālam pralaye samupasthite" | 17. "Evam astv" iti viśvātmā tatraivāntaradhīyata | pushpa-vrishţiś cha mahatī khāt papāta surārpitā | 18. Kadāchid āśrame tasya kurvatah pitri-tarpanam | papāta pānyor upari śapharī jala-samyutā | 19. Drishtvā tach-chhapharīrūpam̃ sa dayālur mahīpatih | rakshanāyākarod yatnam̃ sa tasmin ka_ rakodare | 20. Ahorātrena chaikena shodasāngula-vistritah | so 'bhavad matsya-rūpena "pāhi pāhīti" chābravīt | 21. Sa tam ādāya manike prākshipaj jala-charinam | tatrāpi chaikarātrena hasta-trayam avarddhata | 22. Punah prāhārttanādena Sahasrakiranātmajam | sa matsyah "pāhi pāhīti" "tvām aham saranam gatah" | 23. Tatah sa kūpe tam matsyam prāhinod Ravi-nandanah | yadā na māti tatrapi kūpe matsyah

⁵⁵ This passage is extracted in Professor Aufrecht's Catalogue of the Bodleian Sanskrit MSS. p. 347.

⁵⁶ The Taylor MS. reads babhuva, instead of vachanam.

sarovare | 24. Kshiptah sa prithutām āgāt punar yojana-sammitām | tatrāpy āha punar dīnah "pāhi pāhi nripottama" | 25. Tatah sa Manunā kshipto Gangāyām apy avarddhata | yadā tadā samudre tam prākshipad medinīpatih | 26. Yadā samudram akhilam vyāpyāsau samavasthitah | tudā prāha Manur bhītah "ko pi tvam asuretarah | 27. Athavā Vāsudevas tvam anya īdrik katham bhavet | yojanāyutavimsatyā kasya tulyam bhaved vapuh | 28. Inātas tvam matsya-rūpena mām khedayasi Keśava | Hrishīkeśa jagannātha jagad-dhāma namo 'stu te" | 29. Evam uktah sa bhagavān matsya-rūpī Janārdanah | "sādhu sādhv" iti chovācha "samyag jnātam tvayā 'nagha | 30. Achirenaiva kālena medinī medinīpate | bhavishyati jale magnā sā-śaila-vanakānanā | 31. Naur iyam sarva-devānām nikāyena vinirmitā | mahā-jīvanikāyasya rakshanārtham mahīpate | 32. Svedāndajodbhijā jīvā ye cha jīvā jarāyujāh | asyam nidhāya sarvāms tān anarthāt 57 pāhi suvrata | 33. Yugānta-vātābhihatā yadā chalati naur nripa | śringe 'smin mama rājendra tademām samyamishyasi | 34. Tato layānte sarvasya sthāvarasya charasya cha | prajapatis tvam bhavita jagatah prithivi-pate | 35. Evam krite mahārāja 58 sarvajno dhritimān rishih | manvantarādhipaś chāpi deva-pūjyo bhavishyasi | 36. Adhyāya ii. Sūta uvācha | 1. Evam ukto Manus tena paprachhāsura-sūdanam | varshair kiyadbhir bhagavan bhavishyaty antara-kshayah | 2. Sattvāni cha katham nātha rakshishye Madhusūdana | tvayā saha punar yogah katham vā bhavitā mama | 3. Srī-matsya uvācha | adya-prabhrity anāvrishtir bhavishyati mahītale | yāvad varshaśatam sagram durbhiksham narakavaham | 4. Tato 'lpa-sattva-kshayada raśmayah sapta dārunāh | sapta-sapter bhavishyanti prataptāngāra-varshinah | 5. Aurvānalo 'pi vikritim gamishyati yuga-kshaye | vishāgniś chāpi pātālāt sankarshana-mukha-chyutah | 6. Bhavasyāpi lalātotthas tritīya-nayanānalaḥ | jagad dagdham tathā kshobham gamishyati mahāmate | 7. Evañ dagdhā mahī sarvā yadā syād bhasma-sannibhā 50 | ākāśam ushmanā taptam bhavishyati parantapa | 8. Tatah sa-deva-nakshatram jagad yāsyati sankshayam | samvartto bhīmanādas cha dronas chando to balāhakah | 9. Vidyutpatākah śonāmbuh saptaite laya-vāridāh | agni-prasveda-sambhūtāh plāvayishyanti medinīm | 10. Samudrāh kshobham āgatya

⁵⁷ Instead of anarthat the Taylor MS. reads anathan.

⁵⁸ The Taylor MS. reads here evam kṛita-yugasyādau.

⁵⁹ Kūrma-sannibhā | Taylor MS.

⁶⁰ The Taylor and Gaikowar MSS. have chandro.

chaikatvena vyavasthitäh | etad ekarnavam sarvam karishyanti jagat-trayam | 11. Divyām nāvam61 imām grihya sarva-vijāni sarvaśah | āronya rajivā yogena mat-prayuktena suvrata | 12. Samyamya nāvam machchhringe mat-prabhāvābhirakshitah | ekah sthāsyasi deveshu dagdheshv api parantapa | 13. Soma-sūryūv aham Brahmā chatur-loka-samanvitah | Narmadā cha nadī punyā Mārkandeyo mahān rishih | 14. Bhavo vedāh purānam cha vidyābhih sarvato vritam | tvoyā sārddham idam sarvam sthāsyaty antara-sankshaye | 15. Evam ekārnave jāte Chākshushāntarasankshaye | vedān pravarttayishyāmi tvat-sargādau mahīpate | 16. Sūta uvācha | Evam uktvā sa bhagavāms tatraivāntaradhīyata | Manur apy āsthito yogam Vāsudeva-prasādajam | 17. Athābhūch cha tathā-bhūtah samplavah pūrva-sūchitah | kāle yathokte sanjāte Vāsudeva-mukhodyate | 18. Sringī prādurbabhūvātha matsya-rūpī Janārdanah | Ananto rajjurūpeņa Manoh pārśvam upāgamat | 19. Bhūta-sangān samākrishya yogenāropya dharmavit | bhujanga-rajjvā matsyasya śringe nāvam ayojayat | 20. Uparyy upasthitas tasyāh pranipatya Janārdanam | ābhūta-samplave tasminn atīte yoga-śāyinā ; 21. Prishţena Manunā proktam purānam matsyarūpinā | tad idānīm pravakshyāmi śrinudhvam rishi-sattamāh |

"12. Formerly a heroic king called Manu, the patient son of the Sun, endowed with all good qualities, indifferent to pain and pleasure, after investing his son with the royal authority, practised intense austere fervour, (13) in a certain region of Malaya (Malabar), and attained to transcendent union with the Deity (yoga). 14. When a million years had elapsed, Brahmā became pleased and disposed to bestow a boon, which he desired Manu to choose. 15. Bowing before the father of the world the monarch said, 'I desire of thee this one incomparable boon, that when the dissolution of the universe arrives I may have power to preserve all existing things, whether moving or stationary.' 17. 'So be it,' said the Soul of all things, and vanished on the spot; when a great shower of flowers, thrown down by the gods, fell from the sky. 18. Once as, in his hermitage, Manu offered the oblation to the Manes, there fell, upon his hands, along with some water, a Sapharī fish (a carp), (19) which the kind-hearted king perceiving, strove to preserve in his water-jar. 20. In one day and night the fish grew to the size of sixteen fingers, and cried, 'preserve me, preserve me.' 21. Manu then took and threw him into a large pitcher, where in one night he increased three cubits, (22) and again cried, with the voice of one distressed, to the son of Vivasvat, 'preserve me, preserve me, I have sought refuge with thee.' 23. Manu next put him into a well, and when he could not be contained even in that, (24) he was thrown into a lake, where he attained to the size of a yojana; but still cried in humble tones, 'preserve me, preserve me.' 25. When, after being flung into the Ganga he increased there also, the king threw him into the ocean. 26. When he filled the entire ocean, Manu said, in terror, 'Thou art some god, (27) or thou art Vāsudeva; how can any one else be like this? Whose body could equal 200,000 yojanas? 28. Thou art recognised under this form of a fish, and thou tormentest me, Keśava; reverence be to thee, Hrishīkeśa, lord of the world, abode of the universe!' 29. Thus addressed, the divine Janardana, in the form of a fish, replied: 'Thou hast well spoken, and hast rightly known me. 30. In a short time the earth with its mountains, groves, and forests, shall be submerged in the waters. 31. This ship has been constructed by the company of all the gods 62 for the preservation of the vast host of living creatures. 32. Embarking in it all living creatures, both those engendered from moisture and from eggs, as well as the viviparous, and plants, preserve them from calamity. 33. When driven by the blasts at the end of the yuga, the ship is swept along, thou shalt bind it to this horn of mine. 34. Then at the close of the dissolution thou shalt be the Prajapati (lord of creatures) of this world, fixed and moving. 35. When this shall have been done, 63 thou, the omniscient, patient rishi, and lord of the Manvantara, shalt be an object of worship to the gods." 2nd Adhyāya: "1. Sūta said: Being thus addressed, Manu asked the slayer of the Asura, 'In how many years shall the (existing) Manyantara come to an end? 2. And how shall I preserve the living creatures? or how shall I meet again with thee?' The fish answered: 'From this day forward a drought shall visit the earth for a hundred years and more, with a tormenting famine. 4. Then the seven direful rays of the son, of little power, destructive, shall rain burning charcoal. 5. At the close of the yuga the submarine fire shall burst forth, while the poisonous flame issuing from the mouth of Sankarshana (shall blaze) from Pātāla, and the fire from Mahādeva's third eye shall issue from his forehead. Thus kindled the world shall become confounded. 7. When, consumed in this manner, the earth shall become like ashes, the æther too shall be scorched with heat. 8. Then the world, together with the gods and planets, shall be destroyed. The seven clouds of the period of dissolution, called Samvartta, Bhīmanāda, Drona, Chanda, Balāhaka, (9) Vidyutpatāka, and Sonāmbu, produced from the steam of the fire, shall inundate the earth. 10. The seas agitated, and joined together, shall reduce these entire three worlds to one ocean. 11. Taking this celestial ship, embarking on it all the seeds, and through contemplation fixed on me fastening it by a rope (12) to my horn, thou alone shalt remain, protected by my power, when even the gods are burnt up. 13. The sun and moon, I Brahmā with the four worlds, the holy river Narmadā,64 the great rishi Mārkandeya, (14) Mahādeva, the Vedas, the Purana with the sciences,—these shall remain with thee at the close of the Manvantara. 15. The world having thus become one ocean at the end of the Chākshusha manvantara, I shall give currency to the Vedas at the commencement of thy creation.' 16. Sūta continued: Having thus spoken, the divine Being vanished on the spot; while Manu fell into a state of contemplation (yoga) induced by the favour of Vasudeva. 17. When the time announced by Vasudeva had arrived, the predicted deluge took place in that very manner. Then Janardana appeared in the form of a horned fish; (the serpent) Ananta came to Manu in the shape of a rope. 19. Then he who was skilled in duty (i.e. Manu) drew towards himself all creatures by contemplation (yoga) and stowed them in the ship, which he then attached to the fish's horn by the serpent-rope, (20) as he stood upon the ship, and after he had made obeisance to Janardana. 21. I shall now declare the Purana which, in answer to an enquiry from Manu, was uttered by the deity in the form of the fish, as he lay in a sleep of contemplation till the end of the universal inundation: Listen." The Matsya Purana gives us no further information here about the progress and results of the deluge; and this narrative does not appear to be ever afterwards resumed.

⁶¹ The Taylor MS. reads veda-navam, "the ship of the Vedas."

⁶² The reading of the Taylor MS. here is partially erased; but it may have been $sarva-ved\bar{u}n\bar{u}m$, "of all the Vedas." Compare the various reading in verse 11 of the next $adhy\bar{u}ya$.

⁶³ According to the reading of the Taylor MS. we should have to substitute the words, "Thus at the beginning of the Krita age, thou" etc.

⁶⁴ In the opinion of this writer, therefore, the Narmadā (Nerbudda) must have been a holier stream than the Gangā: otherwise we should have expected him to select the latter as the river to be preserved at the dissolution.

The Bhāgavata P. viii. 24, 7, gives the same story with variations as follows:

Āsīd atīta-kalpānte brāhmo naimittiko layah | samudropaplutās tatra lokā bhūr-ādayo nripa | 8. Kālenāgata-nidrasya Dhātuḥ śiśayishor balī | mukhato nissritān vedān Hayagrīvo 'ntike 'harat | 9. Inātvā tad dānavendrasya Hayagrīvasya cheshṭitam | dadhāra śapharī-rūpam bhagavān Harir īśvaraḥ | 10. Tatra rāja-rishiḥ kaśchid nāmnā Satyavrato mahān | Nārāyana-paro 'tapyat tapah sa salilāśanah | 11. Yo 'sāv asmin mahākalpe tanayah sa Vivasvatah | Srāddhadeva iti khyāto manutve Harinā rpitah | 12. Ekadhā Kṛitamālāyām kurvato jala-tarpaṇam | tasyānjalyudake kāchich chhaphary ekā 'bhyapadyata | 13. Satyavrato 'njali-gatām saha toyena Bhārata | utsasarja nadī-toye śapharīm Dravideśvarah | tam āha sātikarunam mahākārunikam nripam | yādobhyo jnāti-ghātibhyo dīnām mām dīnavatsala \ katham visrijase rājan bhītām asmin sarij-jale | 32. Saptame 'dyatanād ūrddhvam ahany etad arindama | nimankshyaty apyayāmbhodhau trailokyam bhūr-bhuvādikam | 33. Trilokyām līyamānāyām samvarttāmbhasi vai tadā | upasthāsyati nauh kāchid viśālā tvām mayeritā | 34. Tvam tāvad oshadhīh sarvā vījāny uchchāvachāni cha | saptarshibhih parivritah sarva-sattvopavrimhitah | 45. Āruhya vrihatīm nāvam vicharishyasy aviklavah | ekārnave nirāloke rishīnām eva varchasā | 36. Dodhūyamānām tām nāvam samīrena balīyasā | upasthitasya me śringe nibadhnīhi mahāhinā | 37. Aham tvām rishibhih sākam sahanāvam udanvati | vikarshan vicharishyāmi yāvad Brāhmī niśā prabho | 41. Tatah samudrah udvelah sarvatah plāvayan mahīm | vardhamāno mahāmeghair varshadbhih samadriśyata | 42. Dhyayan bhagavad-adeśam dadriśe navam agatam i tam aruroha viprendrair ādāyaushadhi-vīrudhah | 43. Tam ūchur munayah prītā rājan dhyāyasva Keśavam | sa vai naḥ sankaṭād asmād avitā śam vidhāsyati | 44. So'nudhyātas tato rājnā prādurāsīd mahārnave | eka-śringa-.dharo matsyo haimo niyuta-yojanah | 45. Nibadhya nāvam tach-chhringe yathokto Harinā purā | varatrenāhinā tushţas tushţāva Madhusūdanam | 54. Ity uktavantam nripatim bhagavan Ādipūrushah | matsyarūpī mahāmbhodhau viharams tattvam abravīt | 55. Purāna-samhitām divyām Sānkhya-Yoga-kriyāvatīm | Satyavratasya rājarsher ātma-auhyam aseshataḥ | 56. Asraushīd rishibhih sākam ātma-tattvam asamśayam | nāvy ūsīno bhagavatā proktam brahma sanātanam | 57. Atītapralayāpāye utthitāya sa Vedhase | hatvāśuram Hayagrīvam vedān pratyāharad Hariḥ | 58. Sa tu Satyavrato rājā jnāna-vijnāna-samyutaḥ | Vishnoh prasādāt kalpe 'smin āsīd Vaivasvato Manuh |

"7. At the close of the past Kalpa there occurred an occasional 65 dissolution of the universe arising from Brahmā's nocturnal repose; in which the Bhūrloka and other worlds were submerged in the ocean. 8. When the creator, desirous of rest, had under the influence of time been overcome by sleep, the strong Hayagrīva coming near, carried off the Vedas which had issued from his mouth. 9. Discovering this deed of the prince of the Danavas, the divine Hari, the Lord, took the form of a Sapharī fish. 10. At that time a certain great royal rishi, called Satyavrata, who was devoted to Nārāyana, practised austere fervour. subsisting on water. 11. He was the same who in the present great Kalpa is the son of Visvasvat, called Sraddhadeva,66 and was appointed by Hari to the office of Manu. 12. Once, as in the river Kritamālā he was offering the oblation of water to the Pitris, a Sapharī fish came into the water in the hollow of his hands. 13. The lord of Dravida, Satyavrata, cast the fish in his hands with the water into the river. 14. The fish very piteously cried to the merciful king, 'Why dost thou abandon me poor and terrified to the monsters who destroy their kindred in this river?" Satyavrata then took the fish from the river, placed it in his waterpot, and as it grew larger and larger, threw it successively into a larger vessel, a pond, various lakes, and at length into the sea. The fish objects to be left there on the plea that it would be devoured; but Manu replies that it can be no real fish, but Vishnu himself; and with various expressions of devotion enquires why he had assumed this disguise, verses 15-31.] The god replies: 32. "On the seventh day after this the three worlds Bhūrloka, etc., shall sink beneath the ocean of the dissolution. 33. When the universe is dissolved in that ocean, a large ship, sent by me, shall come to thee. 34. Taking with thee the plants and various seeds, surrounded by the seven rishis, and attended by all existences, (35) thou shalt embark on the great ship, and shalt without alarm move over the one dark ocean, by the sole light of the rishis. When the ship shall be vehemently shaken by the tempestuous wind, fasten it by the great serpent to my horn-for I shall come near. 37. So long as the night of Brahmā lasts, I shall draw thee with the rishis and the ship over the ocean." [The god then disappears after promising that Satvavrata shall practically know his greatness and experience his kindness, and Satvavrata awaits the predicted events, verses 38-40.7 41. "Then the sea, augmenting as the great clouds poured down their waters, was seen overflowing its shores and everywhere inundating the earth. 42. Meditating on the injunctions of the deity. Satvayrata beheld the arrival of the ship, on which he embarked with the Brahmans, taking along with him the various kinds of plants. 43. Delighted, the Munis said to him, 'meditate on Keśava: he will deliver us from this danger, and grant us prosperity.' 44. Accordingly when the king had meditated on him, there appeared on the ocean a golden fish, with one horn, a million vojanas long. 45. Binding the ship to his horn with the serpent for a rope; as he had been before commanded by Hari, Satyavrata lauded Madhusudana." [Verses 46-53 contain the hymn.] 54. When the king had thus spoken, the divine primeval Male, in the form of a fish, moving on the vast ocean declared to him the truth; (55) the celestial collection of Puranas, with the Sankhya, Yoga, the ceremonial, and the mystery of the soul. 56. Seated on the ship with the rishis, Satyavrata heard the true doctrine of the soul, of the eternal Brahma, declared by the god. 57. When Brahmā arose at the end of the past dissolution, Hari restored to him the Vedas, after slaying Hayagrīva. 58. And King Satvavrata, master of all knowledge, sacred and profane, became, by the favour of Vishnu, the son of Vivasvat, the Manu in this Kalpa."

⁵⁵ Naimittika. See above p. 45.

⁶⁶ Manu is called S'rāddhadeva in the Mahābhārata also, S'āntip. 4507. In the Brāhmaṇas, however, he receives the appellation, or epithet, not of S'rāddhādeva, but of Srāddhadeva. See above, p. 188 ff.

Before adducing the remarks of the commentator S'rīdhara Svāmin on the passage last cited from the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, I shall quote one more version of the same legend from the Agni Purāṇa. It is not of any great consequence, as, though more condensed, it coincides in purport with that in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa: which of the two has borrowed from the other, or whether both are derived from a common source, I am unable to say.

⁶⁷ This has been copied by Professor Aufrecht from a MS. of the Agni Purāna, belonging to the Royal Asiatic Society of London. I am informed by Prof. Aufrecht that the East India Office Library has two MSS. of the Vahni Purāna, which (although Vahni is, in later Sanskrit, synonymous with Agni) differ entirely in their contents from the Agni Purāna.

Vasishtha uvācha | 1. Matsyādi-rūpinam Vishnum brūhi sargādi-kāranam | purānam brahma chāgneyam yathā Vishnoh purā śrutam | Agnir uvācha | 2. Matsyāvatāram vakshye 'ham Vasishtha śrinu vai Hareh | avatāra-kriyām dushta-nashtyai sat-pālanāya hi | 3. Āsīd atīta-kalpānte brāhmo naimittiko layah | sanudropaplutās tatra lokā bhūrādikā mune | 4. Manur Vaivasvatas tepe tapo vai bhukti-muktaye | ekadā Kritalmālāvām kurvato jala-tarpanam | 5. Tasyānjaly-udake matsyah svalpa eko 'bhvapadvata | ksheptu-kāmam jale prāha "na mām kshipa narottama | 6. Grahādibhyo bhayam me'tra" tach chhrutvā kalaše 'kshipat | Manum vriddhah punar matsyah prāha tam "dehi me vrihat" | 7. Tasya tad vachanam śrutvā rājā 'tha vandane 'kshipat | tatra vriddho 'bravīd bhūpam "prithu dehi padam mama" | 8. Sarovare punah kshipto vavridhe tat-pramānavān | ūche "dehi vrihat sthānam" prākshipach chāmbudhau tatah | 9. Laksha-yojana-vistīrnah kshana-mātrena so 'bharat | matsyam tam adbhutam drishtvā vismitah prābravīd Manuh | 10. "Ko bhavān nanu vai Vishnur Nārāyana namo'stu te | māyayā mohayasi mām kimartham cha Janārdana" | 11. Manur-ukto 68 'bravīd matsyo Manum vai vālane ratam | avatīrno bhavāyāsya jagato dushta-nashtaye | 12. "Saptame divase tv abdhih plāvayishyati vai jagat | upasthitāyām nāvi tvam vījadīni vidhāya cha | 13. Saptarshibhih parivrito niśām brāhmīm charishyasi | upasthitasya me śringe nibadhnīhi mahāhina" | 14. Ity uktvā 'ntardadhe matsyo Manuh kāla-pratīkshakah | stitah samudra udvele nāvam āruruhe tadā | 15. Eka-śringa-dharo matsyo haimo niyutayojanah | nāvam babandha tach-chhringe matsyākhyam cha purāṇakam | 16. Suśrāva matsyāt pāpa-ghnam sa-śrutam śrutibhih śrutam (?) | brahma-veda-praharttāram Hayagrīvam cha dānavam | 17. Avadhīd vedamantrādyān pālayāmāsa Keśavah

"Vasishtha said: 1. Declare to me Vishnu, the cause of the creation, in the form of a Fish and his other incarnations; and the Puranic revelation of Agni, as it was originally heard from Vishnu. Agni replied: 2. Hear, o Vasishtha, I shall relate to thee the Fish-incarnation of Vishnu, and his acts when so incarnate for the destruction of the wicked, and protection of the good. 3. At the close of the past Kalpa there occurred an occasional dissolution of the universe caused by Brahma's sleep, when the Bhūrloka and other worlds were inundated by the ocean. 4. Manu, the son of Vivasvat, practised austere fervour for the sake of worldly enjoyment as well as final liberation. Once, when he was offering the libation of water to the Pitris in the river Kritamālā, (5) a small fish came into the water in the hollow of his hands, and said to him when he sought to east it into the stream, Do not throw me in, (6) for I am afraid of alligators and other monsters which are here.' On hearing this Manu threw it into a jar. Again, when grown, the Fish said to him, 'Provide me a large place.' 7. Manu then cast it into a larger vessel (?). When it increased there, it said to the king, 'Give me a wide space.' 8. When, after being thrown into a pond, it became as large as its receptacle, and cried out for greater room, he flung it into the sea. 9. In a moment it became a hundred thousand yojanas in bulk. Beholding the wonderful Fish, Manu said in astonishment: (10) 'Who art thou? Art thou Vishnu? Adoration be paid to thee, o Nārāyana. Why, o Janārdana, dost thou bewilder me by thy illusion?' 11. The Fish, which had become incarnate for the welfare of this world and the destruction of the wicked, when so addressed, replied to Manu, who had been intent upon its preservation: (12) 'Seven days after this the ocean shall inundate the world. A ship shall come to thee, in which thou shalt place the seeds, (13) and accompanied by the rishis shalt sail during the night of Brahmā. Bind it with the great serpent to my horn, when I arrive. 14. Having thus spoken the Fish vanished. Manu awaited the promised period, and embarked on the ship when the sea overflowed its shores. 15. (There appeared) a golden Fish, a million yojanas long, with one horn, to which Manu attached the ship, (16) and heard from the Fish the Matsya Purana, which takes away sin, together with the Veda. Keśava then slew the Danava Hayagrīva who had snatched away the Vedas, and preserved its mantras and other portions."

⁸⁸ Professor Aufrecht's transcript has this reading Manur-ukto; which I have retained, although I was not aware that Manus was commonly used for Manu, except in the Vedic period.

The following is S'rīdhara's comment, before referred to, on the legend of the deluge, as told in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa. These remarks have been well translated and explained in the preface to the 3rd volume of his edition of this Purāṇa (pp. xxxviii ff.) by M. Burnouf, whose elaborate discussion of the legend extends from p. xxiii to p. liv.

Atra idam chintyam "kim ayam mahapralayo dainandino va" iti | tatra tāvad "brāhmo layah" (v. 7) iti "yo 'sāv asmin mahā-kalpe" (v. 11) iti cha ukter "mahāpralayah" iti prāptam "na" iti brūmah ! mahāpralaye prithivy-ādīnām avaseshāsambhavād "yāvad brāhmī nisā" (v. 37) ity-ādy-ukti- virodhāch cha | ato "dainandana" iti yuktam | na cha etad api sangachhate | samvarttakair anāvrishty-ādibhir vinā akasmād eva "saptame 'hani trailokyam nimankshyati" (v. 32) iti matsyokter anupapatteh | yathoktam prathama-skandhe "rūpam" (i. 3, 15) ity ādi tad api tadā durghaṭam | na hi pralaya-dvaye 'pi "mahīmayyām nāvy" ārohah sambhavati na cha Chākshusha-manvantare pralayo'sti | tathā cha sati saptamo Manur Vaivasvatah ity api durghatam syāt | "tvam tāvad oshadhīh sarvāh" (viii. 24, 34) ity-ādi-nirdeso 'pi na sangachhate | na hi tadā oshadhy-ādīnām sattvānām cha avašeshah sambhavati | tasmād anyathā varnyate | naivāyam vāstavah ko 'pi pralayah | kintu Satyavratasya inanopadesaya avirbhuto bhaqavan vairaqyartham akasmat pralayam iva darsayāmāsa yathā 'sminn eva Vaivasvata-manvantare Mārkandeyāya darsitavān | tad-apekshayā eva cha "mahā-kalpe 'sminn" iti viśeshanam sangachhate | tathā cha "tatah samudrah udvelah sarvatah samadriśyata" (v. 41) iti tasyaiva yathā darśanam uktam ity eshā dik

"Here we have to consider whether this was a great dissolution of the universe, or one of those which occur at the close of each day of Brahmā. If it be supposed from the expressions 'a dissolution proceeding from Brahmā' (v. 7), and 'he is the same who in this Mahākalpa' (v. 11), that it was a great dissolution, we reply, -no; because in a great dissolution the earth and other worlds cannot possibly remain in existence, and because this would be opposed to the words 'so long as the night of Brahmā lasts' (v. 37). Hence it might appear that it must be one of the dissolutions which occur at the end of a day of Brahmā. But this also is impossible, because it would be at variance with the Fish's words that 'the three worlds should be submerged on the seventh day,' (v. 32) suddenly, without the drought and other calamities which precede a dissolution. What is stated in the first book (iii. 15), 'at the deluge, in the Chākshusha Manvantara, he took the form of a Fish, and preserved Manu Vaivasvata, whom he placed in a ship formed of the earth,' 69 would also in that case be inconceivable: for

⁶⁹ Bhāgavata Purāṇa, i. 3. 15. Rupam sa jagrihe mātsyam Chākshushodadhi-samplave | nāvy āropya mahīmayyām apād Vaivasvatam Manum | On this passage also

(1.) in neither of the two dissolutions could any one be placed 'in a ship in the form of the earth' (as the earth is submerged in the one case and altogether destroyed in the other); (2.) there is no dissolution of the world in the Chakshusha Manvantara; (3.) in the case supposed the existence of a seventh Manu, the son of Vivasvat would be impossible (for the fourteen Manus succeed each other in one Kalpa without the intervention of any dissolution). And in that case, the command to take 'all the plants into the ship' (viii. 24, 34), would be inconceivable, since no plants or other such substances are left at such a period. Such being the fact, the narrative must be otherwise explained. It was in fact no real dissolution which is But the deity, who appeared to teach Satyavrata here related. knowledge, shewed him suddenly the semblance of a dissolution to instil into him dispassion, just as in the Vaivasvata Manvantara he shewed to Markandeva. And if referred to this, the words 'in this Māhakalpa' will be conceivable. And consequently the words 'Then the sea was beheld overflowing its shores on every side' are spoken with reference to what Satyavrata saw (in the vision). Such is an indication of the purport of the Section."

S'rīdhara Svāmin here reasons only upon the data supplied by the particular version of the story which he found before him in the Bhagavata, and does not seem to have extended his researches so far as to ascertain whether the legend might not exhibit some variations as narrated in other Puranas. If he had turned to the Matsya Purana he would have found that one of his objections, viz., that drawn from the absence of any reference to the calamities supposed to precede a dissolution, did not apply to the account there given; since that narrative expressly asserts that these premonitory signs were manifested. Others of his objections apply no doubt to the other narratives as well as to that in the Bhagavata. According to the ordinary Puranic theory (see above, pp. 43 ff.) fourteen Manus exist in each Kalpa, and one succeeds another without the intervention of any pralaya or dissolution. It is obviously inconsistent with this theory to represent such a dissolution S'rīdhara remarks: Yadyapi manvantarāvasāne pralayo nāsti tathāpi kenachit kautukena Satyavratāya māyā pradaršitā | yathā "akānde Mārkandeyāya" iti drashtavyam | "Although there is no dissolution at the end of a Manvantara, yet, through a certain sport an illusion was shown to Satyavrata, as in the other passage where it is said 'Suddenly to Markandeya,' etc."

as taking place either during the life of any of the Manus, or after his disappearance. It is even doubtful, or more than doubtful (Wilson's Vish. P. i. p. 50 f. and p. 44, above) whether one Manu can exist contemporaneously with another, and yet, according to the Matsya and Agni Purānas (see above, pp. 205 ff., 211 f.) Manu Vaivasvata is said to have lived during his predecessor's period, although the Bhagavata avoids this difficulty by making Satyavrata the hero of the story and by representing him as being born again as Manu Vaivasvata at the beginning of the next Manvantara. (M. Burnouf's Preface above referred to may be consulted for further remarks on this subject.) The authors of the Mahābhārata and the Purānas do not, however, appear to have been so sensitively alive to inconsistencies of this description as S'rīdhara. Perhaps the system of Kalpas and Manyantaras may not have been so clearly defined, or so generally current, when the older parts, at least of the Mahābhārata, were composed, as at a later period. And even the Puranic writers may not have cared very much to preserve a strict congruity in all that they wrote. In fact they may have had no great faith in the authority of speculations so arbitrary and artificial as those relating to the great mundane periods to which I refer,—speculations which were derived from no higher source than previous writers of their own class. The case, however, was different with the Commentators, who lived at a later period, and who seem to have regarded the established doctrine regarding Kalpas and Manvantaras as an article of faith.

There is, however, no doubt that, for the reasons above assigned, this legend of a Flood, such as is described in the Mahābhārata and the Purāṇas, does not fit into the system of Kalpas and Manvantaras. But what is the inference which we ought to draw from this circumstance? M. Burnouf believes (1.) that the theory of great mundane periods and periodical dissolutions of the universe was received in India from very early times (Bhāg. P. iii. Pref. p. xliii.) and (2) that it was older than the legend of a deluge, as, although the latter may have been derived from ancient tradition, the style in which it is related in the Mahābhārata and the Purāṇas has nothing of the archaic colouring of the Itihāsas contained in the Brāhmaṇas, and it had not, so far as he knew, been found in any work of the class last named(p. xxvii.), and was not, he anticipated, likely to be discovered there (lii.). The conclusion which he deduces from these premises, and from the absence of any tradition of any great local inundation (pp. xlviii. and li.), is that, although, as related in the Mahābhārata and the Purāṇas, the legend of the deluge has received in some respects an Indian character (xxxi. ff.; xlv. ff.), it is not in its origin Indian, (li.), but was most probably imported into Hindustan from a Semitic source, whether Hebrew or Assyrian (lii.—liv.). The first of M. Burnouf's premises, regarding the great antiquity of the system of Kalpas, Manvantaras, and mundane dissolutions, is not borne out by the Vedic hymns, or anything that has yet been found in the Brāhmaṇas (see above, pp. 45 ff.). And his anticipation that no reference to a deluge would be discovered in any of the older Indian records has proved incorrect, as is shewn by the legend of Manu quoted above (p. 181 ff.) from the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa.

⁷⁰ The Sväyambhuva Manvantara is mentioned in the S'antip. verse 12658, but no details are given (krite yuge mahārāja pura Svāyambhuve 'ntare).

Professor Weber, by whom attention was first drawn (in his Indische Studien, i. 160 ff.) to this passage, shows how materially it interferes with Burnouf's results. If there is no proof of the great antiquity of the cosmical theory which that great scholar supposes to be inconsistent with the early existence in India of any tradition of a deluge, whilst on the other hand there is distinct evidence that that tradition was actually current there at a much earlier period than he imagined, it is clear that his supposition of its having been introduced into that country from an exclusively Semitic source loses much of its probability.

The explanation by which Srīdhara endeavours to maintain the consistency of the Puranic narratives and theories seems to be altogether unfounded. There is no appearance of the authors either of the Bhāgavata, or Matsya, or Agni Purāṇas having intended to represent the deluge as a mere vision. They evidently meant this narrative to be taken literally, just as much as anything else that they describe.

I shall now compare the versions of the legend given in the Mahābhārata and Purāṇas with each other, and with that quoted above from the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa.

- I. The following are the peculiarities of the narrative in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa:
- (1.) It makes no reference to any great mundane periods, such as Kalpas or Manvantaras.

- (2.) It does not speak of a dissolution of the world (pralaya), but of a flood (augha) which swept away all living creatures except Manu.
- (3.) It does not fix the number of days or years after which the flood should come.
- (4.) It speaks of Manu simply, without assigning to him any patronymic, such as Vaivasvata.⁷¹
- (5.) It contains no allusion to the locality in which he was when the fish came to him.
 - (6.) It makes no mention of the fish being thrown into any river.
- (7.) It is silent as to Manu being accompanied by any rishis when he embarked on the ship, and as to his taking any seeds along with him.
- (8.) It speaks of the ship as having rested on the "Northern mountain," and of a place called "Manu's Descent."
- (9.) It does not say anything of any deity being incarnate in the fish.
- (10.) It represents Ida as produced from Manu's oblation, and as the mother of his offspring, begotten apparently in the natural way.

It is manifest from this abstract, when compared with what follows, that the flood described in the Brāhmaṇa is distinguishable in various respects from the dissolution, or pralaya, of the later works.

- II. The legend as told in the Mahābhārata agrees with that of the S. P. Br. in some, and differs from it in other particulars:
 - (1.) It does not specify any Kalpa or Manvantara.
- (2.) It speaks of a dissolution of the universe (pralaya), and of the time of its purification by water (samprakshālana-kālaḥ) having arrived.
- (3.) It makes the fish declare that this event should take place speedily (achirāt), and alludes to no antecedent calamities.
- "Manu Vaivasvata is however mentioned in S. P. Br. xiii. 4, 3, 3. "Manur Vaivasvato rājā" ity āha | tasya manushyā višaḥ | "He says 'Manu Vaivasvata king.' Men are his subjects." Further on, xiii. 4, 3, 6, Yama Vaivasvata is spoken of as King of the Pitris. Compare R.V. x. 14, 1; 17, 1. In the Vālakhilya hymns attached to the R.V. iv. 1, Indra is mentioned as drinking Soma in the house of Manu Vivasvat (not Vaivasvata). In the Atharva-veda, viii. 10, 24, Manu Vaivasvata is spoken of as the calf of the cow Virāj (tasyā Manur Vaivasvato vatsaḥ). Yama is similarly spoken of in the preceding verse. In Vālakhilya, iii. 1, Indra is said to have drunk Soma in Manu Sāmvaraṇi's house. The connection of the words Sāvarṇya and Sāvarṇi with the word manu, "man," in R.V. x. 68, 8f. and 11, no doubt gave rise to the idea of a Manu Sāvarṇi. See Wilson's Vishṇu P. 4to. ed. pp. 266 ff., and Roth's remark in Journal Germ. Or. Soc. vi. 245 f., and R.V. x. 17, 2.

- (4.) It assigns to Manu the patronymic of Vaivasvata, but mentions no other Manu.
- (5.) It represents the fish as coming to him when on the banks of the Chirin river.
- (6.) It describes the fish as thrown into the Ganges before it was taken to the sea.
- (7.) It speaks of Manu as embarking on the ship with the seven rishis, and as taking with him all the seeds described by the Brāhmans.
- (8.) It declares that the ship rested on the highest peak of the Himālaya, which was thence called Naubandhana.
 - (9.) It makes the fish reveal himself as Brahmā Prajāpati.
- (10.) It describes Manu not as begetting offspring but as creating all sorts of living beings including MEN.
- III. The Matsya Purāna agrees in some points, and differs in others from the above details.
- (1.) It states that Manu, whom it styles the son of the Sun (Sahasrakiranātmaja, and Ravi-nandana), i.e. Manu Vaivasvata, practised austerity after making over his kingdom to his son (v. 12). One might have supposed that he could only have done this in his own Manvantara; but it is said further on (v. 34 f.) that he was informed by the fish that when the dissolution should come to an end, he should become a Prajāpati and lord of the Manvantara; and he receives a promise that he should be preserved during the dissolution (ii. 12), which, as appears from v. 15, was to take place at the end of the Chākshusha Manvantara. After this he was to create the world anew. We must therefore suppose the writer to have regarded Manu Vaivasvata as existing during the period of his predecessor, but as then occupying the inferior position of a king. This difficulty is, as I have already remarked, avoided in the Bhāgavata, which makes King Satyavrata the hero of the story.
- (2.) This Purāna speaks of a dissolution (pralaya) and yet (i. 15 ff.) represents Manu as asking and receiving from Brahmā as a boon that when that dissolution should arrive, he should be the preserver of all things stationary and moving.
- (3.) It states that a hundred years and more would elapse before the dissolution, which was to be preceded by famine and various terrific phenomena.
 - (4.) It represents Manu as the son of the Sun. See under head (1.).

- (5.) It mentions Malaya (Malabar) as the scene of Manu's austerity, and of the apparition of the fish.
- (6.) It agrees with the Mahābhārata in describing the fish as thrown into the Ganges, though at so great a distance from Malabar.
- (7.) It is silent as to the seven rish embarking on the ship, but speaks of Manu taking with him all sorts of creatures (living apparently) as well as seeds (chap. ii. v. 11).
- (8.) It does not bring the narrative to a conclusion (see above, p. 207), and thus has no opportunity of saying anything of the place where the ship rested.
- (9.) It speaks of Janardana (Vishnu) as the god who was manifested in the Fish.
- (10.) It refers to Manu as about to effect a creation (ii. 15), but also as preserving the existing animals and plants (ch. i. 15 ff., 31 f.; ii. 2, 19).
 - IV. According to the Bhagavata Purana:
- (1.) The event described was an "occasional dissolution" (naimittiko layah, see above, p. 45) at the end of a Kalpa (viii. 24, 7); and yet in contradiction with this it had previously been alluded to (i. 3, 15) as occurring at the close of the Chākshusha Manvantara.
 - (2.) See head (1.).
- (3.) The dissolution was to take place after seven days (viii. 24, 32); and no premonitory calamities are referred to.
- (4.) The hero of the story is Satyavrata, king of Dravida, who was born again in the present mahākalpa as the son of Vivasvat (vv. 10, 11, 58).
- (5.) The scene of the incidents, with which the narrative begins, was the river Kritamālā, in the country of Dravida.
- (6.) The fish is not thrown into any river after it had been once taken out of the Kritamālā, and had grown large.
- (7.) Satyavrata is commanded to take with him into the ship the seven rishis, as well as plants, seeds, and all beings (sarva-sattvopa-vrimhitah).
 - (8.) Nothing is said of the place where the ship rested.
- (9.) Vishnu is the deity who took the form of a fish with the view of recovering the Vedas carried away by the Danava Hayagrīva (vv. 9, 57).
- (10.) No mention is made in this chapter of any creation effected by Manu; but in ix. i. an account is given of his descendants.

V. The narrative in the Agni Purāna agrees with that in the Bhāgavata, except in its much greater conciseness, and in making Manu Vaivasyata, and not Satyavrata, the hero of the story.

Sect. IV.—Legendary Accounts of the Origin of Castes among the Descendants of Manu and Atri, according to the Purānas.

We have already seen that it is distinctly affirmed in a passage quoted above (p. 126) from the Ādiparvan of the Mahābhārata, verses 3138 ff., that men of all classes, Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and Sūdras were descended from Manu, a statement which is clearly at variance with the notion of their having been separately created from different members of Brahmā. This tallies with the account of the origin of castes which is found in those parts of the Purāṇas which profess to record the history of the two royal races, the solar and the lunar, which are said to have sprung from Manu Vaivasvata and Atri.

The Vishnu Purāna (which is here written in prose) makes the following statement regarding Manu's descendants:

iv. 1. 4. Sakala-jagatām anādir ādibhūtah rig-yajuh-sāmādimaya-bhagavad-Vishnumayasya Brahmano mürttirüpam Hiranyagarbho brahmändato bhagavan Brahma prag babhuva | Brahmanas cha dakshinangushthajanmā Dakshah prajāpatih | Dakshasyāpy Aditih | Aditer Vivasvān | Vivasvato Manuh | Manor Ikshvāku-Nriga-Dhrishta-S'aryāti-Narishyanta-Prāmśu-Nābhāganedishţa-Kărūsha-Prishadhrākhyāh putrāh babhūvuh | 6. Ishtim cha Mitrā-Varunayor Manuh putra-kāmaś chakāra | 7. Tatrāpahute hotur apachārād Ilā nāma kanyā babhūva | 8. Saiva Mitra-Varuna-prasādāt Sudyumno nāma Manoh putro Maitreyāsīt | punaś cha Īsvara-kopāt strī satī Soma-sūnor Budhasya āśrama-samīpe babhrāma | 9. Sānurāgas cha tasyām Budhaḥ Purūravasam ātmajam utpādayāmāsa | 10. Jāte cha tasminn amita-tejobhih paramarshibhir ishţimayah rinmayo yajurmayah samamayo 'tharvamayah sarvamayo manomayo jnanamayo 'kinchinmayo bhagavan yajna-purusha-svarupī Sudyumnasya pumstvam abhilashadbhir yathavad ishtah | tatprasadad Ila punar api Sudyumno 'bhavat |

"Before the mundane egg existed the divine Brahmā Hiranyagarbha, the eternal originator of all worlds, who was the form and essence of Brahmā, who consists of the divine Vishnu, who again is identical with the Rik, Yajush, Sāman and Atharva-Vedas. From Brahmā's right thumb⁷² was born the Prajāpati Daksha; Daksha had a daughter Aditi; from her was born Vivasvat; and from him sprang Manu. Manu had sons called Ikshvāku, Nriga, Dhrishta, Saryāti, Narishyanta, Prāmśu, Nābhāganedishta, Karūsha, and Prishadhra.73 Desirous of a son, Manu sacrificed to Mitra and Varuna; but in consequence of a wrong invocation through an irregularity of the hotri-priest, a daughter called Ila was born. Then through the favour of Mitra and Varuna she became to Manu a son called Sudyumna. But being again changed into a female through the wrath of Īśvara (Mahādeva) she wandered near the hermitage of Budha the son of Soma (the Moon); who becoming enamoured of her had by her a son called Pururavas. After his birth, the god who is formed of sacrifice, of the Rik, Yajush, Sāman, and Atharva Vedas, of all things, of mind, of nothing,74 he who is in the form of the sacrificial Male, was worshipped by the rishis of infinite splendour who desired that Sudyumna should recover his manhood. Through the favour of this god Ilā became again Sudyumna."

Regarding the different sons of Manu the Purānas supply the following particulars:

(1.) Prishadhra.—The Vishnu Purāna says:

Pṛishadhras tu guru-go-badhāch chhūdratvam āgamat |

"Pṛishadhra became a S'ūdra in consequence of his having killed his religious preceptor's cow."

On the same subject the Harivamsa tells us, verse 659:

Pṛishadhro himsayitvā tu guror gām Janamejaya | śāpāch chhūdratvam āpannah |

"Pṛishadhra having killed his Guru's cow, became a S'ūdra in consequence of his curse."

This story is variously amplified in the Mārkandeya Purāna, section exii., and in the Bhāgavata Purāna ix. 2, 3-14. See Professor Wilson's note, Vishnu Purāna, 4to. edit. p. 351, where the author remarks that 72 See above, p. 72 f.

73 Compare with this the list of Manu's sons given in the passage from the M. Bh. Adip. quoted above, p. 126. Nābhānedishṭa (not Nābhāganedishṭa) is mentioned in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, and Taittirīya Sanhitā (see above, p. 191), and S'aryāta in the S'. P. Br. iv. 1, 5, 1. See Journ. Roy. As. Soc. for 1866, p. 11 ff. The Mārk. P. exi. 3 ff., and the Bhāg. P. ix. 1, 11 ff. treat also of Manu's sons and of the birth of Ilā. See Wilson's Vishṇu P. 4to. ed. pp. 348-58, and Burnouf's Bhāg. P. vol. iii. pref. lxx. ff.

74 Akinchinmayah, "not consisting of anything."

"the obvious purport of this legend, and of some that follow, is to account for the origin of the different castes from one common ancestor."

(2.) Karūsha.—The Vishņu Purāņa says, iv. 1, 13:

Karūshāt Kārūshā mahābalāh Kshattriyā babhūvuh

"From Kărūsha the Kārūshas, Kshattriyas of great power, were descended."

The Bhāgavata Purāna, ix. 2, says:

Karūshād Mānavād āsan Kārūshāḥ Kshattra-jātayaḥ | uttarāpathagoptāro brahmanyā dharma-vatsalāḥ |

"From Karūsha, son of Manu, came the Kārūshas of the Kshattriya caste, protectors of the northern region, devout, and lovers of duty."

(3.) Nābhāga.—The Vishnu Purāna says:

Nābhāgo Nedishṭa-putras tu vaiśyatām agamat |

"Nābhāga, the son of Nedishṭa, became a Vaiśya."

The Markandeya Purana says he was the son of Dishta, and relates how he became a Vaisya, by marrying the daughter of a man of that class (section exiii. and Wilson, p. 352, note). The Bhagavata Purana, ix. 2, 23, says he became a Vaisya in consequence of his works (Nābhāgo Dishta-putro 'nyah karmabhir vaisyatām gatah'). And vet a long list of his descendants is given, and among them occurs Marutta who was a Chakravarttin, or universal monarch (Vishnu P. iv. 1. 15-17; Bhāg. P. ix. 2, 23-28; Mārk. P. cxxviii.-cxxxii.). He had a grandson called Dama, of whom the Markandeya Purana relates that at a Svavamvara he was chosen by the daughter of the King of Daśārna for her husband (exxxiv. 8), and that when the bride had been seized by three of his rejected rivals (verse 16) she was rescued by him after he had slain one of them and vanquished another (verse 53); that subsequently that same vanquished rival in revenge killed Dama's father, who had retired into the wilderness as an ascetic (cxxxv. 18). The Purana in one of its recensions ends with the following curious particulars:

Tataś chakūra tūtasya raktenaivodaka-kriyām | ānrinyam prāpya sa pituh punah prāyūt sva-mandiram | Vapushmataś cha māmsena pindadānam chakūra ha | brāhmanān bhojāyāmāsa rakshah-kula-samudbhavān | evamvidhā hi rājāno babhūvuh sūrya-vamśa-jāh | anye 'pi sudhiyah śūrā yajvānah śūstra-kovidāh | vedāntam pathamānāms tān na sankhyātum ihotsahe |

"Dama then (after tearing out the heart of Vapushmat) performed with blood the rites to the manes of his father; and having thus discharged his debt to his parent, he returned home. With the flesh of Vapushmat he formed the oblation which he offered, and fed the Brāhmans who were of Rākshasa descent. Of such character were the kings of the Solar race. There were also others who were wise, brave, priests, and skilled in the scriptures. I am unable here to enumerate those of them who studied the Vedānta." 75

The Harivam̃śa (section xi. verse 658) tells us that "two sons of Nābhāgārishṭa, who were Vaiśyas, became Brāhmans" (Nābhāgārishṭa-putrau dvau vaiśyau brāhmanatām̃ gatau).

(4.) Dhrishta.—Of him the Vishnu Purāna relates, iv. 2, 2:

Dhrishtasyāpi Dhārshtakam Kshattram samabhavat |

"From Dhrishta sprang the Dhārshtaka Kshattriyas."

The Bhāgavata Purāna says, ix. 2, 17:

Dhrishtad Dharshtam abhut Kshattram brahma-bhuyam gatam kshitau |

- "From Drishta were descended the Dharshta Kshattriyas, who obtained Brahmanhood 6 on earth."
- (5.) The last-named Purāna enumerates in verses 19 ff. of the same section the descendants of Narishyanta, among whom was Agnivesya, verse 21:

Tato 'gniveśyo bhagavān Agnih svayam abhūt sutah | Kānīna iti vikhyāto Jātūkarnyo mahān rishih | tato brahma-kulam jātam Āgnive-syāyanam nripa | Narishyantānvayah proktah |

"From him (Devadatta) sprang a son Agniveśya, who was the lord Agni himself, and who was also called Kānīna and Jātūkarnya the great rishi. From him was descended the Agniveśyāyana race of

75 This quotation, which will be partly found in Prof. Wilson's note 22, p. 353, is taken from the section given separately by Prof. Banerjea at the end of his edition of this Purāṇa from a Maithila MS. which differs from that followed in his text (see his Preface, p. 30). In verses 6 f. of section exxxvi. however, of Prof. Banerjea's text, Dama threatens to do something of the same sort as in the other recension he is described to have actually done: 6. Yad aham tasya raktena dehotthena Vapushmatah as karomi guros triptim tat pravekshye hutās anam | 7. Tachchhonitenodaka-karma tasya tātasya sankhye vinipātitasya | māmsena samyag dvija-bhojanam cha na chet pravekshyāmi hutāsanam tat | "6. If I do not satiate my father with the blood from Vapushmat's body, then I shall enter the fire. 7. If I do not celebrate with his blood the obsequial rites of my father prostrated in the fray, and feed the Brāhmans with (his) flesh, I shall enter the fire."

76 The Commentator explains brahma-bhūyam by brāhmanatvam, "the state of Brāhmans."

Brāhmans. The offspring of Narishyanta has been declared." That of Dishta is next taken up.

Some of the names of Manu's sons are repeated in the subsequent narrative. Thus we find a second Prānśu named among the descendants of Nābhāga (Wilson, 352). And in the Vishnu Purāna, iv. 2, 2, a second Nābhāga is mentioned as follows:

Nābhāgasyātmajo Nābhāgas tasya Ambarīshaḥ | Ambarīshasyāpi Virūpo'bhavat Virūpāt Prishadasvo jajne tatas cha Rathītaraḥ | tatrāyam ślokaḥ | "ete kshattra-prasūtā vai punas chāngirasaḥ smṛitāḥ | Rathītarāṇām pravarāḥ kshattropetā dvijātayaḥ" |

"The son of Năbhāga was Nābhāga; his son was Ambarīsha. From him sprang Virūpa; from him Prishadaśva; and from him Rathītara; regarding whom this verse is current: 'These persons sprung from a Kshattriya, and afterwards called Angirases, were the chief of the Rathītaras, twice-born men (Brāhmans) of Kshattriya race."

The Bhagavata thus explains the circumstance, ix. 6, 2:

Rathītarasyāprajasya bhāryāyām tantave 'rthitaḥ | Angirā janayāmāsa brahmavarchasinaḥ sutān | ete kshetre prasūtā vai punas tv Āngirasāḥ smritāḥ | Rathītarāṇām pravarāḥ kshattropetā dvijātayaḥ |

"Angiras being solicited for progeny, begot sons possessing Brahmanical glory on the wife of Rathītara who was childless. These persons being born of a (Kshattriya's) wife, but afterwards called descendants of Angiras, were the chief of the Rathītaras, twice-born men (Brāhmans) of Kshattriya lineage."

It will be observed that in this last verse the Bhāgavata reads kshettre prasūtāh "born of the wife (of a Kshattriya)," instead of kshattra-prasūtāh, "sprung from a Kshattriya," and thus brings this verse into a closer conformity with the one preceding it. Professor Wilson (p. 359, note) considers that the form given to the legend in the Bhāgavata "is an afterthought, not warranted by the memorial verse cited in our text." It is difficult to determine whether or not this may be the case without knowing which of the two readings in that verse is the original one.

(6.) The Vishnu Purāna next proceeds to enumerate the descendants of Ikshvāku son of Manu. The representative of his line in the twenty-first generation was Harita, of whom it is said, iv. 3, 5:

⁷⁷ See Prof. Wilson's note in p. 359 on this passage.

Ambarīshasya Māndhātus tanayasya Yuvanāśvah putro 'bhūt | tasmād Harito yato 'ngiraso Hāritāh |

"The son of Ambarīsha 78 son of Māndhātri was Yuvanāśva. From him sprang Harita, from whom the Hārita Angirases were descended."

These words are thus paraphrased by the Commentator: "from him sprang the Hārita Angirases, Brāhmans, chief of the family of Harita" (tusmād Hāritā Angiraso dvijāh Harita-gotra-pravarāh).

The Linga Purana, quoted by Prof. Wilson, states the same thing:

Harito Yuvanāśvasya Hāritā yata ātmajāḥ | ete hy Angirasaḥ pakshe kshattropetā dvijātayaḥ |

"The son of Yuvanāśva was Harita, of whom the Hāritas were sons. They were on the side of Angiras, twice-born men (Brāhmans) of Kshattriya lineage."

And the Vayu Purana tells us with some variation:

Harito Yuvanāśvasya Hārītā bhūrayaḥ smṛitāḥ | ete hy Angirasaḥ putrāḥ kshattropetā dvijātayaḥ |

"Harita was the son of Yuvanāśva: (after whom) many persons were called Hārītas. These were the sons of Angiras, twice-born men (Brāhmans) of Kshattriya race."

This may mean that they were begotten by Angiras, as is said by the Bhāgavata (see above) to have been the case with Rathītara's sons. In that case, however, as Nābhāga and Ikshvāku were brothers and Rathītara was only the fifth in descent from Nābhāga, whilst Harita was the twenty-first after Ikshvāku,—Angiras (if we suppose one and the same person be meant in both cases) must have lived for sixteen generations!

Such are the remarkable notices given in the Purānas of the rise of different castes among the descendants of some of the sons of Manu Vaivasvata the legendary head of the solar line of kings. I shall now add some similar particulars connected with the lunar dynasty.

According to the Vishūu Purāṇa (iv. 6, 2 ff.) Atri was the son of Brahmā, and the father of Soma (the moon), whom Brahmā installed as the sovereign of plants, Brāhmans and stars ⁷⁹ (aśeshaushadhi-dvijanakshtrāṇām ādhipatye 'bhyasechayat). After celebrating the rājasūya sacrifice, Soma became intoxicated with pride, and carried off Tārā ⁷⁸ We have already had a person of this name the son of Nābhāga. See above.

⁷⁹ See Journ. Roy. As. Soc. for 1865, p. 135 ff.

(Star), the wife of Brihaspati the preceptor of the gods, whom, although admonished and entreated by Brahmā, the gods, and rishis, he refused Soma's part was taken by Usanas; and Rudra, who had to restore. studied under Angiras, aided Brihaspati (Angirasascha sakāsopalabdhavidyo bhagavān Rudro Brihaspateh sāhāyyam akarot). 80 A fierce conflict ensued between the two sides, supported respectively by the gods and the Daityas, etc. Brahmā interposed, and compelled Soma to restore Tara to her husband. She had, however, in the mean time become pregnant, and bore a son Budha (the planet Mercury), of whom, when strongly urged, she acknowledged Soma to be the father. Purūrayas, as has been already mentioned, was the son of this Budha by Ila, the daughter of Manu. The loves of Pururavas and the Apsaras Urvasī are related in the Satapatha Brāhmana, xi. 5, 1, 1; 81 in the Vishnu Purāna, iv. 6, 19 ff.; in the Bhāgavata Purāna, ix. 14; 82 and in the Harivamsa, section 26. The Mahābhārata, Ādip. sect. 75, alludes to Pururavas as having been engaged in a contest with the Brahmans. This passage will be quoted hereafter. According to the Vishnu Purana, iv. 7, 1, Pururavas had six sons, of whom the eldest was Äyus. Äyus had five sons: Nahusha, Kshattravriddha, Rambha, Raji, and Anenas. The narrative proceeds (iv. 8, 1):

Kshattravriddhūt Sunahotraḥ^{ɛs} putro 'bhavat | Kūśa-Leśa-Gṛitsamadās trayo 'syābhavan | Gṛitsamadasya Saunakaś chāturvarnya-pravartta-yitā.'bhūt | Kūśasya Kūśirūjas tato Dīrghatamāḥ putro 'bhavat | Dhanvantaris Dīrghatamaso 'bhūt |

"Kshattravriddha had a son Sunahotra, who had three sons, Kāśa, Leśa, and Gritsamada. From the last sprang Saunaka, who originated the system of four castes. Kāśa had a son Kāśirāja, of whom again Dīrghatamas was the son, as Dhanvantari was of Dīrghatamas."

80 This is the only mention I have ever happened to encounter of the great Mahadeva having been at school!

s1 This passage is translated by Professor Müller in the Oxford Essays for 1856, pp. 62 f.; and the legend has been formed on the basis of the obscure hymn in the R.V. x. 95, in which the two names of Purūravas and Urvasī occur as those of the interlocutors in a dialogue.

⁸² A short quotation has been already made from this narrative. See above, p. 158.

⁸³ Both my MSS. read Sunahotra. Professor Wilson has Suhotra.

⁸⁴ The Commentator explains the words chāturvarnya-pravarttayitā by saying that the four castes were produced among his descendants (tad-vamse chatvāro varnā abhavan). This explanation agrees with the statement of the Vāyu Purāṇa given in the text.

The Vayu Purana, as quoted by Professor Wilson (V. P. 4to. ed. p. 406), expresses the matter differently, thus:

Putro Gṛitsamadasya cha Sunako yasya Saunakaḥ | brāhmaṇāḥ kshattriyāś chaiva vaiśyāḥ śūdrās tathaiva cha | etasya vam̃śe samudbhūtā vichitraiḥ karmabhir dvijāḥ |

"The son of Gritsamada was Sunaka, from whom sprang Saunaka. In his family were born Brāhmans, Kshaṭtriyas, Vaisyas, and Sūdras, twice-born men with various functions." 85

In like manner the Harivamsa states in section 29, verse 1520:

Putro Gritsamadasyūpi Sunako yasya Saunakūḥ | brāhmanāḥ kshattriyūś chaiva vaiśyāḥ śūdrūs tathaiva cha |

"The son of Gritsamada was Sunaka, from whom sprang the Saunakas, Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaisyas, and Sūdras."

Something similar is said of Gritsamati (who was the son of a Suhotra, although not the grandson of Kshattravriddha) in a following section, the 32nd of the same work, verse 1732:

Sa chāpi Vitathah putrān janayāmāsa pancha vai | Suhotram cha Suhotāram Gayam Gargam tathaiva cha | Kapilam cha mahātmānam Suhotrasya suta-dvayam | Kāśakaś cha mahāsattvas tathā Gritsamatir nripah | tathā Gritsamateh putrā brāhmanāh kshattriyāh viśah |

"Vitatha was the father of five sons, Suhotra, Suhotri, Gaya, Garga, and the great Kapila. Suhotra had two sons, the exalted Kāśaka, and King Gritsamati. The sons of the latter were Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, and Vaiśyas."

The Bhagavata Purana, ix. 17, 2 f., has the following notice of Kshattravriddha's descendants:

Kshattravriddha-sutasyāsan Suhotrasyāmajās trayaḥ | Kūśyaḥ Kuśo Gritsamadaḥ iti Gritsamadād abhūt | S'unako S'aunako yasya bahvrichaḥ pravaro muniḥ |

"Suhotra, son of Kshattravriddha, had three sons, Kāśya, Kuśa, and Gritsamada. From the last sprang Sunaka, and from him Saunaka, the eminent Muni, versed in the Rig-veda."

$5 On this Professor Wilson remarks, note, p. 406: "The existence of but one caste in the age of purity, however incompatible with the legend which ascribes the origin of the four tribes to Brahmā, is everywhere admitted. Their separation is assigned to different individuals, whether accurately to any one may be doubted; but the notion indicates that the distinction was of a social or political character."

It is to be observed that this Gritsamada, who is here described as belonging to the regal lineage of Purūravas, is the reputed rishi of many hymns in the second Mandala of the Rig-veda. Regarding him the Commentator Sāyana has the following remarks in his introduction to that Mandala:

Mandala-drashtū Gritsamadah rishih | sa cha pūrvam Āngirasa-kule Sunahotrasya putrah san yajna-kūle surair grihītah Indrena mochitah | paśchāt tad-vachanenaiva Bhrigu-kule Sunaka-putro Gritsamada-nāmā 'bhūt | tathā chānukramanikā "Yah Āngirasah Saunahotro bhūtvā Bhārgavah Saunako 'bhavat sa Gritsamado dvitīyam mandalam apaśyad" iti | tathā tasyaiva Saunakasya vachanam rishy-anukramane "tvam Agne" iti | "Gritsamadah Saunako Bhrigutām gatah | Saunohotro prakrityā tu yah Āngirasa uchyate" iti | tasmād mandala-drashtā Saunako Gritsamadah rishih |

"The seer (i.e. he who received the revelation) of this Mandala was the rishi Gritsamada. He, being formerly the son of Sunahotra in the family of the Angirasas, was seized by the Asuras at the time of sacrifice and rescued by Indra. Afterwards, by the command of that god, he became the person named Gritsamada, son of Sunaka, in the family of Bhrigu. Thus the Anukramanika (Index to the Rig-veda) says of him: 'That Gritsamada, who, having been an Angirasa, and son of Sunahotra, became a Bhargava and son of Sunaka, saw the second Mandala.' So, too, the same Saunaka says in his Rishi-anukramana regarding the Mandala beginning with Thou, o Agni':—'Gritsamada son of Sunaka who is declared to have been naturally an Angirasa, and the son of Sunahotra, became a Bhrigu.' Hence the seer of the Mandala is the rishi Gritsamada son of Sunaka."

It will be noticed that (unless we are to suppose a different Gritsamada to be intended in each case) there is a discrepancy between the Puranas on the one hand, and Sāyana and the Anukramanikā on the other; as the Purānas make Gritsamada the son of Sunahotra or Suhotra, and the father of Sunaka; whilst the Anukramanikā, followed by Sāyana, represents the same personage as having been, indeed, originally the son of Sunahotra of the race of Angiras, but as having afterwards become, by what process does not appear, the son of Sunaka of the race of Bhrigu.

In his translation of the Rig-veda (ii. 207 f.) Professor Wilson refers to a legend about King Vītahavya in the Anuśāsana-parvan of the Mahābhārata (verses 1944-2006) which gives a different account of Gritsamada's parentage. It begins: Srinu rājān yathā rājā Vītahavyo mahāyaśāh | rājarshir durlabham prāpto brāhmanyam loka-satkritam | "Hear, o king, how the renowned Vītahavya, the royal rishi, attained the condition of Brāhmanhood venerated by mankind, and so difficult to be acquired." It happened that Divodasa, King of Kāśī (Benares) was attacked by the sons of Vītahavva, and all his family slain by them in battle. The afflicted monarch thereupon resorted to the sage Bharadvāja, who performed for him a sacrifice in consequence of which a son named Pratardana was born to him. Pratardana, becoming an accomplished warrior, was sent by his father to take vengeance on the Vīta-They rained upon him showers of arrows and other missiles, havvas. "as clouds pour down upon the Himālaya" 86 (abhyavarshanta rājānam himavantam ivāmbudāh); but he destroyed them all, and "they lay with their bodies besmeared with blood, like kinsuka-trees 57 cut down', (apatan rudhirārdrāngā nikrittā iva kimsukāh). Vītahavya himself had now to fly to another sage, Bhrigu, who promised him protection. The avenger Pratardana, however, followed and demanded that the refugee should be delivered up:

Asyedānīm badhād adya bhavishyāmy anrinah pituh | tam uvācha kripāvishto Bhrigur dharma-bhritām varah | "nehāsti kshattriyah kaśchit sarve hīme dvijātayah" | etat tu vachanam śrutvā Bhrigos tathyam Pratardanah | pādāv upaspriśya śanaih prahrishto vākyam abravīt | evam apy asmi bhagavan kritakrityo na samśayah | tyājito hi mayā jātim esha rājā Bhrigūdvaha | tatas tenābhyanujnāto yayau rājā Pratardanah | yathā-gatam mahārāja muktvā visham ivoragah | Bhrigor vachana-mātrena sa cha brahmarshitām gatah | Vītahavyo mahārāja brahmavāditvam eva cha | tasya Gritsamadah putro rūpenendra ivāparah | "Sakras tvam" iti yo daityair nigrihītah kilābhavat | rigvede varttate chāgryā śrutir yasya mahātmanah | yatra Gritsamado "brahman" brāhmanaih sa mahīyate | sa brahmachārī viprarshih śrīmān Gritsamado "bhavat |

[&]quot;Pratardana says: 'By the slaughter of this (Vītahavya) I shall se This simile seems to indicate a familiarity with the manner in which the clouds collect, and discharge their contents on the outer range of the Himālaya.

⁵⁷ The Kinsuka is a tree bearing a red blossom (Butea frondosa).

now, to-day, be acquitted of my debt to my father.' Bhṛigu, the most eminent of religious men, filled with compassion, answered: 'There is no Kshattriya here: all these are Brāhmans.' Hearing this true assertion of Bhṛigu, Pratardana was glad, and gently touching the sage's feet, rejoined: 'Even thus, o glorious saint, I have gained my object . . . for I have compelled this King (i.e. Rājanya) to relinquish his caste.' King Pratardana then, after receiving the sage's salutations, departed, as he came, like a serpent which has discharged its poison: while Vītahavya by the mere word of Bhṛigu became a Brāhman-rishi, and an utterer of the Veda. Gṛitsamada, in form like a second Indra, was his son; he was seized by the Daityas, who said to him, 'Thou art Sakra' (Indra). In the Rig-veda the texts (śruti) of this great rishi stand first. There Gṛitsamada is honoured by the Brāhmans (with the title of) 'Brāhmān.' This illustrious personage was a Brahmachārin, and a Brāhman-rishi."

According to the enumeration of Gritsamada's family, which follows here, Sunaka was his descendant in the twelfth generation, and Saunaka in the thirteenth. The story concludes with these words:

Evam vipratvam agamad Vītahavyo narādhipah | Bhrigoh prasādād rājendra kshattriyah kshattriyarshabha |

"Thus did King Vītahavya, a Kshattriya, enter into the condition of Brāhmanhood by the favour of Bhrigu."

In the next chapter we shall again notice Vītahavya among the Kshattriyas who are declared by tradition to have been the authors of Vedic hymns.

King Divodāsa was the sixth in descent from Kāśa brother of Gritsamada. Of him the Harivamśa states, section 32, verse 789 f.:

Divodāsasya dāyādo brahmarshir Miträyur nripaḥ | Maitrāyanas tataḥ Somo Maitreyās tu tataḥ smritāḥ | ete vai samsritāḥ paksham kshattropetās tu Bhārgavāḥ |

"The son of Divodāsa was the King Mitrăyu a Brāhman-rishi. From him sprang Soma Maitrāyaṇa, from whom the Maitreyas received their name. They, being of Kshattriya lineage, adhered as Bhārgavas to the side (of the latter)."

^{} If I have correctly interpreted this verse, and if by "first" we are to understand first in order, it does not accurately represent the state of the case: as the hymns of Gritsamada only appear in the second Mandala.

The twentieth in descent from the same Kāśa, brother of Gritsamada, was Bhārgabhūmi, of whom the Vishnu Purāna says, iv. 8, 9:

Bhārgasya Bhārgabhūmiḥ | tataś chāturvar \underline{n} ya-prav \underline{n} ittiḥ | ity ete Kāśayo bhūpatayaḥ kathitāḥ |

"The son of Bhārga was Bhārgabhūmi, from whom the four castes originated. Thus have the kings called Kāśis been declared."

In two passages of the Harivamsa, names identical, or nearly so, are found, but with a different progenitor in each case, in reference to which a similar statement is made. The first is in section 29, verse 1596:

Venuhotra-sutaś chāpi Bhargo nāma prajeśvaraḥ | Vatsasya Vatsabhūmis tu Bhrigubhūmis tu Bhārgavāt | ete hy Angirasaḥ putrā jātā vam̃śe 'tha Bhārgave | brāhmanāḥ kshattriyā vaiśyās trayaḥ putrāḥ ⁸⁹ sahasraśaḥ |

"The son of Venuhotra was King Bharga. From Vatsa sprang Vatsabhūmi, and Bhṛigubhūmi from Bhārgava. These descendants of Angiras were then born in the family of Bhṛigu, Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, and Vaiśyas three (classes of) descendants in thousands."

The second passage is in the 32nd section, verse 1752:

Sukumārasya putras tu Satyaketur mahārathah \ suto 'bhavad mahātejā rājā parama-dhārmikah \ Vatsasya Vatsābhūmis tu Bhārgabhūmis tu Bhārgavāt \ ete hy Angirasah putrā jātā vamše 'tha Bhārgave \ brāhmaṇāh kshattriyā vaiśyāh śūdrāś cha Bharatarshabha \

"The warrior Satyaketu was the son of Sukumāra, and a prince of great lustre and virtue. From Vatsa sprang Vatsabhūmi, and Bhārgabhūmi from Bhārgava. These descendants of Angiras were then born in the family of Bhṛigu, Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaisyas and Sūdras."

The parallel passage in the Vāyu Purāna, as quoted by Professor Wilson, p 409, has names which are mostly different:

Venuhotra-sutas chāpi Gārgyo vai nāma visrutah | Gārgyasya Gărgabhūmis tu Vatso Vatsasya dhīmatah | brāhmanāh kshattriyās chaira tayoh putrāh sudhārmikāh |

"The son of Venuhotra was the renowned Gārgya. Gargabhūmi was the son of Gārgya; and Vatsa of the wise Vatsa. Brāhmans and Kshattriyas were the virtuous sons of these two." 90

⁸⁹ Professor Wilson, p. 410, note, gives tejoyuktāh, "glorious," instead of trayah putrāh, as the reading either of the Brāhma Purāna, or of the Harivañs'a, or both.

⁹⁰ In regard to, these passages the reader may consult the remarks of Professor

Another son of Āyus (son of Purūravas) was Rambha, of whom the Bhāgavata Purāṇa says, ix. 17, 10:

Rambhasya Rabhasah putro Gabhīras chākriyas tatah | tasya kshettre brahma jajne śrinu vamsam Anenasah |

"The son of Rambha was Rabhasa, from whom sprang Gabhīra and Akriya. From his wife Brāhmans were born: here now the race of Anenas" (another son of Āyus).

Of the same Rambha the Vishnu Purāna says (iv. 9, 8), Rambhas tv anapatyo 'bhavat | "Rambha was childless."

Another son of Āyus, as we have seen, Vishnu Purāna, iv. 8, 1, was Nahusha. He had six sons (V. P. iv. 10, 1), of whom one was Yayāti. The sons of the latter were Yadu, Turvasu, Druhyu, Anu, and Pūru (Ibid. iv. 10, 2). One of these five, Anu, had, as we are told, in the twelfth generation a son called Bali, of whom the Vishnu Purāna, iv. 18, 1, relates:

Hemāt Sutapās tasmād Balir yasya kshettre Dīrghatamasā Anga-Banga-Kalinga-Suhma-Punḍrākhyam Bāleyam kshattram ajanyata |

"From Hema sprang Sutapas; and from him Bali, on whose wife 92 Bāleya Kshattriyas (i.e. Kshattriyas of the race of Bali), called Anga, Banga, Kalinga, Suhma, and Pundra were begotten by Dīrghatamas."

Professor Wilson (p. 445, note 12) quotes from the Vāyu Purāna a statement regarding the same person that he had "sons who founded the four castes" (putrān chāturvarnya-karān); and refers to a passage in the Matsya Purāna, in which Bali is said to have obtained from

Wilson, p. 409, note 16, where a commentator (on the Brāhma Purāṇa, or the Harivañsa) is quoted, who says that in the passage from these works "another son of Vatsa the father of Alarka is specified, viz., Vatsabhūmi; while Bhārgava is the brother of Vatsa; and that (the persons referred to were) Angirases because Gālava belonged to that family, and (were born in the family) of Bhṛigu, because Visvāmitra belonged to it" (Vatsasya Alarka-pituḥ putrāntaram āha "Vatsabhūmir" iti "Bhārgavād" Vatsa-bhrātuḥ "Angiraso" Gālavasya Angirasavāt | "Bhārgave" Višvāmitrasya Bhārgavatvāt). The Vishnu Puraṇa, iv. 8, 6, says that Vatsa was one of the names of Pratardana, son of Divodāsa, a descendant of Kāśa, and a remote ancestor of Bhārgabhūmi. See however Professor Wilson's note 13, p. 408. It is possible that the resemblance of the word Bhārga to Bhārgava may have occasioned the descendants of the former to be connected with the family of Bhṛigu.

91 These five names occur together in the plural in a verse of the Rig-veda, i. 109, quoted above, p. 179.

92 Kshettre bhāryāyām jātatvād Bāleyāh | "They were called descendants of Bali because they were born of his wife."

Brahmā the boon that he should "establish the four fixed castes" (chaturo niyatān varnāms tvam sthānayeti).

The Harivamsa gives the following account of Bali, in the course of which the same thing is stated; section 31, verses 1682 ff.:

Phenāt tu Sutapā jajne sutah Sutapaso Balih | jāto mānusha-yonau tu sa rājā kānchaneshudhiḥ | mahāyogī sa tu Balir babhūva nripatiḥ purā | putrān utpādayāmāsa pancha vam̃sa-karān bhuvi | Angah prathamato jajne Vangaḥ Suhmas tathaiva cha | Pundraḥ Kalingaś cha tathā Bāleyam kshattram uchyate | Bāleyā brāhmanāś chaiva tasya vam̃sakarā bhuvi | Bales tu Brahmanā datto varaḥ prītena Bhārata | mahāyogitvam āyuś cha kalpasya parimānataḥ | sangrāme chāpy ajeyatvam dharme chaiva pradhānatā | trailokya-daršanam chāpi prādhānyam prasave tathā | bale chāpratimatvam vai dharma-tattvārtha-daršanam | chaturo niyatān varnāms tvam cha sthāpayiteti cha | ity ukto vibhunā rājā Baliḥ śāntim parām yayau | tasyaite tanayāḥ sarve kshettrajā muni-pungavāt | sambhūtā Dīrghatapasaḥ Sudeshnāyām mahaujausaḥ |

"From Phena sprang Sutapas; and the son of Sutapas was Bali. He was born of a human mother, this prince with the golden quiver; but King Bali was of old a great yogin. He begot five sons, who were the heads of races upon the earth. Anga was first born, then Vanga, Suhma, Pundra and Kalinga; such are the names of the Kshattriyas descended from Bali (Bāleyāh). There were also Bāleya Brāhmans, founders of his race upon the earth. By Brahmā, who was pleased, the boon was granted to Bali that he should be a great vogin, should live the entire length of a Kalpa, should be invincible in battle, should have pre-eminence in virtue, should have the power of beholding the whole three worlds, should have a superiority in begetting progeny, should be unequalled in strength, and should comprehend the essential principles of duty. And being thus addressed by the Lord in these words, 'Thou shalt establish the four regulated castes,' King Bali attained supreme tranquillity. All these sons, the offspring of his wife, were begotten on Sudeshnā by the glorious muni Dīrghatapas." 93

²⁸ M. Langlois must have found in his MS. a different reading of the last line, as he renders it otherwise. Professor Wilson remarks (V.P. pp. 444, note 12): "The Matsya calls Bali the son of Virochana, and āyu-kalpa-pramānikah, 'existing for a whole Kalpa;' identifying him, therefore, only in a different period and form, with the Bali of the Vāmana Avatāra'' (Dwarf-incarnation). (See Wilson's Vishnu P. p. 265, note, and the Bhāgavata P. ix. sects. 15-23, and other works quoted in the 4th vol. of this work, pp. 116 ff.

Apratiratha is recorded as being a descendant of Pūru (another of Yayāti's sons), in the thirteenth generation (Wilson, p. 448). Of him it is related, Vishnu Purāṇa, iv. 19, 2:

Riteyoh Rantinārah putro 'bhūt | Tamsum Apratiratham Dhruvam cha Rantinārah putrān avāpa | Apratirathāt Kanvah | tasyāpi Medhātithih | yatah Kanvāyanā dvijā babhūbhuh | Tamsor Anilas tato Dushyantādyāś chatvārah putrā babhūvuh | Dushyantāch chakravarttī Bharato 'bhavat |

"Riteyu had a son Rantināra, who had Tansu, Apratiratha and Dhruva for his sons. From Apratiratha sprang Kanva. His son was Medhātithi; from whom the Kānvāyana Brāhmans were descended. From Tansu sprang Anila, who had four sons, Dushyanta, and others. From Dushyanta sprang the emperor Bharata."

With some variations the Bhagavata Purana says, ix. 20, 1:

Pūror vam̃sam pravakshyūmi yatra jūto'si Bhūrata | yatra rājarshayo vam̃syā brahma-vam̃syas cha jajnire | 6. Riteyoh Rantibhūro'bhūt trayas tasyūtmajā nripa | Sumatir Dhruvo'pratirathah Kanvo'pratirathūmajah | tasya Medhūtitithis tasmūt Praskanvūdyā dvijūtayah | putro'bhūt Sumater Raibhyo Dushyantas tat-suto matah |

"I shall declare the race of Pūru from which thou hast sprung, o Bhārata; and in which there have been born royal rishis, and men of Brahmanical family 6. From Riteyu sprang Rantibhāra; who had three sons, Sumati, Dhruva, and Apratiratha. Kaṇva was the son of the last; and the son of Kaṇva was Medhātithi, from whom the Praskaṇvas and other Brāhmans were descended."

A little further on, in the chapter of the Vishnu Purāna just quoted (iv. 19, 10), Kanva and Medhātithi are mentioned as having had a different parentage from that before assigned, viz., as being the son and grandson of Ajamīḍha, who was a descendant in the ninth generation of Tansu, the brother of Apratiratha:

Ajamīdhāt Kanvah | Kanvād Medhātithir yatah Kānvāyanā dvijāh | Ajamīdhasyānyah putro Brihadishuh |

"From Ajamīḍha sprang Kaṇva: from Kaṇva Medhātithi, from whom were descended the Kāṇvayana Brāhmans. Ajamīḍha had another son Bṛihadishu." 44

⁹⁴ On this the Commentator remarks: Ajamīdhasya Kanvādir eko vamso Brihadishv-ādir aparo vamso Nīlādir aparaḥ Rikshādis chāparaḥ ! "Ajamīdha had one set of descendants, consisting of Kanva, etc., a second consisting of Brihadishu, etc.,

On this last passage Professor Wilson observes, p. 452, note: "The copies agree in this reading, yet it can scarcely be correct. Kanva has already been noticed as the son of Apratiratha." But the compiler of the Purāna may here be merely repeating the discordant accounts which he found in the older authorities which he had before him.

Regarding Ajamīdha the Bhāgavata says, ix. 21, 21:

Ajamīḍhasya vam̃śyāḥ syuḥ Priyamedhādayo dvijāḥ | Ajamīḍhād Bṛihadishuḥ |

"Priyamedha and other Brāhmans were descendants of Ajamīḍha. From Ajamīḍha sprang Brihadishu."

The Vishnu Purāna (iv. 19, 16) gives the following account of Mudgala, a descendant of Ajamīḍha in the seventh generation:

Mudgalāch cha Maudgalyāḥ kshattropetā dvijātayo babhūvuḥ | Mudgalād Bahvaśvo Bahvaśvād Divodāso'halyā cha mithunam abhūt | Saradvato'halyāyām Satānando'bhavat |

"From Mudgala were descended the Maudgalya Brāhmans of Kshattriya stock. From Mudgala sprang Bahvaśva; from him again twins, Divodāsa and Ahalyā. Satānanda was born to Saradvat by Ahalyā." Similarly the Bhāgavata Purāṇa says, iv. 21, 33 f.:

Mudgalād brahma nirvrittam gotram Maudgalya-sanjnitam | mithunam Mudgalād Bhārmyād Divodāsaḥ pumān abhūt ¦ Ahalyā kanyakā yasyām S'atānandas tu Gautamāt |

"From Mudgala sprang Brāhmans, the family called Maudgalyas. To the same father, who was son of Bharmyaśva, were born twins, Divodāsa, a male, and Ahalyā, a female child, who bore Satānanda to Gautama."

The words of the Matsya Purāṇa on the same subject, as quoted by Professor Wilson, p. 454, note 50, are:

Mudgalasyāpi Maudgalyāḥ kshattropetā dvijatāyaḥ | ete hy Angirasaḥ pakshe samsthitāḥ Kanva-Mudgalāḥ |

"From Mudgala sprang the Maudgalyas, Brāhmans of Kshattriya stock. These Kanya and Mudgalas stood on the side of Angiras."

a third consisting of Nīla, etc., and a fourth consisting of Riksha, etc." The last two sons of Ajamīdha are mentioned further on, Nīla in v. 15, and Riksha in v. 18, of the same chapter of the V. P.

95 The Commentator says this is a name of Gautama. Regarding Ahalyā and Gautama see the story extracted above, p. 121, from the Rāmāyaṇa.

The Harivamsa, section 32, verse 1781, thus notices the same family:

Mudgalasya tu dāyādo Maudgalyah sumahāyasāh | ete sarve mahātmāno kshattropetā dvijātayah | ete hy Angirasah pakshan samsritāh Kānva-Mudgalāh | Maudgalyasya suto jyeshtho brahmarshih sumahāyasāh |

"The renowned Maudgalya was the son of Mudgala. All these great personages were Brāhmans of Kshattriya descent. These Kāṇvas and Mudgalas adhered to the side of Angiras. Maudgalya's eldest son was a celebrated Brahman-rishi."

Regarding Kshemaka, a future descendant of Ajamīdha in the 31st generation, the Vishņu Purāṇa says, iv. 21, 4:

Tato Niramitras tasmāch cha Kshemakaḥ | tatrāyam̃ slokaḥ | "brahma-kshattrasya yo yonir ⁹⁸ vam̃śo rājarshi-satkritaḥ | Kshemakam prāpya rājānam̃ sa sam̃sthām prāpsyate kalau |

"From him (Khandapāṇi) shall spring Niramitra; and from him Kshemaka; regarding whom this verse (is current): 'The race, consecrated by royal rishis, which gave birth to Brāhmans and Kshattriyas, shall terminate in the Kali age, after reaching King Kshemaka.'"

The corresponding verse quoted by Professor Wilson (p. 462, note 24) from the Matsya and Vāyu Purāṇas substitutes devarshi, "divine rishis," or "gods and rishis," for the rājarshi, "royal rishis," of the Vishṇu Purāṇa. The verse in question is there described as anuvamśa-śloko' yam gīto vipraih purātanaih, "a genealogical verse sung by ancient Brāhmans."

According to the details given from the Purāṇas in this section several persons, Gritsamada, Kaṇva, Medhātithi, and Priyamedha, to whom hymns of the Rig-veda are ascribed by Indian tradition as their rishis, were of Kshattriya descent.

In the line of the same Tansu, brother of Apratiratha, we find in the sixth generation a person named Garga, of whom the Vishnu Purāna relates, iv. 19, 9:

Gargāt S'iniḥ | tato Gārgyāḥ S'ainyāḥ kshattropetā dvijātayo babhūvuḥ | "From Garga sprang S'ini; from them were descended the Gārgyas and Sainyas, Brāhmans of Kshattriya race." ⁹⁷

⁹⁶ On this words the Commentator has this note: Brahmaṇah brāhmaṇasya Kshattrasya kshattriyasya cha yonih kāraṇam pūrvam yathoktatvāt | "'Brahma' and 'Kshattra' stand for Brāhman and Kshattriya. This race is the 'source,' cause (of these), as has been declared above."

97 On this the Commentator only remarks: Tatas tābhyām Gārgyāh Sainyās cha Similarly the Bhagavata Purana, ix. 21, 19, says:

Gargāt S'inis tato Gārgyah kshattrād brahma hy avarttata

"From Garga sprang Sini; from them Gārgya, who from a Kshattriva became a Brāhman." 98

The Vishnu Purāna records a similar circumstance regarding the family of Mahāvīryya, the brother of Garga (iv. 19, 10):

Mahāvīryyād Urukshayo nāma putro'bhūt | tasya Trayyaruṇa-Pushkariṇau Kapiś cha putra-trayam abhūt | tach cha tritayam api paśchād vipratām upajagāma |

"Mahāvīryya had a son named Urukshaya; who again had three sons, Trayyaruṇa, Puskarin, and Kapi; and these three so afterwards entered into the state of Brāhmans (i.e. became such)."

The Bhagavata states, ix. 21, 19 f.:

Duritakshayo Mahāvīryyāt tasya Trayyāruniḥ Kaviḥ | Pushkarārunir ity atra ye brāhmana-gatim gatāḥ |

"From Mahāvīryya sprang Duritakshaya. From him were descended Trayyaruṇi, Kavi, and Puskarāruṇi, who attained to the destination of Brāhmans." 100

According to the Matsya Purāṇa also, as quoted by Professor Wilson (451, note 22), "all these sons of Uruksha (sic) attained the state of Brāhmans" (Urukshataḥ sutā hy ete sarve brāhmaṇatāñ gatāḥ); and in another verse of the same Purāṇa, cited in the same note, it is added: Kāvyānāñ tu varā hy ete trayaḥ proktā maharshayaḥ | Gargāḥ Sankritayaḥ Kāvyā kshattropetā dvijātayaḥ | "These three classes of great rishis, viz. the Gargas, Sankritis, and Kāvyas, Brāhmans of Kshattriya race, are declared to be the most eminent of the Kāvyas, or descendants of Kavi." The original Garga was, as we have seen, the brother of Mahavīryya, the father of Kavi, or Kapi; while, according to the Garga-vamsyatvāt S'ini-vamsyatvāch cha samākhyātaḥ | kshattriyā eva kenachit kāranena brāhmanās cha babhūvuḥ | "They were called Gārgyas and S'ainyas because they were of the race of Gārga and S'ini. Being indeed Kshattriyas they became Brāhmans from some cause or other."

98 The Commentator does not say how this happened.

⁹⁹ Unless Professor Wilson's MSS. had a different reading from mine, it must have been by an oversight that he has translated here, "The last of whom became a Brāhman."

100 On this the Commentator annotates: Ye atra kshattra-vamée brāhmaṇa-gatim brāhmaṇa-rūpatām gatās te | "Who in this Kshattriya race attained the destination of Brāhmans,—the form of Brāhmans."

Vishnu Purāna (iv. 19, 9), and Bhāgavata Purāna (ix. 21, 1), Sankriti was the son of Nara, another brother of Mahavīryya.

The series of passages just quoted is amply sufficient to prove that according to the traditions received by the compilers of the ancient legendary history of India (traditions so general and undisputed as to prevail over even their strong hierarchical prepossessions), Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, and even Vaisyas and Südras, were, at least in many cases, originally descended from one and the same stock. The European critic can have no difficulty in receiving these obscure accounts as true in their literal sense; though the absence of precise historical data may leave him without any other guide than speculation to assist him in determining the process by which a community originally composed for the most part of one uniform element, was broken up into different classes and professions, separated from each other by impassable barriers. On the other hand, the possibility of this common origin of the different castes, though firmly based on tradition, appeared in later times so incredible, or so unpalatable, to some of the compilers of the Puranas, that we find them occasionally attempting to explain away the facts which they record, by statements such as we have encountered in the case of the Kings Rathītara and Bali, that their progeny was begotten upon their wives by the sages Angiras and Dīrghatamas, or Dīrghatapas; or by the introduction of a miraculous element into the story, as we have already seen in one of the legends regarding Gritsamada, and as we shall have occasion to notice in a future chapter in the account of Viśvāmitra.

CHAPTER III.

ON THE MUTUAL RELATIONS OF THE DIFFERENT CLASSES OF INDIAN SOCIETY ACCORDING TO THE HYMNS OF THE RIGAND ATHARVA-VEDAS.

In the last chapter I have attempted to shew that in general the authors of the hymns of the Rig-veda regarded the whole of the Aryan people, embracing not only the priests and chiefs, but the middle classes also of the population, as descended from one common father, or ancestor, whom they designate by the name of Manu. This reference to a common progenitor excludes, of course, the supposition that the writers by whom it is made could have had any belief in the myth which became afterwards current among their countrymen, that their nation consisted of four castes, differing naturally in dignity, and separately created by Brahmā.

In that chapter I proposed to leave for further consideration any specific notices which the Rig-veda might contain regarding the different classes of which the society contemporary with its composition was made up. On this consideration I now enter. As that great collection of hymns embodies numerous references, both to the authors themselves and to the other agents in the celebration of divine worship, it may be expected to supply, incidentally or indirectly, at least, some information respecting the opinion which these ministers of religion entertained of themselves, and of the ecclesiastical and civil relations in which they stood to the other sections of the community. I shall now endeavour to shew how far this expectation is justified by an examination of the Rig-veda.

It will be understood, from what I have already (pp. 7 and 11 ff.) written on the subject of that one hymn of the Rig-veda in which the four castes are distinctly specified, i.e. the Purusha Sūkta, that in the enquiry, which I am now about to undertake, I confine myself in the first instance to those hymns which for any reason (see p. 4, above) appear to be the most ancient, leaving out of account until afterwards, all those compositions which, like the one just mentioned, are presumably of a later age.

It will, I think, be found on investigation that not only the older hymns, but the great bulk of the hymns, supply no distinct evidence of the existence of a well defined and developed caste-system at the time when they were composed.

Sect. I.—On the signification of the words brahman, brahmana, etc., in the Rig-veda.

As the Rig-veda Sanhitā is made up almost entirely of hymns in praise of the gods, it was not to be anticipated that it should furnish any systematic or detailed explanations on the points which form the object of our enquiry. But as was natural in compositions of the early and simple age to which these hymns belong, they do not always confine themselves to matters strictly connected with their principal subject, but indulge in occasional references to the names, families, personal merits, qualifications, relations, circumstances, and fortunes of the poets by whom they were produced, or of their patrons or other contemporaries, or of their predecessors.

I have, in another volume of this work, enquired into the views which the authors of the hymns appear to have held on the subject of their own authorship. The conclusion at which I arrived was, that they did not in general look upon their compositions as divinely inspired, since they frequently speak of them as the productions of their own minds (vol. iii. pp. 128-140). But although this is most commonly the case (and especially, as we may conjecture, in regard to the older hymns), there is no doubt that they also attached a high value to these productions, which they describe as being acceptable to the gods (R.V. v. 45, 4; v. 85, 1; vii. 26, 1, 2; x. 23, 6; x. 54, 6; x. 105,

¹ Original Sanskrit Texts, vol. iii. pp. 116-16 f.

8), whose activity they stimulated (iii. 34, 1; vii. 19, 11), and whose blessing they drew down. In some of the hymns a supernatural character or insight is claimed for the rishis (i. 179, 2; vii. 76, 4; iii. 53. 9; vii. 33, 11 ff.; vii. 87, 4; vii. 88, 3 ff.; x. 14, 15; x. 62, 4, 5), and a mysterious efficacy is ascribed to their compositions (vol. iii. pp. 173 f.) The rishis called their hymns by various names, as arka, uktha, rich, gir, dhī, nītha, nivid, mantra, mati, sūkta, stoma, vāch, vachas, etc. etc.; and the also applied to them the appellation of brahma in numerous passages.2 That in the passages in question brahma has generally the sense of hymn or prayer is clear from the context of some of them (as in i. 37, 4; viii. 32, 27, where the word is joined with the verb gāyata, "sing," and in vi. 69, 7, where the gods are supplicated to hear the brahma), as well as from the fact that the poets are said (in i. 62, 13; v. 73, 10; vii. 22, 9; vii. 31, 11; x. 80, 7) to have fashioned or generated the prayer, in the same way as they are said to have fashioned or generated hymns in other texts (as i. 109, 1; v. 2, 11; vii. 15, 4; viii. 77, 4; x. 23, 6; x. 39, 14), where the sense is indisputable; while in other places (iv. 16, 21; v. 29, 15; vi. 17, 13; vi. 50, 6; vii. 61, 6; x. 89, 3) new productions of the poets are spoken of under the appellation of brahma.

That brahma has the sense of hymn or prayer is also shown by the two following passages. In vii. 26, 1, it is said: Na somah Indram asuto mamāda na abrahmāno maghavānam sutāsah | tasmai uktham janaye yaj jujoshad nrivad navīyah śrinavad yathā nah | 2. Ukthe ukthe somah Indram mamāda nīthe nīthe maghavānam sutāsah | yad īm sabādhah pitaram na putrāh samāna-dakshāh avase havante | "Soma unless poured out does not exhilarate Indra; nor do libations without hymns (abrahmānah). I generate for him a hymn (uktha) which he will love, so that like a man he may hear our new (production). 2. At each hymn (uktha) the soma exhilarates Indra, at each psalm (nītha) the libations (exhilarate) Maghavat, when the worshippers united, with one effort, invoke him for help, as sons do a father." 3 Again in x. 105, 8, it is

² For a list of these texts and other details which are here omitted, I refer to my article "On the relations of the priests to the other classes of Indian Society in the Vedic age," in the Journal of the Roy. As. Soc. for 1866 (from which this section is mostly borrowed).

³ It is clear from the context of this passage that abrahmānah means "unattended by hymns," and not "without a priest." After saying that some-libations without said: Ava no vrijinā šišīhi richā vanema anrichah | na abrahmā yajnah ridhag joshati tve | "Drive away our calamities. With a hymn (richā) may we slay the men who are hymnless (anrichah). A sacrifice without prayer (abrahmā) does not please thee well."

I have said that great virtue is occasionally attributed by the poets to their hymns and prayers; and this is true of those sacred texts when called by the name of brahma, as well as when they receive other appellations, such as mantra. Thus it is said, iii. 53, 12, Viśvāmitrasya rakshati brahma idam Bhāratam janam | "This prayer (brahma) of Viśvāmitra protects the tribe of Bharata;" v. 40, 6, Gūlham sūryam tamasā apavratena turiyena brahmanā avindad Atrih | "Atri with the fourth prayer (brahmanā) discovered the sun concealed by unholy darkness;" vi. 75, 19, Brahma varma mama antaram | "Prayer (brahma) is my protecting armour;" vii. 33, 3, Eva id nu kam dāśarājne Sudāsam prāvad Indro brahmanā vo Vasishṭhāḥ | "Indra preserved Sudās in the battle of the ten kings through your prayer, o Vasishthas." In ii. 23, 1, Brahmanaspati is said to be the "great king of prayers" (jyeshtharājam brahmaṇām) (compare vii. 97, 3), and in verse 2, to be the "generator of prayers" (janitā brahmanām); whilst in x. 61, 7, prayer is declared to have been generated by the gods (svādhyo ajanayan brahma devāh). Compare vii. 35, 7.

Brähmän in the masculine is no doubt derived from the same root as brähmän neuter, and though differing from it in accent as well as gender, must be presumed to be closely connected with it in signification, just as the English "prayer" in the sense of a petition would be with "prayer," a petitioner, if the word were used in the latter sense. As, then, brähmän in the neuter means a hymn or prayer, brähmän in the masculine must naturally be taken to denote the person who composes or repeats a hymn or prayer. We do not, however, find that the composers of the hymns are in general designated by the word hymns are unacceptable to Indra, the poet does not add that he is himself a priest, or that he is attended by one, but that he generates a hymn; and the same sense is required by what follows in the second verse. Accordingly we find that Sāyaṇa explains abrahmāṇaḥ by stotra-hīnāḥ, "destitute of hymns." The same sense is equally appropriate in the next passage cited, x. 105, 8. On iv. 16, 9, where abrahmā is an epithet of dasyu, "demon," Sāyaṇa understands it to mean "without a priest," but it may mean equally well or better, "without devotion, or prayer."

4 In brahman neuter the accent is on the first syllable; in brahman masculine on the last.

brahman, the name most commonly applied to them being rishi, though they are also called vipra, vedhas, kavi, etc. (see vol. iii. of this work, pp. 116 ff.). There are, however, a few texts, such as i. 80, 1; i. 164, 35; ii. 12, 6; ii. 39, 1; v. 31, 4; v. 40, 8; ix. 113, 6, etc., in which the brähmän may or must be understood as referred to in the capacity of author of the hymn he utters. So, too, in ii. 20, 4, and vi. 21, 8, a new composer of hymns seems to be spoken of under the appellation of nutānasya brāhmānyatah; and in ii. 19, 8, the Gritsamadas are referred to both as the fabricators of a new hymn (manma navīyah) and as (brāhmanyantah) performing devotion. In three passages, vii. 28, 2; vii. 70, 5, and x. 89, 16, the brahma and brahmani, "prayer" and "prayers," or "hymn" and "hymns," of the rishis are spoken of; and in vii. 22, 9, it is said, "that both the ancient and the recent rishis have generated prayers" (ye cha pūrve rishayo ye cha nūtnāh Indra brahmāni janayanta viprāh). In i. 177, 5, we find brahmāni kāroh, "the prayers of the poet." The fact that in various hymns the authors speak of themselves as having received valuable gifts from the princes their patrons, and that they do not there allude to any class of officiating priests as separate from themselves, would also seem to indicate an identity of the poet and priest at that early period.

The term brahman must therefore, as we may conclude, have been originally applied (1) to the same persons who are spoken of elsewhere in the hymns as rishi, kavi, etc., and have denoted devout worshippers and contemplative sages who composed prayers and hymns which they themselves recited in praise of the gods. Afterwards when the ceremonial gradually became more complicated, and a division of sacred functions took place, the word was more ordinarily employed (2) for a minister of public worship, and at length came to signify (3) one particular kind of priest with special duties. I subjoin a translation of the different passages in which the word occurs in the Rig-veda, and I have attempted to classify them according as it seems to bear, in each case, the first, second, or third of the senses just indicated. This, however, is not always an easy task, as in many of these texts there is nothing to fix the meaning of the term with precision, and one signification easily runs into another, and the same person may be at once the author and the reciter of the hymn.

⁵ In another place (x. 96, 5) Indra is said to have been lauded by former worshippers, pūrvebhir yǎjvǎbhih, a term usually confined (as brāhmān was frequently applied) in after times to the offerers of sacrifice.

I. Passages in which brahman may signify "contemplator, sage, or poet."

(In all these texts I shall leave the word untranslated.)

- i. 80. 1. Ittha hi some id made brahma chakara varddhanam
- "Thus in his exhilaration from soma juice the brahman has made (or uttered) a magnifying (hymn)."
- i. 164, 34. Prichhāmi tvā param antam prithivyāḥ prichhāmi yatra bhuvanasya nābhiḥ | prichhāmi tvā vrishno aśvasya retaḥ prichhāmi vāchaḥ pāramam vyoma | 35. Iyam vediḥ paro antaḥ prithivyāḥ ayam yajno bhuvanasya nābhiḥ ayam somo vrishno aśvasya reto brahmā ayam vāchaḥ paramam vyoma |
- "I ask thee (what is) the remotest end of the earth; I ask where is the central point of the world; I ask thee (what is) the seed of the vigorous horse; I ask (what is) the highest heaven of speech. 35. This altar is the remotest end of the earth; this sacrifice is the central point of the world; this soma is the seed of the vigorous horse; this brāhmān is the highest heaven of speech.
- ii. 12, 6. Yo radhrasya choditā yaḥ kṛiśasya yo brahmaṇo nādhamā-nasya kīreh |
- "He (Indra) who is the quickener of the sluggish, of the emaciated, of the suppliant brāhmān who praises him," etc.
- vi. 45, 7. Brahmāṇam brahma-vāhasam gīrbhiḥ sakhāyam rigmiyam | gām na dohase huve |
- "With hymns I call Indra, the brăhmăn,—the carrier of prayers (brăhmă-vāhasam), the friend who is worthy of praise,—as men do a cow which is to be milked."
- vii. 33, 11. Uta asi Maitrāvaruno Vasishṭha Urvaśyāḥ brahman manaso 'dhi jātaḥ | drapsam̃ skannam brahmanā daivyena viśve devāḥ pushkare tvā 'dadanta |
- "And thou, o Vasishtha, art a son of Mitra and Varuna (or a Maitravaruna-priest), born, o brāhmān, from the soul of Urvasī. All the gods placed in the vessel thee, the drop which had fallen through divine contemplation."

⁶ Varddhanam = vriddhi-karam stotram (Sayana).

⁷ Compare R.V. iii. 32, 10; x. 109, 4, below, and the words, the highest heaven of invention."

⁸ Compare R.V. x. 71 and x. 125.

viii. 16, 7. Indro brahmā Indraḥ rishir Indraḥ puru puruhūtaḥ | mahān mahībhiḥ śachībhiḥ |

"Indra is a brähmän, Indra is a rishi, Indra is much and often invoked, great through his mighty powers."

x. 71, 11. (See the translation of the entire hymn below. The sense of brāhmān in verse 11 will depend on the meaning assigned to jāta-vidyā.)

x. 77, 1. (In this passage, the sense of which is not very clear, the word brāhmān appears to be an epithet of the host of Maruts.)

x. 85, 3. Somam manyate papivān yat sampimshanti oshadhim | somam yam brahmāno vidur na tasya aśnāti kaśchana | 16. Dve te chakre Sūryebrahmāno rituthā viduh | atha ekam chakram yad guhā tad addhātayah id viduh | 34. . . . Sūryām yo brahmā vidyāt sa id vādhūyam arhati |

"A man thinks he has drunk soma when they crush the plant (so called). But no one tastes of that which the brāhmāns know to be soma (the moon). 16. The brāhmāns rightly know, Sūryā, that thou hast two wheels; but it is sages (addhātayaḥ) alone who know the one wheel which is hidden. 34. The brāhmān who knows Sūryā deserves the bride's garment." 10

x. 107, 6. Tam eva rishiñ tam u brahmāṇam āhur yajnanyañ sāma-gām uktha-śāsam | sa śukrasya tanvo veda tisraḥ yaḥ prathamo dakshiṇayā rarādha |

"They call him a rishi, him a brāhmān, reverend, a chanter of Sāma verses (sāma-gām), and reciter of ukthas,—he knows the three forms of the brilliant (Agni)—the man who first worshipped with a largess."

Even in later times a man belonging to the Kshattriya and Vaiśya castes may perform all the Vedic rites. Any such person, therefore, and consequently a person not a Brāhman might, according to this verse, have been called, though, no doubt, figuratively, a priest (brahmā).

10 See Dr. Haug's Ait. Br. vol. i. Introduction, p. 20.

⁹ Different deities are called rishi, kavi, etc., in the following texts: v. 29, 1; vi. 14, 2; viii. 6, 41; ix. 96, 18; ix. 107, 7; x. 27, 22; x. 112, 9.

- x. 117, 7. . . . Vadan brahmā avadato vanīyān pṛinann āpir apṛinantam abhi syāt |
- "A brāhmān 11 who speaks is more acceptable than one who does not speak: a friend who is liberal excels one who is illiberal." 12
- x. 125, 5. Yam kāmaye tam tam ugram krinomi tam brahmānam tam rishim tam sumedhām
- "I (says Vāch) make him whom I love formidable, him a brāhman, him a rishi, him a sage."

This would seem to prove that sometimes, at least, the brāhmān was such not by birth or nature, but by special favour and inspiration of the goddess. In this passage, therefore, the word cannot denote the member of a caste, who would not be dependent on the good will of Vāch for his position.

- II. In the passages which follow the word brahman does not seem to signify so much a "sage or poet," as a "worshipper or priest."
- i. 10, 1. Gāyanti tvā gāyatriņo archanti arkam arkiņaķ | brahmāṇas tvā S'atakrato ud vaṃśam iva yemire |
- "The singers sing thee, the hymners recite a hymn, the brahmans, o Satakratu, have raised thee up like a pole." 18
- i. 33, 9. Amanyamānān abhi manyamānair nir brahmabhir adhamo dasyum Indra |
- "Thou, Indra, with the believers, didst blow against the unbelievers, with the brahmans thou didst blow away the Dasyu." 14
- i. 101, 5. Yo viśvasya jagatah prānatas patir yo brahmane prathamo gāḥ avindat | Indro yo dasyūn adharān avātirat . . .
- "Indra, who is lord of all that moves and breathes, who first found the cows for the brāhmān, who hurled down the Dasyu."
- i. 108, 7. Yad Indrāgnī madathaḥ sve durone yad brahmaṇi rājani vā yajatrā | ataḥ pari vṛishaṇāv ā hi yātam athā somasya pibatam sutasya |
 - "When, o adorable Indra and Agni, ye are exhilarated in your own
- 11 The word here seems clearly to indicate an order or profession, as the silent priest is still a priest.
- 12 See Dr. Haug's remark on this verse, Ait. Br. Introd. p. 20. The contexts of the two last passages are given in my article "Miscellaneous Hymns from the R. and A. Vedas," pp. 32 f.
- 18 Compare i. 5, 8; i. 7, 1; viii. 16, 9. See Dr. Haug's remark on this verse, Ait. Br. Introd. p 20.
 - 14 See on this verse the remarks of M. Bréal, Hercule et Cacus, etc. p. 152.

abode, or with a brāhmān or a rājan, 15 come thence, ye vigorous (deities), and then drink of the poured out soma." 16

i. 158, 6. Dīrghatamāḥ Māmateyo jujurvān daśame yuge | apām artham yatīnām brahmā bhavati sārathiḥ |

"Dīrghatamas, son of Mamatā, being decrepit in his tenth lustre, (though) a brāhmān, becomes the charioteer of (or is borne upon) the waters which are hastening to their goal."

(Professor Aufrecht understands this to mean that Dîrghatamas is verging towards his end, and thinks there is a play on the word "charioteer" as an employment not befitting a priest.)

ii. 39, 1.... Gridhrā iva vriksham nidhimantam acha | brahmānā iva vidathe ukthaśāsā ... |

"Ye (Aśvins) (cry) like two vultures on a tree which contains their nest; like two brahmans singing a hymn at a sacrifice."

iv. 50, 7. Sa id rājā pratijanyāni viśvā sushmena tasihāv abhi vīryena | Brihaspatim yah subhritam bibhartti valgūyati vandate pūrva-bhājam | 8. Sa it ksheti sudhitah okasi sve tasmai ilā pinvate viśvadānīm | tasmai viśah svayam eva namante yasmin brahmā rājani pūrvah eti | 9. Apratīto jayati sam dhanāni pratijanyāni uta yā sajanyā | avasyave yo varivah krinoti brahmane rājā tam avanti devāh |

"That king overcomes all hostile powers in force and valour who maintains Brihaspati in abundance, who praises and magnifies him as (a deity) enjoying the first distinction. 8. He dwells prosperous in his own palace, to him the earth always yields her increase, 17 to him the

15 A distinction of orders or professions appears to be here recognised. But in v. 54,7, a rishi and a rājan are distinguished much in the same way as a brāhmān and rājan are in i. 108, 7: Sa na jīyate Maruto na hanyate na sredhati na vyathate na rishyati | na asya rāyah upa dasyanti na ūtayah rishim vā yam rājānam vā sushūdatha | "That man, whether rishi or prince, whom ye, o Maruts, support, is neither conquered nor killed, he neither decays nor is distressed, nor is injured; his riches do not decline, nor his supports." Compare v. 14, where it is said: Yūgam rayim marutah spārhanīram yūyam rishim avatha sāma-vipram | yūyam arvantam Bharatāya vājām yūyam dhattha rājanam śrushtimantam | "Ye, o Maruts, give riches with desirable men, ye protect a rishi who is skilled in hymns; ye give a horse and food to Bharata, ye make a king prosperous." In iii. 43, 5, reference is found to Visvāmitra, or the author, being made by Indra both a prince and a rishi (kuvid mā gopūm kurase jūnasya kuvid rūjānam maghavann rūjīshin | kuvid mā rishim papivāmsam sutasya).

16 See on this verse Prof. Benfey's note, Orient und Occident, 3, 142.

17 Compare R.V. v. 37, 4f.: Na sa rājā vyathate yasminn Indras tīvram somam pivati go-sakhāyam | "That king suffers no distress in whose house Indra drinks the pungent soma mixed with milk," etc.

people bow down of themselves,—that king in whose house a brāhmān walks first. 18 9. Unrivalled, he conquers the riches both of his enemies and his kinsmen—the gods preserve the king who bestows wealth on the brāhmān who asks his assistance." 19

- iv. 58, 2. Vayam nāma pra bravāma ghritasya asmin yajne dhārayāma namobhih | upa brahmā śrinavat śasyamānam chatuh-śringo avamīd gaurah etat |
- "Let us proclaim the name of butter; let us at this sacrifice hold it (in mind) with prostrations. May the brāhmān (Agni?) hear the praise which is chanted. The four-horned bright-coloured (god) has sent this forth."
- v. 29, 3. Uta brahmāno Maruto me asya Indrah somasya sushutasya peyāḥ |
- "And, ye Maruts, brähmäns, may Indra drink of this my soma which has been poured out," etc.
- v. 31, 4. Anavas te ratham aśvāya takshan Tvashṭā vajram puruhūta dyumantam | brahmānaḥ Indram mahayanto arkair avarddhayann Ahaye hantavai u |
- "The men to have fashioned a car for thy (Indra's) horse, and Tvashtri a gleaming thunderbolt, o god greatly invoked. The brăhmăns, magnifying Indra, have strengthened him for the slaughter of Ahi."
- v. 32, 12. Evā hi tvām rituthā yātayantam maghā viprebhyo dadatam śrinomi | kim te brahmāno grihate sakhāyo ye tvāyāh nidadhuh kāmam Indra |
- "I hear of thee thus rightly prospering, and bestowing wealth on, the sages (riprebhyaḥ). What, o Indra, do the brāhmāns, thy friends, who have reposed their wishes on thee, obtain?"
- v. 40, 8. Grūvno brahmā yuyujānaḥ saparyan kīrinā devān namasā upaśikshan | Atriḥ sūryasya divi chakshur ā adhāt Svarbhānor apa mā-yāḥ aghukshat |
- "Applying the stones (for pressing soma), performing worship, honouring the gods with praise and obeisance, the brahman Atri placed

¹⁸ Compare viii. 69, 4; x. 39, 11; x. 107, 5; and the word purchita, used of a ministering priest as one placed in front. Prof. Aufrecht, however, would translate the last words, "under whose rule the priest receives the first or principal portion."

¹⁹ See on this passage Roth's article, "On Brahma and the Brāhmans," Journ. Germ. Or. Soc. i. 77 ff. See also Aitareya Brāhmana, viii. 26.

²⁰ Are the Ribhus intended?

the eye of the sun in the sky, and swept away the magical arts of Syarbhānu."

vii. 7, 5. Asādi vrito vahnir ājaganvān Agnir brahmā nri-shadane vidharttā |

"The chosen bearer (of oblations), Agni, the brahman, having arrived, has sat down in a mortal's abode, the upholder."

vii. 42, 1. Pra brahmāno Angiraso nakshanta |

"The brahmans, the Angirases, have arrived," etc.

viii. 7, 20. Kva nūnam̃ sudānavo madatha vrikta-barhishaḥ | brahmū ko vaḥ saparyati |

"Where now, bountiful (Maruts), are ye exhilarated, with the sacrificial grass spread beneath you? What brahman is serving you?"

viii. 17, 2. \vec{A} tvā brahma-yujā harī vahatām Indra keśinā | upa brahmāni naḥ śrinu | 3. Brahmānas tvā vayam yujā somapām Indra sominaḥ | sutāvanto havāmahe |

"Thy tawny steeds with flowing manes, yoked by prayer (brahma-yujā), bring thee hither, Indra; listen to our prayers (brāhmāni). 3. We brāhmāns, offerers of soma, bringing oblations, continually invoke the drinker of soma."

viii. 31, 1. Yo yajāti yajāte it sunavach cha pachāti cha | brahmā id Indrasya chākanat |

"That brāhmān is beloved of Indra who worships, sacrifices, pours out libations, and cooks offerings."

viii. 32, 16. Na nūnam brahmaṇām ṛiṇam prāśūnām asti sunvatām | na somo apratā pape |

"There is not now any debt due by the active brāhmāns who pour out libations. Soma has not been drunk without an equivalent."

viii. 33, 19. Adhah paśyasva mā upari santaram pādakau hara | mā te kaśa-plakau driśan strī hi brahmā babhūvitha |

"Look downward, not upward; keep thy feet close together; let them not see those parts which should be covered; thou, a brahman, hast become a woman."

viii. 45, 39. \bar{A} te etā vacho-yujā harī gribh \underline{n} e sumadrathā | yad īm brahmabhyah id dadah |

²¹ Compare viii. 45, 39, below: brahma-yuj occurs also in i. 177, 2; iii. 35, 4; viii. 1, 24; viii. 2, 27.

"I seize these thy tawny steeds, yoked by our hymn (vacho-yujā)²² to a splendid chariot, since thou didst give (wealth) to the brāhmāns.

viii. 53, 7. Kva sya vrishabho yuvā tuvi-grīvo anānataḥ | brahmā kas tam saparyati |

"Where is that vigorous, youthful, large-necked, unconquered (Indra)? What brähmän serves him?

viii. 66, 5. Abhi Gandharvam atrinad abudhneshu rajassu ā | Indro brahmabhyah id vridhe |

"Indra clove the Gandharva in the bottomless mists, for the prosperity of the brahmans."

viii. 81, 30. Mo su brahmā iva tandrayur bhuvo vājānām pate | matsva sutasya gomatah |

"Be not, o lord of riches (Indra), sluggish like a bråhmån.28 Be exhilarated by the libation mixed with milk."

viii. 85, 5. Ā yad vajram bāhvor Indra dhatse mada-chyutam Ahave hantavai u | pra parvatāḥ anavanta pra brahmāṇo abhinakshanta Indram |

"When, Indra, thou seizest in thine arms the thunderbolt which brings down pride, in order to slay Ahi, the (aerial) hills and the cows utter their voice, and the brähmäns draw near to thee."

ix. 96, 6. Brahmā devānām padavīķ kavīnām rishir viprānām mahisho mrigānām | śyeno gridhrānām svadhitir vanānām somaķ pavitram ati eti rebhan |

"Soma, resounding, overflows the filter, he who is a brăhmăn among the gods, a leader among poets, a rishi among the wise, a buffalo among wild beasts, a falcon among kites, an axe among the woods."

ix. 112, 1. Nānānām vai u no dhiyo vi vratāni janānām | takshā rishtam rutam bhishag brahmā sunvantam ichhati.

"Various are the thoughts and endeavours of us different men. The carpenter seeks something broken, the doctor a patient, the brāhmān some one to offer libations." 24

22 Compare viii. 87, 9, yunjanti harī ishirasya gūthayā urau rathe uruyuge | Indra-vāhā vachoyujā; i. 7, 2, vachoyujā; i. 14, 6, manoyujā; vi. 49, 5, ratho manasā yujānah.

23 Dr. Haug (Introd. to Ait. Br. p. 20) refers to Ait. Br. v. 34, as illustrating this reproach. See p. 376 of his translation. This verse clearly shows that the priests formed a professional body.

24 This verse also distinctly proves that the priesthood already formed a profession.
Verse 3 of the same hymn is as follows: "I am a poet, my father a physician, my

- ix. 113, 6. Yatra brahmā pavamāna chhandasyām vācham vadan | grāvņā some mahīyate somena ānandam janayann Indrāya Indo pari srava |
- "O pure Soma, in the place where the brāhmān, uttering a metrical hymn, is exalted at the soma sacrifice through (the sound of) the crushing-stone, producing pleasure with soma, o Indu (Soma) flow for Indra."
- x. 28, 11. Tebhyo godhā ayathañ karshad etad ye brahmanah pratipiyanti annaih | sime ukshnah avasrishtān adanti svayam balāni tanvah śrinānāh | (The word brahmanah occurs in this verse, but I am unable to offer any translation, as the sense is not clear.)
- x. 71, 11. (See translation of this verse below, where the entire hymn is given.)
- x. 85, 29. Parā dehi śāmulyam brahmabhyo vi bhaja vasu | . . . 35. Sūryāyāḥ paśya rūpāṇi tāni brahmā tu śundhati |
- "Put away that which requires expiation (?). Distribute money to the brāhmāns... 35. Behold the forms of Sūryā. But the brāhmān purifies them."
- x. 141, 3. Somam rājānam avase Agnim gīrbhir havāmahe | Ādityān Vishnum Sūryam brahmāṇam cha Brihaspatim |
- "With hymns we invoke to our aid king Soma, Agni, the Ādityas, Vishnu, Sūrya, and Brihaspati, the brăhmăn.
- III. In the following passages the word brāhmān appears to designate the special class of priest so called, in contradistinction to hotri, udgātri, and adhvaryu.
- ii. 1, 2 (= x. 91, 10). Tava Agne hotram tava potram ritviyam tava neshtram tvam id agnid ritayatah | tava prasastram tvam adhvariyasi brahma cha asi grihapatis cha no dame | 2. Tvam Agne Indro vrishabhah satām asi tvam Vishnur urugāyo namasyah | tvam brahma rayivid Brahmanaspate tvam vidharttah sachase purandhyā |
- "Thine, Agni, is the office of hotri, thine the regulated function of potri, thine the office of neshtri, thou art the agnidh of the pious man, thine is the function of praśāstri, thou actest as adhvaryu, thou art the brähmän, and the lord of the house in our abode. 2. Thou, Agni, art Indra, the chief of the holy, thou art Vishnu, the wide-stepping, the mother a grinder of corn" (kārur aham tato bhishag upala-prakshinī nănā). Unfortunately there is nothing further said which could throw light on the relations in which the different professions and classes of society stood to each other.

adorable, thou, o Brahmanaspati, art the brahman, the possessor of wealth, thou, o sustainer, art associated with the ceremonial."

iv. 9, 3. Sa sadma pari nīyate hotā mandro divishţishu | uta potā ni shīdati | 4. Uta gnā Agnir adhvare uta grihapatir dame | uta brahmā ni shīdati |

"He (Agni) is led round the house, a joyous hotri at the ceremonies, and sits a potri. 4. And Agni is a wife (i.e. a mistress of the house) at the sacrifice, and the master of the house in our abode, and he sits a brāhmān."

x. 52, 2. Aham hotā ni asīdam yajīyān višve devāḥ maruto mā junanti | ahar ahar Aśvinā ādhvaryavam vām brahmā samid bhavati sā ahutir vām | (Agni says) "I have sat down an adorable hotri; all the gods, the Maruts, stimulate me. Day by day, ye Aśvins, I have acted as your adhvaryu; the brăhmăn is he who kindles the fire: this is your invocation."

I shall now bring forward the whole of the texts in which the word brāhmāṇa, which, no doubt, originally meant a son, or descendant, of a brāhmān, occurs in the Rig-veda.²⁵ They are the following:

i. 164, 45. Chatvāri vāk parimitā padāni tāni vidur brāhmaņāḥ ye manīshiṇaḥ | guhā trīṇi nihitā na ingayanti turīyam vācho manushyāḥ vadanti |

"Speech consists of four defined grades. These are known by those brāhmans who are wise. They do not reveal the three which are esoteric. Men speak the fourth grade of speech."

This text is quoted and commented upon in Nirukta xiii. 9.

vi. 75, 10. Brāhmaṇāsaḥ pitaraḥ somyāsaḥ śive no dyāvā-pṛithivī anehasā | Pūshā naḥ pātu duritād ritāvridhaḥ |

"May the brāhman fathers, drinkers of soma, may the auspicious, the sinless, heaven and earth, may Pūshan, preserve us, who prosper by righteousness, from evil, etc."

²⁵ There are two more texts in which the word brāhmaṇa is found, viz. i. 15, 5, and ii. 36, 5, on which see the following note. The word brahmaputra (compare Aśv. S'. S. ii. 18, 13) "son of a brahman," is found in ii. 43, 2: Udgātā iva śakune sāma gāyasi brāhmā-putraḥ iva savaneshu śam̃sasi | "Thou, o bird, singest a sāma verse like an udgātri; thou singest praises like the son of a brāhmān at the libations." (Ind. Stud. ix. 342 ft.) Vipra, used in later Sanskrit as synonymous with Brāhman, has in the R.V. the sense of "wise," "sage" assigned by Nigh. 3, 15 (=medhāvi-nāma), and in Nir. 10, 19,=medhāvinaḥ. It is often applied as an epithet to the gods.

vii. 103, 1 (= Nirukta 9, 6). Samvatsaram śaśayānāḥ brāhmaṇāḥ vrata-chāriṇaḥ | vācham Parjanya-jinvitām pra maṇḍūkāḥ avādishuḥ . . . | 7. Brāhmaṇāso atirātre na some saro na pūrṇam abhito vadantaḥ | samvatsarasya tad ahaḥ pari shṭha yad maṇḍūkāḥ prāvṛishīṇam babhūva | 8. Brāhmaṇāsaḥ somino vācham akrata brahma kṛiṇvantaḥ parivatsarīṇam | adhvaryavo gharmiṇaḥ sishvidānāḥ āvir bhavanti guhyā na ke chit |

"After lying quiet for a year, those rite-fulfilling brāhmans the frogs have (now) uttered their voice, which has been inspired by Parjanya 7. Like brāhmans at the Atirātra soma rite, like (those brāhmans) speaking round about the full pond (or soma-bowl 7), you, frogs, surround (the pond) on this day of the year, which is that of the autumnal rains. 8. These soma-offering brāhmans (the frogs) have uttered their voice, performing their annual devotion (brahma); these adhvaryu priests sweating with their boiled oblations (or in the hot season) come forth from their retreats like persons who have been concealed."

x. 16, 6. Yat te krishnah śakunah ātutoda pipīlah sarpah uta vā śvāpadah | Agnis tad viśvād agadam karotu Somas cha yo brāhmaṇān āviveśa |

"Whatever part of thee any black bird, or ant, or serpent, or wild beast has mutilated, may Agni cure thee of all that, and Soma who has entered into the $br\bar{a}hmans$." ²⁸

26 In the Nighantus, iii. 13, these words brāhmaṇāḥ vrata-chāriṇaḥ are referred to as conveying the sense of a simile, though they are unaccompanied by a particle of similitude. In his Illustrations of the Nirukta, p. 126, Roth thus remarks on this passage: "This is the only place in the first nine mandalas of the R.V. in which the word Brāhmaṇa is found with its later sense, whilst the tenth mandala offers a number of instances. This is one of the proofs that many of the hymns in this book were composed considerably later (than the rest of the R.V.). The word brāhmaṇa has another signification in i. 15, 5; ii. 36, 5; and vi. 75, 10." (In the first of these texts, Roth assigns to the word the sense of the Brāhman's soma-vessel. See his Lexicon, s.e. It does not appear what meaning he would give to the word in vi. 75, 10. He has in this passage overlooked R.V. i. 164, 45, which, however, is duly adduced in his Lexicon). See Wilson's translation of the hymn; as also Müller's, in his Anc. Sansk. Lit. p. 494 f.

²⁷ Saras. See R.V. viii. 66, 4, quoted in Nirukta, v. 11, where Yāska says, "The ritualists inform us that at the mid-day oblation there are thirty uktha platters destined for one deity, which are then drunk at one draught. These are here called saras." (Compare Roth's Illustrations on the passage. See also R.V. vi. 17, 11, and viii. 7, 10, with Sāyaṇa's explanations of all three passages).

28 Compare A.V. vii. 115, 1 f.; xii. 5, 6.

x. 71, 1.20 Brihaspate prathamam vācho agram yat prairata nāmadheyam dadhānāḥ \ yad eshām śreshtham yad aripram asīt prenā tad eshām nihitam guhā āvih | 2. (= Nirukta iv. 10) Saktum iva titaunā punanto yatra dhīrāh manasā vācham akrata | atra sakhāyaḥ sakhyāni jānate bhadrā eshām lakshmīr nihitā adhi vāchi | 3. Yajnena vāchah padavīyam āyan tām anv avindann rishishu pravishtām | tām ābhritya vi adadhuh purutrā tām sapta rebhāh abhi sam navante | 4. (= Nir. i. 19) Uta tvah pasyan na dadarsa vācham uta tvah srinvan na srinoti enām uto tvasmai tanvam vi sasre jāyā iva patye usatī suvāsāh | 5. (= Nir. i. 20) Uta tvam sakhye sthirapītam āhur na enam hinvanty api vājineshu | adhenvā charati māyayā esha vācham śuśruvān aphalām apushpām | 6. Yas tityāja sachi-vidam sakhāyam na tasya vāchi api bhāgo asti | yad īm śrinoti alakam śrinoti na hi praveda sukritasya panthām | 7. Akshanvantah karnavantah sakhāyo manojaveshu asamāh babhūvuh ādaghnāsah upakakshāsah u tve hradāh iva snātvāh u tve dadriśre 8. (= Nir. xiii. 13) Hridā tashteshu manaso javeshu yad brāhmanāh samyajante sakhāyah | atra aha tvam vi jahur vedyābhir ohabrahmāno vi charanti u tve | 9. Ime ye na arvañ na paras charanti na brahmanāso na sute-karāsah | te ete vācham abhipadya pāpayā sirīs tantram tanvate aprajajnayah | 10. Sarve nandanti yasasā āgatena sabhā-sahena sakhyā sakhāyaḥ | kilbisha-sprit pitu-shanir hi eshām aram hito bhavati vājināya | 11. (= Nir. i. 8) Richām tvah posham āste pupushvān gāyatram tvo gayati śakvarishu | brahmā tvo vadati jāta-vidyām yajnasya mātrām vi mimīte u tvah

"When, o Brihaspati, men first sent forth the earliest utterance of speech, giving a name (to things), then all that was treasured within them, most excellent and pure, was disclosed through love. 2. Wherever the wise,—as if cleansing meal with a sieve,—have uttered speech with intelligence, there friends recognize acts of friendliness; good fortune dwells in their speech. 30 3. Through sacrifice they came upon ²⁸ I cannot pretend that I am satisfied with some parts of the translation I have attempted of this very difficult hymn; but I give it such as it is, as the interpretation of the Vedic poems is still to a certain extent tentative. Verses 4 and 5 are explained in Sāyaṇa's Introduction to the Rig-veda, pp. 30 f. of Müller's edition. I am indebted here, as elsewhere, to Prof. Aufrecht for his suggestions.

³⁰ I quote here, as somewhat akin to this hymn, another from the A.V. vi. 108, being a prayer for wisdom or intelligence: 1. Tvañ no medhe prathamā gobhir as vebhir ā gahi | tvam sūryasya rasmibhis tvañ no asi yajniyā | 2. Medhām aham prathamām

the track of speech, and found her entered into the rishis. Taking, they divided her into many parts: 31 the seven poets celebrate her in concert. 4. And one man, seeing, sees not speech, and another, hearing, hears her not; 32 while to a third she discloses her form, as a loving well-dressed wife does to her husband. 5. They say that one man has a sure defence in (her 83) friendship; he is not overcome even in the conflicts (of discussion). But that person consorts with a barren delusion who has listened to speech without fruit or flower. 6. He who abandons a friend who appreciates friendship, has no portion whatever in speech. All that he hears, he hears in vain, for he knows not the path of righteousness. 7. Friends gifted both with eyes and ears have proved unequal in mental efforts. Some have been (as waters) reaching to the face or armpit, while others have been seen like ponds in which one might bathe. 8. When brahmans who are friends strive (?) together in efforts of the mind produced by the heart,34 they leave one man behind through their acquirements, whilst others walk about boasting to be brahmans. (This is the sense Professor Aufrecht suggests for the word ohabrahmanah. Professor Roth s.v. thinks it may mean "real priests." The author of Nirukta xiii. 13, explains it as meaning "reasoning priests," or "those of whom reasoning is the sacred science.") 9. The men who range neither near nor far, who are neither (reflecting) brāhmans nor yet pious worshippers at libations, -these, having acquired speech, frame their web imperfectly, (like) female brahmanvatīm brahma-jūtām rishishţutām | prapītām brahmachāribhir devānām avase huve | 3. Yām medhām Ribhavo vidur yām medhām asurāḥ viduḥ | rishayo bhadrām medhām yām vidus tām mayy ā ves'ayāmasi | 4. Yām rishayo bhūta-krito medhām medhāvino viduḥ | tayā mām adya medhayā Agne medhāvinam krinu | 5. Medhām sāyam medhām prātar medhām madhyandinam pari | medhām sūryasya rasmibhir vachasā "ves'ayāmahe 1. "Come to us, wisdom, the first, with cows and horses; (come) thou with the rays of the sun; thou art to us an object of worship. 2. To (obtain) the succour of the gods, I invoke wisdom the first, full of prayer, inspired by prayer, praised by rishis, imbibed by Brahmachārins. 3. We introduce within me that wisdom which Ribhus know, that wisdom which divine beings (asurāḥ) know, that excellent wisdom which rishis know. 4. Make me, o Agni, wise to-day with that wisdom which the wise rishis — the makers of things existing — know. 5. We introduce wisdom in the evening, wisdom in the morning, wisdom at noon, wisdom with the rays of the sun, and with speech" (vachasā). Regarding the rishayo bhūtakritaḥ see above, p. 37, note.

⁸¹ Compare x. 125, 3; i. 164, 45; (x. 90, 11); and A.V. xii. 1, 45.

³² Compare Isaiah vi. 9, 10; and St. Matthew xiii. 14, 15.

³⁸ Vāk-sakhye, Yāska.

³⁴ Compare i. 171, 2; ii. 35, 2; vi. 16, 47.

weavers, so being destitute of skill. 10. All friends rejoice at the arrival of a renowned friend who rules the assembly; for such a one, repelling evil, and bestowing nourishment upon them, is thoroughly prepared for the conflict (of discussion). 11. One man possesses a store of verses (richām); a second sings a hymn (gāyatra) during (the chanting of) the śakvarīs; one who is a brāhmān declares the science of being (jāta-vidyām), whilst another prescribes the order of the ceremonial." 36

R.V. x. 88, 19 (= Nir. vii. 31). Yāvan-mātram ushaso na pratīkam suparnyo vasate Mātariśvaḥ | tāvad dadhāti upa yajnam āyan brāhmano hotur avaro nishīdan |

"As long as the fair-winged Dawns do not array themselves in light, o Mātariśvan, so long the brāhman coming to the sacrifice, keeps (the fire), sitting below the hotṛi-priest."

(See Professor Roth's translation of this verse in his Illustrations of the Nirukta, p. 113).

- x. 90, 11 (= A.V. xix. 5, 6; Vaj. S. xxxi.). See above, pp. 8-15.
- x. 97, 22. Oshadhayah samvadante Somena saha rājnā | yasmai kṛinoti brāhmanas tam rājan parayāmasi |
- "The plants converse with king Soma, 37 (and say), for whomsoever a brāhman acts (krinoti, officiates), him, o king, we deliver."
- x. 109, 1. Te 'vadan prathamāḥ brahma-kilbishe akūpāraḥ salilo Mā-tariśvā | vīļuharās tapa ugro mayobhūr āpo devīr prathamajāḥ ritena | Soma rājā prathamo brahma-jāyām punaḥ prāyachhad ahrinīyamānaḥ | anvartitā Varuno Mitraḥ āsīd Agnir hotā hastagrihya nināya | 3. Hastena eva grāhyaḥ ādhir asyāḥ "brahma-jāyā iyam" iti cha id avochan | na dūtāya prahye tasthe eshā tathā rāshṭram gupitam kshattriyasya | 4. Devāḥ etasyām avadanta pūrve sapta rishayas tapase ye nisheduḥ | bhīmā jāyā brāhmaṇasya upanītā durdhām dadhāti parame vyoman |

²⁵ Such is the sense which Prof. Aufrecht thinks may, with probability, be assigned to sirīs, a word which occurs only here.

³⁶ According to Yāska (Nir. i. 8), these four persons are respectively the hotri, udgātri, brahman, and adhvaryu priests. The brahman, he says, being possessed of all science, ought to know everything; and gives utterance to his knowledge as occasion arises for it (jāte jāte). See Dr. Haug's remarks on this verse, Ait. Br. Introd. p. 20.

⁵⁷ Compare oshadhīḥ Soma-rājnīh, "the plants whose king is Soma," in verses 18 and 19 of this hymn.

5. Brahmachārī charati vevishad vishah sa devānām bhavati ekam angam | tena jāyām anv avindad Brihaspatih Somena nītām juhvam na devāh | 6. Punar vai devāh adaduh punar manushyāh uta | rājānah satyam kṛinvānāh brahma-jāyām punar daduh | 7. Punardāya brahma-jāyām kṛitvī devair nikilbisham | ūrjam prithivyāh bhaktvāya urugāyam upāsate |

"These (deities), the boundless, liquid Matarisvan (Air), the fiercelyflaming, ardently-burning, beneficent (Fire), and the divine primeval Waters, first through righteousness exclaimed against the outrage on a brähmän. 2. King Soma, 38 unenvious, first gave back the brähmän's wife; Varuna and Mitra were the inviters; Agni, the invoker, brought her, taking her hand. 3. When restored, she had to be received back by the hand, and they then proclaimed aloud, 'This is the brahman's wife; ' she was not committed to a messenger to be sent: - in this way it is that the kingdom of a ruler (or Kshattriya) remains secured to him. 39 4. Those ancient deities, the Rishis, who sat down to perform austerities, spoke thus of her, 'Terrible is the wife of the brahman; when approached, she plants confusion in the highest heaven. 5. The Brahmachārin 41 (religious student) continues to perform observances. He becomes one member 42 of the gods. Through him Brihaspati obtained his wife, as the gods obtained the ladle which was brought by Soma. 6. The gods gave her back, and men gave her back; kings, performing righteousness, gave back the brahman's wife. 7. Giving back the brahman's wife, delivering themselves from sin against the gods, (these kings) enjoy the abundance of the earth, and possess a free range of movement."

³⁸ Compare R.V. x. 85, 39 ff. (=A.V. xiv. 2, 2 ff.) Punah patnīm Agnir adād āyushā saha varchasā | dīrghāyur asyāh yah patir jīvāti saradaḥ satam | 40. Somāḥ prathamo vivide Gandharvo vivide uttaraḥ (the A.V. reads: Somasya jāyā prathamam Gandharvas te 'parah patih) | tritīyo Agnish ţe patis turīyas te manushyajāḥ | Somo dadād Gandharvāya Gandharvo dadād Agnaye | rayim cha putrāms chādād Agnir mahyam atho imām | "Agni gave back the wife with life and splendour: may he who is her husband live to an old age of 100 years! Soma was thy first, the Gandharva was thy second, Agni thy third, husband; thy fourth is one of human birth. Soma gave her to the Gandharva, the Gandharva to Agni, Agni gave me wealth and sons, and then this woman." The idea contained in this passage may possibly be referred to in the verse before us (x. 109, 2).

³⁹ I am indebted to Prof. Aufrecht for this explanation of the verse.

⁴⁰ See R.V. i. 164, 34, 35, above.

⁴¹ See my paper on the Progress of the Vedic Religion, in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1865, pp. 374 ff.

⁴² See A.V. x. 7, 1 ff.; 9, 26.

This hymn is repeated in the Atharva-veda with the addition of ten more verses which I shall quote in the next section.

I shall here state summarily the remarks suggested by a perusal of the texts which I have quoted, and the conclusions which they appear to authorize regarding the relation of the Vedic poets and priests to the other classes of the Indian community at the time when the earlier hymns of the Rig-veda were composed.

First: Except in the Purusha Sūkta (translated above in pp. 9 ff.) there is no distinct reference in the hymns to any recognised system of four castes.

Second: In one text (iii. 34, 9, see p. 176) where mention is made of the Āryan "colour," or "race," all the upper classes of the Indian community are comprehended under one designation, as the Kshattriyas and Vaiśyas as well as the Brāhmans were always in after-times regarded as Āryas (see above, p. 176.)

Third: The term $br\bar{a}hm\bar{a}na$ occurs only in eight hymns of the Rigveda, besides the Purusha Sūkta, whilst $br\bar{a}hm\bar{a}n$ occurs in forty-six. The former of these words could not therefore have been in common use at the time when the greater part of the hymns were composed. The term $r\bar{a}janya$ is found only in the Purusha Sūkta; and kshattriya in the sense of a person belonging to a royal family, a noble, occurs only in a few places, such as x. 109, 3.43 The terms Vaisya and Sūdra are only found in the Purusha Sūkta, although $vi\acute{s}$, from which the former is derived, is of frequent occurrence in the sense of "people" (see p. 14, above).

Fourth: The word brāhmān, as we have seen, appears to have had at first the sense of "sage," "poet;" next, that of "officiating priest;" and ultimately that of a "special description of priest."

Fifth: In some of the texts which have been quoted (particularly i. 108, 7; iv. 50, 8 f.; viii. 7, 20; viii. 45, 39; viii. 53, 7; viii. 81, 30; ix. 112, 1; x. 85, 29) brāhmān seems to designate a "priest by profession."

Sixth: In other places the word seems rather to imply something peculiar to the individual, and to denote a person distinguished for genius or virtue (x. 107, 6), or elected by special divine favour to receive the gift of inspiration (x. 125, 5).

⁴³ This text is quoted above. In viii. 104, 13, Kshattriya is perhaps a neuter substantive: Na vai u Somo vrijinam hinoti na kshattriyam mithuyā dhārayantam | "Soma does not prosper the sinner, nor the man who wields royal power deceitfully."

Seventh: Brāhmāṇa appears to be equivalent to brāhmā-putra, "the son of a brāhmān" (which, as we have seen, occurs in ii. 43, 2), and the employment of such a term seems necessarily to presuppose that, at the time when it began to become current, the function of a brāhmān, the priesthood, had already become a profession.

The Rig-veda Sanhitā contains a considerable number of texts in which the large gifts of different kinds bestowed by different princes on the authors of the hymns are specified, and these instances of bounty are eulogized.

Of these passages R.V. i. 125; i. 126; v. 27; v. 30, 12 ff.; v. 61, 10; vi. 27, 8; vi. 45, 31 ff.; vi. 47, 22 ff. may be consulted in Prof. Wilson's translation; and a version of R.V. x. 107, which contains a general encomium on liberality will be found in the article entitled "Miscellaneous Hymns from the Rig- and Atharva-vedas," in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1866, p. 32 f. The following further texts, which describe the presents given by different princes to the rishis, viz. vii. 18, 22 ff.; viii. 3, 21 ff.; viii. 4, 19 ff.; viii. 5, 37 ff.; viii. 6, 46 ff.; viii. 19, 36 f.; viii. 21, 17 f.; viii. 24, 29 f.; viii. 46, 21 ff.; viii. 54, 10 ff.; viii. 57, 14 ff.; x. 33, 4 ff.; x. 62, 6 ff.; x. 93, 14 f. are translated in the article "On the relations of the priests to the other classes of Indian Society in the Vedic age" in the same Journal for 1866, pp. 272 ff., to which I refer.

On the other hand the hymns of the Rig-veda contain numerous references to persons who, if not hostile, were at least indifferent and inattentive to the system of worship which the rishis professed and inculcated; and niggardly in their offerings to the gods and their gifts to the priests. The article to which I have just referred contains (pp. 286 ff.) a long list of such passages, from which I extract the following:

i. 84, 7. Yah ekah id vidayate vasu marttāya dāśushe | īśāno apratish-kutah Indro anga | 8. Kudā martyam arādhasam padā kshumpam iva sphurat | kadā nah śuśruvad girah Indro anga |

"Indra, who alone distributes riches to the sacrificing mortal, is lord and irresistible. 8. When will Indra crush the illiberal man like a bush with his foot? when will he hear our hymns?"

- i. 101, 4. . . . vīloś chid Indro yo asunvato vadhah . . . |
- "Indra, who is the slayer of him, however strong, who offers no libations."
- i. 122, 9. Jano yo Mitrā-varuṇāv abhidhrug apo na vām sunoti akshṇayādhruk | svayam sa yakshmam hṛidaye ni dhatte āpa yad īm hotrābhir ritāvā |
- "The hostile man, the malicious enemy, who pours out no libations to you, o Mitra and Varuṇa, plants fever in his own heart, when the pious man has by his offerings obtained (your blessing)."
- i. 125, 7. Mā priṇanto duritam enaḥ ā aran mā jārishuḥ sūrayaḥ suvratāsaḥ | anyas teshām paridhir astu kaś chid apriṇantam abhi sam yantu śokāḥ |
- "Let not the liberal suffer evil or calamity; let not devout sages decay; let them have some further term; let griefs befall the illiberal (aprinantam).
- i. 182, 3. Kim atra dasrā krinuthaḥ kim āsāthe jano yaḥ kaśchid ahavir mahīyate | ati kramishṭam juratam paner asum jyotir viprāya krinutañ vachasyave |
- "What do ye here, o powerful (Asvins)? why do ye sit (in the house of) a man who offers no oblation, and (yet) is honoured? Assail, wear away the breath of the niggard, and create light for the sage who desires to extol you."
- ii. 23, 4. Sunītibhir nayasi trāyase janam yas tubhyam dāśad na tam amho aśnavat | brahma-dvishas tapano manyumīr asi Bṛihaspate mahi tat te mahitvanam |
- "By thy wise leadings thou guidest and protectest the man who worships thee; no calamity can assail him. Thou art the vexer of him who hates devotion (brahma-dvishah), and the queller of his wrath; this, o Brihaspati, is thy great glory."
- iv. 25, 6. . . . na asushver āpir na sakhā na jāmir dushprāvyo avahantā id avāchaḥ | 7. Na revatā paṇinā sakhyam Indro asunvatā sutapāḥ sam grinīte | ā asya vedaḥ khidati hanti nagnam vi sushvaye paktaye kevalo 'bhūt |
- "Indra is not the relation or friend or kinsman of the man who offers no libations; he is the destroyer of the prostrate irreligious man.

 7. Indra, the soma-drinker, accepts not friendship with the wealthy niggard who makes no soma-libations; but robs him of his riches, and slays him when stripped bare, whilst he is the exclusive patron of the man who pours out soma and cooks oblations."

vi. 44, 11. . . . jahi asushvīn pra vriha aprinatah |

"Slay (o Indra) those who offer no libations; root out the illiberal." viii. 53, 1. Ut tvā mandantu stomāḥ kṛinushva rādho adrivaḥ | avabrahma-dvisho jahi | pādā panīn arādhaso ni badhasva mahān asi | na hi

tvā kaśchana prati

"Let our hymns gladden thee; give us wealth, o thunderer. Slay the haters of devotion. 2. Crush with thy foot the niggards who bestow nothing. Thou art great; no one is comparable to thee."

It seems evident, then, from these texts (and there are many more of the same tenor), that the irreligious man, the parcus deorum cultor et infrequens, was by no means a rare character among the Āryas of the Vedic age, and that the priests often found no little difficulty in drawing forth the liberality of their contemporaries towards themselves and in enforcing a due regard to the ceremonials of devotion. And if we consider, on the other hand, that the encomiums on the liberality of different princes to the poets and priests which are contained in the passages to which I before adverted, are the production of the class whose pretensions they represent, and whose dignity they exalt, we shall, no doubt, see reason to conclude that the value of the presents bestowed has been enormously exaggerated, and make some deduction from the impression which these texts are calculated to convey of the estimation in which the priests were held at the time when they were composed. But after every allowance has been made for such considerations, and for the state of feeling indicated by the complaints of irreligion and illiberality of which I have cited specimens, it will remain certain that the brahman, whether we look upon him as a sage and poet, or as an officiating priest, or in both capacities, was regarded with respect and reverence, and even that his presence had begun to be considered as an important condition of the efficacy of the ceremonial. Thus, as we have already seen, in i. 164, 35, the brahman is described as the highest heaven of "speech;" in x. 107, 6, a liberal patron is called a rishi and a brahman, as epithets expressive of the most distinguished eulogy; in x. 125, 5, the goddess Vāch is said to make the man who is the object of her special affection a brahman and a rishi; in vi. 45 7; vii. 7, 5; viii. 16, 7; and ix. 96, 6, the term brahman is applied honorifically to the gods Indra, Agni, and Soma; in iv. 50, 8, 9, great prosperity is declared to attend the prince by whom a brāhmān is employed, honoured, and succoured; and in iii. 53, 9, 12; v. 2, 6; vii. 33, 2, 3, 5; and vii. 83, 4, the highest efficacy is ascribed to the intervention and intercession of this class of functionaries.

Again, whatever exaggeration we may suppose in the texts which eulogize the liberality of princely patrons, in regard to the value of the presents bestowed, there is no reason to doubt that the ministers of public worship, who possessed the gift of expression and of poetry, who were the depositaries of all sacred science, and who were regarded as the channels of access to the gods, would be largely rewarded and honoured.⁴⁴

44 It is to be observed that, in these eulogies of liberality, mention is nowhere made of Brahmans as the recipients of the gifts. In two places, viii. 4, 20, and x. 33, 4, a rishi is mentioned as the receiver. In later works, such as the S'atapatha Brāhmana, on the contrary, the presents are distinctly connected with Brahmans. Thus it is said in that work, ii. 2, 2, 6: Drayāh vai devāh devāh aha eva devāh atha ye brāhmaṇāḥ śuśruvāmso 'nūchānās te manushya-devāḥ | teshām dvedhā vibhaktaḥ eva yajnah ahutayah eva devanam dakshinah manushya-devanam brahmananam susruvusham anuchananam | ahutibhir eva devan prinati dakshinabhir manushya-devan brahmanan susruvusho 'nüchanan | te enam ubhaye devah prītāh sudhayam dadhati | "Two kinds of gods are gods, viz. the gods (proper), whilst those Brāhmans who have the Vedic tradition, and are learned, are the human gods. The worship (yajna) of these is divided into two kinds. Oblations constitute the worship offered to the gods, and presents (dakshina) that offered to the human gods, the Brahmans, who possess the Vedic tradition and are learned. It is with oblations that a man gratifies the gods, and with presents that he gratifies the human gods, the Brahmans, who possess the Vedic tradition, and are learned. Both these two kinds of gods, when gratified, place him in a state of happiness" (sudhāyām); (or "convey him to the heavenly world," as the expression is varied in the parallel passage of the same work, iv. 3, 4, 4). It is similarly said in the Taitt. Sanh. i. 7, 3, 1: Paroksham vai anye devah ijyante pratyaksham anye | yad yajate ye eva devah paroksham ijyante tan eva tad yajati | yad anvāhāryam āharaty ete vai devāh pratyaksham yad brāhmaņās tān eva tena prīnāti | atho dakshinā eva asya eshā | atho yajnasya eva chhidram apidadhāti yad vai yajnasya krūram yad vilishtam tad anvāhāryena anvāharati | tad anvāhāryasya anvāhāryatvam | devadūtāh vai ete yad ritvijo yad anvāhāryam āharati devadutan eva prīnati | "Some gods are worshipped in their absence, and others in their presence. It is to those gods who are worshipped in their absence that the sacrificer offers the oblation which he presents. And it is these gods who are visible. i.e. the Brahmans, whom he gratifies with the anvaharya (present of cooked rice) which he afterwards brings. Now this anvāhārya is the present (dakshinā) connected with it (the sacrifice). Then he covers over the faults of the sacrifice. Whatever in it is excessive or defective, that he removes by means of the anvāhārya. In this consists the nature of that offering. These officiating priests are the messengers of the gods; and it is the messengers of the gods whom the sacrificer gratifies with this anvāhārya gift which he presents."

It is further clear, from some of the texts quoted above (ii. 1, 2; iv. 9, 3; x. 52, 2), as well as i. 162, 5, and from the contents of hymns ii. 36; ii. 37; ii. 43; and x. 124, 1,45 that in the later part of the Vedic era, to which these productions are probably to be assigned, the ceremonial of worship had become highly developed and complicated, and that different classes of priests were required for its proper celebration.46 It is manifest that considerable skill must have been required for the due performance of these several functions; and as such skill could only be acquired by early instruction and by practice, there can be little doubt that the priesthood must at that period have become a regular profession.47 The distinction of king or noble and priest appears to be recognized in i. 108, 7, as well as in iv. 50, 8, 9; whilst in v. 47, 7, 14, a similar distinction is made between king and rishi; and it is noticeable that the verse, in other respects nearly identical, with which the 36th and 37th hymns of the eight mandala respectively conclude, ends in the one hymn with the words, "Thou alone, Indra, didst deliver Trasadasyu in the conflict of men, magnifying prayers" (brahmani vardhayan); whilst in the other the last words are, "magnifying (royal) powers" (kehattrāni vardhayan), as if the former contained a reference to the functions of the priest, and the latter to those of the prince. (Compare viii. 35, 16, 17.)

While, however, there thus appears to be every reason for supposing that towards the close of the Vedic period the priesthood had become a profession, the texts which have been quoted, with the exception of the verse in the Purusha Sükta (x. 90, 12), do not contain anything which necessarily implies that the priests formed an exclusive caste, or, at least, a caste separated from all others by insurmountable barriers, as in later times. There is a wide difference between a profession, or even a hereditary order, and a caste in the fully developed Brahmanical sense.

⁴⁵ See also i. 94, 6, where it is said: "Thou (Agni) art an adhvaryu, and the earliest hotri, a prasāstri, a potri, and by nature a purohita. Knowing all the priestly functions (ārtvijyā) wise, thou nourishest us," etc. (tvam adhvaryur uta hotā 'si pūrvyah prasāstā potā janushā purohitah | viśvā vidvān ārtijyā dhīra pushyasy Agne ity ādi).

⁴⁶ See Prof. Müller's remarks on this subject, Anc. Sansk. Lit. pp. 485 ff.; and Dr. Haug's somewhat different view of the same matter in his Introd. to Ait. Br. pp. 11 ff.

⁴⁷ In regard to the great importance and influence of the priests, see Müller's Anc. Sansk. Lit. pp. 485 ff.

Even in countries where the dignity and exclusive prerogatives of the priesthood are most fully recognized (as in Roman Catholic Europe), the clergy form only a profession, and their ranks may be recruited from all sections of the community. So, too, is it in most countries, even with a hereditary nobility. Plebeians may be ennobled at the will of the sovereign. There is, therefore, no difficulty in supposing that in the Vedic era the Indian priesthood-even if we suppose its members to have been for the most part sprung from priestly families -may have often admitted aspirants to the sacerdotal character from other classes of their countrymen. Even the employment of the word brāhmaṇa in the Rig-veda does not disprove this. This term, derived from brahman, "priest," need not, as already intimated, signify anything further than the son or descendant of a priest (the word brahmaputra, "son of a priest," is, as we have seen, actually used in one text), -just as the rajanya means nothing more than the descendant of a king or chief (rājan), a member of the royal family, or of the nobility.

The paucity of the texts (and those, too, probably of a date comparatively recent) in which the word brahmana occurs, when contrasted with the large number of those in which brahman is found, seems, as I have already observed, to prove conclusively that the former word was but little employed in the earlier part of the Vedic era, and only came into common use towards its close. In some of these passages (as in vii. 103, 1, 7, 8; x. 88, 19) there is nothing to shew that the Brahman is alluded to as anything more than a professional priest, and in vii. 103, the comparison of frogs to Brāhmans may seem even to imply a want of respect for the latter and their office.48 In other places (i. 164, 45, and x. 71, 8, 9) a distinction appears to be drawn between intelligent and unintelligent Brāhmans, between such as were thoughtful and others who were mere mechanical instruments in carrying on the ceremonial of worship,40 which, certainly points to the existence of a sacerdotal class. In another passage (x. 97, 22) the importance of a Brāhman to the proper performance of religious rites appears to be clearly expressed. In x. 109, where the words brahman (passim) and brahmana (in verse 4) seem to be used interchangeably—the inviolability of Brāhman's wives, the peril of interfering with them, and the blessing attendant on reparation for any outrage committed against them, are referred to in such a way as to shew at once the loftiness of the claim set up by the Brāhmans on their own behalf, and to prove that these pretensions were frequently disregarded by the nobles. In x. 16, 6, the Brāhmans are spoken of as inspired by Soma, and in vi. 75, 10, the manes of earlier Brāhmans are reckoned among those divine beings who have power to protect the suppliant. But in none of these texts is any clear reference made to the Brāhmans as constituting an exclusive caste or race, and nothing whatever is said about their being descended from an ancestor distinct from those of the other classes of their countrymen.

⁴⁸ See Müller's remarks on this hymn in his Anc. Sansk. Lit. p. 494.

⁴⁹ In R.V. viii. 50, 9, it is said: "Whether an unwise or a wise man, o Indra, has offered to thee a hymn, he has gladdened (thee) through his devotion to thee (avipro vā yad avidhad vipro vā Indra te vachah | sa pra mamandat tvāyā ity ād$)."

Sect. II.—Quotations from the Rig-veda, the Nirukta, the Mahābhārata, and other works, to shew that according to ancient Indian tradition, persons not of priestly families were authors of Vedic hymns, and exercised priestly functions.

But in addition to the negative evidence adduced in the preceding section, that during the age to which the greater part of the hymns of the Rig-veda are referable, the system of castes had, to say the least, not yet attained its full development, we find also a considerable amount of proof in the hymns themselves, or in later works, or from a comparison of both, that many of the hymns either were, or from a remote antiquity were believed to be, the productions of authors not of sacerdotal descent; and that some of these persons also acted as priests. The most signal instance of this kind is that of Viśvāmitra; but from the abundance of the materials which exist for its illustration I shall reserve it for the next chapter, where I shall treat of the contests between the Brāhmans and the Kshattriyas.

In later times, when none but Brāhman priests were known, it seemed to be an unaccountable, and—as contradicting the exclusive sacardotal pretensions of the Brāhmans—an inconvenient circumstance, that priestly functions should have been recorded as exercised by persons whom tradition represented as Rājanyas; and it therefore became necessary to explain away the historical facts, by inventing miraculous legends to make it appear that these men of the royal order had been in reality transformed into Brahmans, as the reward of their superhuman merits and austerities—an idea of which we shall meet with various illustrations in the sequel. The very existence, however, of such a word as rājarshi, or "royal rishi," proves that Indian tradition recognized as rishis or authors of Vedic hymns persons who were considered to belong to Rajanya families. A number of such are named (though without the epithet of rajarshi) in the Anukramanikā or index to the Rig-veda; but Sāyana, who quotes that old document, gives them this title. Thus, in the introduction to hymn i. 100, he says: Atra anukramyate "sa yo vrishā 'ekonā Vārshāgirāh Rijrāśvāmbarīsha-Sahadera-Bhayamāna-Surādhasah" iti | Vrishāgiro mahārājasya putrabhūtāh Rijrāśvādayah pancha rājarshayah sadeham sāktam dadriśuh | atas te asya sūktasya rishayah | uktam hy arshanukramanyam "sūktam sa yo vrishety etat pancha Vārshāgirāh viduh | niyuktāh nāmadheyaih svair api 'chaitat tyad' iti richi" iti | "It is said in the Anukramanikā, 'Of this hymn (the rishis) are Rijrāśva, Ambarīsha, Sahadeva, Bhayamāna, and Surādhas, sons of Vrishāgir.' Rijrāśva and others, sons of King Vrishāgir, in all five rajarshis, saw this hymn in a bodily form. Hence they are its rishis (or seers). For it is declared in the Arsha Anukramani: 'The five sons of Vrishagir, who are mentioned by name in the verse beginning "this praise" (the 17th), know this hymn." The 17th verse is as follows: Etat tyat te Indra vrishne uktham Varshagirah abhi grinanti rādhah | Rijrāśvah prashţibhir Ambarīshah Sahadevo Bhayamānah Surādhāh | "This hymn the Vārshāgiras, Rijrāśva, with his attendants, and Ambarīsha, Sahadeva, Bhayamāna, and Surādhas, utter to thee, the vigorous, o Indra, as their homage;" on which Sayana repeats the remark that these persons were rajarshis (etad uktham stotram rādhah samrādhakam tvat - priti - hetum Vārshāgirāh Vrishāgiro rājnah putrāh Rijrāśvādayo 'bhi grinanti ābhimukhyena vadanti | Rijrāśvah etat-sanjno rājarshih prashtibhih pāršva-sthair anyair rishibhih saha Indram astaut | ke te pārśva-sthāḥ | Ambarīshādayaś chatvāro rājarshayah). Ambarīsha is also said to be the rishi of ix. 98. Again, "Trasadasyu, son of Purukutsa, a Rājarshi," is said by Sāyana on R.V. iv. 42, to be the rishi of that hymn (Purukutsasya putras Trasadasyuh rājarshiḥ | atrānukramanikā 'mama dvitā' daśa Trasadasyuḥ Paurukutsyah). In the 8th and 9th verses Trasadasyu is thus mentioned: Asmākam atra pitaras te āsan sapta rishayo Daurgahe badhyamāne | te ā ayajanta Trasadasyum asyāh Indram na vrittraturam arddhadevam | 9. Purukutsānī hi vām adāśad havyebhir Indrā-varunā namobhih | atha rājānam Trasadasyum asyāh vrittrahanam dadathur arddhadevam | 8. "These seven rishis were our fathers. When the son of Durgaha was bound they gained by sacrifice for her (Purukutsānī) a son Trasadasyu, a slayer of foes, like Indra, a demigod. 9. Purukutsānī worshipped you, o Indra and Varuna, with salutations and obeisances; then ye gave her king Trasadasyu, a slayer of enemies, a demigod." I give Sāyana's note on these verses: "Purukutsasya mahishī Daurgahe bandhana-sthite | patyāv arājakam drishtvā rāshtram putrasya lipsayā | yadrichhayā samāyātān saptarshīn paryapūjayat i te cha prītāh punah prochur 'yajendrā-varunau bhrisam' | sā chendra-varunāv ishtvā Trasadasyum ajījanat | itihāsam imam janann rishir brute richav iha" | atha asmakam atra asminn arajake dese asyām prithivyām vā pitarah pālayitārah utpādakās te āsann abhavan | ete saptarshayah prasiddhāh Daurgahe Durgahasya putre Purukutse badhyamāne dridham pāśair yasmād asyāh asyai Purukutsānyai Trasadasyum ayajanta pradur Indra-Varunayor anugrahat \ " The queen of Purukutsa, when her husband, the son of Durgaha, was imprisoned, seeing the kingdom to be destitute of a ruler, and desirous of a son, of her own accord paid honour to the seven rishis who had arrived. And they, again, being pleased told her to sacrifice to Indra and Varuna. Having done so she bore Trasadasyu. Knowing this story, the rishi utters these two verses;" which Sāyana then explains. Similarly Sāyana says on v. 27: "Tryaruna son of Trivrishna, Trasadasyu son of Purukutsa, and Asvamedha son of Bharata, these three kings conjoined, are the rishis of this hymn; or Atri is the rishi" (Atrānukramanikā | "Anasvantā shat Traivrishna-paurukutsyau dvau Tryaruna-Trasadasyū rājānau Bhāratas cha Asvamedhah | 'na ātmā ātmane dadyād' iti sarvāsv Atrim kechit" . . . Trivrishnasya putras Tryarunah Purukutsasya putras Trasadasyur Bharatasya putro'svamedhah ete trayo'pi rājānah sambhūya asya sūktasya rishayah | yadvā Atrir eva rishih). The Anukramanikā, however, adds that according to some, as "no one would give gifts to himself, none of the princes mentioned as donors could be the author; but Atri must be the rishi." As the hymn is spoken by a fourth person, in praise of the liberality of these kings, it is clear they cannot well be its authors. And a similar remark applies to iv. 42, 8 f. However, the Hindu tradition, being such as it is, is good proof that kings could, in conformity with ancient opinion, be rishis. Trasadasyu and Trayaruna are also mentioned as the rishis of ix. 110.50 The rishis of iv. 43 and iv. 44 are declared by Sāyana, and by the Anukramanikā, to be Purumīļha, and Ajamīļha, sons or descendants of Suhotra (iv. 43, Atrānukramanikā 'kaḥ u śaśvat' sapta Purumīlhājamīlhau Sauhotrau tv Āśvinam hi | iv. 44, Purumīlhājamīlhāv eva rishī). Though these persons are not said by either of these authorities to be kings, yet in the Vishnu and Bhāgavata Purānas the latter is mentioned as being of royal race. and a tribe of Brahmans is said to have been descended from him (see above p. 227). In the sixth verse of iv. 44, the descendants of Ajamilha are said to have come to the worship of the Asvins (naro yad vām Aśvinā stomam āvan sadhastutim Ajamīlhāso agman). The following hymns, also, are said by tradition to have had the undermentioned kings for their rishis, viz.: vi. 15, Vītahavya (or Bharadvāja); x. 9, Sindhudvīpa, son of Ambarīsha (or Trisiras, son of Tvashtri); x. 75, Sindhukshit, son of Priyamedha; x. 133, Sudās, son of Pijavana; x. 134, Māndhātri, son of Yuvanāśva (see above, p. 225); x. 179, S'ibi, son of Usīnara, Pratardana, son of Divodāsa and king of Kāśī (see above, p. 229), and Vasumanas, son of Rohidaśva; and x. 148 is declared to have had Prithī Vainya 51 as its rishi. In the fifth verse of that hymn it is said: S'rudhi havam Indra śūra Prithyāh uta stavase Venyasya arkaih | "Hear, o heroic Indra, the invocation of Prithi; and thou art praised by the hymn of Venya." In viii. 9, 10, also, Prithī Vainya is mentioned at the same time with three rishis: Yad vām Kakshīvān uta yad Vyaśvaḥ rishir yad vām Dīrghatamāḥ juhāva | Prithī yad vām Vainyah sadaneshu eva id ato Aśvinā chetayethām "Whatever oblation (or invocation) Kakshīvat has made to you, or the rishi Vyaśva, or Dīrghatamas, or Prithī, son of Vena, in the places of ⁵⁰ In the Vishnu Purāna, as we have seen above, p. 237. Trayyāruna, Pushkarin, and Kapi are said to have been sons of Urukshaya, and all of them to have become Brāhmans; and in the Bhāgavata Purāna, Trayyaruni, Pushkarāruni, and Kapi are said to have all become Brāhmans.

⁵¹ The S'. P. Br. v. 3, 5, 4, refers to Prithī as "first of men who was installed as a king" (Prithī ha vai Vainyo manushyānām prathamo 'bhishishiche). I extraot from Dr. Hall's edition of Prof. Wilson's Vishnu Purāṇa, vol. iii. the following verse, adduced by the editor from the Vāyu Purāṇa about royal rishis: Mānave Vainave (?) vamše Aide vamše cha ye nripāḥ | Aidā Aikshvākā Nābhāgā jneyā rājarshayas tu te | 4 Kings in the race of Manu, Vena (?), and Ida, the descendants of Ida, Ikshvāku, and Nabhāga are to be known as having been rājarshis."

sacrifice, take notice of that, o Aśvins." Here Sāyana refers to Pṛithī as "the royal rishi of that name."

From the details I have supplied it is clear that in many cases the evidence is against the supposition that the princes to whom the hymns are ascribed were in reality their authors. The only instances in which the authorship seems to be established by the tenor of the hymns themselves are those of the Vārshagiras, or, at all events, that of Prithī. But, as has been already remarked, the fact that ancient Hindu tradition recognizes royal rishis as the authors of hymns is sufficient to prove that such cases were not unknown. Even if we were to suppose that flattery had any share in the creation of these traditions, it no doubt proceeded upon the belief of those who put them into circulation, that in earlier times the distinction between the priests and other classes was not so sharply defined as in their own day.

I proceed, however, to the case of Devāpi, in which the materials for forming a judgment are more adequate and satisfactory, and prove that he was not merely a rishi but an officiating priest.

In the Anukramanikā, R.V. x. 98 is ascribed to him as its author; and Yāska states as follows in the Nirukta, ii. 10:

Tatra itihāsam āchakshate | Devāpiš cha Ārshţishenah S'antanuś cha Kauravyau bhrātarau babhūvatuh | sa S'antanuh kanīyān abhishechayān-chakre | Devāpis tapah pratipede | tatah S'antanoh rājye dvādaśa varshāni devo na vavarsha | tam ūchur brāhmanāh "adharmas tvayā charito jyeshtham bhrātaram antaritya abhishechitam | tasmāt te devo na varshati" iti | sa S'antanur Devāpim śiśiksha rājyena | tam uvācha Devāpih "purohitas te 'sāni yājayāni cha tvā" iti | tasya etad varsha-kāmasūktam | tasya eshā bhavati |

"Here they relate a story. Devāpi son of Rishṭisheṇa, and Santanu, belonged to the race of Kuru and were brothers. Santanu, who was the younger, caused himself to be installed as king, whilst Devāpi betook himself to austere fervour. Then the god did not rain for twelve years of Santanu's reign. The Brāhmans said to him: 'Thou hast practised unrighteousness in that, passing by thy elder brother, thou hast caused thyself to be installed as king. It is for this reason that the god does not rain.' Santanu then sought to invest Devāpi with the sovereignty; but the latter said to him: 'Let me be thy purchita and perform sacrifice for thee.' This hymn, expressing a desire of rain, is his. The following verse is part of it."

Yāska then quotes a verse of R.V. x. 98, the whole of which is as follows:

Brihaspate prati me devatām ihi Mitro vā yad Varuno vā asi Pūshā | Ādityair vā yad Vasubhir Marutvān sa Parjanyam S'antanave vrishāya! 2. Ā devo dūto ajiras chikitvān tvad Devāpe abhi mām agachhat | pratīchīnah prati mām ā vavritsva dadhāmi te dyumatīm vācham āsan | 3. Asme dhehi dyumatīm vācham āsan Brihaspate anamīvām ishirām yayā vrishţim S'antanave vanāva divo drapso madhumān ā viveśa | 4. Ā no drapsāḥ madhumanto viśantu Indra dehi adhiratham sahasram | ni shīda hotram 52 rituthā yajasva devān Devāpe havishā saparya | 5. Ārshțisheno hotram rishir nishīdan Devāpir deva-sumatim chikitvān | sa uttarasmād adharam samudram apo divyah asrijad varshyāh abhi | 6. Asmin samudre adhi uttarasmin āpo devebhir nivritāh atishthan \ tāh adravann Ārshtishenena srishtāh Devāpinā preshitāh mrikshinīshu | 7. Yad Devāpih S'antanave purohito hotrāya vritah kripayann adīdhet | deva-śrutañ vrishţi-vanim rarāno Brihaspatir vācham asmai ayachhat | 8. Yam tvā Devāpih śuśuchāno Agne Ārshţisheno manushyah samīdhe | viśvebhir devair anumadyamānah pra Parjanyam īraya vrishţimantam | 9. Tvām pūrve rishayo gīrbhir āyan tvām adhvareshu puruhūta viśve | sahasrān; adhirathani asme a no yajnam rohidasva upa yahi. | 10. Etani Agni navatir nava tve āhutāni adhirathā sahasrā | tebhir vardhasva tanvaḥ śūra pūrvīr divo no vrishţim ishito rirīhi | 11. Etāni Agne navatim sahasrā sam pra yachha vrishne Indrāya bhāgam | vidvān pathah rituso devayānān apy aulānam divi deveshu dhehi | 12. Agne bādhasva vi mṛidho vi durgahā apa amīvām apa rakshāmsi sedha | asmāt samudrād brihato divo no apām bhūmānam upa nah srija iha 1

"Approach, Bṛihaspati,⁵³ to my worship of the gods, whether thou art Mitra, Varuṇa, Pūshan, or art attended by the Ādityas, Vasus, or Maruts: cause Parjanya to rain for Santanu. 2. The god, a rapid messenger, has become aware, and has come from thee, o Devāpi, to me, (saying) 'approach towards me; I will place a brilliant hymn

⁵² Compare R.V. ii. 1, 2.

⁵³ It looks as if Agni were here to be understood by Brihaspati, see verses 9-12. In R.V. ii. 1, 4 ff. Agni is identified with Varuna, Mitra, Aryaman, Amsa, Tvashtri, Rudra, Püshan, Savitri, Bhaga.

in thy mouth.' 3. Place in our mouth, o Brihaspati, a brilliant hymn, powerful, and spirited, whereby we two may solicit rain for Santanu. The drop full of sweetness has descended on us from the sky. 4. May the drops full of sweetness come down upon us: give us, o Indra, a thousand waggon-loads (of them?). Perform the function of a hotri, sacrifice in due form, worship the gods with an oblation, o Devāpi. 5. The rishi Devāpi, son of Rishtishena, performing the function of a hotri, knowing (how to gain) the goodwill of the gods, has discharged from the upper to the lower ocean those waters of the sky which fall in rain. 6. The waters remained shut up by the gods in this upper ocean: they rushed forth when released by the son of Rishtishena, when discharged by Devāpi into the torrents.54 7. When Devāpi, placed in front of Santanu (as his purchita), chosen for the office of hotri, fulfilling his function, kindled (the fire),—then, granting the prayer for rain which was heard by the gods, Brihaspati gave him a hymn. 8. Do thou, o Agni, whom the man 55 Devāpi the son of Rishtishena has inflamed and kindled, -do thou, delighted, with all the the gods, send hither the rain-bearing Parjanya. 9. Former rishis have approached thee with their hymns; and all (approach) thee, o god, much-invoked, in their sacrifices: give us thousands of waggon-loads: come, thou who art borne by red horses,50 to our sacrifice. 10. These ninety-nine thousands of waggon-loads (of wood and butter?) have been thrown into thee, o Agni, as oblations. Through them grow, hero, to (the bulk of) thy former bodies; 57 and stimulated, grant us rain from the sky. 11. (Of) these ninety thousands give, o Agni, a share to the vigorous Indra. Knowing the paths which rightly lead to the gods, convey the oblation (?) to the deities in the sky. 12. Overcome, o Agni, our enemies, our calamities; drive away sickness, and rakshases. From this great ocean of the sky discharge upon us an abundance of waters."

The fact of Devāpi being reputed as the author of this hymn, and as the purchita and hotri of his brother, seems to have led the legendary writers to invent the story of his becoming a Brāhman, which (as men-

⁵⁴ So the word mrikshinī is explained in Böhtlingk and Roth's Lexicon.

⁵⁵ Or, "descendant of Manush" (manushya).

⁵⁶ This is a common epithet of Agni.

⁵⁷ This means, I suppose, "burst forth into vast flames."

tioned by Professor Weber, Indische Studien, i. p. 203) is recorded in the Salya-parvan of the Mahābhārata, verses 2281 ff. where he is there said to have attained this distinction at a certain place of pilgrimage called Prithūdaka; where Sindhudvīpa and Viśvāmitra also were received into the higher caste:

Tatrārshṭisheṇaḥ Kauravya brāhmaṇyañ saṃśita-vrataḥ | tapasā mahatā rājan prāptavān rishi-sattamaḥ | Sindhudvīpaś cha rājarshir Devāpiś cha mahātapāḥ | brāhmaṇyaṃ labdhavān yatra Viśvāmitras tathā muniḥ | mahātapaṣvī bhagavān ugra-tejāḥ mahātapāḥ | 2287. Purā kṛita-yuge rajann Ārshṭisheṇo dvijottamaḥ | vasan guru-kule nityaṃ nityam adhyayane rataḥ | tasya rājan guru-kule vasato nityam eva cha | samāptiṃ nāgamad vidyā nāpi vedāḥ viśāmpate | sa nirviṇnas tato rājaṃs tapas tepe mahātapāḥ | tato vai tapasā tena prāṇya vedān anuttamanān | sa vidvān veda-yuktaś cha siddhaś chāpy rishi-sattamaḥ | . . . | evam siddhaḥ sa bhagavān Ārshṭisheṇaḥ pratāṇavān | tasminn eva tadā tīrthe Sindhudvīpaḥ pratāṇavān | Devāpiś cha mahārāja brāhmaṇyam prāṇatur mahat |

2281. "There the most excellent rishi Ārshṭisheṇa, constant in his observances, obtained Brāhmanhood by great austere fervour; as did also the royal rishi Sindhudvīpa,⁵⁸ and Devāpi great in austere fervour, and the glorious muni Viśvamitra, of great austere fervour and fiery vigour." Some other particulars of Arshṭisheṇa are given further on: 2287. "Formerly in the Kṛita age the most excellent Brāhman Ārshṭisheṇa dwelt constantly in his preceptor's family, devoted to incessant study; but could not complete his mastery of science or of the vedas. Being in consequence discouraged, he betook himself to intense austere fervour. By this means he acquired the incomparable Vedas, and became learned and perfect. At the same place of pilgrimage the majestic Sindhudvīpa and Devāpi obtained the great distinction of Brāhmanhood."

It will be observed that here Ārshtishena is, in opposition to the authority of the Nirukta, made a distinct person from Devāpi.

 $^{^{58}}$ This prince also, as we have seen above, is mentioned among those Rājanyas who composed Vedic hymns.

⁵⁰ The Vedas are here spoken of in the plural, although Ārshtishena is said to have lived in the Krita age. But the M. Bh. itself says elsewhere (see above, p. 145) that there was then but one Veda.

In a note to his (French) translation of the Rig-veda, M. Langlois (vol. iv. 502) supposes that the hymn above translated (x. 98), like the Purusha Sükta, is very much posterior in date to the other hymns in the collection. The names of Devāpi and Sāntanu indicate, he thinks, as the date of its composition, a period not far preceding that of the great war of the Mahābhārata. Professor Weber, on the other hand, considers (Indische Studien, i. 203) that the Sāntanu and Devāpi mentioned in that work (Ādi-parvan, 3750 f.) cannot be the same as the persons alluded to in the Rigveda, because their father was Pratīpa, not Rishţishena; and because he thinks it doubtful whether a prince who preceded the Pāndavas by only two generations could have been named in the Rig-veda, and appear there as an author of hymns.

The verses of the Adi-parvan just referred to are as follows:

Pratīpasya trayaḥ putrāḥ jajnire Bharatarshabha | Devāpiḥ S'āntanuś chaiva Vāhlīkaś mahārathaḥ | Devāpiś cha pravavrāja teshūm dharmahitepsayā | S'āntanuś cha mahīm lebhe Vāhlīkaś cha mahārathaḥ |

"Three sons were born to Pratīpa, viz. Devāpi, S'āntanu, and Vāhlīka the charioteer. Of these Devāpi, desiring the benefits of religious excellence, became an ascetic; whilst S'āntanu and Vāhlīka obtained (the rule of) the earth."

The Harivamsa gives a different story about the same Devāpi, verse 1819:

Pratīpo Bhīmasenāt tu Pratīpasya tu S'āntanuḥ | Devāpir Vāhlikaś chaiva trayaḥ eva mahārathāḥ | 1822. Upādhyāyas tu devānām Devāpir abhavad muniḥ | Chyavanasya kṛitaḥ putraḥ ishṭaś chāsīd mahātmanaḥ |

"Prātīpa sprang from Bhīmasena; and S'āntanu, Devāpi, and Vāhlika were the three chariot-driving sons of Pratīpa. 1822. Devāpi became a muni, and preceptor of the gods, being the adopted son of Chyavana, by whom he was beloved."

The Vishnu Purāna (iv. 20, 7 ff.) concurs with the preceding authorities in making Devāpi and Sāntanu to be sons of Pratīpa, and descendants of Kuru, and his son Jahnu. It repeats the legend given in the Nirukta of the country of Sāntanu being visited by a drought of twelve years duration, in consequence of his having assumed the royal authority while his elder brother lived. And although, as will be seen, the sequel of the story is widely different from that recorded by the Nirukta, the earlier incidents in the two narratives are so similar, that it would appear to have been the intention of the Puranic writer to identify the Devāpi and Santanu whose history he relates with the persons of the same names, although of different parentage, mentioned in Yāska's work. He may, however, possibly have transferred an older legend to more recent personages. The passage of the Vishnu Purāna is as follows:

Rikshād Bhīmasenas tatas cha Dilīpah | Dīlipāt Pratīpas tasyāpi Devāpi Santanu-Vāhlīka-saninās trayah putrāh babhūvuh | Devāpir bālah eva aranyam viveśa | S'antanūr avanīpatir abhavat | ayam cha tasya ślokah prithivyām gīyate "yam yam karābhyām sprisati jīrnam yauvanam eti sah | śāntim chāpnoti yenāgryām karmanā tena S'āntanuh" | tasya S'āntanoh rāshtre dvādasa varshāni devo na vavarsha | tataścha aśesha-rāshtra-vināśam avekshya asau rājā brāhmanān aprichhad "bhoh kasmād asmin rāshţre devo na varshati | ko mama aparādhaḥ" iti | te tam ūchur "agrajasya te rhā iyam avanis tvayā bhujyate parivettā tvam" | ity uktah sa punas tān aprichhat "kim mayā vidheyam" iti | tena tam ūchur "yāvad Devāpir na patanādibhir doshair abhibhūyate tāvat tasya arham rājyam | tad alam etena tasmai dīyatām" | ity ukte tasya mantri-pravarena Asmasārinā tatra aranye tapasvino vedavāda-virodha-vaktārah prayojitāh | tair ati-riju-mater mahīpati-putrasya buddhir veda-virodha-mārgānusāriny akriyata \ rājā cha S'āntanur dvijavachanotpanna-parivedana-śokas tān brāhmanān agranīkritya agraja-rājyapradānāya aranyam jagāma | tad-āsramam upagatās cha tam avanīpatiputram Devapim upatasthuh | te brahmanah veda-vadanuvriddhani vachāmsi "rājyam agrajena karttavyam" ity arthavanti tam ūchuh | asāv api veda-vāda-virodha-yukti-dūshitam aneka-prakāram tān āha | tatas te brāhmanāh S'antanum ūchur "āgachha bho rājann alam atra ati-nirbandhena | praśantah eva asav anawrishti-doshah | patito 'yam anadikāla-mahita-veda-vachana-dūshanochchāranāt | patite cha agraje naiva pārivettryam bhavati" | ity uktaḥ S'āntanuḥ sva-puram āgatya rājyam akarot | veda-vāda-virodhi-vachanochchārana-dūshite cha jyeshthe 'smin bhrātari tishthaty api Devāpāv akhila-sasya-nishpattaye vavarsha bhagavan Parjanyah

"From Riksha sprang Bhīmasena; from him Dilīpa; from him Pratīpa, who again had three sons called Devāpi, Santanu, and Vāhlīka. Devāpi while yet a boy retired to the forest; and Santanu became king. Regarding him this verse is current in the world: 'Every decrepit man whom he touches with his hands becomes young. He is called Santanu from that work whereby he obtains supreme tranquility (śānti).' The god did not rain on the country of this Santanu for twelve years. Beholding then the ruin of his entire realm, the king enquired of the Brahmans: 'Why does not the god rain on this country; what is my offence?' The Brahmans replied: 'This earth, which is the right of thy elder brother, is now enjoyed by thee; thou art a parivettri (one married before his elder brother).'60 Receiving this reply, he again asked them: 'What must I do?' They then answered: 'So long as Devāpi does not succumb to declension from orthodoxy and other offences, the royal authority is his by right; to him therefore let it be given without further question.' When they had so said, the king's principal minister Asmasārin employed certain ascetics propounding doctrines contrary to the declarations of the Vedas to proceed into the forest, by whom the understanding of the very simpleminded prince (Devāpi) was led to adopt a system at variance with those sacred books. King Santanu being distressed for his offence in consequence of what the Brāhmans had said to him, went, preceded by those Brahmans, to the forest in order to deliver over the kingdom to his elder brother. Arriving at the hermitage, they came to prince Devāpi. The Brāhmans addressed to him statements founded on the declarations of the Veda, to the effect that the royal authority should be exercised by the elder brother. He, on his part, expressed to them many things that were vitiated by reasonings contrary to the tenor of the Veda. The Brahmans then said to Santanu, 'Come hither, o king: there is no occasion for any excessive hesitation in this affair: the offence which led to the drought is now removed. Your brother has fallen by uttering a contradiction of the words of the Veda which chite | parivettā sa vijneyah parivitis tu pūrvajah | 172. Parivitih parīvettā yayā cha parivityate | sarve te narakam yānti dātri-yājaka-panchamāh | "171. He who, while his elder brother is unwedded, marries a wife with the nuptial fires, is to be known as a parivityi, and his elder brother as a parivitti. 172. The pariviti, the parivettri, the female by whom the offence is committed, he who gives her away, and fifthly the officiating priest, all go to hell." The Indian writers regard the relation of a king to his realm as analogous to that of a husband to his wife. The earth is the king's bride.

have been revered from time without beginning; and when the elder brother has fallen, the younger is no longer chargeable with the offence of pārivettrya (i.e. of marrying before his elder brother).' When he had been so addressed, Sāntanu returned to his capital, and exercised the royal authority. And although his eldest brother Devāpi continued to be degraded by having uttered words opposed to the doctrines of the Veda, the god Parjanya rained in order to produce a harvest of all sorts of grain."

Can the compiler of the Purāna have deviated from the conclusion of this history as found in the Nirukta, and given it a new turn, in order to escape from the conclusion that a Rājanya could officiate as a purohita?

The same story is briefly told in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, ix. 22, 14-17. In the Udyogaparvan of the Mahābhārata, on the other hand, Devāpi's virtues and orthodoxy are extolled in the highest terms, and his exclusion from the throne is ascribed solely to his being a leper, v. 5054:

Devāpis tu mahātejās tvag-doshī rāja-sattamah | dhārmikah satya-vādī cha pituh śuśrūshane ratah | paura-jūnapadūnām cha sammatah sādhu-satkritah | sarveshām bāla-vriddhānām Devāpir hridayangamah | vadān-yah satyasandhaś cha sarva-bhūta-hite ratah | varttamānah pituh śāstre brāhmanānām tathaiva cha | | tam brāhmanās cha vriddhāś cha paura-jūnapadaih saha | sarve nivārayāmāsur Devāper abhisechanam | sa tach chhrutvā tu nripatir abhisheka-nivāranam | aśru-kantho 'bhavad rājā paryaśochata chātmajam | evam vadānyo dharmajnah satyasandhaś cha so 'bhavat | priyah prajūnām api sa tvag-doshena pradūshitah | "hīnāngam prithivīpālam nābhinandanti devatāh" | iti kritvā nripa-śreshṭham pratyasheḍhan dvijarshabhāḥ | . . . | nivāritam nripam drishtvā Devāpih samśrito vanam |

"But the glorious Devāpi, a most excellent prince, righteous, veracious, and obedient to his father, was a leper. He was esteemed by the inhabitants both of town and country, honoured by the good, beloved by all, both young and old, eloquent, true to his engagements, devoted to the welfare of all creatures, and conformed to the commands of his father, and of the Brāhmans." [The king his father grew old and was making preparations for the investiture of his successor; but public opinion was opposed to the devolution of the royal authority on a leper, however virtuous]. "The Brahmans and aged men, together with the dwellers both in town and country, all restrained him from the investiture of Devāpi. The king, learning their opposition, was choked with tears, and bewailed his son's fate. Thus Devāpi was eloquent, acquainted with duty, true to his promise, and beloved by the people, but vitiated by leprosy. The Brāhmans forbade the king (to make Devāpi his successor), saying, 'the gods do not approve a king who labours under any corporeal defect.' Perceiving that the king (his father) was hindered (from carrying out his wishes) Devāpi retired to the forest."

On the same subject, the Matsya Purāna, 49, v. 39 f., states as follows:

Dilīpasya Pratīpastu tasya putrās trayaḥ smṛitāḥ | Devāpiḥ S'ăntanuś chaiva Bāhlīkaś chaiva te trayaḥ | Bāhlīkasya tu dāyādāḥ sapta Bāhlīś-varāḥ nṛipāḥ | Devāpis tu apadhvastaḥ prajābhir abhavad muniḥ | rishayaḥ ūchhuḥ | prajābhis tu kimartham vai apadhvasto janeśvaraḥ | ke doshāḥ rājaputrasya prajābhiḥ samudāhritāḥ | Sūta uvācha | kilāsīd rājaputras tu kushṭī tam nābhyapūjayan | ko'rthān vai atra (? vetty atra) devānām kshattram prati dvijottamāḥ |

"The son of Dilīpa was Pratīpa, of whom three sons are recorded, Devāpi, Săntanu, and Bāhlīka. The sons of the last were the seven Bāhlīśvara kings. But the Muni Devāpi was rejected by the people. The rishis enquired: 'why was that prince rejected by the people? what faults were alleged against him?' Sūta replied: 'the prince was leprous, and they paid him no respect. Who knows the designs of the gods towards the Kshattriya race?'"

No more is said of Devāpi in this passage.⁶¹ The Vishnu Purāna has the following further curious particulars regarding him, iv. 24, 44ff.:

Devāpiḥ Pauravo rājā Maruš chekshvāku-vam̃šajaḥ | mahāyoga-balopetau Kalāpa-grāma-sam̃šrayau | krite yuge ihāgatya kshattra-prāvarttakau hi tau | bhavishyato Manor vam̃še vīja-bhūtau vyavasthitau | etena krama-yogena Manu-putrair vasundharā | krita-tretādi-sanjnāni yugāni trīni bhujyate | Kalau tu vīja-bhūtās te kechit tishṭhanti bhūtale | yathaiva Devāpi-Marū sāmpratam̃ samavasthitau |

"King Devāpi of the race of Puru,62 and Maru of the family of ⁶¹ See Prof. Wilson's note, 4to. ed. p. 458.

⁶² In the twentieth chapter, as we have seen, he is said to be of the race of Kuru.

Ikshvāku, filled with the power of intense contemplation (mahāyoga) are abiding in the village of Kalāpa, continuing to exist as seeds in the family of Manu; they shall come hither in the (next) Kṛita age, and re-establish the Kshattriya race. According to this order the earth is enjoyed by the sons of Manu throughout the three ages called Kṛita, Tretā, and Dvāpara. But during the Kali certain persons remain upon earth as seeds (of a future race), as Devāpi and Maru now exist."

According to the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, ix. 22, 17, it is the lunar race, which had perished in the Kali age, that Devāpi is to restore in the future Krita (soma-vaṃśe kalau nashte kritādau sthāpayishyati).

I shall quote here from the 132nd section of the Matsya Purana, entitled Manvantara-varnanam (a description of the Manvantaras) some of the particulars about the rishis with which it concludes:

98. Bhriguh Kāśyah Prachetāś cha Dadhīcho hy Atmavān api 99. Aurvo'tha Jamadagniś cha Kripah S'āradvatas tathā | Ārshţisheno Yudhājich cha Vītahavya-Suvarchasau | 100. Vainah Prithur Divodāso Brahmāśvo Gritsa-Saunakau | ekonavimsatir hy ete Bhrigavo mantrakrittamāh | 101. Angirāh Vedhasas chaiva Bharadvājo Bhalandanah | Ritabādhas tato Gargaḥ Sitiḥ Sankritir eva cha | 102. Gurudhīraś cha Māndhātā Ambarīshas tathaiva cha | Yuvanāśvah Puruh Kutsah Pradyumnah Sravanasya cha | 103. Ajamīdho 'tha Haryaśvas Takshapah Kavir eva cha | Prishadasvo Virūpas cha Kanvas chaivātha Mudgalah | 104. Utathyaś cha Saradvāmś cha tathā Vājaśravā iti | Apaśyo 'tha Suvittas cha Vāmadevas tathaiva cha | 105. Ajito Brihadukthas cha rishir Dīrghatamā api | Kakshīvāms cha trayastrimsat smritā hy Angiraso varāh | 106. Ete mantra-kritah sarve Kāśyapāms tu nibodhata | . . . | 111. Viśvāmitraś cha Gādheyo Devarājas tathā Balah | tathā vidvān Madhuchhandāh Rishabhas chāghamarshanah | 112. Ashtako Lohitas chaiva Bhritakīlas cha tāv ubhau | Vedāsravāh Devarātah Purānāsvo Dhananjayah | 113. Mithilas cha mahātejāh Sālankāyana eva cha | trayodaśaite vijneyāḥ brahmishṭhāḥ Kauśikāḥ varāh | | 115. Manur Vaivasvatas chaiva Ido rājā Purūravāh | Kshattriyānām varāh hy ete vijneyāh mantra-vādinah | 116. Bhalandas chaiva Vandyas cha Sankīrttiś 68 chaiva te trayah | ete mantra-krito jneyāh Vaiśyānām pravarāh sadā | 117. Ity eka-navatih proktāh mantrāh yais cha bahih kritah | brāhmaṇāh kshattriyāh vaisyāh rishiputrān nibodhata | 118. Rishīkāṇām sutāh hy ete rishi-putrāh śrutarshayah | 64

⁶³ Various readings—Bhalandakas cha Vasās cha Sankālas cha.

"98. Bhrigu, Kāśya, Prachetas, Dadhīcha, Ātmavat, (99) Aurva. Jamadagni, Kripa, S'āradvata, Ārshtishena, Yudhājit, Vītahavya, Suvarchas, (100) Vaina, Prithu, Divodāsa, Brahmāśva, Gritsa, S'aunaka, these are the nineteen 65 Bhrigus, composers of hymns. 101. Angiras, Vedhasa, Bharadvāja, Bhalandana, Ritabādha, Garga, Siti, Sankriti, Gurudhīra, 7 Māndhātri, Ambarīsha, Yuvanāsva, Purukutsa, 8 Pradyumna, S'ravanasya, 69 Ajamīdha, Haryaśva, Takshapa, Kavi, Prishadaśva, Virūpa, Kanva, Mudgala, Utathya, S'aradvat, Vājaśravas, Apaśya, Suvitta, Vāmadeva, Ajita, Brihaduktha, Dīrghatamas, Kakshīvat, are recorded as the thirty-three eminent Angirases. These were all composers of hymns. Now learn the Kāśyapas. 111. Viśvāmitra, son of Gādhi, Devarāja, Bala, the wise Madhuchhandas, Rishabha, Aghamarshana, (112) Ashtaka, Lohita, Bhritakīla, Vedaśravas, Devarāta, Purānāśva, Dhananjaya, the glorious (113) Mithila, Sālankayana, these are to be known as the thirteen devout and eminent Kuśikas.70 115. Manu Vaivasvata, Ida, king Purūravas, these are to be known as the eminent utterers of hymns among the Kshattrivas. 116. Bhalanda, Vandya, and Sankīrtti, 71 these are always to be known as the three eminent persons among the Vaisyas who were composers of hymns. 117. Thus ninety-one 72 persons have been declared, by whom hymns have been given forth, Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, and Vaisyas. Learn the sons of the rishis. 118. These are the offspring of the rishīkas, sons of rishis, secondary rishis (śrutarshis)."

The section ends here.

⁶⁴ I am indebted for an additional copy of this section of the Matsya Purāṇa (of which some account is given by Prof. Aufrecht in his Catalogue, p. 41), to the kindness of Mr. Griffith, Principal of Queen's College, Benares, who, at my request, has caused it to be collated with various other MSS. existing in Benares. I have not thought it necessary to exhibit all the various readings in the part I have quoted.

⁶⁵ The number of nineteen is only obtained by making Vaina and Prithu two persons.

⁶⁶ Instead of this word, one Benares MS. has Lakshmana.

of Two MSS. have Turavita. 68 This word is divided into two in the MS.

⁶⁰ Two MSS. have, instead, Svasravas and Tamasyavat.

⁷⁰ Unless some of the words I have taken as names are really epithets, fifteen persons are enumerated here.

⁷¹ Some MSS. have Bhalandaka, Vandha or Väsas, and Sankäla or Sankīrna.

⁷² This is the total of several lists, some of which I have omitted.

It will be observed from a comparison of this extract with the details previously given, that some of the rājarshis, or rishis of royal blood, such as Ārshṭishena, Vītahavya, Prithu (the same as Prithī) are spoken of as belonging to the family of Bhṛigu, while others of the same class, such as Māndhātri, Ambarīsha, Yuvanāśva, Purukutsa, are reckoned among the Angirases. Viśvāmitra and his descendants are merely designated as Kuśikas without any specific allusion to their Rājanya descent; but Manu, Iḍa, and Purūravas, are distinctly recognized as being as once authors of hymns and Kshattriyas; and, what is more remarkable, three Vaiśyas are also declared to have been sacred poets. These traditions of an earlier age, though scanty in amount, are yet sufficient to show that in the Vedic times the capacity for poetical composition, and the prerogative of officiating at the service of the gods, was not regarded as entirely confined to men of priestly families.

Sect. III.—Texts from the Atharva-veda illustrating the progress of Brāhmanical pretensions.

I have already quoted (in pp. 21 and 22) three short passages from the Atharva-veda regarding the origin of the Brāhman and Kshattriya castes. I shall now bring forward some other texts from the same collection which show a much greater development of the pretensions of the priests to a sacred and inviolable character than we meet in any part of the Rig-veda, if the 109th hymn of the tenth book (cited above) be excepted.

I shall first adduce the 17th hymn of the fifth book, to which I have already alluded, as an expansion of R.V. x. 109.

Atharva-veda v. 17. (Verses 1-3 correspond with little variation to verses 1-3 of R.V. x. 109). 4. Yām āhus "tārakā eshā vikeśī" iti duchchhunām grāmam avapadyamānām | sā brahma-jāyā vi dunoti rāshtram yatra prāpādi śaśaḥ ulkushīmān | (verses 5 and 6 = verses 5 and 4 of R.V. x. 109). 7. Ye garbhāḥ avapadyante jagad yach chāpalupyate | virāḥ ye trihyante mitho brahma-jāyā hinasti tān | 8. Uta yat patayo daśa striyāḥ pūrve abrāhmaṇāḥ | brahmā ched hastam agrahīt sa eva patir ekadhā | 9. Brāhmaṇāḥ eva patir na rājanyo na vaiśyaḥ | tat sūryah prabruvann eti panchabhyo mānavebhyaḥ | (Verses 10 and 11 = verses 6 and 7 of R.V. x. 109). 12. Nāsya jāyā śatavāhī kalyānī talpam

ā śaye | yasmin rāshtre nirudhyate brahma-jāyā achittyā | 13. Na vikarnah prithuśirās tasmin veśmani jāyate | yasminn ityādi | 14. Nāsya kshattā nishka-grīvah sānānām eti agratah | yasminn ityādi | 15. Nāsya śvetah krishna-karno dhuri yukto mahīyate | yasminn ityādi | 16. Nāsya kehettre pushkaranī nāndīkam jāyate visam | yasminn ityādi | 17. Nāsmai priśnim vi duhanti ye 'syāh doham upāsate | yasminn ityādi | 18. Nāsya dhenuh kalyānī nānadvān sahate yugam | vijānir yatra brāhmano rātrim vasati pāpayā |

".... 4. That calamity which falls upon the village, of which they say, 'this is a star with dishevelled hair,' is in truth the brahman's wife, who ruins the kingdom; (and the same is the case) wherever (a country) is visited by a hare attended with meteors. 7. Whenever any miscarriages take place, or any moving things are destroyed, whenever men slay each other, it is the brahman's wife who kills them. 8. And when a woman has had ten former husbands not brāhmans, if a brāhman take her hand (i.e. marry her), it is he alone who is her husband. 9. It is a Brahman only that is a husband, and not a Rājanya or a Vaiśya. That (truth) the Sun goes forward proclaiming to the five classes of men (panchabhyo mānavebhyaḥ), 12. His (the king's) wife does not repose opulent (śatavāhī) and handsome upon her bed in that kingdom where a brahman's wife is foolishly shut up. 13. A son with large ears (vikarnah) and broad head is not born in the house in that kingdom, etc. 14. A charioteer with golden neckchain does not march before the king's hosts 73 in that kingdom, etc. 15. A white horse with black ears does not make a show yoked to his (the king's) chariot in that kingdom, etc. 16. There is no pond with blossoming lotuses 74 in his (the king's) grounds in that kingdom where, etc. 17. His (the king's) brindled cow is not milked by his milkmen in that kingdom, etc. 18. His (the king's) milch cow does not thrive, nor does his ox endure the yoke, in that country where a Brāhman passes the night wretchedly without his wife."

This hymn appears to show that, however extravagant the pretensions of the Brāhmans were in other respects, they had, even at the comparatively late period when it was composed, but little regard to ⁷⁵ The word here in the original is sūnānām, with which it is difficult to make any sense. Should we not read sonānām?

⁷⁴ Compare R.V. x. 107, 10.

the purity of the sacerdotal blood, as they not only intermarried with women of their own order, or even with women who had previously lived single, but were in the habit of forming unions with the widows of Rājanyas or Vaiśyas, 75 if they did not even take possession of the wives of such men while they were alive. 76 Even if we suppose these women to have belonged to priestly families, this would only show that it was no uncommon thing for females of that class to be married to Rājanyas or Vaiśyas—a fact which would, of course, imply that the caste system was either laxly observed, or only beginning to be introduced among the Indians of the earlier Vedic age. That, agreeably to ancient tradition, Brāhmans intermarried with Rājanya women at the period in question, is also distinctly shewn

75 That the remarriage of women was customary among the Hindus of those days is also shewn by A.V. ix. 5, 27 f., quoted in my paper on Yama, Jour. R. A. S. for 1865, p. 299.

76 This latter supposition derives a certain support from the emphasis with which the two verses in question (A. V. v. 17, 8, 9) assert that the Brāhman was the only true husband. Whence, it may be asked, the necessity for this strong and repeated asseveration, if the Rājanya and Vais'ya husbands were not still alive, and prepared to claim the restoration of their wives? The verses are, however, explicable without this supposition.

It is to be observed, however, that no mention is here made of S'ūdras as a class with which Brāhmans intermarried. S'ūdras were not Āryas, like the three upper classes. This distinction is recognised in the following verse of the A.V. xix. 62, 1: "Make me dear to gods, dear to princes, dear to every one who beholds me, both to S'ūdra and to Ārya." (Unless we are to suppose that both here and in xix. 32, 8, ărya = a Vais'ya, and not ārya, is the word). In S'atapatha Brāhmana, Kānva Sākhā (Adhvara Kānda, i. 6), the same thing is clearly stated in these words (already partially quoted above, p. 176), for a copy of which I am indebted to Prof. Müller: Tan na sarva eva prapadyeta na hi devāh sarvenaiva sangachhante | ārya eva brāhmano vā kshattriyo vā vais'yo vā te hi yajniyāḥ | no eva sarvenaiva samvadeta na hi devāh sarvenaiva samvadante āryenaiva brāhmanena vā kshattriyena vā vais'yena vā te hi yajniyāh | yady enam śūdrena samvādo vindet "ittham enam nichakshva" ity anyam bruyad esha dikshitasyopacharah. "Every one cannot obtain this (for the gods do not associate with every man), but only an Arya, a Brahman, or a Kshattriya, or a Vaisya, for these can sacrifice. Nor should one talk with everybody (for the gods do not talk with every body), but only with an Arya, a Brahman, or a Kshattriya, or a Vais'ya, for these can sacrifice. If any one have occasion to speak to a S'ūdra, let him say to another person, 'Tell this man so and so.' This is the rule for an initiated man."

In the corresponding passage of the Mādhyandina S'ākhā (p. 224 of Weber's edition) this passage is differently worded.

From Manu (ix. 149-157; x. 7 ff.) it is clear that Brāhmans intermarried with S'üdra women, though the offspring of those marriages was degraded.

by the story of the rishi Chyavana and Sukanyā, daughter of king Saryāta, narrated in the Satapatha Brāhmana, and quoted in my paper entitled "Contributions to a Knowledge of Vedic Mythology," No. ii., in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1866, pp. 11 ff. See also the stories of the rishi Syāvāśva, who married the daughter of king Rathavīti, as told by the commentator on Rig-veda, v. 61, and given in Professor Wilson's translation, vol. iii. p. 344.

The next hymn, from the same work, sets forth with great liveliness and vigour the advantages accruing to princes from the employment of a domestic priest.

Atharva-veda, iii. 19, 1. Samsitam me idam brahma samsitam vīryam balam | samsitam kshattram ajaram astu jishnur (? jishnu) yesham asmi purohitah | 2. Sam aham eshām rāshtram syāmi sam ojo vīryam balam | vrišchāmi šatrūnām bāhūn anena havishā aham | 3. Nīchaih padyantam adhare bhavantu ye nah sürim maghavanam pritanyan | kshināmi brahmanā 'mitrān unnayāmi svān aham | 4. Tīkshnīyāmsaḥ parasor agnes tīkshnatarāh uta | Indrasya vajrāt tīkshnīyāmso yeshām asmi purohitah | 5. Eshām aham āyudhā sam syāmi eshām rāshţram suvīram vardhayāmi | eshām kshattram ajaram astu jishnu eshām chittam visve avantu devāh | 6. Uddharshantām Maghavan vājināni ud vīrānām jayatām etu ghoshah | prithagghoshāh ululayah ketumantah udīratām | devāh Indra-jyeshthāh Maruto yantu senayā | 7. Preta jayata narah ugrāh vah santu bāhavah | tīkshneshavo abala-dhanvano hata ugrāyudhāh abalān ugra-bāhavah | 8. Avasrishtā parā pata saravye brahma-samsite | jayāmitrān pra padyasva jahy eshām varam-varam mā 'mīshām mochi kaśchana |

"1. May this prayer of mine be successful; may the vigour and strength be complete, may the power be perfect, undecaying, and victorious of those of whom I am the priest (purohita). 2. I fortify their kingdom, and augment their energy, valour, and force. I break the arms of their enemies with this oblation. 3. May all those who fight against our wise and prosperous (prince) sink downward, and be prostrated. With my prayer I destroy his enemies and raise up his friends. 4. May those of whom I am the priest be sharper than an axe, sharper than fire, sharper than Indra's thunderbolt. 5. I strengthen their weapons; I prosper their kingdom rich in heroes. May their power be undecaying and victorious. May all the gods foster their designs.

6. May their valorous deeds, o Maghavat, burst forth; may the noise of the conquering heroes arise; may their distinct shouts, their clear yells, go up; may the gods, the Maruts, with Indra as their chief, march forward with their host. 7. Go, conquer, ye warriors; may your arms be impetuous. Ye with the sharp arrows, smite those whose bows are powerless; ye whose weapons and arms are terrible (smite) the feeble. 8. When discharged, fly forth, o arrow, sped by prayer. Vanquish the foes, assail, slay all the choicest of them; let not one escape."

The two following hymns from the same collection declare the guilt, the peril, and disastrous consequences of oppressing Brāhmans, and robbing them of their property. The threats and imprecations of haughty sacerdotal insolence could scarcely be expressed more energetically.

Atharva-veda, v. 18. 1. Naitām te devāh adadus tubhyam nripate attave | mā brāhmanasya rājanya gām jighatso anādyām | 2. Akshadrugdho rājanyo pāpah ātma-parājitah | sa brāhmanasya gām adyād "adya jīvāni mā śvah" | 3. Āvishţitā agha-vishā pridākūr iva charmanā | mā brāhmanasya rājanya trishtā eshā gaur anādyā | 4. Nir vai kshattram nayati hanti varcho agnir arabdho vi dunoti sarvam | yo brahmanam manyate annam eva sa vishasya pibati taimātasya | 5. Yaḥ enam hanti mṛidum manyamāno deva-pīyur dhana-kāmo na chittāt | sam tasya Indro hridaye agnim indhe ubhe enam dvishto nabhasī charantam | 6. Na brāhmano himsitavyo agnih priyatanor iva | Somo hi asya dāyādah Indro asyābhiśastipāh | 7. Satāpāshthām ni girati tām na śaknoti nihkhidam | annam yo brahmanam malvah svādu admīti manyate | 8. Jihvā jyā bhavati kulmalam van nādīkāh dantās tapasā 'bhidagdhāh | tebhir brahmā vidhyati deva-pīyūn hṛid-balair dhanurbhir deva-jūtaih | 9. Tīkshneshavo brāhmanāh hetimanto yām asyanti saravyām na sā mrishā | anuhāya tapasā manyunā cha uta dūrād ava bhindanti enam | 10. Ye sahasram arājann āsan daśa-śatā uta | te brāhmanasya gām jagdhvā Vaitahavyāh parābhavan | 11. Gaur eva tān hanyamānā Vaitahavyān avātirat | ye Kesaraprābandhāyāś charamājām apechiran | 12. Eka-śatam tāķ janatāḥ yāḥ bhūmir vyadhūnuta | prajām himsitvā brāhmanīm asambhavyam parābhavan | 13. Deva-pīyuś charati marttyeshu gara-gīrno bhavati asthi-bhuyan | yo brahmanam deva-bandhum hinasti na sa pitriyānam apyeti lokam | 14. Agnir vai naḥ padavāyaḥ Somo dāyāda uchyate |

hantābhiśastā Indras tathā tad vedhaso viduḥ | 15. Ishur iva digdhā nṛipate pṛidākūr iva gopate | sā brāhmaṇasya ishur ghorā tayā vidhyati pīyataḥ |

"1. King, the gods have not given thee (this cow) to eat. Do not. o Rājanya (man of royal descent), seek to devour the Brāhman's cow, which is not to be eaten. 2. The wretched Rajanya, unlucky in play, and self-destroyed, will eat the Brāhman's cow, saying, 'Let me live to-day, (if I can) not (live) to-morrow.' 3. This cow, clothed with a skin, contains deadly poison, like a snake. Beware, Rajanya, of this Brāhman's (cow); she is ill-flavoured, and must not be eaten. 4. She takes away his regal power, destroys his splendour, consumes him entire like a fire which has been kindled. The man who looks upon the Brahman as mere food to be eaten up, drinks serpent's poison. 5. Indra kindles a fire in the heart of that contemner of the gods who smites the Brāhman, esteeming him to be inoffensive, and foolishly covets his property. Heaven and earth abhor the man who (so) acts. 6. A Brähman is not to be wronged, as fire (must not be touched) by a man who cherishes his own body. Soma is his (the Brahman's) kinsman, and Indra shields him from imprecations. 7. The wicked (?) man who thinks the priests' food is sweet while he is eating it, swallows (the cow) bristling with a hundred sharp points, but cannot digest her. 8. The priest's tongue is a bow-string, his voice is a barb, and his windpipe is arrow-points smeared with fire. With these god-directed, and heartsubduing bows, the priest pierces the scorners of the gods. 9. Brahmans bearing sharp arrows, armed with missiles, never miss their mark when they discharge a shaft. Shooting with fiery energy and with anger, they pierce (the enemy) from afar. 10. The descendants of Vītahavya, who ruled over a thousand men, and were ten hundred in number, were overwhelmed after they had eaten a Brāhman's cow.77 11. The cow herself, when she was slaughtered, destroyed them, -those men who cooked the last she-goat of Kesaraprābandhā. 12. Those hundred persons whom the earth shook off, after they had wronged the priestly race, were overwhelmed in an inconceivable manner. 13. He lives among mortals a hater of the gods; infected with poison he becomes reduced to a skeleton; he who wrongs a Brāhman the kinsman of the deities, fails to attain to the heaven of the Forefathers. 14. Agni is called our leader; Soma our kinsman. Indra neutralizes imprecations (directed against us); this the wise understand. 15. Like a poisoned arrow, o king, like a serpent, o lord of cows,—such is the dreadful shaft of the Brāhman, with which he pierces his enemies."

⁷⁷ I am not aware whether any traces of this story are discoverable in the Purāṇas or Mahābhārata. See the first verse of the hymn next to be quoted.

Atharva-veda, v. 19, 1. Atimātram avardhanta nod iva divam aspriśan Bhrigum himsitvā S'rinjayāḥ Vaitahavyāḥ parābhavan | 2. Brihatsāmānam Āngirasam ārpayan brāhmanam janāḥ | petvas teshām ubhayādam avis tokāny āvayat | 3. Ye brāhmaṇam pratyashṭhīvan ye vā 'smin śuklam īshire | asnas te madhye kulyāyāh keśān khādanta āsate | 4. Brahmagavī pachyamānā yāvat sā 'bhi vijangahe | tejo rāshṭrasya nirhanti na vīro jāyate vrishā | 5. Krūram asyāḥ āśasanam trishṭam piśitam asyate | kshīram yad asyāḥ pīyate tad vai pitrishu kilbisham | 6. Ugro rājā manyamāno brāhmanam yaj jighatsati | parā tat sichyate rāshtram brāhmano yatra jīyate | 7. Ashtāpadī chaturakshī chatuh-śrotrā chaturhanuh | dvyāsyā dvijihvā bhūtvā sā rāshṭram avadhūnute brahmajyasya | 8. Tad vai rāshṭram āṣravati nāvam bhinnām ivodakam | brǎhmānam̃ yatra himsanti tad rāshtram hanti duchchhunā | 9. Tam vrikshāh apa sedhanti "chhāyām no mopa gāḥ" iti | yo brāhmanasya saddhanam abhi Nārada manyate | 10. Visham etad deva-kritam rājā Varuno abravīt | na brāhmanasya gām jagdhvā rāshtre jāgāra kaśchana | 11. Navaiva tāh navatayo yāh bhūmir vyadhūnuta | prajām himsitvā brāhmanīm asambhavyam parābhavan | 12. Yām mṛitāyānubadhnanti kūdyam padayopanīm | tad vai brahmajya te devāh upastaranam abruvan | 13. Aśrūni kripamānasya yāni jītasya vāvrituh | tam vai brahmajya te devāh apām bhāgam adhārayan | 14. Yena mritam snapayanti śmaśrūni yena undate | tam vai brahmajya te devāḥ apām bhāgam adhārayan | 15. Na varsham Maitrāvarunam brahmajyam abhi varshati | nāsmai samitih kalpate na mitram nayate vasam |

"1. The S'rinjayas, descendants of Vītahavya, waxed exceedingly; they almost touched the sky; but after they had injured Bhrigu, they were overwhelmed. 2. When men pierced Brihatsāman, a Brāhman descended from Angiras, a ram with two rows of teeth swallowed their children. 3. Those who spit, or throw filth (?) upon a Brāhman, sit eating hair in the midst of a stream of blood. 4. So long as this Brāhman's cow is cut up (?) and cooked, she destroys the glory of the kingdom; no vigorous hero is born there. 5. It is cruel to slaughter her; her ill-flavoured flesh is thrown away. When her milk is drunk, that is esteemed a sin among the Forefathers. 6. Whenever a king, fancying himself mighty, seeks to devour a Brāhman, that kingdom is broken up, in which a Brāhman is oppressed. Becoming eight-footed, four-eyed, four-eared, four-jawed, two-faced, two-tongued. she (the cow) shatters the kingdom of the oppressor of Brāhmans. 8. (Ruin) overflows that kingdom, as water swamps a leaky boat: calamity smites that country in which a priest is wronged. 9. Even trees. o Nārada, repel, and refuse their shade to, the man who claims a right to the property of a Brāhman. This (property), as king Varuna hath said, has been turned into a poison by the gods. No one who has eaten a Brāhman's cow continues to watch (i.e. to rule) over a country. 11. Those nine nineties (of persons) whom the earth shook off, when they had wronged the priestly race, were overwhelmed in an inconceivable manner (see verse 12 of the preceding hymn). 12. The gods have declared that the cloth wherewith a dead man's feet are bound shall be thy pall, thou oppressor of priests. 13. The tears which flow from a persecuted man as he laments,—such is the portion of water which the gods have assigned to thee, thou oppressor of priests. 14. The gods have allotted to thee that portion of water wherewith men wash the dead, and moisten beards. 15. The rain of Mitra and Varuna does not descend on the oppressor of priests. For him the battle has never a successful issue; nor does he bring his friend into subjection."

The attention of the reader is directed to the intensity of contempt and abhorrence which is sought to be conveyed by the coarse imagery contained in verses 3, and 12-14, of this last hymn.

There is another section of the same Veda, xii. 5, in which curses similar to those in the last two hymns are fulminated against the oppressors of Brāhmans. The following are specimens:

Atharva-veda, xii. 5, 4. Brahma padavāyam brāhmano 'dhipatiḥ | 5. Tām ādadānasya brahma-gavīm jinato brāhmanān kshattriyasya | 6. Apa krāmati sūnritā vīryam punyā lakshmīḥ | 7. Ojaścha tejaś cha sahaś cha balam cha vāk cha indriyam cha śrīś cha dharmaś cha | 8. Brahma cha kshattram cha rāshṭram cha viśaś cha tvishiś cha yaśaś cha varchaś cha dravinam cha | 9. Āyuś cha rūpam cha nāma cha kīrttiś cha prānaś cha apānaś cha chakshuś cha śrotram cha | 10. Payaś cha rasaś cha annam cha annādyam cha ritam cha satyam cha ishṭam cha pūrttam cha prajā cha paśavaś cha | 11. Tāni sarvūni apa krāmanti brahma-gavīm ādadānasya jinato brāhmaṇam kshattriyasya | 12. Sā eshā bhīmā brahma-gavī agha-vishā | 13. Sarvāṇy asyām ghorāṇi sarve cha mritya-vaḥ | 14. Sarvāṇy asyām krūrāṇi sarve purusha-vadhāḥ | 15. Sā brahma-jyam deva-pīyum brahmagavī ādīyamānā mrityoḥ paḍbīśe ā dyati |

"4. Prayer (brāhmān) is the chief (thing); the Brāhman is the lord (adhipati). 5. From the Kshattriya who seizes the priest's cow, and oppresses the Brāhman, (6) there depart piety, valour, good fortune, (7) force, keenness, vigour, strength, speech, energy, prosperity, virtue, (8) prayer (brāhmān), royalty, kingdom, subjects, splendour, renown, lustre, wealth, (9) life, beauty, name, fame, inspiration and expiration, sight, hearing, (10) milk, sap, food, eating, righteousness, truth, oblation, sacrifice, offspring, and cattle;—(11) all these things depart from the Kshattriya who seizes the priest's cow. 12. Terrible is the Brāhman's cow, filled with deadly poison. . . . 13. In her reside all dreadful things, and all forms of death, (14) all cruel things, and all forms of homicide. 15. When seized, she binds in the fetters of death the oppressor of priests and despiser of the gods."

A great deal more follows to the same effect, which it would be tiresome to quote.

I subjoin some further texts, in which reference is made to brähmäns. In xix. 22, 21 (= xix. 23, 30) it is said:

Brahma-jyeshthä sambhritä vīryāni brahmāgre jyeshtham divam ātatāna | bhūtānām brahmā prathamo ha jajne tenārhati brahmanā sparddhitum kah |

"Powers are collected, of which prayer (or sacred science, brāhmān) is the chief. Prayer, the chief, in the beginning stretched out the sky. The priest (brāhmān) was born the first of beings. Who, then, ought to vie with the brāhmān.

A superhuman power appears to be ascribed to the brāhmān in the following passages,—unless by brāhmān we are to understand Bṛihaspati:—

xix. 9, 12. Brahmā Prajāpatir Dhātā lokāḥ vedāḥ sapta-rishayo 'gnayaḥ | tair me kritam̃ svastyayanam Indro me śarma yachhatu brahmā me śarma yachhatu |

"May a prosperous journey be granted to me by prayer, Prajāpati, Dhātṛi, the worlds, the Vedas, the seven rishis, the fires; may Indra grant me felicity, may the brāhmān grant me felicity."

xix. 43, 8. Yatra brahma-vido yānti dīkshayā tapasā saha | brahmā mā tatra nayatu brahmā brahma dadhātu me | brahmane svāhā.

"May the brāhmān conduct me to the place whither the knowers of prayer (or of sacred science) go by initiation with austerity. May the brāhmān impart to me sacred science. Svāhā to the brāhmān."

The wonderful powers of the Brahmachārin, or student of sacred science, are described in a hymn (A.V. xi. 5), parts of which are translated in my paper on the progress of the Vedic Religion, pp. 374 ff.

And yet with all this sacredness of his character the priest must be devoted to destruction, if, in the interest of an enemy, he is seeking by his ceremonies to effect the ruin of the worshipper.

v. 8, 5. Yam amī puro dadhire brahmānam apabhūtaye | Indra sa me adhaspadam̃ tam pratyasyāmi mrityave |

"May the brăhmăn whom these men have placed in their front (as a purchita) for our injury, fall under my feet, o Indra; I hurl him away, to death (compare A.V. vii. 70, 1 ff.).

Sect. IV.—Opinions of Professor R. Roth and Dr. M. Haug regarding the origin of caste among the Hindus.

I shall in this section give some account of the speculations of Prof. R. Roth and Dr. M. Haug on the process by which they conceive the system of castes to have grown up among the Indians.

The remarks which I shall quote from Prof. Roth are partly drawn from his third "Dissertation on the Literature and History of the Veda," p. 117, and partly from his paper on "Brahma and the Brāhmans," in the first volume of the Journal of the German Oriental Society. He says in the latter essay: "The religious development of India is attached through the course of three thousand years to the word brāhmā. This conception might be taken as the standard for estimating the progress of thought directed to divine things, as at every step taken by the latter, it has gained a new form, while at the same time 78 The reader who is unacquainted with German will find a fuller account of this article in the Benares Magazine for October 1851, pp. 823 ff.

it has always embraced in itself the highest spiritual acquisition of the nation. The original signification of the word brahma, as we easily discover it in the Vedic hymns, is that of prayer; not praise or thanksgiving, but that invocation which, with the force of the will. directed to God, seeks to draw him to itself, and to receive satisfaction from him. From this oldest sense and form of brahma (neuter) was formed the masculine noun brahmā, which was the designation of those who pronounced the prayers, or performed the sacred ceremonies; and in nearly all the passages of the Rig-veda in which it was thought that this word must refer to the Brahmanical caste, this more extended sense must be substituted for the other more limited one. . . . From this sense of the word brahmā, nothing was more natural than to convert this offerer of prayer into a particular description of sacrificial priest: so soon as the ritual began to be fixed, the functions which were before united in a single person, who both prayed to the gods and sacrificed to them, became separated, and a priesthood interposed itself between man and God." 79

Then further on, after quoting R.V. iv. 50, 4 ff. (see above, p. 247), Prof. Roth continues: "In this manner here and in many places of the liturgical and legal books, the promise of every blessing is attached to the maintenance of a priest by the king. Inasmuch as he supports and honours the priest, the latter ensures to him the favour of the gods. So it was that the caste of the Brāhmans arose and attained to power and consideration: first, they were only the single domestic priests of the kings; then the dignity became hereditary in certain families; finally a union, occasioned by similarity of interests, of these families in one larger community was effected; and all this in reciprocal action with the progress made in other respects by theological doctrine and religious worship. Still the extension of the power which fell into the hands of this priestly caste would not be perfectly comprehensible

79 In his third Dissertation on the Literature and History of the Veda, Prof. Roth remarks: "In the Vedic age, access to the gods by prayer and sacrifice was open to all classes of the community; and it was only the power of expressing devotion in a manner presumed to be acceptable to the deities, or a readiness in poetical diction, that distinguished any individual or family from the mass, and led to their being employed to conduct the worship of others. The name given to such persons was purohita, one 'put forward;' one through whose mediation the gods would receive the offering presented. But these priests had as yet no especial sanctity or exclusive prerogative which would render their employment imperative." from this explanation alone. The relation of spiritual superiority in which the priests came to stand to the kings was aided by other historical movements."

Professor Roth then proceeds: "When-at a period more recent than the majority of the hymns of the Rig-veda—the Vedic people, driven by some political shock, advanced from their abodes in the Punjab further and further to the south, drove the aborigines into the hills, and took possession of the broad tract of country lying between the Ganges, the Jumna, and the Vindhya range; the time had arrived when the distribution of power, the relation of king and priest, could become transformed in the most rapid and comprehensive manner. Principalities separated in such various ways, such a division into tribes as had existed in the Punjab, were no longer possible here, where nature had created a wide and continuous tract with scarcely any natural boundaries to dissever one part from another. Most of those petty princes who had descended from the north with their tribes must here of necessity disappear, their tribes become dissolved, and contests arise for the supreme dominion. This era is perhaps portrayed to us in the principal subject of the Mahābhārata, the contest between the descendants of Pandu and Kuru. In this stage of disturbance and complication, power naturally fell into the hands of those who did not directly possess any authority, the priestly races and their leaders, who had hitherto stood rather in the position of followers of the kings, but now rose to a higher rank. It may easily be supposed that they and their families, already honoured as the confidential followers of the princes, would frequently be able to strike a decisive stroke to which the king would owe his success. If we take further into account the intellectual and moral influence which this class possessed in virtue of the prerogative conceded to, or usurped by, them, and the religious feeling of the people, it is not difficult to comprehend how in such a period of transition powerful communities should arise among the domestic priests of petty kings and their families, should attain to the highest importance in every department of life, and should grow into a caste which, like the ecclesiastical order in the middle ages of Christianity, began to look upon secular authority as an effluence from the fulness of their power, to be conferred at their will; and how, on the other hand, the numerous royal families should sink down into a nobility which possessed, indeed, the sole right to the kingly dignity, but at the same time, when elected by the people, required inauguration in order to their recognition by the priesthood, and were enjoined above all things to employ only Brāhmans us their counsellors."

In order to render the probability of this theory still more apparent, Professor Roth goes on to indicate the relations of the other castes to the Brahmans. The position which the three superior classes occupied in the developed Brahmanical system was one of gradation, as they differed only in the extent of their religious and civil prerogatives, the Kshattriya being in some respects less favoured than the Brāhman, and the Vaisva than the Kshattriva. With the Sudras, on the other hand, the case was quite different. They were not admitted to sacrifice, to the study of the Vedas, or to investiture with the sacred cord. From this Professor Roth concludes that the three highest castes stood in a closer connection with each other, whether of descent, or of culture, than any of them did to the fourth. The Indian body politic, moreover, was complete without the S'ūdras. The Brāhman and Kshattriya were the rulers, while the Vaisyas formed the mass of the people. The fact of the latter not being originally a separate community is confirmed by the employment assigned to them, as well as by their name Vaiśva, derived from the word Viś, a word which in the Veda designates the general community, especially considered as the possessor of the pure Aryan worship and culture, in contradistinction to all barbarian races. Out of this community the priesthood arose in the manner above described, while the Kshattriyas were the nobility, descended in the main from the kings of the earlier ages. The fourth caste, the Südras, consisted, according to Prof. Roth, of a race subdued by the Brahmanical conquerors, whether that race may have been a branch of the Arian stock which immigrated at an earlier period into India, or an autochthonous Indian tribe.

In his tract on the origin of Brāhmanism, from which I have already quoted (see above, pp. 11 and 14), Dr. Haug thus states his views on this question: "It has been of late asserted that the original parts of the Vedas do not know the system of caste. But this conclusion was prematurely arrived at without sufficiently weighing the evidence. It is true the caste system is not to be found in such a developed state; the duties enjoined to the several castes are not so clearly defined as in the Law Books and Puranas. But nevertheless the system is already known in the earlier parts of the Vedas, or rather presupposed. The barriers only were not so insurmountable as in later times." (p. 6). This view he supports by a reference to the Zend Avesta, in which he finds evidence of a division of the followers of Ahura Mazda into the three classes of Atharvas, Rathaesthas, and Vastrya fshuyans, which he regards as corresponding exactly to the Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, and Vaisyas of India. The Atharvas, or priests, in particular formed a class or even a caste; they had secrets which they were prohibited from divulging; they were the spiritual guides of their nation, and none but the son of a priest could become a priest—a rule which the Parsīs still maintain. From these facts, Dr. Haug deduces the conclusion that the nation of which both the Indo-Arians and the Perso-Arians originally formed a part had been divided into three classes even before the separation of the Indians from the Iranians; and he adds (p. 7): "From all we know, the real origin of caste appears to go back to a time anterior to the composition of the Vedic hymns, though its development into a regular system with insurmountable barriers can be referred only to the latest period of the Vedic times."

I shall furnish a short analysis of some other parts of Dr. Haug's interesting tract. He derives (p. 7) the word brahmana from brahman (neuter), which originally meant "a sacred song, prayer," as an effusion of devotional feeling. Brahma was the "sacred element" in the sacrifice, and signified "the soul of nature, the productive power." The Brahmanic sacrifices had production as their object, and embraced some rites which were intended to furnish the sacrificer with a new spiritual body wherewith he might ascend to heaven, and others calculated to provide him with cattle and offspring (p. 8). The symbol of this brahma, or productive power, which must always be present at the sacrifice, was a bunch of kuśa grass, generally called Veda (a word alternating with brahma), which, at the sacrifice, was passed from one priest to another, and given to the sacrificer and his wife. The corresponding symbol of twigs used by the Parsīs was called in Zend băresma, which Dr. Haug considers to have been originally the same as brahma (p. 9). As it was essential to the success of these sacrifices that every portion of the complicated ceremonial should be accurately performed, and as mistakes could not be avoided, it became necessary to obviate by an atonement (prāyaśchitti) the mischief which would otherwise have ensued; and the priest appointed to guard against or . expiate such mistakes, when committed by the other priests—the hotri, adhvaryu, and udgātri-was called, "from the most ancient times," the brahman (masculine), who was a functionary pre-eminently supplied with brahma (neuter) or sacred knowledge, and thereby connected "with the soul of nature, the cause of all growth, the last cause of all sacrificial rites" (p. 10). The office of brahman was not one to which mere birth gave a claim, but had to be attained by ability and study. The descendants of these brahman priests were the Brahmans, and the speculations of the most eminent brahman priests on divine things, and especially on sacrificial rites, are contained in the works called Brāhmanas (p. 12). Dr. Haug considers that no such a class as that of the brahman priests existed at the early period when the ancestors of the Hindus separated from those of the Parsis in consequence of religious differences. The few rites preserved by the Parsis as relics of the remotest antiquity closely resemble those of the Brāhmans. Dr. Haug finds that in the Homa ritual of the former (corresponding to the Soma ceremony of the latter) only two priests, called Zota and Raspi or Rathwi, are required, whom he recognises as corresponding to the Hotri and Adhvaryu of the latter. So long as the rites were simple, no brahman priest was wanted; but when they became complicated and multiform, the necessity for such a functionary arose. And it was only then that the sons of the brahmans, i.e. the Brahmans, could rise through the possession of sacred knowledge, derived from their fathers, to great power, and form themselves into a regular caste. The development of these ceremonies out of their primitive simplicity into the complexity and multiformity which they ultimately assumed must, Dr. Haug thinks, have been the work of many centuries. This transformation must have taken place in the region bordering on the Sarasvatī, where the expansion of the Brahmanical system, and the elevation of the Brahmans to full spiritual supremacy, is to be sought, before the Indo-Arians advanced southeastwards into Hindostan proper (p. 14). The ascendancy of the Brāhmans was not however attained without opposition on the part of the kings (p. 18). Dr. Haug concludes by relating the reception .

of Viśvāmitra into the order of Brāhmans, and by giving some account of the rishis and the several classes into which they were divided.

As the question is generally stated by Dr. Haug in pages 6 and 12 ff., the difference between him and other European scholars is one of age and not of principle, for neither party admits any distinction of race or congenital diversity between the three superior castes or classes.

CHAPTER IV.

EARLY CONTESTS BETWEEN THE BRAHMANS AND KSHATTRIYAS.

I proceed to give some legendary illustrations of the struggle which no doubt occurred in the early ages of Hindu history between the Brāhmans and the Kshattriyas, after the former had begun to constitute a fraternity exercising the sacerdotal profession, but before the respective provinces of the two classes had been accurately defined by custom, and when the members of each were ready to encroach on the prerogatives claimed as their own exclusive birthright by the other.

SECT. I.—Manu's Summary of refractory and submissive monarchs.

I shall begin with the following passage, which we find in the Institutes of Manu, vii. 38 ff., regarding the impious resistance, as the lawgiver considered it, of certain monarchs to the legitimate claims of the priests, and the dutiful behaviour of others.

38. Vriddhāms cha nityam seveta viprān veda-vidaḥ suchīn | vriddha-sevī hi satatam rakshobhir api pūjyate | 39. Tebhyo 'dhigachhed vina-yam vinītātmā 'pi nityasaḥ | vinītātmā hi nripatir na vinasyati karchichit | 40. Bahavo 'vinayād nashṭāḥ rājānaḥ sa-parichhadāḥ | vanasthāḥ api rājyāni vinayāt pratipedire | 41. Veno vinashṭo 'vinayād Nahushas chaiva pārthivaḥ | Sudāḥ Paijavanas o chaiva Sumukho Ninir eva cha | 42. Prithus tu vinayād rājyam prāptavān Manur eva cha | Kuveras cha dhanaisvaryyam brāhmanyam chaiva Gādhijaḥ |

"Let the king constantly reverence ancient Brāhmans skilled in the Vedas, and pure in conduct; for he who always respects the aged is honoured even by the Rākshāses. 39. Let him, even though humble-go In support of this reading, see M. Loiseleur Deslongchamps's and Sir G. C. Haughton's notes on the passage.

minded, be continually learning submissiveness from them: for a submissive monarch never perishes. 40. Through want of this character many kings have been destroyed with all their possessions; whilst by humility even hermits have obtained kingdoms. 41. Vena perished through want of submissiveness, and king Nahusha, and Sūdas the son of Pijavana, and Sumukha, and Nimi. 42. But through submissiveness Prithu and Manu attained kingly power, Kuvera the lordship of wealth, and the son of Gādhi (Viśvāmitra) Brāhmanhood." si

Vena is again referred to in Manu ix. 66 f.: Ayañ dvijair hi vidvadbhih paśudharmo nigarhitah | manushyānām api prokto Vene rājyam praśāsati | 67. Sa mahīm akhilām bhunjan rājarshi-pravarah purā | varnānām sankaram chakre kāmopahata-chetanah |

"This custom (of raising up seed to a deceased brother or kinsman by his widow) fit only for cattle, was declared to be (law) for men also, when Vena held sway. This eminent royal rishi, who in former times ruled over the whole earth, having his reason destroyed by lust, occasioned a confusion of castes."

The legendary history of nearly all the kings thus stigmatized or celebrated can be traced in the Purānas and other parts of Indian literature. I shall supply such particulars of the refractory monarchs as I can find.

It will be observed that Manu is spoken of as an ordinary prince; and that even Kuvera, the god of wealth, is said to have attained his dignity by the same species of merit as the other persons whom the writer eulogizes. I am not aware whether any legends exist to the same effect. Something of a contrary tendency is found with regard to the deity in question in the passage of the Mahābhārata, of which an extract is given above, in p. 140, note 249.

⁶¹ Kullūka remarks on this passage: Gādhi-putro Višvamitras' cha kshattriyah sañs tenaiva dehena brāhmanyam prāptavān | rājya-lābhāvasare brāhmanya-prāptir aprastutā 'yi vinayotkarshārtham uktā | īdrišo' yañ sāstrānushṭhāna-nishiddha-varjana-rūpa-vinayodayena kshattriya' pi durlaham brāhmanyam lebhe | "Višvāmitra, the son of Gādhi, being a Kshattriya, obtained Brāhmanhood in the same body (i.e. without being again born in another body). The attainment of Brahmanhood by one who at the time held kingly authority, although an unusual occurrence, is mentioned to show the excellence of submissiveness. Through that quality, as exhibited in the observance of scriptural injunctions, and in abstinence from things forbidden, he, being a Kshattriya, obtained Brahmanhood, so difficult to acquire."

I have not met with any story of Sumukha's contest with the Brāhmans. Some MSS. read Suratha instead of Sumukha.

The name of Sudās, the son of Pijavana, occurs in several parts of the Rig-veda. I shall return to him in relating the contest between , Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra. I begin with the story of Vena.

SECT. II.—Legend of Vena.

According to the Vishnu Purāṇa, i. 13, Vena was the son of Anga, and the descendant in the ninth generation of the first Manu, Svāyambhuva; the line of ancestors from the latter downwards being as follows: Uttānapāda, Dhruva, S'lishti, Ripu, Chākshusha, the sixth Manu called Chākshusha, Uru, Anga (see Wilson's Vishnu P. vol. i.). Vena thus belongs to a mythical age preceding by an enormous interval that of the descendants of Manu Vaivasvata mentioned in the preceding chapter of this volume; five Manvantaras, or periods of 308,571 years each, having intervened in the present Kalpa between the close of the Svāyambhuva, and the beginning of the existing, or Vaivasvata, Manvantara.

Vishnu Purāna, i. 13, 7: Parāśara uvācha | Sunīthā nāma yā kanyā Mrityoh prathama-jā 'bhavat | Angasya bhāryyā sa dattā tasyām Venas tv ajāyata | 8. Sa mātāmaha-doshena tena Mrityoh sutātmajah | nisargād iva Maitreya dushtah eva vyajāyata | 9. Abhishikto yadā rājye sa Venah paramarshibhih | ghoshayāmāsa sa tadā prithivyām prithivīpatih | "na yashtavyam na datavyam hotavyam na kadachana | bhokta yajnasya kas tv anyo hy aham yajna-patih sadā | 10. Tatas tam rishayah sarve sampūjya prithivīpatim | ūchuḥ sāmakalam samyan Maitreya samupasthitāḥ | rishayah üchuh | 11. "Bho bho rajan srinushva tvam yad vadamas tava prabho | rājya-dehopakāre yaḥ prajānām cha hitam param | 12. Dīrghasattrena deveśam sarva-yajneśvaram Harim | pūjayishyāmo bhadram te tatrāmsas te bhavishyati | 13. Yajnena yajna-purusho Vishnuh samprīnito vibhuh | asmābhir bhavatah kāmān sarvān eva pradāsyati | yajnair yajneśvaro yeshām rāshtre sampūjyate Harih | teshām sarvepsitāvāptim dadāti nripa bhūbhujām" | Venah uvācha | "mattah ko 'bhyadhiko 'nyo 'sti kaś chārādhyo mamāparaḥ | ko 'yam Harir iti khyāto yo vo yajneśvaro matah | Brahmā Janārdano Rudrah Indro Vāyur Yamo Ravih |

Hutabhug Varuno Dhātā Pūshā Bhūmir Niśākarah | ete chānue cha ve devāh śāpānugraha-kārinah | nripasya te śarīra-sthāh sarva-devamayo nripah | etaj jnātvā mayā ''jnaptam yad yathā kriyatām tathā | na "dātavyam na hotavyam na yashţavyam cha vo dvijāh | 14. Bharttuh śuśrūshanam dharmo yathā strīnām paro matah | mamāinā-pālanam dharmo bhavatām cha tathā dvijāh" | rishayah ūchuh | "dehy anujnām mahārāja mā dharmo yātu sankshayam | havishām parināmo 'yam yad etad akhilañ jagat | 15. Dharme cha sankshayañ yate kshīyate chakhilañ jagat" | Parāśarah uvācha | iti vijnāpyamāno 'pi sa Venah paramarshibhih | yadā dadāti nānujnām proktah proktah punah punah | tatas te munayah sarve kopāmarsha-samanvitāh | "hanyatam hanyatām pāpah" ity ūchus te parasparam | 16. "Yo yajna-purusham devam anādi-nidhanam prabhum | vinindaty adhamāchāro na sa yogyo bhuvaḥ patih" | ity uktvā mantra-pūtais te kuśair muni-ganāh nripam | nirjaghnur nihatam pūrvam bhagavan-nindanādinā | tatas cha munayo renum dadrišuh sarvato dvija | "kim etad" iti chāsannam paprachhus te janam tada | 17. Ākhyātam cha janais teshām "chaurībhūtair arājake | rāshţre tu lokair ārabdham para-svādānam āturaih | 18. Teshām udīrna-vegānām chaurānām muni-sattamāh | sumahān drisyate renuh para-vittāpahārinām" | tatah sammantrya te sarve munayas tasya bhūbhritah | mamanthur ūrum putrārtham anapatyasya yatnatah | mathyatas cha samuttasthau tasyorok purushak kila | dagdha-sthūnāpratīkāśah kharvāṭāsyo 'tihrasvakah | 19. Kim karomīti tān sarvān viprān āha sa chāturah | nishīdeti tam ūchus te nishādas tena so'bhavat | 20. Tatas tat-sambhavāh jātāh Vindhya-śaila-nivāsinah | nishādāh muni-śārdūla pāpa-karmopalakshanāh | 21. Tena dvārena nishkrāntam tat pāpam tasya bhūpateh | nishādās te tathā jātāh Vena-kalmasha-sambhavāh | 22. Tato 'sya dakshinam hastam mamanthus te tadā dvijāh | mathyamāne cha tatrābhūt Prithur Vainyah pratāpavān | dīpyamānah sva-vapushā sākshād Agnir ivejjvalan | 23. Ādyam ājagavam nāma khāt papāta tato dhanuḥ | śarāś cha divyāḥ nabhasaḥ kavacham cha papāta ha | tasmin jāte tu bhūtāni samprahrishtāni sarvaśah | satputrena cha jātena Veno 'pi' tridivam yayau | pun-nāmno narakāt trātah sa tena sumahātmanā |

"7. The maiden named Sunīthā, who was the first-born of Mṛityu (Death)⁸² was given as wife to Anga; and of her Vena was born.

8. This son of Mṛityu's daughter, infected with the taint of his maternal grandfather, was born corrupt, as if by nature. 9. When Vena was inaugurated as king by the eminent rishis, he caused this proclamation to be made on the earth: 'Men must not sacrifice, or give gifts, or present oblations. Who else but myself is the enjoyer of sacrifices? I am for ever the lord of offerings.' 10. Then all the rishis approaching the king with respectful salutations, said to him in a gentle and conciliatory tone: 11. 'Hear, o king, what we have to say: 12. We shall worship Hari, the monarch of the gods, and the lord of all sacrifices, with a Dirghasattra (prolonged sacrifice), from which the highest benefits will accrue to your kingdom, your person, and your subjects. May blessings rest upon you! You shall have a share in the ceremony. 13. Vishnu the lord, the sacrificial Male, being propitiated by us with this rite, will grant all the objects of your desire. Hari, the lord of cacrifices, bestows on those kings in whose country he is honoured with oblations, everything that they wish.' Vena replied: 'What other being is superior to me? who else but I should be adored? who is this person called Hari, whom you regard as the lord of sacrifice? Brahmā, Janārdana, Rudra, Indra, Vāyu, Yama, Ravi (the Sun), Agni, Varuna, Dhātri, Pūshan, Earth, the Moon, these and the other gods who curse and bless are all present in a king's person: for he is composed of all the gods.88 Knowing this, ye must

⁸² See above, p. 124, and note 230.

88 The orthodox doctrine, as stated by Manu, vii. 3 ff., coincides very nearly with Vena's estimate of himself, although the legislator does not deduce from it the same conclusions: 3. Rakshārtham asya sarvasya rājānam asrijat prabhuh | 4. Indrānilayamārkāṇām Agneś cha Varuṇasya cha | Chandra-Vitteśayoś chaiva mā trāḥ nirhṛitya śāśvatīh | 5. Yasmād eshām surendrāṇām mātrābhyo nirmito nripaḥ | tasmād abhibhavaty esha sarva-bhūtāni tejasā | 6. Tapaty āditya-vach chaisha chakshūmshi cha manāmsi cha | na chainam bhuvi saknoti kaschid apy abhivīkshitum | 7. So 'gnir bhavati Vāyus' cha so 'rkaḥ Somaḥ sa Dharmarāṭ | sa Kuveraḥ sa Varuṇaḥ sa Mahendrah prabhavatah | 8. Balo 'pi navamantavyo " manushyah" iti bhumipah | mahatī devatā hy eshā nara-rūpena tishthati | "3. The lord created the king for the preservation of this entire world, (4) extracting the eternal essential particles of Indra, Vāyu, Yama, Sūrya, Agni, Varuna, Chandra, and Kuvera. 5. Inasmuch as the king is formed of the particles of all these gods, he surpasses all beings in brilliancy. 6. Like the Sun, he distresses both men's eyes and minds; and no one on earth can ever gaze upon him. 7. He is Agni, Vayu, Surya, Soma, Yama, Kuvera, Varuna, and Indra, in majesty. 8. Even when a child a king is not to be despised under the idea that he is a mere man; for he is a great deity in human form."

In another passage, ix. 303, this is qualified by saying that the king should imitate the functions of the different gods: Indrasyārhasya Vāyoścha Yamasya Varunasya cha | Chandrasyāgneḥ Pṛithivyāś cha tejo vṛittam nripas' charet | This expanded in the next verses.

act in conformity with my commands. Brāhmans, ye must neither give gifts, nor present oblations nor sacrifices. 14. As obedience to their husbands is esteemed the highest duty of women, so is the observance of my orders incumbent upon you.' The rishis answered: 'Give permission, great king: let not religion perish: this whole world is but a modified form of oblations. 15. When religion perishes the whole world is destroyed with it.' When Vena, although thus admonished and repeatedly addressed by the eminent rishis, did not give his permission, then all the munis, filled with wrath and indignation, cried out to one another, 'Slay, slay the sinner. 16. This man of degraded life, who blasphemes the sacrificial Male, the god, the lord without beginning or end, is not fit to be lord of the earth.' So saying the munis smote with blades of kuśa grass consecrated by texts this king who had been already smitten by his blasphemy of the divine Being and his other offences. The munis afterwards beheld dust all round, and asked the people who were standing near what that was. 17. They were informed: 'In this country which has no king, the people, being distressed, have become robbers, and have begun to seize the property of others. 18. It is from these robbers rushing impetuously, and plundering other men's goods, that this great dust is seen? Then all the munis, consulting together, rubbed with force the thigh of the king, who was childless, in order to produce a son. From his thigh when rubbed there was produced a man like a charred log, with flat face, and extremely short. 19. 'What shall I do?' cried the man, in distress, to the Brāhmans. They said to him, 'Sit down' (nishīda); and from this he became a Nishāda. 20. From him sprang the Nishādas dwelling in the Vindhya mountains, distinguished by their wicked deeds. 21. By this means the sin of the king departed out of him; and so were the Nishādas produced, the offspring of the wickedness of Vena. 22. The Brahmans then rubbed his right hand; and from it, when rubbed, sprang the majestic Prithu, Vena's son, resplendent in body, glowing like the manifested Agni. 23. Then the primeval bow called Ajagava fell from the sky, with celestial arrows. and a coat of mail. At Prithu's birth all creatures rejoiced. And through the birth of this virtuous son, Vena, delivered from the hell called Put 84 by this eminent person, ascended to heaven."

⁸⁴ This alludes to the fanciful derivation of puttra, "son," from put + tra.

The Harivamsa (sect. 5) relates the same story thus, with little variation from the Vishnu Purana:

Vaiśampāyanah uvācha | Āsīd dharmasya goptā vai pūrvam Atri-samah prabhuh | Atri-vaméa-samutpannas tv Ango nāma prajāpatih | tasya putro 'bharad Veno nātyartham dharma-kovidah | jāto Mrityu-sutāyām vai Sunīthāyām prajāpatiķ | sa mātāmaha-doshena tena kūlātmajātmajah | sva-dharmān prishthatah kritvā kāmāl lobheshv avarttata | maryādām sthāpayāmāsa dharmāpetām sa pārthivah | veda-dharmān atikramya so 'dharma-nirato 'bhavat | nih-svādhyāya-vashatkārās tasmin rājani śāsati | prāvarttan na papuh somam hutam yajneshu devatāh | " na yashţavyam na hotavyam" iti tasya prajapateh | āsīt pratijnā krūreyam vināśe samupasthite | aham ijyaś cha yashtā cha yajnaś cheti kurūdvaha | "mayi yajnāh vidhātavyāh mayi hotavyam" ity api | tam atikrāntamaryādam ādadānam asāmpratam | āchur maharshayah sarve Marīchipramukhās tadā | "vayam dīkshām pravekshyāmah samvatsara-ganān bahūn | adharmam kuru mā Vena naisha dharmah sanātanah | anvaye 'treh prasūtas tvam prajāpatir asamsayam | 'prajās cha pālayishye 'ham' iti te samayah kritah'' | tāms tathā bruvatah sarvān maharshīn abravīt tadā | Venah prahasya durbuddhir imam artham anartha-vit | Venah uvācha \ "srashtā dharmasya kaś chānyah śrotavyam kasya vā mayā | śruta-vīrya-tapah-satyair mayā vā kah samo bhuvi | prabhavam sarva-bhūtānām dharmāṇām cha viśeshataḥ | sammūḍhāḥ na vidur nūnam bhavanto mām achetasah | ichhan daheyam prithivīm plāvayeyam jalais tathā | dyām bhuvam chaiva rundheyam nātra kāryā vichāranā" | yadā na śakyate mohād avalepāch cha pārthivah | anunetum tadā Venas tatah kruddhāh maharshayah ; nigrihya tam mahātmāno visphurantam mahābalam | tato 'sya savyam ürum te mamanthur jāta-manyavaḥ | tasmims tu mathyamāne vai rājnah ūrau vijajnivān | hrasvo 'timātrah purushah krishnas chāpi babhūva ha | sa bhītah prānjalir bhūtvā sthitavān Janamejaya | tam Atrir vihvalam drishtva nishīdety abravīt tadā | nishādavamsa-karttu 'sau babhuva vadatum vara | dhīvarun asrijach chūpi Venakalmasha-sambhavān | ye chānye Vindhya-nilayās Tukhārās Tumburās tathā | adharma-ruchayas tāta viddhi tān Vena-sambhavān | tatah punar mahātmānah pānim Venasya dakshinam | aranīm iva samrabdhāh mamanthur jāta-manyavah | Prithus tasmāt samuttasthau karāj įvalana-sannibhah | dīpyamanah sva-vapushā sākshād Agnir iva jvalan |

"There was formerly a Prajāpati (lord of creatures), a protector of righteousness, called Anga, of the race of Atri, and resembling him in power. His son was the Prajapati Vena, who was but indifferently skilled in duty, and was born of Sunīthā, the daughter of Mrityu. , of the daughter of Kala (Death), owing to the taint derived from his maternal grandfather, threw his duties behind his back, and lived in covetousness under the influence of desire. This king established an irreligious system of conduct: transgressing the ordinances of the Veda. he was devoted to lawlessness. In his reign men lived without study of the sacred books and without the vashatkara, and the gods had no Soma-libations to drink at sacrifices. 'No sacrifice or oblation shall be offered,'-such was the ruthless determination of that Prajapati, as the time of his destruction approached. 'I,' he declared, 'am the object, and the performer of sacrifice, and the sacrifice itself: it is to me that sacrifice should be presented, and oblations offered.' This transgressor of the rules of duty, who arrogated to himself what was not his due, was then addressed by all the great rishis, headed by Marīchi: 'We are about to consecrate ourselves for a ceremony which shall last for many years: practise not unrighteousness, o Vena: this is not the eternal rule of duty. Thou art in very deed a Prajapati of Atri's race, and thou hast engaged to protect thy subjects.' The foolish Vena, ignorant of what was right, laughingly answered those great rishis who had so addressed him: 'Who but myself is the ordainer of duty? or whom ought I to obey? Who on earth equals me in sacred knowledge, in prowess, in austere fervour, in truth? Ye who are deluded and senseless know not that I am the source of all beings and duties. Hesitate not to believe that I, if I willed, could burn up the earth, or deluge it with water, or close up heaven and earth.' When owing to his delusion and arrogance Vena could not be governed, then the mighty rishis becoming incensed, seized the vigorous and struggling king, and rubbed his left thigh. From this thigh, so rubbed, was produced a black man, very short in stature, who, being alarmed, stood with joined hands. Seeing that he was agitated, Atri said to him 'Sit down' (nishīda). He became the founder of the race of the Nishādas, and also progenitor of the Dhīvaras (fishermen), who sprang from the corruption of Vena. So too were produced from him the other inhabitants of the Vindhya range, the Tukhāras, and Tumburas, who are prone to lawlessness. Then the mighty sages, excited and incensed, again rubbed the right hand of Vena, as men do the arani wood, and from it arose Prithu, resplendent in body, glowing like the manifested Agni."

Although the Harivamsa declares Vena to be a descendant of Atri, yet as the Prajāpati Atri is said in a previous section to have adopted. Uttānapāda, Vena's ancestor, for his son (Hariv. sect. 2, verse 60, Uttānapādam jagrāha putram Atriķ prajāpatiķ) there is no contradiction between the genealogy given here and in the Vishnu Purāṇa.

The story of Vena is told in the same way, but more briefly, in the Mahābhārata, Sāntip. sect. 59. After narrating the birth of Prithu, the writer proceeds, verse 2221:

Tatas tu prānjalir Vainyo maharshīms tān uvācha ha | "susūkshmā me samutpannā buddhir dharmārtha-darśinī | anayā kim mayā kāryyañi tad me tattvena samsata | yad mām bhavanto vakshyanti kāryam arthasamanvitam | tad aham vai karishyāmi nātra kāryā vichāranā" | tam ūchus tattra devās te te chaiva paramarshayaḥ | "niyato yattra dharmo vai tvam aśankah samāchara | priyāpriye parityajya samah sarveshu jantushu | kāma-krodhau cha lobham cha mānam chotsrijya dūratah | yaś cha dharmāt parichalel loke kaśchana mānavah | nigrāhyās te svæ-bāhubhyām śaśvad dharmam avekshatā | pratijnām chādhirohasva manasā karmanā girā | 'pālayishyāmy aham bhaumam brahma' ity eva chāsakrit | adandyāḥ me dvijāś cheti pratijānīhi he vibho | lokam cha sankarāt kṛitsnam trātāsmīti parantapa" | Vainyas tatas tān uvācha devān rishi-purogamān | "brāhmanāh me mahābhāgāh namasyāh purusharshabhāh" | "evam astv" iti Vainyas tu tair ukto brahmavādibhih | purodhāś chābhavat tasya Sukro brahmamayo nidhih | mantrino Bālakhilyāś cha Sārasvatyo ganas tathā | maharshir bhagavān Gargas tasya sāmvatsaro 'bhavat |

"The son of Vena (Prithu) then, with joined hands, addressed the great rishis: 'A very slender understanding for perceiving the principles of duty has been given to me by nature: tell me truly how I must employ it. Doubt not that I shall perform whatever you shall declare to me as my duty, and its object.' Then those gods and great rishis said to him: 'Whatever duty is enjoined perform it without hesitation, disregarding what thou mayest like or dislike, looking on all creatures with an equal eye, putting far from thee lust, anger, cupidity, and pride. Restrain by the strength of thine arm all those men who swerve from righteousness, having a constant regard to duty. And in thought, act, and word take upon thyself, and continually renew, the engagement to protect the terrestrial Brahman (Veda, or Brahmans?) And promise that thou wilt exempt the Brahmans from punishment, and preserve society from the confusion of castes.' The son of Vena then replied to the gods, headed by the rishis: 'The great Brahmans, the chief of men, shall be reverenced by me.' 'So be it,' rejoined those declarers of the Veda. Sukra, the depository of divine knowledge, became his purohita; the Balakhilyas and Sarasvatyas his ministers; and the venerable Garga, the great rishi, his astrologer."

The character and conduct of Prithu, as pourtrayed in the last passage presents a strong, and when regarded from a Brahmanical point of view, an edifying, contrast to the contempt of priestly authority and disregard of Vedic observances which his predecessor had shewn.

In legends like that of Vena we see, I think, a reflection of the questions which were agitating the religious world of India at the period when the Purāṇas in which they appear were compiled, viz., those which were then at issue between the adherents of the Veda, and the various classes of their opponents, Bauddha, Jaina, Chārvāka, etc. These stories were no doubt written with a purpose. They were intended to deter the monarchs contemporary with the authors from tampering with those heresies which had gained, or were gaining, circulation and popularity, by the example of the punishment which, it was pretended, had overtaken the princes who had dared to deviate from orthodoxy in earlier times. Compare the account given of the rise of heretical doctrines in the Vishnu Purāṇa (pp. 209 ff. vol. jii. of Dr. Hall's edition of Professor Wilson's translation), which the writer no doubt intended to have something more than a merely historical interest.

The legend of Vena is told at greater length, but with no material variation in substance, in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, iv. sections 13-15. See also Professor Wilson's note in his Vishnu Purāṇa, vol. i. in loco.

In ascribing to Vena an irreligious character and a contempt for the priests, the Purāṇas contradict a verse in the Rig-veda x. 93, 14, in which (unless we suppose a different individual to be there meant) Vena is celebrated along with Duḥsīma, Prithavāna, and Rāma for his conspicuous liberality to the author of the hymn (pra tad Duḥsīme Prithavāne Vene pra Rāme vocham asure maghavatsu | ye yuktvāya pancha śatā asmayu pathā viśrāvi eshām). The two other passages, viii. 9, 10, and x. 148, 5, in which he is alluded to as the father of Prithu have been quoted above, p. 268.

I observe that a Vena, called Bhārgava (or a descendant of Bhṛigu), is mentioned in the list of traditional authors of hymns, given at the, end of Professor Aufrecht's Rig-veda, vol. ii., as the rishi of R.V. ix. 85, and x. 123.

Sect. III.—Legend of Purūravas.

Purūravas has been already alluded to (in pp. 158, 221, 226, 268, and 279 f.) as the son of Ida (or Idā), and the grandson of Manu Vaivasvata; as the author of the triple division of the sacred fire; and as a royal rishi. We have also seen (p. 172) that in Rig-veda i. 31, 4, he is referred to as sukrite, a "beneficent," or "pious," prince. Rig-veda x. 95 is considered to contain a dialogue between him and the Apsaras Urvašī (see above, p. 226). In verse 7 of that hymn the gods are alluded to as having strengthened Purūravas for a great conflict for the slaughter of the Dasyus (mahe yat tvā Purūravo ranāya avarddhayan dasyu-hatyāya devāh); and in the 18th verse he is thus addressed by his patronymic: Iti tvā devāh ime āhur Aila yathā īm etad bhavasi mrityubandhuh | prajā te devān havishā yajāti svarge u tvam api mādayāse | "Thus say these gods to thee, o son of Ila, that thou art indeed nothing more than a kinsman of death: (yet) let thy offspring worship the gods with an oblation, and thou also shalt rejoice in heaven."

It thus appears that in the Vedic hymns and elsewhere Purūravas is regarded as a pious prince, and Manu does not include him in his list of those who resisted the Brāhmans. But the M. Bh., Ādiparvan 3143 speaks of him as follows:

Purūravās tato vidvān Ilāyām samapadyata | sā vai tasyābhavad mātā pitā chaiveti naḥ śrutam | trayodaśa samudrasya dvīpān aśnan Purūravāḥ | amānushair vṛitaḥ sarvair mānushaḥ san mahāyaśāḥ | vipraiḥ sa vigraham chakre vīryyonmattaḥ Purūravāḥ | jahāra cha sa viprānām ratnāny utkrośatām api | Sanatkumāras tam rājan Brahma-lokād upetya ha | anudarśam tataś chakre pratyagrihṇād na chāpy asau | tato maharshibhiḥ kruddhaiḥ sadyaḥ śapto vyanaśyata | lobhānvito bala-madād nashṭa-sanjno narādhipaḥ | sa hi gandharva-loka-sthān Ūrvaśyā sahito virāṭ | ānināya kriyārthe 'gnīn yathāvad vihitāms tridhā |

"Subsequently the wise Purūravas was born of Ilā, who, as we have heard, was both his father and his mother. Ruling over thirteen islands of the ocean, and surrounded by beings who were all superhuman, himself a man of great renown, Purūravas, intoxicated by his prowess, engaged in a conflict with the Brāhmans, and robbed them of their jewels, although they loudly remonstrated. Sanatkumāra came from Brahmā's heaven, and addressed to him an admonition, which, however, he did not regard. Being then straightway cursed by the incensed rishis, he perished, this covetous monarch, who, through pride of power, had lost his understanding. This glorious being (virāt), accompanied by Urvašī, brought down for the performance of sacred rites the fires which existed in the heaven of the Gandharvas, properly distributed into three." (See Wilson's Vishnu Purāṇa, 4to. ed. pp. 350 and 394 ff. with note p. 397.)

I cite from the Harivamsa another passage regarding Pururavas, although no distinct mention is made in it of his contest with the Brahmans:

Harivamáa 8811. Pitā Budhasyottama-vīrya-karmā Purūravāḥ yasya suto nri-devaḥ | prāṇāgnir īḍyo 'gnim ajījanad yo nashṭam śamī-garbha-bhavam bhavātmā | tathaiva paśchāch chakame mahātmā purorvaśīm apsarasām varishṭhām | pītaḥ purā yo 'mrita-sarva-deho muni-pravīrair vara-gātri-ghoraiḥ | nripaḥ kuśāgraiḥ punar eva yaś cha dhīmān krito 'gnir divi pūjyate cha |

"He (the Moon) was the father of Budha (Mercury), whose son was Purūravas, a god among men, of distinguished heroic deeds, the vital fire, worthy of adoration, the generator, who begot the lost fire which sprang from the heart of the samī-wood, the great personage, who, placed to the west, loved Urvasī, the paragon of Apsarases, who was placed to the east. This king with his entire immortal body was formerly swallowed up with the points of Kusa grass by the munis terrible with their resplendent forms; but was again made wise, and is worshipped in heaven as fire."

SECT. IV .- Story of Nahusha.

The legend of Nahusha, ⁸⁵ grandson of Purūravas (see above, p. 226), ⁸⁵ The name of Nahush occurs in the Rig-veda as that of the progenitor of a race. the second prince described by Manu as having come into hostile collision with the Brāhmans is narrated with more or less detail in different parts of the Mahābhārata, as well as in the Purāṇas. The following passage is from the former work, Ādip. 3151:

Āyusho Nahushaḥ putro dhīmān satya-parākramaḥ | rājyam śaśāsa sumahad dharmeṇa prithicīpate | pitrīn devān rishīn viprān gandharvo-raga-rākshasān | Nahushaḥ pālayāmāsa brahma kshattram atho viśaḥ | sa hatvā dasyu-sanghātān rishīn karam adāpayat | paśuvach chaiva tān prishṭhe vāhayāmāsa vīryyavān | kārayāmāsa chendratvam abhibhūya divaukasaḥ | tejasā tapasā chaiva vikrameṇaujasā tathā |

"Nahusha the son of Āyus, wise, and of genuine prowess, ruled with justice a mighty empire. He protected the pitris, gods, rishis, wise men, gandharvas, serpents (uraga), and rākshasas, as well as Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, and Vaisyas. This energetic prince, after slaying the hosts of the Dasyus, compelled the rishis to pay tribute, and made them carry him like beasts upon their backs. After subduing the celestials he conquered for himself the rank of Indra, through his vigour, austere fervour, valour and fire."

The story is thus introduced in another part of the same work, the Vanaparvan, section 180. Yudhishthira found his brother Bhīmasena seized by a serpent in a forest (see above, p. 133). This serpent, it appears, was no other than king Nahusha, who on being questioned thus relates his own history:

Nahusho nāma rājā 'ham āsam pūrvas tavānagha | prathitaḥ panchamaḥ Somād Āyoḥ putro narādhipa | kratubhis tapasā chaiva svādhyāyena damena cha | trailokyaiśvaryam avyagram prāpto 'ham vikrameṇa cha | tad aiśvaryyam samāsādya darpo mām agamat tadā | sahasram hi dvijātīnām uvāha śivikām mama | aiśvaryya-mada-matto 'ham avamanya tato dvijān | imām Agastyena daśām ānītaḥ prīthivīpate | . . . aham hi divi divyena vimānena charan purā | abhimānena mattaḥ san kanchid nānyam achintayam | brahmarshi-deva-gandharva-yaksha-rākshasa-pannagāḥ | karān mama prayachhanti sarve trailokya-vāsinaḥ | chakshushā yam prapaśyāmi prāṇinam prīthivīpate | tasya tejo harāmy āśu tad hi drishter balam mama | maharshīṇām sahasram hi uvāha śivikām mama |

See above, p. 165, note 7, and pp. 179 f. Nahusha Mānava is the traditional rishi of Rig-veda ix. 101, verses 7-9, and Yayāti Nāhusha of verses 4-6 of the same hymn. See list of rishis in Professor Aufrecht's Rig-veda ii. 464 ff.

sa mām apanayo rājan bhramśayāmāsa vai śriyah | tatra hy Agastyah pādena vahan sprishto mayā munih | Agastyena tato'smy ukto dhvam̃sa sarpeti vai rushā | tatas tasmād vimānāgryāt prachyutaś chyuta-lakshanah | prapatan bubudhe''tmānam vyālībhūtam adhomukham | ayācham tam aham vipram "śūpasyānto bhaved" iti | "pramādāt sampramūḍhasya bhagavan kshantum arhasi" | tatah sa mām uvāchedam prapatantam kripānvitah | "Yudhishthiro dharma-rājah śūpāt tvām mochayishyati" | . . . ity uktvā "jagaram deham muktvā na Nahusho nripah | divyam vapuh samāsthāya gatas tridivam eva cha |

"I was a king called Nahusha, more ancient than thou, known as the son of Ayus, and fifth in descent from Soma. By my sacrifices, austere fervour, sacred study, self-restraint, and valour, I acquired the undisturbed sovereignty of the three worlds. When I had attained that dominion, pride took possession of my soul: a thousand Brāhmans bore my vehicle. Becoming intoxicated by the conceit of my lordly power, and contemning the Brāhmans, I was reduced to this condition by Agastya." The serpent then promises to let Bhīmasena go, if Yudhishthira will answer certain questions (above referred to in p. 133 ff.). Yudhishthira afterwards enquires how delusion had happened to take possession of so wise a person as their conversation shewed Nahusha to be. The latter replies that he had been perverted by the pride of power, and proceeds: "Formerly, as I moved through the sky on a celestial car, intoxicated with self-conceit, I regarded no one but myself. All the inhabitants of the three worlds, brahmanical rishis, gods, gandharvas, yakshas, rākshasas, pannagas, paid me tribute. Such was the power of my gaze that on what creature soever I fixed my eyes, I straightway robbed him of his energy. A thousand of the great sages bore my vehicle. That misconduct it was, o king, which hurled me from my high estate. For I then touched with my foot the muni Agastya who was carrying me. Agastya in his wrath cried out to me 'Fall, thou serpent.' Hurled therefore from that magnificent car, and fallen from my prosperity, as I descended headlong, I felt that I had become a serpent. I entreated the Brāhman (Agastya), 'Let there be a termination of the curse: thou, o reverend rishi, shouldest forgive one who has been deluded through his inconsideration.' He then compassionately replied to me as I fell, 'Yudhishthira, the king of righteousness, will free thee from the curse." And at the close of the conversation between Yudhishthira and the serpent, we are told that "King Nahusha, throwing of his huge reptile form, became clothed in a celestial body, and ascended to heaven."

The same story is related in greater detail in the Udyogaparvan, sections 10-16, as follows:

After his slaughter of the demon Vrittra, Indra became alarmed at the idea of having taken the life of a Brāhman (for Vrittra was regarded as such), and hid himself in the waters. In consequence of the disappearance of the king of the gods, all affairs, celestial as well as terrestrial, fell into confusion. The rishis and gods then applied to Nahusha to be their king. After at first excusing himself on the plea of want of power, Nahusha at length, in compliance with their solicitations, accepted the high function. Up to the period of his elevation he had led a virtuous life, but he now became addicted to amusement and sensual pleasure; and even aspired to the possession of Indrana, Indra's wife, whom he had happened to see. The queen resorted to the Angiras Vrihaspati, the preceptor of the gods, who engaged to protect her. Nahusha was greatly incensed on hearing of this interference; but the gods endeavoured to pacify him, and pointed out the immorality of appropriating another person's wife. Nahusha, however, would listen to no remonstrance, and insisted that in his adulterous designs he was no worse than Indra himself: 373. Ahalyā dharshitā pūrvam rishi-patnī yaśasvinī | jīvato bharttur Indrena sa vah kim na nivāritah | 374. Bahūni cha nriśamsāni kritānīndrena vai purā | vaidharmyany upadaś chaiva sa vah kim na nivaritah | "373. The renowned Ahalyā, a rishi's wife, was formerly corrupted by Indra in her husband's lifetime (see p. 121 f.): Why was he not prevented by you? 374. And many barbarous acts, and unrighteous deeds, and frauds, were perpetrated of old by Indra: Why was he not prevented by you?" The gods, urged by Nahusha, then went to bring Indrani; but Vrihaspati would not give her up. At his recommendation, however, she solicited Nahusha for some delay, till she should ascertain what had become of her husband. This request was granted. The gods next applied to Vishnu on behalf of Indra; and Vishnu promised that if Indra would sacrifice to him, he should be purged from his guilt, and recover his dominion, while Nahusha would be destroyed. Indra sacrified accordingly; and the result is thus told: 419. Vibhajya brahma-hatyām tu vriksheshu cha nadīshu cha | parvateshu prithivyām cha strīshu chaiva Yudhishthira | sa vibhajya cha bhūteshu visrijya cha sureśvarah | vijvaro dhuta-pāpmā cha Vāsavo 'bhavad ātmavān | "Having divided the guilt of brahmanicide among trees, rivers, mountains, the earth, women, and the elements, Vāsava (Indra), lord of the gods, became freed from suffering and sin, and self-governed." Nahusha was by this means shaken from his place. But (unless this is said by way of prolepsis, or there is some confusion in the narrative) he must have speedily regained his position, as we are told that Indra was again ruined, and became invisible. Indran now went in search of her husband; and by the help of Upasruti (the goddess of night and revealer of secrets) discovered him existing in a very subtile form in the stem of a lotus growing in a lake situated in a continent within an ocean north of the Himālaya. She made known to him the wicked intentions of Nahusha, and entreated him to exert his power, rescue her from danger, and resume his dominion. Indra declined any immediate interposition on the plea of Nahusha's superior strength; but suggested to his wife a device by which the usurper might be hurled from his position. She was recommended to say to Nahusha that "if he would visit her on a celestial vehicle borne by rishis, she would with pleasure submit herself to him" (449. Rishi-yanena divyena mam upaihi jagatpate | evam tava vase prītā bhavishyāmīti tam vada). The queen of the gods accordingly went to Nahusha, by whom she was graciously received, and made this proposal: 457. Ichhāmy aham athāpūrvam vāhanam te surādhipa | yad na Vishnor na Rudrasya nāsurānām na răkshāsām | vahantu tvām mahābhāgāh rishayah sangatāh vibho | sarve śivikayā rājann etad hi mama rochate | "I desire for thee, king of the gods, a vehicle hitherto unknown, such as neither Vishnu, nor Rudra, nor the asuras, nor the rakshases employ. Let the eminent rishis, all united, bear thee, lord, in a car: this idea pleases me." Nahusha receives favourably this appeal to his vanity, and in the course of his reply thus gives utterance to his self-congratulation: 463. Na hy alpa-vīryo bhavati yo vāhān kurute munīn | aham tapasvī balavān bhūta-bhavya-bhavat-prabhuḥ | mayi kruddhe jagad na syād mayi sarvam pratishthitam | tasmāt te vachanam devi karishyāmi na samsayah | saptarshayo mām vakshyanti sarve brahmarshayas tathā | paśya māhātmyam asmākam riddhim cha varavarnini | 468. Vimāne yojayitvā sa rishīn niyamam āsthitān | abrahmanyo

balopeto matto mada-balena cha | kāma-vrittah sa dushţūtmū vāhayūmūsa tān rishīn | "He is a personage of no mean prowess who makes the munis his bearers. I am a fervid devotee of great might, lord of the past, the future, and the present. If I were angry the world would no longer stand; on me everything depends. . . . Wherefore, o goddess, I shall, without doubt, carry out what you propose. The seven rishis, and all the brāhman-rishis, shall carry me. beautiful goddess, my majesty and my prosperity." The narrative goes on: "Accordingly this wicked being, irreligious, violent, intoxicated by the force of conceit, and arbitrary in his conduct, attached to his car the rishis, who submitted to his commands, and compelled them to bear him." Indranī then again resorts to Vrihaspati, who assures her that vengeance will soon overtake Nahusha for his presumption; and promises that he will himself perform a sacrifice with a view to the destruction of the oppressor, and the discovery of Indra's lurking place. Agni is then sent to discover and bring Indra to Vrihaspati; and the latter, on Indra's arrival, informs him of all that had occured during his absence. While Indra, with Kuvera, Yama, Soma, and Varuna, was devising means for the destruction of Nahusha, the sage Agastva came up, congratulated Indra on the fall of his rival, and proceeded to relate how it had occurred: 527. Sramarttascha vahantas tam Nahusham pāpakārinam | devarshayo mahābhāgas tathā brahmarshayo 'malāḥ | paprachhur Nahusham devam samsayam jayatām vara | ye ime brāhmaṇāḥ proktāḥ mantrāḥ vai prokshaṇe gavām | ete pramāṇam bhavatah utāho neti Vāsava | Nahusho neti tān āha tamasā mūdha-chetanah | rishayah ūchuh | adharme sampravrittas tvam dharmam na pratipadyase | pramānam etad asmākam pūrvam proktam maharshibhih | Agastyah uvācha | Tato vivadamānah sa munibhih saha Vāsava | atha mām asprišad mūrdhni pādenādharma-yojitah | tenābhūd hata-tejāś cha nihśrīkaś cha mahīpatih | tatas tam sahasā vignam avocham bhaya-pīḍitam | "yasmāt pūrvaih kritam brahma brahmarshibhir anushthitam | adushtam dūshayasi vai yach cha mūrdhny asprišah padā | yach chāpi tvam rishīn mūdha brahma-kalpān durāsadān \ vāhān kritvā vāhayasi tena svargād hata-prabhah | dhvamsa pāpa paribhrashtah kshīna-punyo mahītalam | daśa-varsha-sahasrāni sarpa-rūpa-dharo mahān | vicharishyasi pūrneshu punah svargam avāpsyasi" | evam bhrashţo durātmā sa deva-rājyād arindama | dishtyā varddhāmahe śakra hato brāhmana-kan-

ţakah | tripishţapam prapadyasva pāhi lokān śachīpate | jetendriyo jitāmitrah stuyamano maharshibhih | "Wearied with carrying the sinner Nahusha, the eminent divine-rishis, and the spotless brāhman-rishis, asked that divine personage Nahusha [to solve] a difficulty: 'Dost thou, o Vāsava, most excellent of conquerors, regard as authoritative or not those Brahmana texts which are recited at the immolation of kine?' 'No,' replied Nahusha, whose understanding was enveloped in darkness. The rishis rejoined: 'Engaged in unrighteousness, thou attainest not unto righteousness: these texts, which were formerly uttered by great rishis, are regarded by us as authoritative.' Then (proceeds Agastya) disputing with the munis, Nahusha, impelled by unrighteousness, touched me on the head with his foot. In consequence of this the king's glory was smitten and his prosperity departed. When he had instantly become agitated and oppressed with fear, I said to him, 'Since thou, o fool, contemnest that sacred text, always held in honour, which has been composed by former sages, and employed by brahmanrishis, and hast touched my head with thy foot, and employest the Brahmā-like and irresistible rishis as bearers to carry thee,—therefore, shorn of thy lustre, and all thy merit exhausted, sink down, sinner, degraded from heaven to earth. For ten thousand years thou shalt crawl in the form of a huge serpent. When that period is completed, thou shalt again ascend to heaven.' So fell that wicked wretch from the sovereignty of the gods. Happily, o Indra, we shall now prosper, for the enemy of the Brahmans has been smitten. Take possession of the three worlds, and protect their inhabitants, o husband of Sachī (Indrana), subduing thy senses, overcoming thine enemies, and celebrated by the great rishis." 86

Indra, as we have seen above, was noted for his dissolute character. The epithet "subduing thy senses," assigned to him in the last sentence by Agastya, is at variance with this indifferent reputation. Is it to be regarded as a piece of flattery, or as a delicate hint that the god would do well to practise a purer morality in future?

This legend appears, like some others, to have been a favourite with the compilers of the Mahābhārata; for we find it once more related, though with some variety of detail, (which may justify its repetition in ss Further on, in verse 556, Nahusha is called "the depraved, the hater of brahman, the sinful-minded (durāchāras cha Nahusho brahma-dvit pāpachetanah).

a condensed form), in the Anuśasanaparvan, verses 4745-4810. We are there told that Nahusha, in recompense for his good deeds, was exalted to heaven; where he continued to perform all divine and human ceremonies, and to worship the gods as before. At length he became puffed up with pride at the idea that he was Indra, and all his good works in consequence were neutralized. For a great length of time he compelled the rishis to carry him about. At last it came to Agastya's turn to perform the servile office. Bhrigu then came and said to Agastya, 'Why do we submit to the insults of this wicked king of the gods?' Agastya answered that none of the rishis had ventured to curse Nahusha, because he had obtained the power of subduing to his service everyone upon whom he fixed his eyes; and that he had amrita (nectar) for his beverage. However, Agastya said he was prepared to do anything that Bhrigu might suggest. Bhrigu said he had been sent by Brahmā to take vengeance on Nahusha, who was that day about to attach Agastya to his car, and would spurn him with his foot; and that he himself (Bhrigu), "incensed at this insult, would by a curse condemn the transgressor and hater of Brāhmans to become a serpent" (vyutkrānta-dharmam tam aham dharshanāmarshito bhrisam | ahir bhavasveti rushā śapsye pāpam dvija-druham). All this accordingly happened as follows:

Athāgastyam rishi-śreshtham vāhanāyājuhāva ha f drutam Sarasvatīkūlāt smayann iva mahābalah | tato Bhrigur mahātejāḥ Maitrāvarunim abravīt | "nimīlayasva nayane jaṭām yāvad viśāmi te" | sthānubhūtasya tasyātha jaṭām prāviśad achyutah | Bhṛiguh sa sumahātejāh pātanāya nripasya cha | tatah sa deva-rāt prāptas tam rishim vāhanāya vai | tato 'gastyah surapatim vākyam āha viśāmpate | "yojayasveti mām kshipram kam cha deśam vahāmi te \ yattra vakshyasi tattra tvām nayishyāmi surādhipa" | ity ukto Nahushas tena yojayāmāsa tam munim | Bhṛigus tasya jaṭāntaḥ-stho babhūva hṛishito bhṛiśam | na chāpi darśanam tasya chakāra sa Bhrigus tadā | vara-dāna-prabhāva-jno Nahushasya mahātmanah | na chukopa tadā 'gastyo yukto 'pi Nahushena vai | tam tu rāja pratodena chodayāmāsa Bhārata | na chukopa sa dharmātmā tatah pādena deva-rāt | Agastyasya tadā kruddho vāmenābhyahanach chhiraḥ | tasmin śirasy abhihate sa jaṭāntargato Bhṛiguḥ | śaśāpa balavat kruddho Nahusham pāpachetasam | " yasmāt padā 'hanah krodhāt sirasīmam mahāmunim | tasmād āśu mahīm gachha sarpo bhūtvā sudurmate" | ity uktaḥ sa tadā tena

sarpo bhūtvā papāta ha | adrishṭenātha Bhriguṇā bhūtale Bharatarshabha | Bhriguṃ hi yadi so 'drakshyad Nahushaḥ prithivīpate | sa na śakto 'bhavishyad vai pātane tasya tejasā |

· "The mighty Nahusha, as it were smiling, straightway summoned the eminent rishi Agastya from the banks of the Sarasvatī to carry him. The glorious Bhrigu then said to Maitrāvaruni (Agastya), 'Close thy eyes whilst I enter into the knot of thy hair.' With the view of overthrowing the king, Bhrigu then entered into the hair of Agastya who stood motionless as a stock. Nahusha then came to be carried by Agastya, who desired to be attached to the vehicle and agreed to carry the king of the gods whithersoever he pleased. Nahusha in consequence Bhrigu, who was lodged in the knot of Agastya's hair, was greatly delighted, but did not venture to look at Nahusha, as he knew the potency of the boon which had been accorded to him (of subduing to his will everyone on whom he fixed his eyes). Agastya did not lose his temper when attached to the vehicle, and even when urged by a goad the holy man remained unmoved. The king of the gods, incensed, next struck the rishi's head with his left foot, when Bhrigu, invisible within the knot of hair, became enraged, and violently cursed the wicked Nahusha: 'Since, fool, thou hast in thine anger smitten this great muni on the head with thy foot, therefore become a serpent, and fall down swiftly to the earth.' Being thus addressed, Nahusha became a serpent, and fell to the earth, through the agency of Bhrigu, who remained invisible. For if he had been seen by Nahusha, the saint would have been unable, in consequence of the power possessed by the oppressor, to hurl him to the ground."

Bhṛigu, on Nahusha's solicitation, and the intercession of Agastya, placed a period to the effects of the curse, which, as in the other version of the legend, Yudhishthira was to be the instrument of terminating.

From several phrases which I have quoted from the version of this legend given in the Udyogaparvan, as well as the tenor of the whole, it appears to be the intention of the writers to hold up the case of Nahusha as an example of the nemesis awaiting not merely any gross display of presumption, but all resistance to the pretensions of the priesthood, and contempt of their persons or authority.

SECT. V .- Story of Nimi.

Nimi (one of Ikshvāku's sons) is another of the princes who are stigmatized by Manu, in the passage above quoted, for their want of deference to the Brāhmans. The Vishnu P. (Wilson, 4to. ed. p. 388) relates the story as follows: Nimi had requested the Brahman-rishi Vasishtha to officiate at a sacrifice, which was to last a thousand years. Vasishtha in reply pleaded a pre-engagement to Indra for five hundred years, but promised to return at the end of that period. The king made no remark, and Vasishtha went away, supposing that he had assented to this arrangement. On his return, however, the priest discovered that Nimi had retained Gautama (who was, equally with Vasishtha, a Brāhman-rishi) and others to perform the sacrifice; and being incensed at the neglect to give him notice of what was intended, he cursed the king, who was then asleep, to lose his corporeal form. When Nimi awoke and learnt that he had been cursed without any previous warning, he retorted, by uttering a similar curse on Vasishtha, and then died. "In consequence of this curse" (proceeds the Vishnu Purana, iv. 5, 6) "the vigour of Vasishtha entered into the vigour of Mitra and Varuna. Vasishtha, however, received from them another body when their seed had fallen from them at the sight of Urvasi" (tach-chhāpāch cha Mitrā-varunayos tejasi Vasishtha-tejah pravishtam | Urvasī-darsanād udbhūta-vīryya-prapātayoh sakāśād Vaśishtho deham aparam lehhe).87 Nimi's body was embalmed. At the close of the sacrifice which he had begun, the gods were willing, on the intercession of the priests, to restore him to life, but he declined the offer; and was placed by the deities, according to his desire, in the eyes of all living creatures. It is in consequence of this that they are always opening and shutting (nimisha means "the twinkling of the eye").

The story is similarly related in the Bhāgavata Purāna, ix. 13, 1-13. A portion of the passage is as follows:

3. Nimis chalam idam vidvān sattram ārabhatātmavān | ritvigbhir aparais tāvad nāgamad yāvatā guruh | śishya-vyatikramam vīkshya nirvarttya gurur āgatah | aśapat "patatād deho Nimeh pandita-māninah" | Nimih pratidadau śāpam guruve 'dharma-varttine | "tavāpi patatād deho

⁸⁷ This story will be further illustrated in the next section.

lobhād dharmam ajānataḥ" | ity utsasarjja svam̃ deham̃ Nimir adhyātma-kovidaḥ | Mitrā-varuṇayor jajne Urvaśyām prapitāmahah |

"Nimi, who was self-controlled, knowing the world to be fleeting, commenced the sacrifice with other priests until his own spiritual instructor should come back. The latter, on his return, discovering the transgression of his disciple, cursed him thus: 'Let the body of Nimi, who fancies himself learned, fall from him.' Nimi retorted the curse on his preceptor, who was acting unrighteously: 'Let thy body also fall from thee, since thou, through coveteousness, art ignorant of duty.' Having so spoken, Nimi, who knew the supreme spirit, abandoned his body: and the patriarch (Vasishtha) was born of Urvasī to Mitra and Varuna."

The offence of Nimi, as declared in these passages, is not that of contemning the sacerdotal order in general, or of usurping their functions; but merely of presuming to consult his own convenience by proceeding to celebrate a sacrifice with the assistance of another Brāhman (for Gautama also was a man of priestly descent) when his own spiritual preceptor was otherwise engaged, without giving the latter any notice of his intention. The Bhāgavata, as we have seen, awards blame impartially to both parties, and relates (as does also the Vishnu Purāṇa) that the king's curse took effect on the Brāhman, as well as the Brāhman's on the king.

SECT. VI. - Vasishtha.

One of the most remarkable and renowned of the struggles between Brāhmans and Kshattriyas which occur in the legendary history of India is that which is said to have taken place between Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra. I propose to furnish full details of this conflict with its fabulous accompaniments from the Rāmāyaṇa, which dwells upon it at considerable length, as well as from the Mahābhārata, where it is repeatedly introduced; but before doing so, I shall quote the passages of the Rigveda which appear to throw a faint light on the real history of the two rivals. It is clear from what has been said in the Introduction to this volume, pp. 1-6, as well as from the remarks I have made in pp. 139 f., that the Vedic hymns, being far more ancient than the Epic and Puranic compilations, must be more trustworthy guides to a knowledge of the remotest Indian antiquity. While the Epic poems and Puranas no doubt embody numerous ancient traditions, yet these have been freely altered according to the caprice or dogmatic views of later writers, and have received many purely fictitious additions. The Vedic hymns, on the contrary, have been preserved unchanged from a very remote period, and exhibit a faithful reflection of the social, religious, and ecclesiastical condition of the age in which they were composed, and of the feelings which were awakened by contemporary occurrences. As vet there was no conscious perversion or colouring of facts for dogmatic or sectarian purposes; and much of the information which we derive from these naïve compositions is the more trustworthy that it is deduced from hints and allusions, and from the comparison of isolated particulars, and not from direct and connected statements or descriptions. It is here therefore, if anywhere, that we may look for some light on the real relations between Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra. After quoting the hymns regarding these two personages, I shall adduce from the Brāhmanas, or other later works, any particulars regarding their birth and history which I have discovered. The conflict between Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra has been already discussed at length in the third of Dr. Rudolf Roth's "Dissertations on the literature and history of the Veda," 89 where the most important parts of the hymns bearing upon the subject are translated. The first hymn which I shall adduce is intended for the glorification of Vasishtha and his family. The latter part relates the birth of the sage, while the earlier verses refer to his connection with king Sudas. Much of this hymn is very obscure.

^{}SOn the last verse the commentator S'rīdhara has the following note: Urvasīdars'anāt skannam retas tābhyām kumbhe nishiktam | tasmāt prapitāmaho Vasishtho jajne | tathā cha śrutih "kumbhe retah sishichituh samānam" iti | "Seed fell from them at the sight of Urvasī and was shed into a jar: from it the patriarch, Vasishtha, was born. And so says the s'ruti" (R.V. vii. 33, 13, which will be quoted in the next section).

R.V. vii. 33, 1. Svityancho mā dakshiṇatas-kapardāḥ dhiyañjinvāso abhi hi pramanduḥ | uttishṭhan voce pari barhisho nṛīn na me dūrād avitave Vasishṭhāḥ | 2. Dūrād Indram anayann ā sutena tiro vaiśantam ati pāntam ugram | Pāśadyumnasya Vāyatasya somāt sutād Indro avrinīta Vasishṭhān | 3. Eva in nu kam sindhum ebhis tatāra eva in nu kam ⁸⁹ Zur Litteratur und Geshichte des Weda. Stuttgart. 1846.

Bhedam ebhir jaghāna | eva in nu kam dāśarājne Sudāsam prāvad Indro brahmanā vo Vasishthāh | 4. Jushtī naro brahmanā vah pitrīnām aksham avyayam na kila rishātha | yat śakvarīshu brihatā ravena Indre śushmam adadhāta Vasishthāh | 5. Ud dyām iva it trishnajo nāthitāso adīdhayur dāśarājne vritāsah | Vasishthasya stuvatah Indro aśrod urum Tritsubhyo akrinod u lokam | 6. Dandā iva goajanāsah āsan parichhinnāh Bharatāh arbhakāsah | abhavach cha pura-etā Vasishthah ād it Tritsūnām višo aprathanta | 7. Trayah krinvanti bhuvaneshu retas tisrah prajāh āryāh jyotir-agrāh | trayo gharmāsah ushasam sachante sarvān it tān anu vidur Vasishthāh | 8. Sūryasya iva vakshatho jyotir eshām samudrasya iva mahimā gabhīrah | vātasya iva prajavo na anyena stomo Vasishthāh anu etave vah | 9. Te in ninyam hridayasya praketaih sahasra-valsam abhi sam charanti | yamena tatam paridhim vayanto apsarasah upa sedur Vasishthāh | 10. Vidyuto jyotih pari sam jihānam Mitrā-varunā yad apaśyatām tvā | tat te janma uta ekam Vasishtha Agastyo yat tvā višah ājabhāra | 11. Uta asi Maitrāvaruno Vasishtha Urvasyāh brahman manaso'dhi jātaḥ | drapsam̃ skannam brahmanā daivyena viśve devāḥ pushkare tvā 'dadanta | 12. Sa praketah ubhayasya pravidvān sahasradānah uta vā sadānah | yamena tatam paridhim vayishyann apsarasah pari jajne Vasishthah | 13. Sattre ha jātāv ishitā namobhih kumbhe retah sishichatuh samanam | tato ha Manah ud iyaya madhyat tato jātam rishim āhur Vasishtham

"1. The white-robed (priests) with hair-knots on the right, stimulating to devotion, have filled me with delight. Rising from the sacrificial grass, I call to the men, 'Let not the Vasishthas (stand too) far off to succour [or gladden] me. 20. By their libation they brought Indra hither from afar across the Vaisanta away from the powerful draught. Indra preferred the Vasishthas to the soma offered by Pāśadyumna, 22 the son of Vayata. 3. So too with them he crossed the river; so too with them he slew Bheda; so too in the battle of the ten kings 33 Indra delivered Sudās through your prayer, o Vasishthas.

 $^{^{90}}$ Sāyana thinks that Vasishtha is the speaker, and refers here to his own sons. Professor Roth (under the word av) regards Indra as the speaker. May it not be Sudās?

⁹¹ This is the interpretation of this clause suggested by Professor Aufrecht, who thinks Vaisanta is probably the name of a river.

According to Sayana, another king who was sacrificing at the same time as Sudas.
 See verses 6-8 of R.V. vii. 83, to be next quoted.

4. Through gratification caused by the prayer of your fathers, o men, ye do not obstruct the undecaying axle (?), since at (the recitation of the) Sakvarī verses 94 with a loud voice ve have infused energy into Indra, o Vasishthas. 5. Distressed, when surrounded in the fight of the ten kings, they looked up, like thirsty men, to the sky. Indra heard Vasishtha when he uttered praise, and opened up a wide space for the Tritsus.95 6. Like staves for driving cattle, the contemptible Bharatas were lopped all round. Vasishtha marched in front, and then the tribes of the Tritsus were deployed. 7. Three deities create a fertilizing fluid in the worlds. Three are the noble creatures whom light precedes. Three fires attend the dawn.96 All these the Vasishthas know. 8. Their lustre is like the full radiance of the sun: their greatness is like the depth of the ocean; like the swiftness of the wind, your hymn, o Vasishthas, can be followed by no one else. 9. By the intuitions of their heart they seek out the mystery with a thousand branches. Weaving the envelopment stretched out by Yama, the Vasishthas sat down by the Apsaras. 10. When Mitra and Varuna saw thee quitting the flame of the lightning, that was thy birth; and thou hadst one (other birth), o Vasishtha, when Agastya brought thee to the people. 11. And thou art also a son of Mitra and Varuna, o Vasishtha, born, o priest, from the soul of Urvasī. All the gods placed thee —a drop which fell through divine contemplation—in the vessel. 12. He, the intelligent, knowing both (worlds?), with a thousand gifts, or with gifts - he who was to weave the envelopment stretched out by Yama - he, Vasishtha, was born of the Apsaras. 13. They, two (Mitra and Varuna?), born at the sacrifice, and impelled by adorations, dropped into the jar the same amount of seed. From the midst of that arose Māna (Agastya?); and from that they say that the rishi Vasishtha sprang." 97

⁹⁴ See R.V. x. 71, 11, above, p. 256.

⁹⁵ This is evidently the name of the tribe which the Vasishthas favoured, and to which they themselves must have belonged. See vii. 83, 4. The Bharatas in the next verse appear to be the hostile tribe.

⁹⁶ In explanation of this Sūyana quotes a passage from the S'ātyūyana Brāhmana, as follows: "Trayah kṛiṇvanti bhuvaneshu retaḥ" ity Agniḥ pṛithivyām retaḥ kṛiṇoti Vāyur antaritshe Āāityo dwi ["tisraḥ pṛajāḥ āryyāḥ jyotir-agrāḥ" iti Vasavo Rudrāḥ Ādityās tāsam jyotir yad asāv Ādityaḥ ["trayo gharmāsah ushasam sachante" ity Agnir Ushasam sachate Vāyur Ushasam sachate Adityah Ushasam sachate | (1) "Agni produces a fertilizing fluid on the earth, Vāyu in the air, the Sun in the sky. (2) The 'three noble creatures' are the Vasus, Rudras, and Adityas. The Sun is their light. (3) Agni, Vāyu, and the Sun each attend the Dawn."

There is another hymn (R.V. vii. 18) which relates to the connection between Vasishtha and Sudās (verses 4, 5, 21-25) and the conflict between the latter and the Tritsus with their enemies (verses 6-18); but as it is long and obscure I shall content myself with quoting a few verses. 98

R.V. vii. 18, 4. Dhenum na tvā suyavase dudhukshann upa brahmāni sasṛije Vasishṭhaḥ | tvām id me gopatim viśvaḥ āha ā naḥ Indraḥ sumatim gantu achha | 5. Arṇāmsi chit paprathānā Sudāse Indro gādhāni

97 Whatever may be the sense of verses 11 and 13, the Nirukta states plainly enough v. 13; Tasyāh darśanād Mitrā-varunayoh retaś chaskanda | tad-abhivādiny eshā rig bhavati | "On seeing her (Urvasī) the seed of Mitra and Varuna fell from them. To this the following verse (R.V. vii. 33, 11) refers." And Sayana on the same verse quotes a passage from the Brihaddevata: Tayor ādityayoh sattre drishtvā 'psarasam Urvas'īm | retaś chaskanda tat kumbhe nyapatad vāsatīvare | tenaiva tu muhūrttena vīryavantau tapasvinau | Agastyas' cha Vasishṭhas' cha tatrarshī sambabhūvatuh | bahudhā patitam retah kalaśe cha jale sthale | sthale Vasishthas tu munih sambabhūvărshi-sattamah | kumbhe tv Agastyah sambhūto jale matsyo mahūdyutih | udiyāya tato 'gastyo samyā-mātro mahātapāḥ | mānena sammito yasmāt tasmād Mānyah ihochyate | yadvā kumbhād rishir jātah kumbhenāpi hi mīyate | kumbhah ity abhidhānam cha parimanasya lakshyate | tato 'psu grihyamanasu Vasishthah pushkare sthitah | sarvatah pushkare tañ hi visve devāh adhārayan | "When these two Adityas (Mitra and Varuna) beheld the Apsaras Urvasī at a sacrifice their seed fell from them into the sacrificial jar called vāsatīvara. At that very moment the two energetic and austere rishis Agastya and Vasishtha were produced there. The seed fell on many places, into the jar, into water, and on the ground. The muni Vasishtha, most excellent of rishis, was produced on the ground; while Agastya was born in the jar, a fish of great lustre. The austere Agastya sprang thence of the size of a sumyā (i.e. the pin of a yoke; see Wilson, s.v., and Professor Roth, s.v. māna). Since he was measured by a certain standard $(m\bar{a}na)$ he is called the 'measurable' (mānya). Or, the rishi, having sprung from a jar (kumbha), is also measured by a jar, as the word kumbha is also designated as the name of a measure. Then when the waters were taken, Vasishtha remained in the vessel (pushkara); for all the gods held him in it on all sides." In his Illustrations of the Nirukta, p. 64, Prof. Roth speaks of the verses of the hymn which relate to Vasishtha's origin as being a more modern addition to an older composition, and as describing the miraculous birth of the sage in the taste and style of the Epic mythology. Professor Max Müller (Oxford Essays for 1856, pp. 61 f.) says that Vasishtha is a name of the Sun; and that the ancient poet is also "called the son of Mitra and Varuna, night and day, an expression which has a meaning only in regard to Vasishtha, the sun; and as the sun is frequently called the offspring of the dawn, Vasishtha, the poet, is said to owe his birth to Urvasi" (whom Müller identifies with Ushas). For M. Langlois's view of the passage, see his French version of the R.V. vol. iii. pp. 79 f. and his note, p. 234.

98 See Roth's Litt. u. Gesch. des Weda, pp. 87 ff. where it is translated into German.

akrinot supārā | 21. Pra ye grihād amamadus tvāyā Parāśarah Satayātur Vasishthah | na te bhojasya sakhyam mrishanta adha sūribhyah sudinā vi uchhān | 22. Dve naptur Devavatah sate gor dvā rathā vadhūmantā Sudāsah | arhann Agne Paijavanasya dānam hoteva sadma pari emi rebhan | 23. Chatvāro mā Paijavanasya dānāh smaddishṭayah kriśanino nireke | rijrāso mā prithivishṭhāh Sudāsas tokam tokāya śravase vahanti | 24. Yasya śravo rodasī antar urvī śīrshne śīrshne vibabhāja vibhaktā | sapta id Indram na sravato grinanti ni Yudhyāmadhim aśiśūd abhīke | imam naro Marutah saśchatānu Divodāsam na pitaram Sudāsah | avishṭana Paijavanasya ketam dūnāśam kshattram ajaram duvoyu |

"4. Seeking to milk thee (Indra), like a cow in a rich meadow, Vasishtha sent forth his prayers to thee; for every one tells me that thou art a lord of cows; may Indra come to our hymn. 5. However the waters swelled, Indra made them shallow and fordable to Sudas. 21. Parāśara, 99 Satayātu, and Vasishtha, devoted to thee, who from indifference have left their home, have not forgotten the friendship of thee the bountiful;—therefore let prosperous days dawn for these sages. 22. Earning two hundred cows and two chariots with mares, the gift of Sudas the son of Pijavana, and grandson of Devavat, 100 I walk round the house, o Agni, uttering praises, like a hotri priest. 23. The four brown steeds, bestowed by Sudas the son of Pijavana, vigorous, decked with pearls, standing on the ground, carry me on securely to renown from generation to generation. 24. That donor. whose fame pervades both worlds, has distributed gifts to every person. They praise him as the seven rivers 101 praise Indra; he has slain Yudhyāmadhi in battle. 25. Befriend him (Sudās), ye heroic Maruts, as

⁹⁹ Parāsara is said in Nir. vi. 30, which refers to this passage, to have been a son of Vasishtha born in his old age (Parāsarah parāsīrnasya Vasishthasya sthavirasya jajne); or he was a son of S'akti and grandson of Vasishtha (Roth s.v.)

¹⁰⁰ Devavat is said by Sāyana to be a proper name. He may be the same as Divodāsa in verse 25. Or Divodāsa may be the father, and Pijavana and Devavat among the forefathers of Sudās. In the Vishnu Purāna Sarvakāma is said to have been the father and Rituparna the grandfather of Sudāsa, Wilson's V.P. 4to. ed. p. 380. At p. 454 f. a Sudāsa is mentioned who was son of Chyavana, grandson of Mitrayu and great-grandson of Divodāsa.

¹⁰¹ Professor Roth (Litt. u. Gesch. des Weda, p. 100) compares R.V. i. 102, 2, asya s'ravo nadyah sapta bibhrati, "the seven rivers exalt his (Indra's) renown." These rivers are, as Roth explains, the streams freed by Indra from Vrittra's power.

ye did Divodasa the (fore)father of Sudas; fulfil the desire of the son of Pijavana (by granting him) imperishable, undecaying power, worthy of reverence (?)."

Although the Vasishthas are not named in the next hymn, it must refer to the same persons and circumstances as are alluded to in the first portion of R.V. vii. 33, quoted above.

R.V. vii. 83, 1. Yuvām narā paśyamānāsah āpyam prāchā garyantah prithu-parsavo yayuh | dāsā cha vrittrā hatam āryāni cha Sudāsam Indrā-varunā 'vasā 'vatam | 2. Yatra narah samayante krita-dhvajo yasminn ājā bhavati kinchana priyam | yatra bhayante bhuvanā svardriśas tatra nah Indrā-varunā 'dhi vochatam | 3. Sam bhūmyāh antāh dhvasirāh adrikshata Indrā-varunā divi ghoshah āruhat | asthur janānām upa mām arātayo arvāg avasā havana-śrutā āgatam | 4. Indrā-varunā vadhanābhir aprati Bhedam vanvantā pra Sudāsam āvatam | brahmāni eshām śrinutam havīmani satyā Tritsūnām abhavat purohitih | 5. Indrāvarunāv abhi ā tapanti mā aghāni aryo vanushām arātayah | yuvām hi vasvah ubhayasya rajatho adha sma no avatam parye divi | 6. Yuvam havante ubhayāsah ājishu Indram cha vasvo Varunam cha sātaye \ yatra rājabhir daśabhir nibādhitam pra Sudāsam āvatam Tritsubhih saha 7. Daśa rājānah samitāh ayajyavah Sudāsam Indrā-varunā na yuyudhuh | satyā nrinām adma-sadām upastutir devāḥ eshām abhavan devahūtishu | 8. Dāśarājne pariyattāya viśvatah Sudāse Indra-varunāv aśikshatam | śvityancho yatra namasā kaparddino dhiyā dhīvanto asapanta Tritsavah

"Looking to you, o heroes, to your friendship, the men with broad axes advanced to fight. Slay our Dāsa and our Arya enemies, and deliver Sudās by your succour, o Indra and Varuna. 2. In the battle where men clash with elevated banners, where something which we desire 102 is to be found, where all beings and creatures tremble, there, o Indra and Varuna, take our part. 3. The ends of the earth were seen to be darkened, o Indra and Varuna, a shout ascended to the sky; the foes of my warriors came close up to me; come hither with your help, ye hearers of our invocations. 4. Indra and Varuna, unequalled with your weapons, ye have slain Bheda, and delivered Sudās; ye heard the prayers of these men in their invocation; the priestly agency of the Tṛitsus 103 was efficacious. 5. O Indra and Varuṇa, the injurious acts of the enemy, the hostilities of the murderous, afflict me on every side. Ye are lords of the resources of both worlds: protect us therefore (where ye live) in the remotest heavens. 6. Both parties 104 invoke you, both Indra and Varuṇa, in the battles, in order that ye may bestow riches. (They did so in the fight) in which ye delivered Sudās—when harassed by the ten kings—together with the Tṛitsus. 7. The ten kings, who were no sacrificers, united, did not vanquish Sudās, o Indra and Varuṇa. The praises of the men who officiated at the sacrifice were effectual; the gods were present at their invocations. 8. Ye, o Indra and Varuṇa, granted succour to Sudās, hemmed in on every side in the battle of the ten kings, 105 where the white-robed Tṛitsus, 106 with hair-knots, reverentially praying, adored you with a hymn."

¹⁰² Sāyaṇa divides the kinchana of the Pada-text into kincha na, which gives the sense "where nothing is desired, but everything is difficult."

From these hymns it appears that Vasishtha, or a Vasishtha and his family were the priests of king Sudās (vii. 18, 4 f., 21 ff.; vii. 33, 3 f.); that, in their own opinion, these priests were the objects of Indra's preference (vii. 33, 2), and had by the efficacy of their intercessions been the instruments of the victory gained by Sudās over his enemies in the battle of the ten kings. It seems also to result from some of the verses (vii. 33, 6; vii. 83, 4, 6; and vii. 33, 1, compared with vii. 83, 8) that both the king and the priests belonged to the tribe of the Tritsus. 107 Professor Roth remarks that in none of the hymns which

163 Compare verses 7 and 8. Sāyaṇa, however, translates the clause differently: "The act of the Tritsus for whom I sacrificed, and who put me forward as their priest, was effectual: my priestly function on their behalf was successful" (Tritsūnām etat-sanjnānām mama yūjyānām purohitir mama purodhānam satyā satya-phalam abhavat | teshu yad mama paurohityam tat saphalam jātam |

10 1 According to Sāyaṇa the two parties were Sudās and the Tritsus his allies (ubhaya-vidhāḥ Sudāḥ-saṇṇo rājā tat-sahāya-bhūtūs Tritsavas cha evañ dvi-prakūrāḥ janāḥ). It might have been supposed that one of the parties meant was the hostile kings; but they are said in the next verse to be ayajyavaḥ, "persons who did not sacrifice to the gods."

105 Dāśarājne. This word is explained by Sāyaṇa in his note on vii. 33, 3, daśa-bhī rājabhiḥ saha yuddhe pravritte, "battle having been joined with ten kings." In the verse before us he says "the lengthening of the first syllable is a Vedic peculiarity, and that the case-ending is altered, and that the word merely means 'by the ten kings'" (daśa-śabdasya chhāndaso dīrghaḥ | vibhakti-vyatyayaḥ | daśabhī rājabhiḥ pariveshṭitāya).

106 Here Sāyana says the Tritsus are "the priests so called who were Vasishtha's disciples" (Tritsavo Vasishtha-sishyāh etat-sanjnāh ritvijah).

107 See Roth, Litt. u. Gesch. des Weda, p. 120.

he quotes is any allusion made to the Vasishthas being members of any particular caste; but that their connection with Sudās is ascribed to their knowledge of the gods, and their unequalled power of invocation •(vii. 33, 7f.)

In the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, viii. 21, we have another testimony to the connection of Vasishṭha with Sudās, as he is there stated to have "consecrated Sudās son of Pijavana by a great inauguration similar to Indra's; 108 in consequence of which Sudās went round the earth in every direction conquering, and performed an aśvamedha sacrifice" (etena ha vai aindreṇa mahābhishekeṇa Vasishṭhaḥ Sudāsam Paijavanam abhishishecha | tasmād u Sudāḥ Paijavanaḥ samantam sarvataḥ pṛithivīm jayan parīyāya aśvena cha medhyena īje).

The following passages refer to Vasishtha having received a revelation from the god Varuna, or to his being the object of that god's special favour:

vii. 87, 4. Uvācha me Varuno medhirāya triḥ sapta nāma aghnyā bibhartti | vidvān padasya guhyā na vochad yugāya vipraḥ upāraya śikshan |

"Varuna has declared to me 109 who am intelligent, 'The Cow 110 possesses thrice seven names. The wise god, though he knows them, has not revealed the mysteries of (her) place, which he desires to grant to a future generation."

R.V. vii. 88, 3. Ā yad ruhāva Varuṇaś cha nāvam pra yat samudram īrayāva madhyam | adhi yad apām̃ snubhiś charāva pra pra īnkhe īnkha-yāvahai śubhe kam | 4. Vasishtham̃ ha Varuṇo nāvi ā adhād rishim̃ cha-kāra svapāḥ mahobhiḥ | stotāram̃ vipraḥ sudinatve ahnām̃ yād nu dyūvas tatanan yād ushasaḥ | 5. Kva tyāni nau sakhyā babhūvuḥ sachāvahe yad ¹⁰⁸ Colebrooke's Misc. Essays, i. 40.

¹⁰⁹ Vasishtha is not named in this hymn, but he is its traditional author.

¹¹⁰ Sāyaṇa says that either (1) Vāch is here meant under the figure of a cow having the names of 21 metres, the Gāyatrī, etc., attached to her breast, throat, and head, or (2) that Vāch in the form of the Veda holds the names of 21 sacrifices; but that (3) another authority says the earth is meant, which (in the Nighantu, i. 1) has 21 names, go, gmā, jmā, etc. (Vāg atra gaur uchyate | sā cha urasi kanthe sirasi cha baddhāni gāyatry-ādīni sapta chhandasām nāmāni bibhartti | yadvā vedātmikā vāg chavimsati-samsthānām yajnānām nāmāni bibhartti | dhārayati | aparah āha "gauh prithivī | tasyās cha 'gaur gmā jmā' iti pathitāny ekavimsati-nāmāni'' iti). I have, in translating the second clause of the verse, followed for the most part a rendering suggested by Professor Aufrecht,

avrikam purā chit | brihantam mānam Varuna svadhāvah sahasra-dväram jagama griham te | 6. Yah āpir nityo Varuna priyah san tvām āgāmsi krinavat sakhā te | mā te enasvanto yakshin bhujema yandhi sma viprah stuvate varūtham |

"When Varuna and I embark on the boat, when we propel it into the midst of the ocean, when we advance over the surface of the waters, may we rock upon the undulating element till we become brilliant. 4. Varuna took Vasishtha into the boat; by his mighty acts working skilfully he (Varuna) has made him a rishi; the wise (god has made) him an utterer of praises in an auspicious time, that his days and dawns may be prolonged. 5. Where are (now) our friendships, the tranquility which we enjoyed of old? We have come, o self-sustaining Varuna, to thy vast abode, to thy house with a thousand gates. 6. Whatever friend of thine, being a kinsman constant and beloved, may commit offences against thee;—may we not, though sinful, suffer (punishment), o adorable being; do thou, o wise god, grant us protection."

R.V. vii. 86 is a sort of penitential hymn in which Vasishtha refers to the anger of Varuna against his old friend (verse 4) and entreats forgiveness of his offences. This hymn, which appears to be an earnest and genuine effusion of natural feeling, is translated in Professor Müller's Anc. Sansk. Lit. p. 540.

The passage which follows is part of a long hymn, consisting chiefly of imprecations directed against Răkshăses and Yātudhānas, and said in the Brihaddevatā (as quoted by Sāyaṇa in his introductory remarks) to have "been 'seen' by the rishi (Vasishṭha) when he was overwhelmed with grief and anger for the loss of his hundred sons who had been slain by the sons of Sudās" (rishir dadarśa raksho-ghnam puttra-śoka-pariplutāḥ | hate puttra-śate kruddhah Saudāsair duḥkhitas tadā). I shall cite only the verses in which Vasishṭha repels the imputation (by whomsoever it may have been made) that he was a demon (Rakshas or Yātudhana).

R.V. vii. 104, 12. Suvijnānam chikitushe janāya sach cha asach cha vachasī paspridhāte | tayor yat satyam yatarad rijīyas tad it Somo avati hanti asat | 13. Na vai u Somo vrijinam hinoti na kshattriyam mithuyā

¹¹¹ Professor Aufrecht renders the last clause, "As long as days and dawns shall continue."

dhārayantam | hanti raksho hanti asad vadantam ubhāv Indrasya prasitau śayāte | 14. Yadi vā aham anrita-devah āsa mogham vā devān api ūhe Agne | kim asmabhyam Jātavedo hrinīshe droghavāchas te nirritham sachantām | 15. Adya murīya yadi yātudhāno asmi yadi vā āyus tatapa pūrushasya | adha sa vīrair daśabhir vi yuyāh yo mā mogham "Yātudhāna" ity āha | 16. Yo mā ayātum "yātudhāna" ity āha yo vā rakshāh "śuchir asmi" ity āha | Indras tam hantu mahatā vadhena viśvasya jantor adhamas padīshṭa |

"The intelligent man is well able to discriminate (when) true and false words contend together. Soma favours that one of them which is true and right, and annihilates falsehood. 13. Soma does not prosper the wicked, nor the man who wields power unjustly. He slays the Rakshas; he slays the liar: they both lie (bound) in the fetters of Indra. 14. If I were either a follower of false gods, or if I erroneously conceived of the gods, o Agni:—Why, o Jātavedas, art thou incensed against us? Let injurious speakers fall into thy destruction. 15. May I die this very day, if I be a Yātudhāna, or if I have destroyed any man's life. May he be severed from his ten sons who falsely says to me, 'o Yātudhāna.' 16. He who says to me, who am no Yātu, 'o Yātudhāna,' or who (being himself) a Rakshas, says, 'I am pure,'—may Indra smite him with his great weapon; may he sink down the lowest of all creatures.

In elucidation of this passage Sāyaṇa quotes the following lines:

Hatvā puttra-satam pūrvam Vasishṭhasya mahātmanah | Vasishṭham
"rākshaso'si tvam" Vāsishṭham rūpam āsthitah | "aham Vasishṭhah"
ity evam jighāmsuh rākshaso'bravīt | atrottarāh richo drishṭāh Vasishtheneti nah śrutam |

"Having slain the hundred sons of the great Vasishtha, a murderous Rākshasa, assuming the form of that rishi, formerly said to him, 'Thou art a Rākshasa, and I am Vasishtha.' In allusion to this the latter verses were seen by Vasishtha, as we have heard."

We may, however, safely dismiss this explanation resting on fabulous grounds.

The verses may, as Professor Max Müller supposes, 112 have arisen out 112 "Vasishtha himself, the very type of the Arian Brahman, when in feud with Visvāmitra, is called not only an enemy, but a 'Yātudhāna,' and other names which in common parlance are only bestowed on barbarian savages and evil spirits. We of Vasishtha's contest with Viśvāmitra, and it may have been the latter personage who brought these charges of heresy, and of murderous and demoniacal character against his rival. 113

Allusion is made both in the Taittirīya Sanhitā and in the Kaushī, takī Brāhmaṇa to the slaughter of a son of Vasishṭha by the sons or descendants of Sudās. The former work states, Ashṭaka vii. (p. 47 of the India Office MS. No. 1702):

Vasishtho hataputro 'kāmayata " vindeya prajām abhi Saudāsān bhaveyam" iti | sa etam ekasmānnapanchāśam apaśyat tam āharat tenāyajata | tato vai so 'vindata prajām abhi Saudāsān abhavat |

"Vasishtha, when his son had been slain, desired, 'May I obtain offspring; may I overcome the Saudāsas.' He beheld this ekasmānna-panchāśa (?), he took it, and sacrificed with it. In consequence he obtained offspring, and overcame the Saudāsas."

The passage of the Kaushītakī Brāhmaṇa, 4th adhyāya, as quoted by Professor Weber (Ind. St. ii. 299) is very similar:

Vasishtho'kāmayata hata-putraḥ "prajāyeya prajayā paśubhir abhi Saudāsān bhaveyam" iti | sa etam yajna-kratum apaśyad Vasishthayajnam tena ishtvā abhi Saudāsān abhavat |

"Vasishtha, when his son had been slain, desired, 'May I be fruitful in offspring and cattle, and overcome the Saudāsas.' He beheld this form of offering, the Vasishtha-sacrifice; and having performed it, he overcame the Saudāsas."

In his introduction to Rig-veda, vii. 32, Sāyana has the following notice from the Anukramanikā:

"Saudāsair agnau prakshipyamānah S'aktir antyam pragātham ālebhe so 'rdharche ukte 'dahyata | tam putroktam Vasishthah samāpayata" iti Sāṭyāyanakam | "Vasishṭhasya eva hata-putrasya ārsham" iti Tāṇḍakam |

"The Sätyayana Brāhmaṇa says that 'Sakti (son of Vasishṭha), when being thrown into the fire by the Saudāsas, received (by inspiration) the concluding pragātha of the hymn. He was burnt after he had spoken half a rich; and Vasishṭha completed what his son was have still the very hymn in which Vasishtha deprecates such charges with powerful indignation." Prof. Müller then quotes verses 14-16 of the hymn before us ("Last Results of the Turanian Researches," in Bunsen's "Cutlines of the Philosophy of Univ. History," i. 344.

113 See my article "On the relations of the priests to the other classes of Indian society in the Vedic age," in the Journal Roy. As. Soc. for 1866, pp. 295 ff.

uttering. The Tandaka says that 'it was Vasishtha himself who spoke the whole when his son was slain.'"

The words supposed to have been spoken by Sakti, viz. "O Indra, grant to us strength as a father to his sons" (Indra kratum nah ā bhara pitā putrebhyo yathā) do not seem to be appropriate to the situation in which he is said to have been placed; and nothing in the hymn appears to allude to any circumstances of the kind imagined in the two Brāhmanas.

Manu says of Vasishtha (viii. 110): Maharshibhiś cha devaiś cha kāryyārtham śapathāh kritāh | Vasishthaś chāpi śapatham śepe Paiyavane nripe | "Great rishis and gods too have taken oaths for particular objects. Vasishtha also swore an oath to king Paiyavana." The occasion on which this was done is stated by the Commentator Kullūka: Vasishtho 'py anena puttra-śatam bhakshitam iti Viśvāmitrena ākrushto sva-pariśuddhaye Piyavanāpatye Sudāmni rājani śapatham chakāra | "Vasishtha being angrily accused by Viśvāmitra of having eaten (his) hundred sons, took an oath before king Sudāman (Sudās, no doubt, is meant) the son of Piyavana in order to clear himself." This seems to refer to the same story which is alluded to in the passage quoted by the Commentator on Rig-veda vii. 104, 12.

In the Rāmāyaṇa, i. 55, 5 f., a hundred sons of Viśvāmitra are said to have been burnt up by the blast of Vasishṭha's mouth when they rushed upon him armed with various weapons (Viśvāmitra-sutānām tu śatam nānā-vidhāyudham | abhyadhāvat susankruddham Vasishṭham japa-tām varam | hunkareṇaiva tān sarvān nirdadāha mahān rishiḥ).

Vasishtha is also mentioned in Rig-veda, i. 112, 9, as having received succour from the Aśvins (— Vasishthañ yābhir ajarāv ajinvatam).

Vasishtha, or the Vasishthas, are also referred to by name in the following verses of the seventh Mandala of the Rig-veda: 7, 7; 9, 6; 12, 3; 23, 1, 6; 26, 5; 37, 4; 39, 7; 42, 6; 59, 3; 70, 6; 73, 3; 76, 6, 7; 77, 6; 80, 1; 90, 7; 95, 6; 96, 1, 3; but as no information is derivable from these texts, except that the persons alluded to were the authors or reciters of the hymns, it is needless to quote them. 114

114 Another verse of a hymn in which the author is not referred to (vii. 72, 2) is as follows: \overline{A} no develhir upa yātam arvāk sajoshashā nāsatyā rathena | yuvor hi nah sakhyā pitryāṇi samāno bandhur uta tasya vittam | "Come near to us, Aśvins, on the same car with the gods: for we have ancestral friendships with you, a common relation; do ye recognize it." Although this has probably no mythological

In the Atharva-veda, iv. 29, 3 and 5, Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra are mentioned among other personages, Angiras, Agasti, Jamadagni, Atri, Kaśyapa, Bharadvāja, Gavishthira, and Kutsa, as being succoured by Mitra and Varuna (...yāv Angirasam avatho yāv Agastim Mitrā-Va-runā Jamadagnim Atrim | yau Kaśyapam avatho yau Vasishtham ... yau Bharadvājam avatho yau Gavishthiram Viśvāmitram Varuna Mitra Kutsam). And in the same Veda, xviii. 3, 15 f., they are invoked as deliverers: Viśvāmitro 'yam Jamadagnir Atrir avantu nah Kaśyapo Vā-madevah | Viśvāmitra Jamadagne Vasishtha Bharadvāja Gotama Vāmadeva ... | "15. May this Viśvāmitra, may Jamadagni, Atri, Kaśyapa, Vāmadeva preserve us. 16. O Viśvāmitra, o Jamadagni, o Vasishtha, o Bharādvaja, o Gotama, o Vāsmadeva." The second passage at least must be a good deal more recent than the most of the hymns of the Rig-veda.

Sudās is mentioned in other parts of the Rig-veda without any reference either to Vasishtha or to Visvāmitra. In some cases his name is coupled with that of other kings or sages, which appears to shew that in some of these passages at least a person, and not a mere epithet, "the liberal man," is denoted by the word Sudās.

- R.V. i. 47, 6. (The traditional rishi is Praskanva.) Sudāse dasrā vasu bibhratā rathe priksho vahatam Aśvinā | rayim̃ samudrād uta vā divas pari asme dhattam puru-spriham |
- "O impetuous Asvins, possessing wealth in your car, bring sustenance to Sudas. Send to us from the (aerial) ocean, or the sky, the riches which are much coveted."

Sāyaṇa says the person here meant is "king Sudās, son of Pijavana" (Sudāse rājne Pijavana-puttrāya).

- i. 63, 7. (The rishi is Nodhas, of the family of Gotama.) Tvam ha tyad Indra sapta yudhyan puro vajrin Purukutsāya dardaḥ | barhir na yat Sudāse vrithā varg anho rājan varivaḥ Pūrave kaḥ |
- "Thou didst then, o thundering Indra, war against, and shatter, the seven cities for Purukutsa, when thou, o king, didst without effort hurl reference, Sayana explains it as follows: Vivasvan Varunas' cha ubhav ani Kasyanad Aditer jatau | Vivasvan Asvinor janako Varuno Vasishthasya ity evam samana-bandhutvam | "Vivasvat and Varuna were both sons of Kasyana and Aditi. Vivasvat was the father of the Asvins and Varuna of Vasishtha; such is the affinity." Sayana then quotes the Brihaddevata to prove the descent of the Asvins from Vivasvat. Compare R.V. x. 17, 1, 2, and Nirukta, xii. 10, 11.

away distress from Sudās like a bunch of grass, and bestow wealth on $P\bar{u}ru$. ¹¹⁵

i. 112, 19. (The rishi is Kutsa.) yābhir Sudāse āhathuḥ sudevyam tābhir u shu ātibhir Aśvinā gatam

"Come, o Aśvins, with those succours whereby ye brought glorious power to Sudās" ['son of Pijavana'—Sāyana]. 116

The further texts which follow are all from the seventh Mandala, of which the rishis, with scarcely any exception, are said to be Vasishtha and his descendants:

vii. 19, 3. Tvam̃ dhṛishno dhṛishatā vītahavyam prāvo viśvābhir ūtibhiḥ Sudāsam | pra Paurukutsim̃ Trasadasyum āvaḥ kshettrasātā vṛittrahatyeshu Pūrum |

"Thou, o fierce Indra, hast impetuously protected Sudās, who offered oblations, with every kind of succour. Thou hast preserved Trasadasyu the son of Purukutsa, and Pūru in his conquest of land and in his slaughter of enemies."

vii. 20, 2. Hantā Vrittram Indrah śuśuvānah prāvīd nu vīro jaritāram utī | karttā Sudāse aha vai u lokam dātā vasu muhur u dāśushe bhūt |

"Indra growing in force slays Vṛitra; the hero protects him who praises him; he makes room for Sudās [or the liberal sacrificer—kal-yāṇa-dānāya yajamānāya. Sāyaṇa]; he gives riches repeatedly to his worshipper."

vii. 25, 3. S'atam te siprinn ūtayaḥ Sudāse sahasram samsāḥ uta rātir astu | jahi vadhar vanusho marttyasya asme dyumnam adhi ratnam cha dhehi |

"Let a hundred succours come to Sudās, a thousand desirable (gifts) and prosperity. Destroy the weapon of the murderous. Confer renown and wealth on us."

(Sāyana takes sudās here and in all the following citations to signify a "liberal man.")

¹¹⁵ Professor Roth renders this passage differently in his Litt. u. Gesch. des Weda, p. 132; as does also Prof. Benfey, Orient und Occident, i. p. 590.

116 In R.V. i. 185, 9, we find the word sudas in the comparative degree sudastara, where it must have the sense of "very liberal": bhūri chid aryaḥ sudastarāya } "(give the wealth) of my enemy, though it be abundant to (me who am) most liberal." In v. 53, 2, the term sudās appears to be an adjective: ā etān ratheshu tasthushaḥ kaḥ śuśrāva kathā yayuḥ | kasmai sasruḥ sudāse anu āpayaḥ ilābhir vrishṭayaḥ saha | "Who has heard them (the Maruts) mounted on their cars, how they have gone? To what liberal man have they resorted as friends, (in the form of) showers with blessings?"

vii. 32. 10. Nakih Sudāso ratham pari āsa na rīramat | Indro yasya avitā yasya Maruto gamat sa gomati vraje |

"No one can oppose or stop the chariot of Sudās. He whom Indra, whom the Maruts, protect, walks in a pasture filled with cattle."

vii. 53, 3 : Uto hi vam̃ ratnadheyāni santi purūni dyāvā - pṛithivī Sudāse

"And ye, o Heaven and Earth, have many gifts of wealth for Sudās for the liberal man]."

vii. 60, 8. Yad gopāvad Aditih sarma bhadram Mitro yachhanti Varunah Sudāse | tasminn ā tokam tanayam dadhānāh mā karma devahelanam turāsah | 9.... pari dveshobhir Aryamā vrinaktu urum Sudāse vrishanau u lokam |

"Since Aditi, Mitra, and Varuna afford secure protection to Sūdas (or the liberal man), bestowing on him offspring;—may we not, o mighty deities, commit any offence against the gods. 9.... May Aryaman rid us of our enemies. (Grant) ye vigorous gods, a wide space to Sudās."

There is another passage, vii. 64, 3 (bravad yathā nah ād arih Sudāse), to which I find it difficult to assign the proper sense.

Vasishtha is referred to in the following passages of the Brāhmaṇas: Kāṭhaka 37, 17. Pishayo vai Indram pratyaksham na apaśyams tam Vasishthah eva pratyasham apaśyat | so'bibhed "itarebhyo mā rishibhyah pravakshyati" iti 118 | so'bravīd "brāhmaṇam te vakshyāmi yathā tvat-purohitāḥ prajāḥ prajanishyante | atha mā itarebhyaḥ rishibhyo mā pravochaḥ" iti | tasmai etān stoma-bhāgān abravīt tato Vasishṭha-purohitāḥ prajāḥ prājāyanta |

"The rishis did not behold Indra face to face; it was only Vasishtha who so beheld him. He (Indra) was afraid lest Vasishtha should reveal him to the other rishis; and said to him, 'I shall declare to thee a Brāhmana in order that men may be born who shall take thee for their purohita. Do not reveal me to the other rishis.' Accordingly he declared to him these parts of the hymn. In consequence men were born who took Vasishtha for their purchita."

¹¹⁷ Quoted by Professor Weber, Indische Studien, iii. 478.

¹¹⁸ The words from so 'bibhet down to iti are omitted in the Taitt. Sanhitā, iii. 5, 2, 2, where this passage is also found. Weber refers in Ind. St. ii. to another part of the Kāṭhaka, ii. 9, where Vasishṭha is alluded to as having "seen" a text beginning with the word purovāta during a time of drought ("Purovāta" iti vrishṭy-apete bhūta-grāme Vasishṭho dadars'a).

Professor Weber refers in the same place to a passage of the Satapatha Brāhmana relating to the former superiority of Vasishṭha's family in sacred knowledge and priestly functions:

xii. 6, 1, 38. Vasishtho ha virājam vidānchakāra tām ha Indro'bhidadhyau | sa ha uvācha "rishe virājam ha vai vettha tām me brūhi" iti | sa ha uvācha "kim mama tatah syād" iti | "sarvasya cha te yajnasya prāyaśchittim brūyām rūpam cha tvā darśayeya" iti | sa ha uvācha "yad nu me sarvasya yajnasya prāyaśchittim brūyāh kim u sa syād yam tvam rūpam darśayethāh" iti | jīva-svarga eva asmāl lokāt preyād" iti | tato ha etām rishir Indrāya virājam uvācha "iyam vai virād" iti | tasmād yo'syai bhūyishtham labhate sa eva śreshtho bhavati | atha ha etām Indrah rishaye prāyaśchittim uvācha agnihotrād agre ā mahatah ukthāt | tāh ha sma etāh purā vyāhritīr Vasishthāh eva viduh | tasmād hà sma purā Vāsishthah eva brahmā bhavati |

"Vasishtha was acquainted with the Virāj (a particular Vedic metre). Indra desired it; and said, 'O rishi, thou knowest the Virāj: declare it to me.' Vasishtha asked: 'What (advantage) will result to me from doing so?' (Indra replied) 'I shall both explain to thee the forms for rectifying anything amiss (prāyaśchitti) 110 in the entire sacrifice, and show thee its form.' Vasishtha further enquired, 'If thou declarest to me the remedial rites for the entire sacrifice, what shall he become to whom thou wilt show the form?' (Indra answered) 'He shall ascend from this world to the heaven of life.' The rishi then declared this Virāj to Indra, saying, 'this is the Virāj.' Wherefore it is he who obtains the most of this (Virāj) that becomes the most eminent. Then Indra explained to the rishi this remedial formula from the agnihotra to the great uktha. Formerly the Vasishthas alone knew these sacred syllables (vyāhriti). Hence in former times a Vasishtha only was a (priest of the kind called) brāhmān."

Professor Weber quotes also the following from the Kāthaka 32, 2. Yām abrāhmaṇah prāśnāti sā skannā āhutis tasyā vai Vasishthah eva prāyaśchittam vidānchakāra | "The oblation of which a person not a brāhman partakes is vitiated. Vasishtha alone knew the remedial rite for such a case."

In the Shadvimsa Brahmana of the Sama-veda, quoted by the same writer (Ibid. i. 39, and described p. 37, as possessing a distinctly formed Brahmanical character indicating a not very early date), we have the following passage:

i. 5. Indro ha Viśvāmitrāya uktham uvācha Vasishṭhāya brahma vāg uktham ity eva Viśvāmitrāya mano brahma Vasishṭhāya | tad vai etad Vāsishṭham brahma | api ha evamvidham vā Vāsishṭham vā brahmāṇam kurvīta |

"Indra declared the uktha (hymn) to Viśvāmitra, and the brāhmān (devotion) to Vasishtha. The uktha is expression (vāk); that (he made known) to Viśvāmitra; and the brāhmān is the soul; that (he made known) to Vasishtha. Hence this brāhmān (devotional power) belongs to the Vasishthas. Moreover, let either a person of this description, or a man of the family of Vasishtha, be appointed a brāhmān-priest."

Here the superiority of Vasishtha over Viśvāmitra is clearly asserted. 120

Vasishtha is mentioned in the Mahābhārata, Santip. verses 11221 ff., as having communicated divine knowledge to king Janaka, and as referring (see verses 11232, 11347, 11409, 11418, 11461, etc.) to the Sānkhya and Yoga systems. The sage is thus characterized:

11221. Vasishtham śreshtham ūsīnam rishīnām bhūskara-dyutim | paprachha Janako rūjā jnānam naiśśreyasam param | param adhyūtma-kuśalam adhātma-gati-niśchayam | Maitrūvarunim ūsīnam abhivūdya kritānjalih |

"King Janaka with joined hands saluted Vasishtha the son of Mitra and Varuna, the highest and most excellent of rishis, resplendent as the sun, who was acquainted with the Supreme Spirit, who had ascertained the means of attaining to the Supreme Spirit; and asked him after that highest knowledge which leads to final beatitude."

The doctrine which the saint imparts to the king he professes to have derived from the eternal Hiranyagarbha, i.e. Brahmā (avāptam etad hi mayā sanātanād Hiranyagarbhād gadato narādhipa).

I have already in former parts of this volume quoted passages from Manu, the Vishnu Purāṇa, and the Mahābhārata, regarding the creation of Vasishtha. The first-named work (see above, p. 36) makes him one of ten Maharshis created by Manu Sväyambhuva in the first (or Sväyambhuva) Manvantara. The Vishnu Puräna (p. 65) declares him to have been one of nine mind-born sons or Brahmäs created by Brahmä in the Manvantara just mentioned. The same Puräna, however, iii. 1, 14, makes him also one of the seven rishis of the existing or Vaivasvata Manvantara, of which the son of Vivasvat, Sräddhadeva, Sräddhadeva, samvarttate dhāmān sāmpratam saptame 'ntare . . . Vasishthah Kāsyapo 'thātrir Jamadagnih sa-Gautamah | Viśvāmitra-Bharadvājau sapta saptarshayo 'bhavan). The Mahābhārata (see p. 122) varies in its accounts, as in one place it does not include Vasishtha among Brahmā's six mind-born sons, whilst in a second passage it adds him to the number which is there raised to seven, 122 and in a third text describes him as one of twenty-one Prajāpatis.

¹²⁰ Professor Weber mentions (Ind. St. i. 53) that in the commentary of Rāma-krishna on the Pāraskara Grihya Sūtras allusion is made to the "Chhandogas who follow the Sūtras of the Vasishtha family" Vāsishtha-sūtrānuchārinas chhandogāh).

According to the Vishnu Purana, i. 10, 10, "Vasishtha had by his wife Urija" (one of the daughters of Daksha, and an allegorical personage, see V. P. i. 7, 18), seven sons called Rajas, Gātra, Ūrddhvabāhu, Savana, Anagha, Sutapas, and Sukra, who were all spotless rishis" (Ūrjjāyām cha Vasishthasya saptājāyanta vai sutāḥ | Rajo-Gātrordhhvabāhuścha Savanaś chānaghas tathā | Sutapāḥ Sukraḥ ity ete sarve saptarshayo 'malāh'). This must be understood as referring to the Svayambhuva Manvantara. The Commentator says these sons were the seven rishis in the third Manvantara (saptarshayas tritīyamanvantare). In the description of that period the V. P. merely says, without naming them (iii. 1, 9) that "the seven sons of Vasishtha were the seven rishis" (Vasishtha-tanayās tatra sapta saptarshayo 'bhavan). 128 The Bhagavata Purana (iv. 1, 40 f.) gives the names of Vasishtha's sons differently; and also specifies S'aktri and others as the offspring of a different marriage. (Compare Professor Wilson's notes on these passages of the Vishnu Purāna.)

¹²¹ See above p. 209, note 66, and pp. 188 ff.

¹²² In another verse also (Adip. 6638, which will be quoted below in a future section) he is said to be a mind-born son of Brahmā.

¹²³ Ürjja, who in the Vishnu P. iii. 1, 6, is stated to be one of the rishis of the second or Svārochisha Manvantara, is said in the Vāyu P. to be a son of Vasishtha. See Professor Wilson's note (vol. iii. p. 3) on Vishnu P. iii. 1, 6. The Vāyu P. also declares that one of the rishis in each of the fourth and fifth Manvantaras was a son of Vasishtha. (See Prof. Wilson's notes (vol. iii. pp. 8 and 11) on Vishnu P. iii. 1.)

In Manu, ix. 22 f., it is said that "a wife acquires the qualities of the husband with whom she is duly united, as a river does when blended with the ocean. 23. Akshamālā, though of the lowest origin, became honourable through her union with Vasishtha, as did also Sārangī through her marriage with Mandapāla" (Yādrig-guṇena bharttrā strī saṃyujyate yathāvidhi | tādrig-guṇā sā bhavati samudreṇeva nimnagā | 23. Akshamālā Vasishtheṇa saṃyuktā 'dhama-yoni-jā | Sʿārangī Mandāpalena jagāmābhyarhaṇīyatām).

Vasishtha's wife receives the same name (Vasishthas chākshamālayā) in a verse of the Mahābhārata (Udyogaparvan, v. 3970); but in two other passages of the same work, which will be adduced further on, she is called Arundhatī. 125

According to the Vishnu Purāna (ii. 10, 8) Vasishtha is one of the superintendents who in the month of Āshādha abide in the Sun's chariot, the others being Varuna, Rambhā, Sahajanyā, Huhu, Budha, and Rathachitra (Vasishtho Varuno Rambhā Sahajanyā Huhur Budhah | Rathachitras tathā S'ukre vasanty Āshadha-sanjnite); whilst in the month of Phalguna (ibid. v. 16) the rival sage Viśvāmitra exercises the same function along with Vishnu, Aśvatara, Rambhā, Sūryavarchas, Satyajit, and the Rākshasa Yajnāpeta (śrūyatām chāpare sūrye phālgune nivasanti ye | Vishnur Aśvataro Rambhā Sūryavarchāś cha Satyajit | Viśvāmitras tathā raksho Yajnāpeto mahātmanah).

At the commencement of the Vāyu Purāṇa Vasishṭha is characterized as being the most excellent of the rishis (rishīṇām cha varishṭhāya Vasishṭhāya mahātmane).

It is stated in the Vishnu Purāṇa, iii. 3, 9, that the Vedas have been already divided twenty-eight times in the course of the present or Vaivasvata Manvantara; and that this division has always taken place in the Dvāpara age of each system of four yugas. In the first Dvāpara Brahmā Svayambhū himself divided them; in the sixth Mrityu (Death, or Yama); whilst in the eighth Dvāpara it was Vasishtha who was the Vyāsa or divider (Ashṭāvimsatikritvo vai vedāḥ vyastāḥ maharshibhiḥ | Vaivasvate 'ntare tasmin dvāpareshu punaḥ punaḥ | 10. Dvāpare prathame vyastāḥ svayam vedāḥ Svayambhuvā | 11. . . . Mrityuḥ shashthe smritaḥ prabhuḥ | Vasishthas chāshtame smritaḥ).

¹²⁴ Two lines below Haimavatī is mentioned as the wife of Visvāmitra (Haimavatyā cha Kausikah).

¹²⁵ In the St. Petersburg Lexicon akshamālā is taken for an epithet of Arundhatī.

Vasishtha was, as we have seen above, the family-priest of Nimi, son of Ikshvāku, who was the son of Manu Vaivasvata, and the first prince of the solar race of kings; and in a passage of the Mahābhā-rata, Ādip. (6643 f.), which will be quoted in a future section, he is stated to have been the purchita of all the kings of that family. He is accordingly mentioned in Vishnu Purāṇa, iv. 3, 18, as the religious teacher of Sagara, the thirty-seventh in descent from Ikshvāku (tat-kula-gurum Vasishtham śaraṇam jagmuh); and as conducting a sacrifice for Saudāsa or Mitrasaha, a descendant in the fiftieth generation of the same prince (Vishnu P. iv. 4, 25, Kālena gachhatā sa Saudāso yajnam ayajat | parinishthita-yajne cha āchāryye Vasishthe nishkrānte ityādi).

Vasishtha is also spoken of in the Rāmāyaṇa, ii. 110, 1 (see above, p. 115), and elsewhere (ii. 111, 1, etc.), as the priest of Rāma, who appears from the Vishṇu Purāṇa, (iv. 4, 40, and the preceding narrative), to have been a descendant of Ikshvāku in the sixty-first generation. 120

Vasishtha, according to all these accounts, must have been possessed of a vitality altogether superhuman; for it does not appear that any of the accounts to which I have referred intend under the name of Vasishtha to denote merely a person belonging to the family so called, but to represent the founder of the family himself as taking part in the transactions of many successive ages.

It is clear that Vasishtha, although, as we shall see, he is frequently designated in post-vedic writings as a Brāhman, was, according to some other authorities I have quoted, not really such in any proper sense of the word, as in the accounts which are there given of his birth he is declared to have been either a mind-born son of Brahmā, or the son of Mitra, Varuṇa, and the Apsaras Urvaśī, or to have had some other supernatural origin.

SECT. VII. - Viśvāmitra.

Viśvāmitra is stated in the Anukramanikā, as quoted by Sāyana at the commencement of the third Mandala of the Rig-veda, to be the rishi, or "seer," of that book of the collection: Asya mandala-drashtā ¹²⁶ Rāma's genealogy is also given in the Rāmāyana, i. 70, and ii. 110, 6 ff., where, however, he is said to be only the thirty-third or thirty-fourth from Ikshvāku.

Viśvāmitrah rishih | "The rishi of this (the first hymn) was Viśvāmitra, the 'seer' of the Mandala." This, however, is to be understood with some exceptions, as other persons, almost exclusively his descendants, are said to be the rishis of some of the hymns.

I shall quote such passages as refer, or are traditionally declared to refer, to Viśvāmitra or his family.

In reference to the thirty-third hymn the Nirukta states as follows: ii. 24. Tatra itihāsam āchakshate | Viśvāmitrah rishih Sudāsah Paijavanasya purohito babhūvā.... | sa vittam grihītva Vipāt-chhutudryoh sambhedam āyayau | anuyayur itare | sa Viśvāmitro nadīs tushtāva "gādhāh bhavata" iti |

"They there relate a story. The rishi Viśvāmitra was the purohita of Sudās, the son of Pijavana. (Here the etymologies of the names Viśvāmitra, Sudās, and Pijavana are given.) Taking his property, he came to the confluence of the Vipās and S'utudrī (Sutlej); others followed. Viśvāmitra lauded the rivers (praying them to) become fordable."

Sāyana expands the legend a little as follows:

Purā kila Viśvāmitrah Paijavanasya Sudāso rājnah purohito babhūva | sa cha paurohityena labdha-dhanah sarvam dhanam ādāya Vipāṭ-chhutu-dryoh sambhedam āyayau | anuyayur itare | athottitīrshur Viśvāmitro 'gādha-jale te nadyau drishṭvā uttaraṇārtham ādyābhis tisribhis tushṭāva |

"Formerly Viśvāmitra was the purchita of king Sudās, the son of Pijavana. He, having obtained wealth by means of his office as purchita, took the whole of it, and came to the confluence of the Vipāś and the Sutudrī. Others followed. Being then desirous to cross, but perceiving that the waters of the rivers were not fordable, Viśvāmitra, with the view of getting across lauded them with the first three verses of the hymn."

The hymn makes no allusion whatever to Sudās, but mentions the son of Kuśika (Viśvāmitra) and the Bharatas. It is not devoid of poetical beauty, and is as follows:

R.V. iii. 33, 1 (= Nirukta, ix. 39). Pra parvatānām uśatī upasthād aśve iva vishite hāsamāne | gāveva śubhre mātarā rihāne Vipāt Chhutudrī payasā javete | 2. Indreshite prasavam bhikshamāne achha samudram rathyā iva yāthaḥ | samārāne ūrmibhiḥ pinvamāne anyā vām anyām api eti śubhre | 3. Achha sindhum mātritamām ayāsam Vipāśam ūrvīm

subhagam aganma | vatsam iva matara samrihane samanam yonim anu sancharantī | 4. Enā vayam payasā pinvamānā anu yonim deva-kritam charantīh | na varttave prasavah sarga-taktah kimyur vipro nadyo johavīti | , 5 (= Nirukta, ii. 25). Ramadhvam me vachase somyaya ritararir upa muhūrttam evaih | pra sindhum achha brihatī manīshā avasyur ahve Kuśikasya sūnuh | 6 (= Nir. ii. 26). Indro asmān aradat vajra-bāhur apāhan Vrittram paridhim nadīnām | devo 'nayat Savitā supānis tasya vayam prasave yāmah ūrvīh | 7. Pravāchyam śaśvadhā vīryam tad Indrasya karma yad Ahim vivrischat | vi vajrena parishado jaghana āyann āpo ayanam ichhamānāh | 8. Etad vacho jaritar mā 'pi mrishtāh ā yat te ghoshān uttarā yugāni | uktheshu kāro prati no jushasva mā no ni kah purushatra namas te | 9. O su svasārah kārave śrinota yayau yo dūrād anasā rathena | ni su namadhvam bhavata supārā adhoakshah sindhavah srotyābhih | 10 (= Nir. ii. 27). Ā te kāro śrinavāma vachāmsi yayātha durād anasā rathena | ni te namsai pīpyānā iva yoshā maryāya iva kanyā śaśvachai te | 11. Yad anga tvā Bharatāh santareyur qavyan grāmah ishitah Indra-jūtah | arshād aha prasavah sarga-taktah ā vo vrine sumatim yajniyanam | 12. Atarishur Bharatah gavyavah sam abhakta viprah sumatim nadīnām | pra pinvadhvam ishayantīh surādhāh ā vakshanāh prinadhvam yāta śībham

"1. (Viśvāmitra speaks): Hastening eagerly from the heart of the mountains, contending like two mares let loose, like two bright mothercows licking 127 (each her calf), the Vipāś and Sutudrī rush onward with their waters. 2. Impelled by Indra, seeking a rapid course, ye move towards the ocean, as if mounted on a car. Running together, as ye do, swelling with your waves, the one of you joins the other, ye bright streams. 3. I have come to the most motherly stream; we have arrived at the broad and beautiful Vipāś; proceeding, both of them, like two mother(-cows) licking each her calf, to a common receptacle. 4. (The rivers reply): Here swelling with our waters we move forward to the receptacle fashioned by the gods (the ocean); our headlong course cannot be arrested. What does the sage desire that he invokes the rivers? 5. (Viśvāmitra says): Stay your course for a moment, ye pure streams, (yielding) to my pleasant words. With a powerful prayer, I, the son

Prof. Roth (Illustr. of Nirukta, p. 133) refers to vii. 2. 5 (pūrvī śiśum na mātarā rihāne) as a parallel passage.
 Prof. Roth (Litt. u. Gesch. des Weda, p. 103) renders: "Listen joyfully for a of Kuśika, 129 desiring succour, invoke the river. 6. (The rivers answer): Indra, the wielder of the thunderbolt, has hollowed out our channels; he has smitten Ahi who hemmed in the streams. Savitri the skilfulhanded has led us hither; by his impulse we flow on in our breadth. 7. For ever to be celebrated is the heroic deed of Indra, that he has split Vrittra in sunder. He smote the obstructions with his thunderbolt; and the waters desiring an outlet went on their way. 8. Do not, o utterer of praises, forget this word, which future ages will re-echo to thee. In hymns, o bard, show us thy devotion; do not humble us before men; reverence be paid to thee. 9. (Viśvāmitra says): Listen, o sisters, to the bard who has come to you from afar with waggon and chariot. Sink down: become fordable: reach not up to our chariot-axles with your streams. 10. (The rivers answer): We shall listen to thy words, o bard: thou hast come from far with waggon and chariot. I will bow down to thee like a woman with full breast 130 (suckling her child); as a maid to a man will I throw myself open to thee. 11. (Viśvāmitra says): When the Bharatas, 131 that war-loving tribe, sent forward, impelled by Indra, have crossed thee, then thy headlong current shall hold on its course. I seek the favour of you the adorable. 12. The war-loving Bharatas have crossed: the Sage has obtained the favour of the rivers. Swell on impetuous, and fertilizing; fill your channels; roll rapidly."

The next quotation is from the fifty-third hymn of the same third Mandala, verses 6 ff.:

6. Apāh somam astam Indra pra yāhi kalyānīr jāyā suranam grihe moment to my amiable speech, ye streams rich in water; stay your progress;" and adds in a note: "I do not connect the particle upa with ramadhvam, as the Nirukta and Sayana do; the fact that upa stands in another Pada (quarter of the verse) requires a different explanation. The most of those interpretations of the Commentator which destroy the sense have their ultimate ground in the circumstance that he combines the words of different divisions of the verse; and any one may easily convince himself that every Pada has commonly a separate sense, and is far more independent of the others than is the case in the sloka of later times." In his Lexicon Roth renders ritāvarī in this passage by "regular," "equably flowing."

129 "Kusika was a king" (Kusiko rājā babhūva. Nir. ii. 25). Sāyana calls him a roval rishi.

130 This is the sense assigned by Prof. Roth, s.v. pī to pīpyānā. Sāyaṇa, following Yaska, ii. 27, gives the sense "suckling her child." Prof. Aufrecht considers that the word means "pregnant." In the next clause sasvachai is rendered in the manner suggested by Prof. A., who compares R.V. x. 18, 11, 12, 131 "The men of the family of Bharata, my people" (Bharata-kula-jāh madīyāh sarve." Sāyana).

te | yatra rathasya brihato nidhanam vimochanam vajino dakshinavat | 7. Ime bhojāh angiraso virūpāh divas putrāso asurasya vīrāh Viśvāmitrāya dadato maghāni sahasra-sāve pratirante āyuh | 8. Rūpam rūpam maghavā bobhavīti māyāh krinvānas tanvam pari svām | trir yad divah pari muhūrttam āgāt svair mantrair anritupāh ritāvā | 9. Mahān rishir deva-jāh deva-jūto astabhnāt sindhum arnavam nrichakshāh | Viśvāmitro yad avahat Sudāsam apriyāyata Kuśikebhir Indrah | 10. Hamsāh iva kṛinutha ślokam adribhir madanto gīrbhir adhvare sute sachā | devebhir viprāh rishayo nrichakshaso vi pibadhvam Kuśikāh somyam madhu 11. Upa preta Kuśikāś chetayadhvam aśvam rāye pra munchata Sudāsah | rājā vrittram janghanat prāg apāg udag atha yajāte vare ā prithivyāḥ | 12. Yaḥ ime rodasī ubhe aham Indram atushṭavam | Viśvāmitrasya rakshati brahma idam Bhāratam janam | 13. Viśvāmitrāh arāsata brahma Indrāya vajrine | karad in naḥ surādhasaḥ | 14 (=Nir. vi. 32). Kim te kurvanti Kīkaţeshu gāvo nāśiram duhre na tapanti gharmam | ā no bhara Pramagandasya vedo Naichāśakham maghavan randhaya nah | 15. Sasarparīr amatim bādhamānā brihad mimāya Jamadagnidattā | ā Sūryasya duhitā tatāna śravo deveshu amritam ajuryam | 16. Sasarparīr abharat tūyam ebhyo adhi śravah panchajanyāsu krishtishu \ sā pakshyā navyam āyur dadhānā yām me palasti-jamadagnayo daduh | 21. Indra ūtibhir bahulābhir no adya yāchchhreshthābhir maghavan śūra jinva | yo no dveshti adharah sas padīshta yam u dvishmas tam u prāno jahātu | 22. parašum chid vi tapati simbalam chid vi vrišchati | ukhā chid Indra yeshantī prayastā phenam asyati. 23. Na sāyakasya chikite janāso lodham nayanti paśu manyamānāh | nāvājinam vājināh hāsayanti na gardabham puro aśvān nayanti | 24. Ime Indra Bharatasya putrāh apapitvam chikitur na prapitvam | hinvanti aśvam aranam na nityam jyāvājam pari nayanti ājau |

"6. Thou hast drunk soma; depart, Indra, to thy abode: thou hast a handsome wife and pleasure in thy house. In whatever place thy great chariot rests, it is proper that the steed should be unyoked. 7. These bountiful Virūpas of the race of Angiras, 132 heroic sons of the divine ¹³² Sāyana says that the liberal men are the Kshattriyas, sons of Sudās, that $vir\bar{u}p\bar{u}h$ means their different priests of the race of Angiras, Medhātithi, and others, and that the sons of the sky are the Maruts, the sons of Rudra (Ime yāgam kurvānāh bhojāh Saudāsāh kshattriyāh teshām yājakāh virūpāh nānārūpāh Medhātithi-prabhritayo 'ngirasas cha divo 'surasya devebhyo 'pi balavato Rudrasya putrāso Marutah). The Virūpas are connected with Angiras in R.V. x. 62, 5; and a Virūpa is mentioned in i. 45, 3; and viii. 64, 6.

Dyaus (sky), bestowing wealth upon Viśvāmitra at the sacrifice with a thousand libations, prolong their lives. 8. The opulent god (Indra) constantly assumes various forms, exhibiting with his body illusive appearances; since he came from the sky thrice in a moment, drinking (soma) according to his own will, at other than the stated seasons, and yet observing the ceremonial. 9.135 The great rishi, god-born, god-impelled, leader of men, stayed the watery current; when Viśvāmitra conducted Sudas, Indra was propitiated through the Kuśikas. 10. Like swans, ye make a sound with the (soma-crushing) stones, exulting with your hymns when the libation is poured forth; ye Kuśikas, sage rishis, leaders of men, drink the honied soma with the gods.184 11. Approach, ye Kusikas, be alert; let loose the horse of Sudas to (conquer) riches; let the king smite strongly his enemy in the east, the west, and the north: and then let him sacrifice on the most excellent (spot) of the earth. 185 12. I Viśvāmitra have caused both heaven and earth to sing the praises of Indra; 136 and my prayer protects the race of Bharata. 13. The Viśvāmitras have offered up prayer to Indra the May he render us prosperous! 14. What are thy cows thunderer. doing among the Kīkaṭas,187 who neither draw from them the milk (which is to be mixed with soma), nor heat the sacrificial kettle. Bring to us the wealth of Pramaganda; subdue to us to the son of Nīchaśākha. 15. Moving swiftly, removing poverty, brought by the Jamadagnis, she has mightily uttered her voice: this daughter of the sun has conveved (our) renown, eternal and undecaying, (even) to the gods. 16. Moving swiftly she has speedily brought down (our) renown from them to the five races of men; this winged 188 goddess whom the aged Jamadagnis brought to us, has conferred on us new life." Omitting verses ¹³³ Verses 9-13 are translated by Prof. Roth, Litt. u. Gesch. des Weda, p. 106 f.

¹³⁴ Comp. M. Bh. Adip. v. 6695. Apibach cha tatah somam Indrena saha Kausikah | "And then the Kausika drank soma with Indra."

¹³⁵ Compare R.V. iii. 23, 4, which will be quoted below.

¹³⁶ Compare R.V. iv. 17, 1.

¹³⁷ Kikatāh nāma deso nāryya-nivāsah ["Kīkata is a country inhabited by people who are not Āryas." See the second vol. of this work, p. 362, and Journ. Royal As. Soc. for 1866, p. 340.

¹³⁸ Pakshyā. This word is rendered by Sāyaṇa "the daughter of the sun who causes the light and dark periods of the moon, etc." (Pakshasya pakshādi-nirvāha-kasya Sūryasya duhitā). Prof. Roth s.v. thinks the word may mean "she who changes according to the (light and dark) fortnights."

17-20 we have the following: "21. Prosper us to-day, o opulent Indra, by numerous and most excellent succours. May he who hates us fall down low; and may breath abandon him whom we hate." This is succeeded by three obscure verses, of which a translation will be attempted further on.

Sāyana prefaces verses 15 and 16 by a quotation from Shadguruśishya's Commentary on the Anukramanikā, which is given with an addition in Weber's Indische Studien i. 119 f. as follows: Sasarparidv-riche prahur itihasam puravidah Saudasa-nripater yajne Vasishthatmaja-S'aktinā | Viśvāmitrasyābhibhūtam balam vāk cha samantatah | Vāsishthenābhibhūtah sa hy avāsīdach cha Gādhi-jah | tasmai Brāhmīm tu Saurīm vā nāmnā vācham Sasarparīm | Sūrya-vesmana āhritya dadur vai Jamadagnayah | Kuśikānām tatah sā vān manāk chintām athānudat | upapreteti Kuśikān Viśvāmitro 'nvachodayat | labdhvā vācham cha hṛishṭātmā Jamadagnīn apūjayat | " Sasarparīr" iti dvābhyām rigbhyām Vācham stuvam svayam | "Regarding the two verses beginning "Sasarparīh" those acquainted with antiquity tell a story. At a sacrifice of king Saudāsa 139 the power and speech of Viśvāmitra were completely vanquished by Sakti, son of Vasishtha; and the son of Gādhi (Viśvāmitra) being so overcome, became dejected. The Jamadagnis drew from the abode of the Sun a Voice called "Sasarparī," the daughter of Brahmā, or of the Sun, and gave her to him. Then that voice somewhat dispelled the disquiet of the Jamadagnis [or, according to the reading of this line given by Sayana (Kuśikānām matih sā vāg amatim tam apanulat) "that Voice, being intelligence, dispelled the unintelligence of the Kuśikas."]. Viśvāmitra then incited the Kuśikas with the words upapreta 'approach' (see verse 11). And being gladdened by receiving the Voice, he paid homage to the Jamadagnis; praising them with the two verses beginning 'Sasarparih.'"

In regard to the verses 21-24 Sāyaṇa has the following remarks: "Indra ūtibhir ity ādyāś chatasro Vasishṭha-dveshiṇyaḥ | purā khalu Viśvāmitra-śishyaḥ Sudāḥ nāma rājarshir āsīt | sa cha kenachit kāraṇena Vasishṭha-dveshyo 'bhūt | Viśvāmitras tu śishyasya rakshārtham ābhir rigbhir Vasishṭham aśapat | imāḥ abhiśāpa-rūpāḥ | tāḥ richo Vasishṭhāḥ na śṛiṇvanti | "The four verses beginning 'o Indra, with succours' express hatred to Vasishṭha. There was formerly a royal rishi called ¹³⁰ The Brihaddevatā, which has some lines nearly to the same effect as these I have quoted (see Ind. Stud. i. 119), gives Sudās instead of Saudāsa.

Sudās, a disciple of Viśvāmitra; who for some reason had incurred the ill-will of Vasishtha. For his disciple's protection Viśvāmitra cursed Vasishtha in these verses. They thus consist of curses, and the Vasishthas do not listen to them."

In reference to the same passage the Bṛihaddevatā iv. 23 f., as quoted in Indische Studien, i. 120, has the following lines: Parāś chatasro yās tattra Vasishṭha-dveshinīr viduh | Viśvāmitreṇa tāḥ proktāḥ abhiśāpāḥ iti smṛitāḥ | dvesha-dveshās tu tāḥ proktāḥ vidyāch chaivābhichārikāḥ | Vasishṭhās tu na śṛiṇvanti tad āchārṛyaka-sammatam | kīrttanāch chhravaṇād vā 'pi mahān doshaḥ prajāyate | śatadhā bhidyate mūrdhā kīrttitena śrutena vā | teshām bālāḥ pramīyante tasmāt tās tu na kīrttayet | "The other four verses of that hymn, which are regarded as expressing hatred to Vasishṭha, were uttered by Viśvāmitra, and are traditionally reported to contain imprecations. They are said to express hatred in return for (?) hatred, and should also be considered as incantations. The descendants of Vasishṭha do not listen to them, as this is the will of their preceptor. Great guilt is incurred by repeating or hearing them. The heads of those who do so are split into a hundred fragments; and their children die. Wherefore let no one recite them."

Durga, the commentator on the Nirukta, 140 in accordance with this injunction and warning, says in reference to verse 23: Yasmin nigame esha śabdaḥ (lodhaḥ) sā Vasishtha-dveshinī rik | aham cha Kāpishthalo Vāsishthaḥ | atas tām na nirbravīmi | "The text in which this word (lodha) occurs is a verse expressing hatred of Vasishtha. But I am a Kāpishthala of the family of Vasishtha; and therefore do not interpret it."

The following text also may have reference to the personal history of Viśvāmitra: R.V. iii. 43, 4. Ā cha tvām etā vrishaṇā vahāto harī sakhāyā sudhurā svangā | dhānāvad Indrah savanam jushānah sakhā sakhyuḥ śriṇavad vandanāni | 5. Kuvid mā gopam karase janasya kuvid rājānam maghavann rijīshin | kuvid mā rishim papivāmsam sutasya kuvid me vasvo amritasya śikshāḥ | "4. May these two vigorous brown steeds, friendly, well-yoked, stout-limbed, convey thee hither. May Indra gratified by our libation mingled with grain, hear (like) a friend, the praises of a friend. 5. Wilt thou make me a ruler of the people? wilt thou make me a king, o impetuous lord of riches? wilt thou make me a rishi a drinker of soma? wilt thou endow me with imperishable wealth?"

As quoted both by Prof. Roth, Litt. u. Gesch. des Weda, p. 108, note, and by Prof. Müller, Pref. to Rig-veda, vol. ii. p. lvi.

The next passage refers to Devasravas and Devavata, of the race of Bharata, who are called in the Anukramanika, quoted by Sayana, "sons of Bharata" (Bharatasya putrau); but one of whom at least is elsewhere, as we shall see, said to be a son of Viśvāmitra: R.V. iii. 23, 2. Amanthishtam Bharata revad Agnim Devasravah Devavatah sudaksham | Agne vi pasya brihatā 'bhi rāyā ishām no netā bhavatād anu dyūn | 3. Daśa kshipah pūrvyam sīm ajījanan sujātam mātrishu priyam | Agnim stuhi Daivavātam Devaśravo yo jananām asad vašī | 4. Ni tvā dadhe vare ā prithivyāh ilāyās pade sudinatve ahnām | Drishadvatyām mānushe Āpayāyām Sarasvatyām revad Agne didīhi | "2. The two Bhāratas Devaśravas and Devavāta have brilliantly created by friction the powerful Agni. Look upon us, o Agni, manifesting thyself with much wealth; be a bringer of nourishment to us every day. 3. The ten fingers (of Devavāta) have generated the ancient god, happily born and dear to his mothers. Praise, o Devaśravas, Agni, the offspring of Devavāta, who has become the lord of men. 4. I placed (or he placed) thee on the most excellent spot of earth on the place of worship,141 at an auspicious time. Shine, o Agni, brilliantly on the (banks of the) Drishadvatī, on (a site) auspicious for men, on (the banks of) the Āpayā, of the Sarasvatī."

Viśvāmitra is mentioned along with Jamadagni in the fourth verse of the 167th hymn of the tenth Mandala, which is ascribed to these two sages as its authors: Prasūto bhaksham akaram charāv api stomam chemam prathamah sūrir un mrije | sute sātena yadi āgamam vām prati Viśvāmitra-Jamadagnī dame | "Impelled, I have quaffed this draught of soma when the oblation of boiled rice was presented; and I, the first bard, prepare this hymn, whilst I have come to you, o Viśvāmitra and Jamadagni in the house, with that which has been offered as a libation."

The family of the Viśvāmitras has, as we have seen, been already mentioned in R.V. iii. 53, 13. They are also named in the following passages:

iii. 1, 21. Janman janman nihito Jātavedāļı Viśvāmitrebhir idhyate ajasraļı |

¹⁴¹ Compare R.V. iii. 29, 3, 4.

"The undecaying Jatavedas (Agni) placed (on the hearth) is in every generation kindled by the Viśvāmitras."

iii. 18, 4. Uch chhochishā sahasas putrah stuto brihad vayah sasamāneshu dhehi | revad Agne Viśvāmitreshu sam yor marmrijma te tanvam bhūri kritvah |

"Son of strength, when lauded, do thou with thy upward flame inspire vigorous life into thy worshippers; (grant) o Agni, brilliant good fortune and prosperity to the Viśvāmitras; many a time have we given lustre to thy body."

x. 89, 17. Eva te vayam Indra bhunjatīnām vidyāma sumatīnām navānām | vidyāma vastor avasā grinanto Viśvāmitrāh uta te Indra nūnam |

"Thus may we obtain from thee new favours to delight us: and may we, Viśvāmitras, who praise thee, now obtain riches through thy help, o Indra."

This hymn is ascribed in the Anukramanı to Renu, the son or descendant of Viśvāmitra; and the 18th verse is identical with the 22nd of the 30th hymn of the third Mandala, which is said to be Viśvāmitra's production.

In a verse already quoted (R.V. iii. 33, 11) Viśvāmitra is spoken of as the son of Kuśika; at least the Nirukta regards that passage as referring to him; and the Kuśikas, who no doubt belonged to the same family as Viśvāmitra, are mentioned in another hymn which I have cited (iii. 53, 9, 10). They are also alluded to in the following texts:

R.V. iii. 26, 1. Vaiśvānaram manasā 'gnim nichāyya havishmanto anushatyam svarvidam | sudānum devam rathiram vasūyavo gīrbhih ranvam Kuśikāso havāmahe | 3. Aśvo na krandan janibhih sam idhyate Vaiśvānarah Kuśikebhir yuge yuge | sa no Agnih suvīryam svaśvyam dadātu ratnam amriteshu jāgrivih |

"We, the Kuśikas, presenting oblations, and desiring riches, revering in our souls, as is meet, 142 the divine Agni Vaiśvānara, the heavenly, the bountiful, the charioteer, the pleasant, invoke him with hymns.... 3. Vaiśvanara, who (crackles) like a neighing horse, is kindled by the Kuśikas with the mothers (i.e. their fingers) in every age. May 142 This is the sense of anushatyam according to Prof. Aufrecht. Sāyaṇa makes it one of the epithets of Agni "he who is true to his promise in granting rewards according to works" (satyenānugatam karmānurūpa-phala-pradūne satya-pratijnam).

this Agni, who is ever alive among the immortals, bestow on us wealth, with vigour and with horses."

iii. 29, 15. Amitrāyudho Marutām iva prayāḥ prathamajāḥ brahmano viśvam id viduḥ | dyumnavad brahma Kuśikāsaḥ ā īrire ekaḥ eko dame Agnim̃ sam īdhire |

"Combating their enemies like the hosts of the Maruts, (the sages) the first-born of prayer 143 know everything; the Kuśikas have sent forth an enthusiastic prayer; they have kindled Agni, each in his own house."

iii. 30, 20. Imam kāmam mandaya gobhir aśvaiś chandrāvatā rādhasā paprathaś cha | svaryavo matibhis tubhyam viprāḥ Indrāya vāhaḥ Kuśi-kāso akran |

"Gratify this (our) desire with kine and horses; and prosper us with brilliant wealth. The wise Kuśikas, desiring heaven, have with their minds composed for thee a hymn."

iii. 42, 9. Tvām̃ sutasya pītaye pratnam Indra havāmahe | Kuśikāso avasyavah |

"We, the Kuśikas, desiring succour, summon thee the ancient Indra to drink the soma libation."

It will be seen from these passages that the Viśvāmitras and the Kuśikas assert themselves to have been ancient worshippers of Agni, and to be the composers of hymns, and the possessors of all divine knowledge.

In the eleventh verse of the tenth hymn of the first Mandala of the R.V., of which the traditional author is Madhuchhandas of the family of Viśvāmitra, the epithet Kauśika is applied to Indra: Ā tu nah Indra Kauśika mandasānah sutam piba | navyam āyuh pra sutira kridhi sahasra-sām rishim | "Come, Indra, Kauśika, drink our oblation with delight. Grant me new and prolonged life; make the rishi the possessor of a thousand boons."

Sāyana explains the epithet in question as follows: Kauśika Kuśikasya putra... yadyapi Viśvāmitro Kuśikasya putras tathāpi tadrūpena Indrasya eva utpannatvāt Kuśika-putratvam aviruddham | ayam vrittānto 'nukramanikāyām uktah | "Kuśikas tv Aishīrathir Indra-

¹⁴³ Compare with this the epithet of devajāh, "god-born," applied to Visvāmitra in iii. 53, 9 (above p. 342); and the claim of knowledge made for the Vasishthas in vii. 33, 7 (above p. 320).

tulyam putram ichhan brahmacharyam chachāra | tasya Indraḥ eva Gāthī putro jajne" iti | "Kausika means the son of Kusika . . . Although Viśvāmitra was the son of Kuśika, yet, as it was Indra who was born in his form, there is nothing to hinder Indra being the son of Kuśika. This story is thus told in the Anukramanikā: 'Kuśika, the son of Ishīratha desiring a son like Indra, lived in the state of a Brahmachārin. It was Indra who was born to him as his son Gathin." To this the Anukramanī (as quoted by Prof. Müller, Rig-veda, vol. ii. pref. p. xl.) adds the words: Gathino Viśvāmitrah | sa tritīyam mandalam apašyat | "The son of Gathin was Viśvamitra, who saw the third Mandala." In quoting this passage Professor Müller remarks: "According to Shadgurusishya this preamble was meant to vindicate the Rishitva of the family of Viśvāmitra: 144 Saty apavāde svayam rishitvam anubhavato Viśvāmitra-gotrasya vivakshayā itihāsam āha" | "Wishing to declare the rishihood of the family of Viśvāmitra which was controverted, although they were themselves aware of it, he tells a story."

Professor Roth in his Lexicon (s.v. Kauśika) thinks that this term as originally applied to Indra meant merely that the god "belonged, was devoted to," the Kuśikas; and Professor Benfey, in a note to his translation of R.V. i. 10, 11, 145 remarks that "by this family-name Indra is designated as the sole or principal god of this tribe."

144 Prof. Miller states that "Sāyana passes over what Kātyāyana (the author of the Anukramanī) says about the race of Visvāmitra;" and adds "This (the fact of the preamble being meant to vindicate the Rishitva of the family of Visvāmitra') was probably the reason why Sāyana left it out." It is true that Sāyana does not quote the words of the Anukramanī in his introductory remarks to the third Mandala; but as we have seen he had previously adduced the greater part of them in his note on i. 10, 11.

145 Orient und Occident, vol. i. p. 18, note 50. We have seen above, p. 345, that in R.V. iii. 23, 3, another god, Agni, is called Daivavāta, after the rishi Devavāta, by whom he had been kindled. Compare also the expression Daivodāso Agnih in R.V. viii. 92, 2, which Sāyaṇa explains as = Divodāsena āhūyamāno 'gnih, "Agni invoked by Divodāsa;" while Prof. Roth s.v. understands it to mean "Agni who stands in relation to Divodāsa." In R.V. vi. 16, 19, Agni is called Divodāsasy satpatih, "the good lord of Divodāsa." Agni is also called Bhārata in R.V. vi. 7, 1, 5; iv. 25, 4; vi. 16, 19. On the first text (ii. 7, 1) Sāyaṇa says Bharatāh ritvijāh | teshām sambandhī Bhāratah, "Bharatas are priests. Bhārata is he who is connected with them." On ii. 7, 5 he explains the word by ritvijām putra-sthānīya, "Thou who art in the place of a son to the priests." On the second text (iv. 25, 4) tasmai Agnir Bhāratah sarma yamsat, "may Agni Bhārata give him protection") Sāyaṇa takes Bhārata to mean "the bearer of the oblation" (havisho bharttā); but also refers to the S'.P.Br. i. 4, 2, 2, where it is said, "or Agni is called 'Bhārata,' because, becoming breath, he sustains all creatures"

According to the Vishnu Purana (pp. 398-400, Wilson, 4to. ed.) Viśvāmitra was the twelfth in descent from Purūravas, the persons intermediate being (1) Amāvasu, (2) Bhīma, (3) Kānchana, (4) Suhotra. (5) Jahnu, (6) Sumantu, (7) Ajaka, (8) Valākāśva, (9) Kuśa, (10) Kuśamba, and (11) Gadhi. The birth of Viśvamitra's father is thus described, V.P. iv. 7, 4: Teshām Kuśāmbah "śakra-tulyo me putro bhaved" iti tapas chachāra | tam cha ugra-tapasam avalokya "mā bhavatv anyo 'smat-tulya-vīryyah'' ity ātmanā eva asya Indrah putratvam agachhat | Gādhir nāma sa Kauśiko 'bhavat | "Kuśāmba (one of Kuśa's four sons) practised austere fervour with the view of obtaining a son equal to Indra. Perceiving him to be very ardent in his austere fervour. Indra, fearing lest another person should be born his own equal in vigour. became himself the son of Kusamba, with the name of Gadhi the Kauśika." Regarding the birth of Viśvāmitra himself, the Vishnu Purāna relates the following story: Gādhi's daughter Satvavatī had been given in marriage to an old Brāhman called Richīka, of the family of Bhṛigu. In order that his wife might bear a son with the qualities of a Brāhman, Richīka had prepared for her a dish of charu (rice, barley, and pulse, with butter and milk) for her to eat; and a similar mess for her mother, calculated to make her conceive a son with the character of a warrior. Satyavatī's mother, however, persuaded her to exchange messes. She was blamed by her husband on her return home for what she had done. I quote the words of the original:

V.P. iv. 7, 14. "Ati pāpe kim idam akāryyam bhavatyā kritam | atiraudram te vapur ālakshyate | nūnam tvayā tvan-mātri-satkritaś charur upayuktaḥ (? upabhuktaḥ) | na yuktam etat | 15. Mayā hi tattra charau sakalā eva śauryya-vīryya-bala-sampad āropitā tvadīye charāv apy akhila-śānti-jnāna-titikshādikā brāhmaṇa-sampat | etach cha vipa-

(esha u vai imāh prajāh prāṇo bhūtvā bibhartti tasmād vā iva āha "Bhārata" iti). Another explanation had previously been given that the word Bhărăta means "he who bears oblations to the gods." On the third text (vi. 16, 19) Sāyaṇa interprets the term in the same way. Roth, s.v., thinks it may mean "warlike." In R.V. vii. 8, 4, (V.S. 12, 34) we find the words pra pra ayam Agnir Bharatasya śrinve, "this Agni (the son ?) of Bharata has been greatly renowned." Sāyaṇa makes bharatasya = yajamānasya, "the worshipper," and pra pra śrinve = prathito bhavati, "is renowned." The Comm. on the Vāj. S. translates "Agni hears the invocation of the worshipper" (śrinve śrinute āhvānam). The S. P. Br. vi. 8, 1, 14, quotes the verse, and explains Bharata as meaning "Prajāpati, the supporter of the universe" (Prajāpatir vai Bharatah sa hi idam sarvam bibhartti).

rītam kurvatyās tava atiraudrāstra-dhāraṇa-māraṇa-nishṭha-kshattri-yāchāraḥ puttro bhavishyaty asyāś cha upaśama-ruchir brāhmaṇā-chāraḥ" | ity ākarṇya eva sā tasya pādau jagrāha praṇipatya cha enam āha "bhagavan mayā etad ajnānād anushṭhitam | prasādam̃ me kuru | .
mā evamvidaḥ putro bhavatu | kāmam evamvidhaḥ pautro bhavatu" | ity ukto munir apy āha "evam astv" iti | 16. Anantaram̃ cha sā Jamadagnim ajījanat tan-mātā cha Viśvāmitram̃ janayāmāsa | Satyavatī cha Kauśikī nāma nady abhavat | Jamadagnir Ikshvāku-vam̃śodbhavasya Reṇos tanayām̃ Reṇukām upayeme tasyām̃ cha aśesha-kshattra-vam̃śa-hantāram Paraśurāma-sanjnam bhagavataḥ sakala-loka-guror Nārāyaṇasya am̃śam̃ Jamadagnir ajījanat | Viśvāmitra-putras tu Bhārgavaḥ eva Sunaḥśepo nāma devair dattaḥ | tataś cha Devarāta-nāmā 'bhavat | tataś cha anye Madhuchhanda-Jayakrita-Devadeva-Ashṭaka-Kachhapa-Hūrītakākhyāḥ Viśvāmitra-putrāḥ babhūvuḥ | 17. Teshām̃ cha bahūni Kauśika-gotrāṇi rishyantareshu vaivāhyāni bhavanti |

"'Sinful woman, what improper deed is this that thou hast done? I behold thy body of a very terrible appearance. Thou hast certainly eaten the charu prepared for thy mother. This was wrong. For into that charu I had infused all the endowments of heroism, vigour, and force, whilst into thine I had introduced all those qualities of quietude, knowledge, and patience which constitute the perfection of a Brahman. Since thou hast acted in contravention of my design a son shall be born to thee who shall live the dreadful, martial, and murderous life of a Kshattriya; and thy mother's offspring shall exhibit the peaceful disposition and conduct of a Brahman.' As soon as she had heard this, Satyavatī fell down and seized her husband's feet, and said, 'My lord, I have acted from ignorance; show kindness to me; let me not have a son of the sort thou hast described; if thou pleasest, let me have a grandson of that description.' Hearing this the muni replied, 'Be it so.' Subsequently she bore Jamadagni, and her mother gave birth to Viśvāmitra. Satyavatī became the river called Kauśikī. Jamadagni wedded Renukā, the daughter of Renu, of the family of Ikshvāku; and on her he begot a son called Paraśurāma, the slayer of the entire race of Kshattrivas, who was a portion of the divine Nārāyana, the lord of the universe. 146 To Viśvāmitra a son called Sunaśśepa, of the race of

¹⁴⁶ According to the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, i. 3, 20, Parasurāma was the sixteenth incarnation of Vishnu: Avatāre shoḍaśame pasyan brahma-druho nripān | trissapta-

Bhṛigu, was given by the gods, who in consequence received the name of Devarāta ("god-given"). And then other sons, Madhuchhandas, Jayakṛita, Devadeva, Ashṭaka, Kachhapa, Hārītaka, etc., were born to Viśvāmitra. From them sprang many families of Kauśikas, which intermarried with those of other rishis."

The Harivamsa, verses 1425 ff., gives a similar account, but makes Kusika, not Kusamba, the grandfather of Visvamitra:

Kuśa-putrāḥ babhūvur hi chatvāro deva-varchasaḥ | Kuśikaḥ Kuśanā-bhaś cha Kuśāmbo Mūrtimām̃s tathā | Pahlavaiḥ saha samvriddho rājā vana-charais tadā | Kuśikas tu tapas tepe puttram Indra-samam̃ vibhuḥ | labheyam iti tam̃ S'akras trāsād abhyetya jajnivān | pūrne varsha-sahasre vai tam̃ tu S'akro hy apaśyata | aty ugra-tapasam̃ drishtvā sahasrākshaḥ purandaraḥ | samarthaḥ putra-janane svam evām̃śam avāsayat | putratve kalpayāmāsa sa devendraḥ surottamaḥ | sa Gādhir abhavad rājā Maghavān Kauśikaḥ svayam | Paurukutsy abhavad bhūryyā Gādhis tasyām ajāyata |

"Kuśa had four sons, equal in lustre to the gods, Kuśika, Kuśanābha, Kuśāmba, and Mūrttimat. Growing up among the Pahlavas, who dwelt in the woods, the glorious king Kuśika practised austere fervour, with the view of obtaining a son equal to Indra; and Indra from apprehension came and was born. When a thousand years had elapsed Sakra (Indra) beheld him. Perceiving the intensity of his austere fervour, the thousand-eyed, city-destroying, god of gods, highest of the deities, powerful to procreate offspring, introduced a portion of himself, and caused it to take the form of a son; and thus Maghavat himself became Gādhi, the son of Kuśika. Paurukutsī was the wife (of the latter), and of her Gādhi was born."

The Harivamsa then relates a story similar to that just extracted from the Vishnu Purāna regarding the births of Jamadagni and Visvāmitra, and then proceeds, verse 1456:

Aurvasyaivam Richīkasya Satyavatyūm mahāyaśāh | Jamadagnis tapovīryyāj jajne brahma-vidām varah | madhyamaś cha Sunaśśephah Sunahpuchhah kanishthakah | Viśvāmitram tu dāyādam Gādhih Kuśika-nandanah | janayāmāsa putram tu tapo-vidyā-śamātmakam | prāpya brah-kritvah kupito nihkshattrām akarod mahīm | "In his sixteenth incarnation, perceiving that kings were oppressors of Brāhmans, he, incensed, made the earth destitute of Kshattriyas one and twenty times."

marshi-samatām yo'yam saptarshitām gatah | Viśvāmitras tu dharmātmā nāmnā Viśvarathah smṛitah | jajne Bhṛigu-prasādena Kauśikād vam̃śavarddhanah | Viśvāmitrasya cha sutāh Devarātādayah smritāh | vikhyātās trishu lokeshu teshām nāmāni vai śṛiṇu | Devaśravāh Katiś chaiva yasmāt Kātyāyanāh smritāh | S'ālāvatyām Hiranyāksho Renor jajne 'tha Renumān | Sānkritir Gālavas chaiva Mudgalas cheti visrutāḥ | Madhuchhando Jayaś chaiva Devalaś cha tathā 'shṭakaḥ | Kachhapo Hāritaś chaiva Viśvāmitrasya te sutāh | teshām khyātāni gotrāni Kauśikānām mahātmanām | Pānino Babhravas chaiva Dhyānajapyās tathaiva cha | Pārthivāh Devarātāś cha S'ālankāyana-Vāskalāh | Lohitāh Yāmadūtāś cha tathā Kārīshayah smritāh | Sauśrutāh Kauśikāh rājams tathā 'nye Saindhavāyanāh | Devalāh Renavas chaiva Yājnavalkyāghamarshanāh | Audumbarāh hy Abhishnātās Tārakāyana-chunchulāh | S'ālāvatyāh Hiranyākshāh Sānkrityāh Gālavās tathā | Nārāyanir Naras chānyo Visvāmitrasya dhīmatah | rishy-antara-vivāhyāś cha Kauśikāh bahavah smritāh | Pauravasya mahārāja brahmarsheh Kauśikasya cha | sambandho 'py asya vamse 'smin brahma-kshattrasya viśrutah |

"Thus was the renowned Jamadagni, the most excellent of those possessed of sacred knowledge, born by the power of austere fervour to Richīka, the son of Ūrva, by Satyavatī. Their second son was S'unaśśepha 147 and the youngest S'unahpuchha. And Gādhi, son of Kuśika, begot as his son and inheritor Viśvāmitra, distinguished for austere fervour, science, and quietude; who attained an equality with Brahman-rishis, and became one of the seven rishis. The righteous Viśvāmitra, who was known by name as Viśvaratha, 148 was by the favour of a Bhṛigu born to the son of Kuśika, an augmenter (of the glory) of his race. The sons of Viśvāmitra are related to have been Devarāta and the rest, renowned in the three worlds. Hear their names: Devaśravas, Kati (from whom the Kātyāyanas had their name); Hiranyāksha, born of Sālāvatī, and Renumat of Renu; Sānkṛiti, Gālava, Mudgala, Madhuchhanda, Jaya, Devala, Ashṭaka, Kachhapa, Hārita—these were the sons of Viśvāmitra. From them the families of the great Kauśikas are said to have sprung: the Pāṇins, Babhrus, Dhānajapyas, Pārthivas, Devarātas, Sālankāyanas, Vāskalas, Lohitas, Yāmadūtas, Kārīshis, Sauśrutas, Kauśikas, Saindhavāyanas, Devalas, Renus, Yājnavalkyas, Aghamarshanas, Audumbaras, Abhishnātas, Tārakayanas, Chunchulas, Sālāvatyas, Hiranyākshas, Sānkrityas, and Gālavas. Nārāyani and Nara were also (descendants) of the wise Viśvāmitra. Many Kauśikas are recorded who intermarried with the families of other rishis. In this race of the Paurava and Kauśika Brahman-rishi, there is well known to have been a connection of the Brāhmans and Kshattriyas. S'unaśśepha, who was a descendant of Bhrigu, and obtained the position of a Kauśika, is recorded to have been the eldest of Viśvāmitra's sons."

¹⁴⁷ The Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, as we shall shortly see, makes 'S'unaśśepa' a son of Ajīgartta. The Mahābhārata Anuśūsanap. verse 186, coincides with the Hariyam̃śa.

148 In another passage of the Hariyam̃śa (verses 1764 ff.), which repeats the particulars given in this passage, it appears to be differently stated, verse 1766, that besides a daughter Satyavatī, and his son Viśvāmitra, Gādhi had three other sons, Viśvaratha, Viśvakrit, and Viśvajit (Vi'vāmitras tu Gādheyo rājā Viśvarathas tadā | Viśvakrid Viśvajich chaiva tathā Satyavatī nripa).

23

It will be observed that in this passage, Devaśravas is given as one of Viśvāmitra's sons. A Devaśravas, as we have already seen, is mentioned in R.V. iii. 23, 2, as a Bhārata, along with Devavāta. Here however in the Harivamśa we have no Devavāta, but a Devarāta, who is identified with S'unaśśepha. This, as we shall find, is also the case in the Aitareya Brāhmana.

In the genealogy given in both of the preceding passages, from the Vishuu Purāṇa, and the 27th chapter of the Harivamśa respectively, Viśvāmitra is declared to be the descendant of Amāvasu the third son of Purūravas. In the 32nd chapter of the Harivamśa, however, we find a different account. Viśvāmitra's lineage is there traced up to a Jahnu, as in the former case; but Jahnu is no longer represented as a descendant of Amāvasu, the third son of Purūravas; but (as appears from the preceding narrative) of Āyus, the eldest son of that prince, and of Puru, the great-grandson of Āyus. Professor Wilson (Vishuu Purāṇa, 4to. ed. p. 451, note 23) is of opinion that this confusion originated in the recurrence of the name of Suhotra in different genealogical lists, and in the ascription to one king of this name of descendants who were really sprung from another. It is not, however, clear that the genealogy of Viśvāmitra given in the Vishnu Purāna is the right one. For in the Rig-veda, as we have seen, he is connected with the Bharatas, and in the passage about to be quoted from the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, he is called a Bharata and his sons Kuśikas; and Bharata is said both in the Vishnu Purāṇa (Wilson's V.P. 4to. ed. p. 449) and in the Harivaṃśa (sect. 32, v. 1723, and preceding narrative) to be a descendant of Āyus and of Puru. Accordingly we have seen that the Harivaṃśa styles Viśvāmitra at once a Pauraya and a Kauśika.

149 Professor Wilson (V.P. 4to. ed. p. 405, note) gives these names, and remarks that the authorities add "an infinity of others, multiplied by intermarriages with other tribes, and who, according to the Vāyu, were originally of the regal caste like Visvāmitra; but like him obtained Brahmanhood through devotion. Now these gotras, or some of them at least, no doubt existed, partaking more of the character of schools of doctrine, but in which teachers and scholars were very likely to have become of one family by intermarrying; and the whole, as well as their original founder, imply the interference of the Kshattriya caste with the Brahmanical monopoly of religious instruction and composition."

A similar genealogy to that in the 32nd section of the Harivamsa is given in the Mahābhārata, Anuśāsanaparvan, verses 201 ff., where it is said that in the line of Bharata there was a king called Ajamīḍha who was also a priest (Bharatasyānvaye chaivājamīḍho nāma pārthivaḥ labhāva Bharata-śreshṭha yajvā dharma-bhritām varaḥ), from whom Viśvāmitra was descended through (1) Jahnu, (2) Sindhudvīpa, (3) Balākaśva, (4) Kuśika, (5) Gādhi.

One of the names applied to Viśvāmitra and his race, as I have just noticed, is Bharata. The last of the four verses at the close of the 53rd hymn of the third Mandala of the Rig-veda, which are supposed to contain a malediction directed by Viśvāmitra against Vaśishtha (see above) is as follows: iii. 53, 24. Ime Indra Bharatasya putrāh apapitvam chikitur na prapitvam | "These sons of Bharata, o Indra, desire to avoid (the Vasishthas), not to approach them." These words are thus explained by Sāyaṇa: Bharatasya putrāh Bharata-vaṃśyāh ime Viśvāmitrāh apapitvam apagamanam Vasishthebhyaś chikitur na prapitvam | [Va]sishtaih saha teshām sangatir nāsti | brāhmaṇāh eva ity arthah | "These sons of Bharata, persons of his race, know departure from, and not approach to, the Vasishthas. They do not associate with the Vasishthas. This means they are Brāhmans."

The persons who accompanied Viśvāmitra when he wished to cross the Vipāś and the Sutudrī are, as we have seen above, called Bhărătas; and Devaśravas and Devavāta are designated in R.V. iii. 23, 2, as Bhārātas. On the other hand in one of the hymns ascribed to Vasishṭha (R.V. vii. 33, 6) the Bhărătas are alluded to as a tribe hostile to the Tritsus, the race to which Vasishṭha belonged.

See Roth's Lexicon, s.v. Bharata, (7) "the name of a hero, the forefather of a tribe. His sons are called Visvāmitras and the members of his family Bharatas."

In the legend of Sunassepa, told in the Aitareya Brāhmana, vii. 13-18,151 Viśvāmitra is alluded to as being the hotri-priest of king Harischandra, and as belonging to the tribe of the Bharatas. He is also addressed as rājaputra, and his sons are called Kuśikas. The outlines of the story are as follows: King Harischandra of the family of Ikshvāku having no son, promised to Varuna, by the advice of Nārada, that if a son should be born to him he would sacrifice him to that god. A son was accordingly born to the king, who received the name of Rohita; but Harischandra, though called upon by Varuna, put off from time to time, on various pleas, the fulfilment of his promise. When the father at length consented, the youth himself refused to be sacrificed and went into the forest. After passing six years there he met a poor Brāhman rishi called Ajīgartta who had three sons, the second of whom, S'unassepa, he sold for a hundred cows to Rohita, who brought the young Brāhman to be sacrificed instead of himself. Varuna accepted the vicarious victim, and arrangements were made accordingly, "Viśvāmitra being the hotri-priest, Jamadagni the adhvaryu, Vasishtha the brăhmăn, and Ayāsya the udgātri (tasya ha Viśvāmitro hotā āsīj Jamadagnir adhvaryur Vasishtho brahmā Ayāsyah udgātā)." The sacrifice was not, however, completed, although the father received a hundred more cows for binding his son to the sacrificial post, and a third hundred for agreeing to slaughter him. By reciting verses in honour of different deities in succession S'unassepa was delivered; and at the request of the priests took part in the ceremonial of the day. I shall quote the remainder of the story at length:

17. Atha ha S'unahépo Viévāmitrasyānkam āsasāda | sa ha uvācha Ajīgarttah Sauyavasir "rishe punar me puttram dehi" iti | "Na" iti ha uvācha Viévāmitro "devāh vai imam mahyam arāsata" iti | sa ha Devarāto Vaiévāmitrah āsa | tasya ete Kāpileya-Bābhravāh | sa ha uvācha Ajīgarttah Sauyavasis "tvam vehi vihvayāvahai" iti | sa ha uvācha Ajīgarttah Sauyavasir "Āngiraso janmanā 'sy Ājīgarttih śrutah kavih | rishe paitāmahāt tantor mā 'pagāh punar ehi mām" iti | sa

¹⁵¹ This legend is translated into German by Prof. Roth in Weber's Ind. Stud. i. 457 ff., into English by Prof. Wilson, Journ. Roy. As. Soc. vol. xiii. for 1851, pp. 96 ff., by Dr. Haug in his Ait. Brāhmaṇa, vol. ii. 460 ff., by Prof. Müller in his Anc. Sansk. Lit. pp. 408 ff., and into Latin by Dr. Streiter in his "Diss. de Sunaḥsepo."

ha uvācha Sunahsepah "adarsus tvā sāsa-hastam na yach chhūdreshv alapsata | gavām trīṇi śatāni tvam avrinīthāh mad Angirah" iti | sa ha uvācha Ajīgarttah Sauyavasis " tad vai mā tāta tapati pāpam karma mayā kritam | tad aham nihnave tubhyam pratiyantu satā gavām" iti | sa ha uvācha Sunahsepah "yah sakrit pāpakam kuryāt kuryād enat tato 'param | nāpāgāh śaudrānyāyād asandheyam tvayā kritam'' iti | "asandheyam" iti ha Viśvāmitrah upapapāda | sa ha uvācha Viśvāmitrah "Bhīmah eva Sauyavasih śāsena viśiśāsishuh | asthād maitasya putro bhūr mamaivopehi putratām" iti | sa ha uvācha S'unahśepah "sa vai yathā no jnăpăyā rājaputra tathā vada | yathaivāngirasah sann upeyām tava putratām" iti | sa ha uvācha Viśvāmitro "Jyeshtho me tvam putrānām syās tava śreshthā prajā syāt | upeyāh daivam me dāyam tena vai tvovamantrage" iti | sa ha uvācha S'unahsepah " sanjnānāneshu vai brūyāt sauhārdyāya me śriyai | yathā 'ham Bharata-rishabha upeyām tava putratām" iti | atha ha Viśvāmitrah putrān āmantrayāmāsa "Madhuchhandāh śrinotana Rishabho Renur Ashtakah | ye ke cha bhrātarah sthana asmai jyaishthyaya kalpadhvam" iti | 18. Tasya ha Viśvāmitrasya eka-śatam putrāh āsuh panchāśad eva jyāyāmso Madhuchhandasah panchāśat kanīyāmsah | tad ye jyāyāmso na te kuśalam menire | tān anuvyājahāra "antān vah prajā bhakshīshţa" iti | te ete 'ndhrāh Pundrāh S'abarāh Pulindāh Mūtibāh ity udantyāh bahavo bhavanti | Vaiśvāmitrāh Dasyūnām bhūyishthāh | sa ha uvācha Madhuchhandāh panchāsatā sardham "yad nah pitā sanjānīte tasmims tishthāmahe vayam | puras tvā sarve kurmahe tvām anvancho vayam smasi" iti | atha ha Viśvāmitrah pratītah putrāms tushtāva "te vai putrāh pasumanto vīravanto bhavishyatha | ye manam me'nugrihnanto viravantam akartta ma | pura-etra viravanto Devarātena Gāthināh | sarve rādhyāh stha putrāh esha vah sadvivāchanam | esha vah Kuśikāh vīro Devarātas tam anvita | yushmāms dāyam me upetā vidyām yām u cha vidmasi \ te samyancho Vaiśvāmitrāh sarve sākam sarātayaļ | Devarātāya tasthire dhrityai śraishthyāya Gāthināḥ | adhīyata Devarāto rikthayor ubhyayor rishiḥ | Jahnūnām chādhipatye daive vede cha Gathinam |

"Sunassepa came to the side of Visvāmitra. Ajīgartta, the son of Suyavasa, said, 'Rishi, give me back my son.' 'No,' said Visvāmitra, 'the gods have given him to me' (devāḥ arāsata); hence he became Devarāta the son of Visvāmitra. The Kāpileyas and Bābhravas are his descendants. Ajīgartta said to Visvāmitra, 'Come; let us both call

(him) to us.'152 He (again) said (to his son), 'Thou art an Angirasa, the son of Ajīgartta, reputed a sage; do not, o rishi, depart from the line of thy ancestors; come back to me.' S'unassepa replied, 'They have seen thee with the sacrificial knife in thy hand—a thing which men have not found even among the S'ūdras; thou didst prefer three hundred cows to me, o Angiras.' Ajīgartta rejoined, 'That sinful deed which I have done distresses me, my son; I abjure it to thee. Let the [three] hundreds of cows revert (to him who gave them).'153 S'unaśśepa answered, 'He who once does a sinful deed, will add to it another; thou hast not freed thyself from that iniquity, fit only for a Sudra. Thou hast done what cannot be rectified.' 'What cannot be rectified.' interposed Viśvāmitra; who continued, 'Terrible was the son of Suyavasa as he stood about to immolate (thee) with the knife: continue not to be his son; become mine.' S'unassepa replied, 'Speak, o king's son (rājaputra), whatever thou hast to explain to us, in order that I, though an Angirasa, may become thy son.' Viśvāmitra rejoined, 'Thou shalt be the eldest of my sons, and thy offspring shall be the most eminent. Thou shalt receive my divine inheritance; with this (invitation) I address thee.' Sunassepa answered, 'If (thy sons) agree, then for my welfare enjoin on them to be friendly, that so, o chief of the Bharatas, I may enter on thy sonship.' Viśvāmitra then addressed his sons, 'Do ye, Madhuchhandas, Rishabha, Renu, Ashtaka, and all ye who are brothers, listen to me, and concede to him the seniority.' 18. Now Viśvāmitra had a hundred sons, fifty of whom were older than Madhuchhandas and fifty younger. Then those who were older did not approve (their father's proposal). Against them he pronounced (this ¹⁵² I follow here the tenor of the interpretation (which is that of the Commentator on the S'ānkhāyaṇa Brāhmaṇa) given by Prof. Weber in his review of Dr. Haug's Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, in Indische Studien, ix. 316. Prof. Weber remarks that in the Brāhmaṇas the root hu + vi is employed to denote the opposing invitations of two persons who are seeking to bring over a third person to their own side; in proof of which he quotes Taitt. S. 6, 1, 6, 6, and S'. P. Br. 3, 2, 4, 4, and 22. Profs. Roth, Wilson, and Müller, as well as Dr. Haug, understand the words to be addressed to S'unaśsepa by his father, and to signify "we, too (I and thy mother), call, or will call (thee to return to us).' But it does not appear that S'unaśsepa's mother was present. And it is to be observed that the next words uttered by Ajīgartta, which are addressed to S'unaśs'epa, are preceded by the usual formula sa ha uvācha Ajīgarttah Sauyavash, "Ajīgartta the son of S. said," which perhaps would not have been the case if both sentences had been addressed to the same person.

163 Here too I follow Weber, Ind. St. ix. p. 317.

doom), 'Let your progeny possess the furthest ends (of the country).' These are the numerous border-tribes, the Andhras, Pundras, Sabaras, Pulindas, Mūtibas. Most of the Dasyus are sprung from Viśvāmitra. 154 Madhuchhandas with the (other) fifty said, 'Whatever our father determines, by that we abide. We all place thee in our front, and follow after thee.' Then Viśvāmitra was pleased, and said to his sons, 'Ye, my children who, shewing deference to me, have conferred upon me a (new) son, shall abound in cattle and in sons. Ye, my sons, the offspring of Gāthin, who possess in Devarāta a man who shall go before you, are all destined to be prosperous; he is your wise instructor. This Devarāta, o Kuśikas, is your chief; follow him. He will receive you as my inheritance, and obtain all the knowledge which we possess.' All these sons of Viśvāmitra, descendants of Gāthin, submitted together in harmony and with good will to Devarāta's control and superiority. The rishi Devarāta was invested with both possessions, with the lordly authority of the Jahnus, and with the divine Veda of the Gathins." 155

On this legend Professor Müller (Anc. Sansk. Lit. pp. 415 f.) remarks, amongst other things, as follows: "So revolting, indeed, is the description given of Ajīgartta's behaviour in the Brāhmana, that we should rather recognize in him a specimen of the un-Arvan population of India. Such a supposition, however, would be in contradiction with several of the most essential points of the legend, particularly in what regards the adoption of S'unahsepha by Viśvāmitra. Viśvāmitra, though arrived at the dignity of a Brāhman, clearly considers the adoption of S'unahsepha Devarāta, of the famous Brahmanic family of the Angirasas, as an advantage for himself and his descendants; and the Devarātas are indeed mentioned as a famous branch of the Viśvāmitras (V.P. p. 405, 23). S'unahsepha is made his eldest son, and the leader of his brothers, evidently as the defender and voucher of their Brahmahood, which must have been then of very recent date, because Viśvāmitra himself is still addressed by S'unahsepha as Rāja-putra and Bharata-rishabha." It must, however, be recollected that the story, as told in the Brāhmana, can scarcely be regarded as historical, and that it is not unreasonable to suppose that the incidents related, even if founded on fact, may have been coloured by the Brahmanical prepossessions of the narrator. But if so, the legend can give us no true idea of the light in which Viśvāmitra's exercise of priestly functions was looked upon either by himself or by his contemporaries.

154 See Weber, Ind. St. ix. p. 317 f., and Roth in his Lexicon, s.vv. anta and udantya. 155 This legend is perhaps alluded to in the Kāthaka Brāhmana, 19, 11, quoted by Prof. Weber, Ind. St. iii. 478: S'unas sepo vai etām Ājīgarttir Varuna-grihīto' pašyat | tayā sa vai Varuna-pāšād amuchyata | "S'unassepa the son of Ajīgartta, when seized by Varuna, saw this (verse); and by it he was released from the bonds of Varuna." Manu also mentions the story, x. 105: Azīgarttah sutañ hantum upāsarpad bubhukshitah | na chālipyata pāpena khut-pratīkāram ācharan | "Ajīgartta, when famished, approached to slay his son; and (by so doing) was not contaminated by sin, as he was seeking the means of escape from hunger." On this Kullūka annotates : Rishir Ajīgarttākhyo bubhukshitah san puttram S'unas sepha-nāmānam svayam vikrītavān yajne go-šata-lābhāya yajna-yūpe baddhvā višasitā bhūtvā hantum prachakrame | na cha khut-pratīkārārtham tathā kurvan pāpena liptah | etach cha Bahvrichabrāhmane S'unassephākhyāneshu vyaktam uktam | "A rishi called Ajīgartta, having, when famished, himself sold his son called Sunassepha, in order to obtain a hundred* cows at a sacrifice, bound him to the sacrificial stake, and in the capacity of immolator was about to slay him. By doing so, as a means of escape from hunger, he did not incur sin. This is distinctly recorded in the Bahvricha (Aitareya) Brāhmana in the legend of Sunassepa." The speakers in the Brahmana, however, do not take by any means so lenient a view of Ajigartta's conduct as Manu. (See Müller's Anc. Sansk. Lit. p. 415.) The compiler of the latter work lived in an age when it was perhaps thought that a rishi could do no wrong. The Bhagavata Purana, ix. sect. 7. and sect. 16, verses 30-37 follows the Ait. Br. in the version it gives of the story; but, as we shall see in a subsequent section, the Rāmāyana relates some of the circumstances quite differently.

In Indische Studien, ii. 112-123, this story forms the subject of an interesting dissertation by Professor Roth, who arrives at the following conclusions:

- "(i.) The oldest legend about Sunahsepa (alluded to in R.V. i. 24, 11–13, 156 and R.V. v. 2, 7) knows only of his miraculous deliverance by divine help from the peril of death.
- "(ii.) This story becomes expanded in the sequel into a narrative of S'unaḥśepa's threatened slaughter as a sacrificial victim, and of his deliverance through Viśvāmitra.
- "(iii.) This immolation-legend becomes severed into two essentially distinct versions, the oldest forms of which are respectively represented by the stories in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, and the Rāmāyaṇa.
- "(iv.) The latter becomes eventually the predominant one; but its proper central-point is no longer the deliverance from immolation, but the incorporation of S'unaḥśepa, or (with a change of persons) of Richīka, into the family of the Kuśikas. It thus becomes in the end a family-legend of the race of Viśvāmitra.

¹⁵⁵ Compare also Rosen's remarks on the hymns ascribed to S'unas'sepa; Rig-veda Sanhita, Annotationes, p. lv. He thinks they contain nothing which would lead to the belief that they have any connection with the legend in the Rāmāyaṇa and Ait. Br.

"There is thus no historical, perhaps not even a genealogical, result to be gained here. On the other hand the story obtains an important place in the circle of those narratives in which the sacerdotal literature expressed its views regarding the character and agency of Viśvāmitra."

In a passage of the Mahābhārata, Ādip. verses 3694 ff., ¹⁶⁷ where the descendants of Pūru are recorded, we find among them Bharata the son of Dushyanta (verse 3709) from whom (1) Bhumanyu, (2) Suhotra, (3) Ajamīḍha, and (4) Jahnu are said to have sprung in succession (verses 3712–3722); and the last-named king and his brothers Vrajana and Rūpin are said to have been the ancestors of the Kuśikas (verse 3723: anvayāḥ Kuśikāḥ rājan Jahnor amita-tejasaḥ | Vrajana-Rūpinoh), who were therefore, according to this passage also, descended from Bharata (see above, p. 354). The Mahābhārata then goes on to relate that during the reign of Samvaraṇa, son of Jahnu's eldest brother Riksha, the country over which he ruled was desolated by various calamities (verses 3725 f.). The narrative proceeds, verse 3727:

Abhyaghnan Bhāratāms chaiva sapatnānām balāni cha \ chālayan vasudhām chemām balena chaturanginā | abhyayāt tam cha Pānchālyo vijitya tarasā mahīm | akshauhinībhir dasabhih sa enam samare 'jayat | tatah sa-dārah sāmātyah sa-puttrah sa-suhrijjanah | rājā Samvaranas tasmāt palāyata mahābhayāt | 3730. Sindhor nadasya mahato nikunje nyavasat tadā | nadī-vishaya-paryyante parvatasya samīpatah | tattrāvasan bahūn kālān Bhāratāḥ durgam aśritāḥ | teshām nivasatām tattra sahasram parivatsarān | athābhyagachhad Bhāratan Vasishtho bhagavān rishih | tam āgatam prayatnena pratyudgamyābhivādya cha | arghyam abhyāharams tasmai te sarve Bhāratās tadā | nivedya sarvam rishaye satkārena suvarchchase | tam āsane chopavishţam rājā vavre svayam tadā | "purohito bhavān no stu rājyāya prayatemahi" | 3735. "Om" ity evam Vasishtho'pi Bharatan pratyapadyata | athabhyasinchat samrajye sarva-kshattrasya Pauravam | vishāṇa-bhūtam sarvasyām pṛithivyām iti naḥ śrutam | Bharatādhyushitam pūrvam̃ so'dhyatishthat purottamam | punar balibhritas chaiva chakre sarva-mahīkshitah |

¹⁵⁷ Referred to by Roth, Litt. u. Gesch. des Weda, pp. 142 ff., and Wilson, Rigveda, iii. p. 86.

"3727. And the hosts of their enemies also smote the Bhāratas. Shaking the earth with an army of four kinds of forces, the Panchalya chief assailed him, having rapidly conquered the earth, and vanquished him with ten complete hosts. Then king Samvarana with his wives, ministers, sons, and friends, fled from that great cause of alarm; (3730) and dwelt in the thickets of the great river Sindhu (Indus), in the country bordering on the stream, and near a mountain. There the Bhāratas abode for a long time, taking refuge in a fortress. As they were dwelling there, for a thousand years, the venerable rishi Vasishtha came to them. Going out to meet him on his arrival, and making obeisance, the Bhāratas all presented him with the arghua offering. shewing every honour to the glorious rishi. When he was seated the king himself solicited him, 'Be thou our priest; let us strive to regain my kingdom.' 3735. Vasishtha consented to attach himself to the Bhāratas, and, as we have heard, invested the descendant of Pūru with the sovereignty of the entire Kshattriya race, to be a horn (to have mastery) over the whole earth. He occupied the splendid city formerly inhabited by Bharata, and made all kings again tributary to himself."

It is remarkable that in this passage the Bhāratas, who, as we have seen, are elsewhere represented as being so closely connected with Viśvāmitra, and are in one text of the Rig-veda (vii. 33, 6) alluded to as the enemies of Vasishtha's friends, should be here declared to have adopted the latter rishi as their priest. The account, however, need not be received as historical, or even based on any ancient tradition; and the part referring to Vasishtha in particular may have been invented for the glorification of that rishi, or for the honour of the Bhāratas.

The 11th and 12th khandas of the second adhyāya of the Sarvasāra Upanishad (as we learn from Professor Weber's analysis in Ind. St. i. 390) relate that Viśvāmitra was instructed on the identity of breath (prāṇa) with Indra, by the god himself, who had been celebrated by the sage on the occasion of a sacrifice, at which he officiated as hotripriest, in a thousand Bṛihatī verses, and was in consequence favourably disposed towards him.

It is abundantly clear, from the details supplied in this section, that Viśvāmitra, who was a rājanya of the Bhārata and Kuśika families (Ait. Br. vii. 17 and 18), is represented by ancient Indian tradition as the author of numerous Vedic hymns, as the domestic priest (purohita) of king Sudās (Nir. ii. 24), and as officiating as a hotri at a sacrifice of king Harischandra (Ait. Br. vii. 16). The Rāmāyana also, as we shall see in a future section, connects him with Triśanku, the father of Harischandra, and makes him also contemporary with Ambarīsha; and in the first book of the same poem he is said to have visited king Dasaratha, the father of Rāma (Bālakanda, i. 20, 1 ff.). As these kings were separated from each other by very long intervals, Triśanku being a descendant of Ikshvāku in the 28th, Ambarīsha in the 44th, 158 Sudās in the 49th, and Daśaratha in the 60th generation (see Wilson's Vishnu Purana, vol. iii. pp. 284, 303, 304, 313), it is manifest that the authors of these legends either intentionally or through oversight represented Viśvāmitra, like Vasishtha (see above), as a personage of miraculous longevity; and on either supposition a great deal that is related of him must be purely fabulous. All the authorities describe him as the son of Gāthin or Gādhi, the Anukramanī, the Vishņu Purāna, and the Harivamsa declaring also that Gāthin was an incarnation of Indra, and thus asserting Viśvāmitra to be of divine descent. It is not clear whether this fable is referred to in R.V. iii. 53, 9, where Viśvāmitra is styled deva-jāh, "born of a god," or whether this verse may not have led to the invention of the story. In either case the verse can scarcely have emanated from the rishi himself; but it is more likely to be the production of one of his descendants, 159

158 According to the Rāmāyana, i. 70, 41; ii. 110, 32, Ambarisha was only 28th from Ikshvāku. Compare Prof. Wilson's note on these genealogies, V.P. iii. 313 ff.

159 The word devajāh, which, following Roth, s.v., I have translated "god-born," is taken by Sāyaṇa as = dyotamānānām tejasām janayitā, "generator of shining lights," and appears to be regarded by him as referring to the creation of constellations by Visvāmitra, mentioned in the Rāmāyaṇa, i. 60, 21. Prof. Wilson renders the phrase by "generator of the gods;" and remarks that "the compound is not devajā, 'god-born,' nor was Visvāmitra of divine parentage" (R.V. iii. p. 85, note 4). This last remark overlooks the fact above alluded to of his father Gādhi being represented as an incarnation of Indra, and the circumstance that Prof. Wilson himself (following Sāyaṇa) had shortly before translated the words prathama-jāh brahmaṇah in R.V. iii. 29, 15, as applied to the Kusikas, by "the first-born of Brahmā," although from the accent brahman here must be neuter, and the phrase seems to mean, as I have rendered above, "the first-born of prayer." The word jā is given in the Nighaṇṭu as one of the synonymes of apatya, "offspring;" and in R.V. i. 164, 15, where it is coupled with rishayah, the compound devajāh is explained by Sāyaṇa as "born of the god," i.e. the sun, and by Prof. Wilson as "born of the gods." See

This verse (R.V. iii. 53, 9) which claims a superhuman origin for Viśvāmitra, and the following verses 11-13 of the same hymn, which assert the efficacy of his prayers, form a sort of parallel to the contents of R.V. vii. 33, where the supernatural birth of Vasishṭha (vv. 10 ff.), the potency of his intercession (vv. 2-5), and the sacred knowledge of his descendants (vv. 7 and 8), are celebrated.

As the hymns of Viśvāmitra and his descendants occupy so prominent a place in the Rig-veda Sanhitā, and as he is the alleged author of the text reputed the holiest in the entire Veda (iii. 62, 10), the Gavatri par excellence, there is no reason to doubt that, although he was a rajanya, he was unreservedly acknowledged by his contemporaries to be both a rishi and a priest. Nothing less than the uniform recognition and employment of the hymns handed down under his name as the productions of a genuine "seer," could have sufficed to gain for them a place in the sacred canon. 160 It is true we possess little authentic information regarding the process by which the hymns of different families were admitted to this honour; but at least there is no tradition, so far as I am aware, that those of Viśvāmitra and his family were ever treated as antilegomena. And if we find that later works consider it necessary to represent his priestly character as a purely exceptional one, explicable only on the ground of supernatural merit acquired by ardent devotion, we must recollect that the course of ages had brought about a most material change in Indian society, that the sacerdotal function had at length become confined to the members of an exclusive caste, and that the exercise of such an office in ancient times by persons of the regal or mercantile classes had ceased to be intelligible, except upon the supposition of such extraordinary sanctity as was alleged in the case of Viśvāmitra.

It is worthy of remark that although the Aitareya Brāhmana (see above) declares that Sunaśśepa, as belonging to a priestly family, was called on to exercise the sacerdotal office immediately after his release, yet the anterior possession of divine knowledge is also ascribed to Viśvāmitra and the Gāthins, and that S'unaśśepa is represented as sucalso R.V. ix. 93, 1 = S.V. i. 538. (Compare Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, for 1866, p. 387 ff.)

160 That many at least of these compositions were really the work of Visvāmitra, or his descendants, is proved, as we have seen, by the fact that their names are mentioned in them.

ceeding to this sacred lore, as well as to the regal dignity of the race on which he became engrafted.

The fact of Viśvāmitra having been both a rishi and an officiating priest, is thus, as we have seen, and if ancient tradition is to be believed, undoubted. In fact, if we look to the number of Vedic hymns ascribed to him and to his family, to the long devotion to sacerdotal functions which this fact implies, and to the apparent improbability that a person who had himself stood in the position of a king should afterwards have become a professional priest, we may find it difficult to believe that although (as he certainly was) a scion of a royal stock, he had ever himself exercised regal functions. Professor Roth remarks (Litt. u. Gesch. p. 125) that there is nothing either in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, or in the hymns of the Rig-veda to shew that he had ever been a king. But on the other hand, as the same writer observes (p. 126), and as we shall hereafter see, there are numerous passages in the later authorities in which the fact of his being a king is distinctly, but perhaps untruly, recorded.

It is so well known, that I need scarcely adduce any proof of the fact, that in later ages Rājanyas and Vaiśyas, though entitled to sacrifice and to study the Vedas, were no longer considered to have any right to officiate as priests on behalf of others. I may, however, cite a few texts on this subject. Manu says, i. 88:

Adhyāpanam adhyayanam yājanam yājanam tathā | dānam pratigraham chaiva Brāhmaṇānām akalpayat | 89. Prajānām rakshaṇam dānam ijyā'dhyayanam eva cha | vishayeshv aprasaktim cha kshattriyasya samāsataḥ | 90. Paśūnām rakshaṇam dānam ijyā'dhyayanam eva cha | vaṇikpatham kusīdam cha Vaiśyasya krishim eva cha | 91. Ekam eva tu Sūdrasya prabhuḥ karma samādiśat | eteshām eva varṇānām śuśrūshām anasūyayā | 88. He (Brahmā) ordained teaching, study, sacrificing, officiating for others at sacrifices, and the giving and receiving of gifts, to be the functions of Brāhmans. 89. Protection of the people, the giving of gifts, sacrifice, study, and non-addiction to objects of sense he assigned as the duties of the Kshattriya. 90. The tending of cattle, giving of gifts, sacrifice, study, commerce, the taking of usury, and agriculture he appointed to be the occupations of the Vaisya. 91. But the lord assigned only one duty to the Sūdra, that of serving these other three classes without grudging."

¹⁶¹ May not R.V. iii. 43, 5 (quoted above), however, be understood to point to something of this kind?

Similarly it is said in the second of the Yajna-paribhāshā Sūtras, translated by Professor M. Müller (at the end of the ninth volume of the Journal of the German Oriental Society, p. xliii.), "that sacrifice is proper to the three classes, the Brāhman, Rājanya, and also the Vaiśya." ¹⁶² Prof. Müller also refers to Kātyāyana's S'rauta Sūtras, of which i. 1, 5 and 6 are as follows:

5. Angahīnāśrotriya - shanda - śūdra - varjam | 6. Brāhmana-rājanya-vaiśyānām śruteh | "Men, 163 with the exception of those whose members 162 Prof. Müller does not give the original text.

163 In one of these Sutras of Kātyāyana (i. 1, 4) and its commentary a curious question (one of those which the Indian authors often think it necessary to raise and to settle, in order that their treatment of a subject may be complete and exhaustive) is argued, viz. whether the lower animals and the gods have any share in the practice of Vedic observances; or whether it is confined to men. The conclusion is that the gods cannot practise these rites, as they are themselves the objects of them, and as they have already obtained heaven and the other objects of desire with a view to which they are practised (tatra devānām devatāntarābhāvād anadhikāraḥ | na hy ātmānam uddišya tyāgah sambhavati | kincha | devāš cha prāpta-svargādi-kāmāh | na cha teshām kinchid avaptavyam asti yad-artham karmāni kurvate |). As regards the right of the lower animals to sacrifice, although the point is decided against them on the ground of their only "looking to what is near at hand, and not to the rewards of a future world" (te hy āsannam eva chetayante na pāralaukikam phalam); still it is considered necessary seriously to obviate a presumption in their favour that they seek to enjoy pleasure and avoid pain, and even appear to indicate their desire for the happiness of another world by seeming to observe some of the Vedic prescriptions: "Nanu uktam sunas chaturdasyām upavāsa-darsanāt syenasya cha ashtamyām upavāsadarsanāch cha te 'pi pāralaukikam jānanti" iti | tat katham avagamyate "te dharmärtham upavasanti" iti | ye hi veda-smriti-puränädikam pathanti te eva jänanti yad " anena karmaṇā idam phalam amutra prāpsyate" iti | na cha ete vedādikam paṭhanti nāpy anyebhyah āgamayanti | tena śāstrārtham avidvāmsaḥ phalam āmushmikam akāmayantah katham tat-sadhanam karma kuryuh | tasmad na dharmartham upavasanti iti | kimartham tarhy eteshām upavāsah | uchyate | rogād aruchir eshām | tarhi niyatakāle katham rogah | uchyate | niyata-kālāh api rogāh bhavanti yathā tritīyaka-chā. turthikādi-jvarāh | adhanās cha ete | "But do not some say that from a dog having been noticed to fast on the fourteenth day of the month, and a hawk on the eighth, they also have a knowledge of matters connected with a future life?' But how is it known that these dogs and hawks fast from religious motives? For it is only those who read the Vedas, Smritis, Puranas, etc., who are aware that by means of such and such observances, such and such rewards will be obtained in another world. But these animals neither read the sacred books for themselves, nor ascertain their contents from others. How then, ignorant as they are of the contents of the scriptures, and devoid of any desire for future rewards, can they perform those rites which are the means of attaining them? It is therefore to be concluded that they do not fast from religious motives. But why, then, do they fast? We reply, because from sickness they have a disinclinare defective, those who have not read the Veda, eunuchs, and Sūdras, have a right to sacrifice. 6. It is Brāhmans, Rājanyas, and Vaiśyas (only who) according to the Veda (possess this privilege)." 164 ation for food. But how do they happen to be sick on certain fixed days? We answer, there are also certain diseases which occur on fixed days, as tertian and quartan agues. Another reason why the lower animals cannot sacrifice is that they are destitute of wealth (and so unable to provide the necessary materials)."

164 "And yet." Prof. Müller remarks (ibid), "concessions were made (to other and lower classes) at an early period. One of the best known cases is that of the Rathakāra. Then the Nishādasthapati, though a Nishāda chief and not belonging to the three highest classes was admitted to great sacrifices, e.g. to the gavedhukacharu." The S'atap. Br. i. 1, 4, 12, has the following words: Tani vai etani chatvari vachah "ehi" iti brūhmanasya "āgahi" "ādrava" vaisyasya cha rūjanyabandhos cha "ādhāva" iti sūdrasya | "[In the formula, havishkrid ehi, 'come, o oblation-maker,' referred to in the previous paragraph, and its modifications | these four (different) words are employed to express 'come:' ehi, 'come,' in the case of a Brahman; agahi, 'come hither,' in the case of a Vaisya; ādrava, 'hasten hither,' in the case of a Rājanyabandhu, and adhava, 'run hither,' in the case of a S'udra." On this Prof. Weber remarks, in a note on his translation of the first adhyava of the first book of the S'. P. Br. (Journ. Germ. Or. Soc. iv. p. 301): "The entire passage is of great importance, as it shews (in opposition to what Roth says in the first vol. of this Journal, p. 83) that the S'ūdras were then admitted to the holy sacrifices of the Arians, and understood their speech, even if they did not speak it. The latter point cannot certainly be assumed as a necessary consequence, but it is highly probable; and I consequently incline to the view of those who regard the S'ūdras as an Arian tribe which immigrated into India before the others." See above, p. 141, note 251, and Ind. Stud. ii. 194, note, where Prof. Weber refers to the Mahābhārata, S'antip. verses 2304 ff. which are as follows: Svāhākāra-vashaţkārau mantrah śūdre na vidyate tasmāch chhūdrah pākayojnair yajetāvratavān svayam | pūrnapātramayīm āhuh pākayajnasya dakshinām | śūdrah Paijavano nāma sahasrānām śatam dadau | Aindragnyena vidhanena dakshinam iti nah s'rutam | "The svahakara, and the vashatkāra, and the mantras do not belong to a S'ūdra. Wherefore let a man of this class sacrifice with pākayajnas, being incapacitated for (Vedic) rites (śrauta-vratopāya-hīnah) Comm.). They say that the gift (dakshina) proper for a pakayajna consists of a full dish (pūrnapātramayī). A S'ūdra called Paijavana gave as a present a hundred thousand (of these purnapatras) after the Aindragnya rule." Here, says Prof. Weber, "the remarkable tradition is recorded that Paijavana, i.e. Sudas, who was so famous for his sacrifices, and who is celebrated in the Rig-veda as the patron of Visvāmitra and enemy of Vasishtha, was a S'ūdra." In the Bhāgavata Purāna, vii. 11, 24, the duties of a S'ūdra are described to be "submissiveness, purity, honest service to his master, sacrifice without mantras, abstinence from theft, truth, and the protection of cows and Brāhmans" (sudrasya sannatih saucham sevā svāminy amāyayā | amantrayajno hy asteyam satyam go-vipra-rakshanam |). The Commentator defines amantrayajnah thus: namaskārenaiva pancha-yajnānushthānam, "the practice of the five sacrifices with obeisance," and quotes Yajnavalkya. See also Wilson's Vishnu Purana. vol. iii. p. 87, and notes; Müller's Anc. Sansk. Lit. p. 203; the same author's Essay, at the end of the ninth vol. of the Journ. Germ. Or. Soc. p. lxxiii.; and Bohtlingk and Roth's Lexicon, s.v. pākayajna.

According to the Ait. Br. vii. 19, "the Brāhman alone of the four castes has the right of consuming things offered in sacrifice" (etāḥ vai prajāḥ hutādo yad brāhmaṇāḥ | atha etāḥ ahutādo yad rājanyo vaiśyaḥ śūdraḥ). And yet, as Prof. Müller observes, it is said in the Satap. Br. v. 5, 4, 9: Chatvāro vai varṇāḥ brāhmaṇo rājanyo vaiśyaḥ śūdro na ha eteshām ekaśchana bhavati yaḥ somam vamati | sa yad ha eteshām ekaśchit syāt syād ha eva prāyaśchittiḥ | "There are four classes, the Brāhman, Rājanya, Vaiśya, and Sūdra. There is no one of these who vomits (i.e., I suppose, dislikes) the soma. If anyone of them however should do so, let there be an atonement."

Professor Weber, by whom also these words are quoted (Ind. St. x. 12), remarks that "they leave open the possibility of Rājanyas, Vaiśyas, and even S'ūdras partaking of the soma, the only consequence being that they must as an expiation perform the Sautramanī rite."

In the twenty-first of the Yajna-paribhāshā Sūtras, translated by Müller, p. xlvii., it is declared that the priestly dignity belongs to the Brāhmans; and it is laid down by the Indian authorities that even when the sacrifice is of a kind intended exclusively for Kshattriyas, the priest must still be a Brāhman and not a Kshattriya, the reason being that men of the former class only can eat the remains of the sacrifice (see Kātyāyana's Sr. Sūtras, i. 2, 8): Brāhmanāh ritvijo bhaksha-pratishedhād itarayoh, "the Brāhmans only are priests, because the other two castes are forbidden to eat (the remains of the sacrifice"). See also Weber, Ind. St. x. pp. 17 and 31, and the passages of the Ait. Br. viii. 24 and 27, referred to in pages 30 and 31: 24. Na ha vai apurohitasya rajno devāh annam adanti | tasmād rājā 'yakshamāno brāhmanam puro dadhīta | "The gods do not eat the food offered by a king who has no purchita. Wherefore (even) when not about to sacrifice, the king should put forward a Brāhman (as his domestic priest)." 27. Yo ha vai trīn purohitāms trīn purodhātrīn veda sa brāhmanah purohitāh | sa vadeta purodhāyai | Agnir vāva purohitah prithivī purodhātā vāyur vāva purohito 'ntariksham purodhātā ādityo vāva purohito dyauh purodhātā | esha ha vai purohito yah evam veda atha sa tirohito yah evam na veda | tasya rājā mitram bhavati dvishantam apabādhate | yasyaivam vidvān brāhmano rāshtra-gopah purohitah | kshattrena kshattram jayati balena balam aśnute | yasyaivam vidvān brāhmano rāshtra-gopah purohitah | tasmai viśah sanjanate sammukhah ekamanasah | yasyaivam vidvan brahmano rāshṭra-gopaḥ purohitaḥ | "The Brāhman who knows the three purohitas, and their three appointers, is a (proper) purohita, and should be nominated to this office. Agni is one purohita, and the earth appoints him; Vāyu another, and the air appoints him; the Sun is a third, and the sky appoints him. He who knows this is a (proper) purohita; and he who does not know this is to be rejected. (Another) king becomes the friend of the prince who has a Brāhman possessing such knowledge for his purohita and the protector of his realm; and he vanquishes his enemy. He who has a Brāhman possessing etc. (as above) conquers (another's) regal power by (his own) regal power, and acquires another's force by (his own) force. With him who has a Brāhman etc. (as above) the people are openly united and in harmony."

I add another passage from the same Brāhmana, which might also have been properly introduced in an earlier chapter of this work (chapt. i. sect. iii.) as it relates to the creation of the four castes:

Ait. Br. vii. 19. Prajāpatir yajnam asrijata | yajnam srishţam anu brahma-kshattre asrijyetām | brahma-kshattre anu dvayyah prajāh asrijyanta hutādaś cha ahutādaś cha brahma eva anu hutādah kshattram anv ahutādaḥ | etāḥ vai prajāḥ hutādo yad brāhmaṇāḥ | atha etāḥ ahutādo yad rājanyo vaiśyah śūdrah | tābhyo yajnah udakrāmat | tam brahmakshattre anvaitām yāny eva brahmanah āyudhāni tair brahma anvait yāni kshattrasya tam (? taih) kshattram | etani vai brahmanah ayudhani yad yajnāyudhāni | atha etāni kshattrasya āyudhani yad aśva-rathah kavachah ishu-dhanva | tam kshattram ananvapya nyavarttata | ayudhebhyo ha sma asya vijamānah parān eva eti | atha enam brahma anvait | tam āpnot | tam āptvā parastād nirudhya atishthat | sa āptah parastād niruddhas tishthan jnätvä sväny äyudhäni brahma upävarttata | tasmäd ha apy etarhi yajno brahmany eva brāhmaneshu pratishthitah | atha enat kshattram anvāgachhat tad abravīd "upa mā asmin yajne hvayasva" iti | tat "tathā" ity abravīt "tad vai nidhāya svāny āyudhāni brahmanah eva āyudhair brahmano rūpena brahma bhūtvā yajnam upavārttasva" iti | "tathā" iti tat kshattram nidhāya svāny āyudhāni brahmanah eva āyudhair brahmano rūpena brahma bhūtvā yajnam upāvarttata | tasmād ha apy etarhi kshattriyo yajamāno nidhāya eva svāny āyudhāni brahmanah eva ayudhair brahmano rupena brahma bhutva yajnam upavarttate!

"Prajāpati created sacrifice. After sacrifice, Brahman (sacred knowledge) and Kshattra (regal power)165 were created. After these, two kinds of creatures were formed, viz. those who eat, and those who do not eat, oblations. After Brahman came the eaters of oblations, and after Kshattra those who do not eat them. These are the eaters of oblations, viz. the Brahmans. Those who do not eat them are the Rājanya, the Vaiśya, and the Sūdra. From these creatures sacrifice departed. Brähman and Kshättra followed it, Brähman with the implements proper to itself, and Kshattra with those which are proper to itself. The implements of Brahman are the same as those of sacrifice, while those of Kshattra are a horse-chariot, 166 armour, and a bow and arrows. Kshattra turned back, not having found the sacrifice; which turns aside, afraid of the implements of Kshattra. Brahman followed after it, and reached it; and having done so, stood beyond, and intercepting it. Being thus found and intercepted, sacrifice, standing still and recognizing its own implements, approached to Brahman. Wherefore now also sacrifice depends upon Brahman, upon the Brahmans. Kshattra then followed Brahman, and said, 'invite me 167 (too to participate) in this sacrifice.' Brahman replied, 'so be it: then laying aside thy own implements, approach the sacrifice with the implements of Brahman, in the form of Brahman, and having become Brahman. 168

 $^{^{165}}$ The two principles or functions represented by the Brāhmans and Kshattriyas respectively.

¹⁶⁶ See Weber, Indische Studien, ix. p. 318.
167 See Weber, in the same page as last quoted.

¹⁶⁸ This idea may be further illustrated by a reference to several passages adduced by Professor Weber, Ind. St. x. 17, who remarks: "Hence every Rajanya and Vaisya becomes through the consecration for sacrifice (dīkshā) a Brāhman during its continuance, and is to be addressed as such in the formula employed," and cites S'. P. Br. iii. 2, 1, 39 f., part of which has been already quoted above, in p. 136, note; and also Ait. Br. vii. 23: Sa ha dīkshamānah eva brāhmanatām abhyupaiti | "He a king, when consecrated, enters into the condition of a Brāhman." See the rest of the section and sections 24, 25, and 31 in Dr. Haug's translation. The S'.P.Br. xiii. 4, 1, 3, says. in opposition to the opinion of some, that an as'vamedha, which is a sacrifice proper to Rājanyas, should be begun in summer, which is their season: tad vai vasante eva abhyārabheta | vasanto vai brāhmanasya rituh | yah u vai kas cha yajate brāhmanībhūya iva eva yajate | "Let him commence in spring, which is the Brāhman's season. Whosoever sacrifices does so after having as it were become a Brāhman." So too Kātyāyana says in his S'rauta Sūtras vii. 4, 12: "Brāhmana" ity eva vaisya-rājanyayor ani | "The word Brāhmana is to be addressed to a Vais'ya and a Rājanya also." On which the Commentator annotates: Vaisya-rajanyayor api yajne "dīkshito 'yam brāhmanah" ity eva vaktavyam | na "dīkshito'yam kshattriyo vais'yo vā " iti | "The formula 'This Brahman has been consecrated' is to be used at the sacrifice of a Vaisya Kshättra rejoined, 'Be it so,' and, laying aside its own implements, approached the sacrifice with those of Brahman, in the form of Brahman, and having become Brahman. Wherefore now also a Kshattriya when sacrificing, laying aside his own implements, approaches the sacrifice with those of Brahman, in the form of Brahman, and having become Brahman."

The Mahābhārata, S'āntip. verses 2280 f. distinctly defines the duty of a Kshattriya in reference to sacrifice and sacred study: Kshattriya-syāpi yo dharmas tam te vakshyāmi Bhārata | dadyād rājan na yācheta yajeta na cha yājayet | nādhyāpayed adhīyīta prajās cha paripālayet | "I will tell thee also the duties of a Kshattriya. Let him give, and not ask (gifts); let him sacrifice, but not officiate for others at sacrifices; let him not teach, but study; and let him protect the people."

It is clear that these passages which restrict the right of officiating ministerially at sacrifices to the members of the Brahmanical order, represent a very different state of opinion and practice from that which prevailed in the earlier Vedic age, when Viśvāmitra, a Rājanya, and his relatives, were highly esteemed as the authors of sacred poetry, and were considered as perfectly authorized to exercise sacerdotal functions.

The result of the conflict between the opposing interests represented by Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra respectively, is thus described by Professor and a Rājanya also; and not the words 'this Rājanya, or this Vais'ya, has been consecrated.'"

169 It appears from Arrian that the Greeks were correctly informed of this prerogative of the Brahmans. He says, Indica, ch. xi.: Καὶ δοτις δὲ ιδία θύει, ἐξηγητὴς ἀυτῷ τῆς θυσίης τῶν τις σοφιστῶν τούτων γίνεται, ὡς ὀυκ ἀν ἄλλως κεχαρισμένα τοῖς θεοῖς θύσαντας. "And whosoever sacrifices in private has one of these sophists" (so the highest of the classes, here said to be seven in number, is designated) "as director of the ceremony, since sacrifice could not otherwise be offered acceptably to the gods." Arrian makes another assertion (ibid. xii.) which, if applied to the time when he wrote (in the second Christian century), is not equally correct. After observing that the several classes were not allowed to intermarry, nor to practice two professions, nor to pass from one class into another, he adds: Μοῦνον σφίσιν ανείται σοφιστήν έκ παντός γένεος γενέσθαι. δτι οὐ μαλθακά τοῖσι σοφιστήσιν έισί τά πρήγματα, άλλὰ πάντων ταλαιπωρότατα. "Only it is permitted to a person of any class among them to become a sophist; for the life of that class is not luxurious, but the most toilsome of all." However indubitably true the first part of this sentence may have been in the age of Vis'vamitra, it cannot be correctly predicated of the age of Arrian, or even of the period when India was invaded by Alexander the Great. The mistake may have arisen from confounding the Buddhists with the Brahmans, or from supposing that all the Brahmanical Indians, who adopted an ascetic life, were regarded as "sophists."

Roth at the close of his work on the literature and history of the Veda, which has been so often quoted, p. 141: "Vasishtha, in whom the future position of the Brahmans is principally foreshadowed, occupies also a far higher place in the recollections of the succeeding centuries than his martial rival; and the latter succumbs in the conflict out of which the holy race of Brahmāvartta was to emerge. Vasishtha is the sacerdotal hero of the new order of things. In Viśvāmitra the ancient condition of military shepherd-life in the Punjab is thrown back for ever into the distance. This is the general historical signification of the contest between the two Vedic families, of which the literature of all the succeeding periods has preserved the recollection."

Sect. VII.—Do the details in the last two sections enable us to decide in what relation Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra stood to each other as priests of Sudās?

It appears from the data supplied in the two preceding sections that both Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra are represented as priests of a king called This is shewn, as regards the former rishi (see pp. 319 ff., above), by R.V. vii. 18, 4, 5, and 21-25; and vii. 33, 1-6, where he is said to have interceded with Indra for Sudas, who, as appears from verse 25 of the second of these hymns, was the son of Pijavana. similar relation is shewn by R.V. iii. 53, 9-13 to have subsisted between Viśvāmitra and Sudās (see above, p. 342); and although Sudās is not in that passage identified with the king who was Vasishtha's patron, by the addition of his patronymic, we are told in the Nirukta, ii. 24, that he was the same person, the son of Pijavana. There is therefore no doubt that, according to ancient tradition, the two rishis were both priests of the same prince. It further appears that the Bharatas, with whom, as we have seen, Viśvāmitra was connected, are in R.V. vii-33, 6 referred to as in hostility with Sudas and his priest. Are we then to conclude that the one set of facts excludes the other—that the two rishis could not both have been the family-priests of Sudas?

There is no reason to arrive at such an inference. Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra could not, indeed, have been the domestic priests of Sudās at one and the same period. But they may have been so at different times; and the one may have supplanted the other. It is, however, very difficult to derive from the imperfect materials supplied in the passages to which I have referred any clear conception of the shape and course which the contest between these two rivals took, or to fix the periods at which they respectively enjoyed their patron's favour. Prof. Roth thinks 170 that some light is thrown on this obscure subject by the different parts of the 53rd hymn of the third mandala of the Rig-veda. This composition, as it stands, contains, as he considers, fragments of hymns by Viśvāmitra or his descendants, of different dates; and the verses (9-13), in which that rishi represents himself and the Kauśikas as being the priests of Sudas, are, in his opinion, earlier than the concluding verses (21-24), 171 which consist of imprecations directed against Vasishtha. These last verses, he remarks, contain an expression of wounded pride, and threaten vengeance against an enemy who had come into possession of some power or dignity which Viśvāmitra himself had previously enjoyed. And as we find from one of his hymns (the 53rd) that he and his adherents had at one time led Sudas to victory, and enjoyed a corresponding consideration; -while from Vasishtha's hymns it is clear that he and his family had also been elevated in consequence of similar claims to a like position;—it would seem to result that Viśvāmitra had cursed Vasishtha for this very reason that he had been supplanted by him. The former with his Kuśikas had through the growing influence of his rival been driven away by Sudas to the Bharatas the enemies of that prince and of the Tritsus; and then 170 See Litt. und Gesch. des Weda, pp. 121 ff.

¹⁷¹ I have (above, p. 343) characterized these verses as obscure and have left them untranslated. The portions of the following version which are printed in italics are doubtful: verse 22. "He (or, it) vexes (turns the edge of) even an axe; and breaks even a sword. A seething cauldron, even, o Indra, when over-heated, casts out foam. 23. O men, no notice is taken of the arrow. They lead away the intelligent (lodha) looking upon him as a beast. Men do not, however, pit a hack to run against a racer; they do not lead an ass before horses. 24. These sons of Bharata, o Indra, desire separation, not vicinity. They constantly urge the horse as if to a distance; they carry about the bow in the battle." The reader may consult Prof. Wilson's translation R.V. vol. iii. p. 89 f., as well as Roth's Litt. u. Gesch. des Weda, p. 109 f. In his Illustrations of the Nirukta, p. 42, Roth conjectures that both lodha and pas'u, in verse 23, may denote animals of different natures, and that the clause may mean something to the same effect as "they look on the wolf as if it were a hare." In his Lexicon, s.v. pasu, he takes that word to denote a head of cattle (ein Stück Vieh) as a term of contempt. He takes jyāvāja, in verse 24, to mean "having the impulsive force (?) (Schnell-Kraft) of a bow-string."

vowed vengeance against their enemies. Roth remarks that if this conjecture appears too bold, which he does not allow, there is no alternative but to regard verses 9-11 of R.V. iii. 53, as interpolated, and to hold that Viśvāmitra had always been allied with the Bharatas. But. as he urges, in a period such as that which the hymns of the Veda represent to us—a time of feud and foray among the small neighbouring tribes, when the power of the leaders of families and petty chiefs was unlimited, when we observe that the ten kings were allied against Sudās—in a period of subdivided dominion like this it would be far more surprising to find a family so favoured by the gods as that of Viśvāmitra or Vasishtha in continued and undisturbed possession of influence over any one of these chieftains, than to see mutual aggression. hostility, and vindictiveness, prevailing even among families and clans united to one another by community of language and manners. further evident from later tradition, as Roth remarks, that Vasishtha and his family had not always been the objects of Sudas's favour; but had, on the contrary, been at some time or other sufferers from his enmity or that of his house; and in proof of this he refers to the passage which has been cited above (p. 328) from Sāyana's note on R.V. vii. 32, and the Satyayana and Tandya Brahmanas, as there quoted; and also to the 176th adhyaya of the Adiparvan of the Mahabhārata, verses 6696 ff., which will be adduced in a future section.

According to Roth's view (p. 124) the alienation between Sudās and Vasishtha fomented by Viśvāmitra was only of temporary duration, and we must, therefore, understand that according to his view, the former rishi and his family remained eventually victors in the contest for influence between themselves and their rivals.

Professor Weber, in a note appended to an article by Dr. A. Kuhn in page 120 of the first volume of his Indische Studien, expresses a different opinion. "The testimonies," he says, "adduced by Roth, pp. 122 ff., according to which Sudās appears in the Epic age as hostile to Brahmanical interests, stand in opposition to his assertion that Vasishtha's family finally banished Viśvāmitra and the Kuśikas from the court of that prince. The enmity between the latter and Vasishtha, the prototype of Brahmanhood, is thus by no means of temporary duration (Roth, p. 124), but the very contrary." The passages cited by Roth, which Weber here claims as supporting his own view, are Manu, vii. 41 (see above, p. 296), the Anukramanī with the Satyayana and Tandya Brahmanas quoted in p. 328, and the 126th and following sections of the Adip. of the M. Bh. which will be adduced hereafter. To these may be added the text from the Kaushītakī Brāhmaṇa, cited in p. 328. If Sudās became ultimately reconciled to Vasishtha, and re-instated him and his relatives in their position of court priests, to the exclusion of the rival family of Viśvāmitra, it seems hard to understand, according to Professor Weber's argument, how that prince's name should have been handed down by tradition as one of the most prominent examples of impiety displayed in resistance to Brahmanical pretensions. It is, however, to be observed that, except in the text of Manu, it is the descendants of Sudas, and not the king himself, who are charged with the outrages committed against Vasishtha's family; and that in the passage of the M. Bh. above referred to (Adip. vv. 7669 ff.) the son of Sudas is represented as becoming ultimately reconciled to Vasishtha.172 And if the passages. which have been cited above from the Rig-veda (pp. 330 f.) in allusion to Sudas's deliverance by the gods, refer to a real person, and to the 172 It is also worthy of remark that the Anus'asanap. of the M.Bh. contains a conversation between Vasishtha and Saudasa (the son, or one of the descendants of, Sudas) about the pre-eminent purity and excellence of cows, verse 3732: Etasminn eva kāle tu Vasishtham rishi-sattamam | Ikshvāku-vamšajo rājā Saudāso vadatām varah | sarva - loka - charam siddham brahma-kośam sanātanam | purohitam abhiprashtum abhivādyopachakrame | Saudāsa uvācha | trailokye bhagavan kimsvit pavitram kathyate'nagha | yat kirttayan sada marttyah prapnuyat punyam uttamam | "At this time the eloquent king Saudasa, sprung from the race of Ikshyaku, proceeded, after salutation, to make an enquiry of his family-priest Vas'ishtha, the eternal saint, the most excellent of rishis, who was able to traverse all the world, and was a treasure of sacred knowledge: 'What, o venerable and sinless man, is declared to be the purest thing in the three worlds, by constantly celebrating which one may acquire the highest merit?" Vasishtha in reply expatiates at great length on the merit resulting from bestowing cows, and ascribes to these animals some wonderful properties, as that they are the "support of all beings" (pratishtha bhutanam, verse 3736); "the present and the future" (gavo bhutam cha bhavyam cha, 3737), and describes the cow as "pervading the universe, mother of the past and future" (yayā sarvam idam vyāptam jagat sthāvara-jangamam | tām dhenum sirasā vande bhūta-bhavyasya mātaram, 3799). The sequel is thus told in verse 3801: Varam idam iti bhumido (bhumipo?) vichintya pravaram risher vachanam tato mahātmā | vyasrijata niyatātmavān dvijebhyo subahu cha go-dhanam aptavams lokan | "The great, self-subduing king, considering that these words of the rishi were most excellent, lavished on the Brāhmans very great wealth in the shape of cows, and obtained the worlds."-So here we find the son of Saudāsa extolled as a saint.

same individual with whom we are at present concerned, they are difficult to reconcile with these traditions in the Brāhmaṇas, Mahābhārata, and Purāṇas; inasmuch as they are not said to be the productions of Viśvāmitra or his descendants, and as they necessarily imply that Sudās was a pious prince who worshipped the popular deities in the way prescribed by the rishis by whom he was commemorated, since the latter would not otherwise have celebrated him in their hymns as a conspicuous object of divine favour. Tradition, too, as we have seen (p. 268) represents Sudās to have been the author of a Vedic hymn. The verses of the 104th hymn of the seventh book which I have quoted (above, p. 327) do not appear to contribute any further aid towards the solution of the question under consideration. Assuming that they contain a curse aimed at Viśvāmitra we have no means of ascertaining when they were uttered; whether the charge preferred against Vasishtha preceded or followed the ascendancy of his rival.

We seem, therefore, to possess no sufficient data for settling the question of the relations in which Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra respectively stood to king Sudās, further than that they both appear, from the hymns of the Rig-veda, to have been, at one period or another, his family priests; but which of the two was the first, and which the last, to enjoy the king's favour, must, according to all appearance, remain a mystery.

SECT. VIII .- Story of Triśanku.

I shall now proceed to adduce the different legends in the Purāṇas, the Rāmāyaṇa, and the Mahābhārata, in which Vaśishṭha and Viśvāmitra are represented as coming into conflict.

In the third chapter of the fourth book of the Vishnu Purāna (Wilson, vol. iii. pp. 284 ff.) we find a story about a king Satyavrata, called also Triśanku, the 26th in descent from Ikshvāku, who had become degraded to the condition of a Chandāla, about whom it is briefly related, iv. 3, 13: Dvādaśa-vārshikyām anāvrishtyām Viśvāmitra - kalatrāpatya - poshanārtham chandāla - pratigraha - pariharanāya cha Jāhnavī-tīra - nyagradhe mriga-māmsam anudinam babandha | 14. Paritushţena cha Viśvāmitrena sa-śarīrah svargam āropitah | "During a twelve years' drought he daily suspended deer's flesh for the support of Viśvāmitra's wife and children on a nyagrodha-tree on the banks of the Ganges, intending by this means to spare them the (humiliation of) receiving a gift from a Chandāla; and was in consequence raised bodily to heaven by Viśvāmitra, who was gratified (with his conduct)." ¹⁷³

This story is told at greater length in the Harivamása (sections 12 and 13) where Vasishtha also is introduced. I have already (p. 337) remarked on the super-human longevity ascribed to this sage, who is represented as contemporary both with Ikshvaku, and with his descendants down to the sixty-first generation. But Indian mythology, with its boundless resources in supernatural machinery, and in the doctrine of transmigration, can reconcile all discrepancies, and explain away all anachronisms, making any sage re-appear at any juncture when his presence may be required, another and yet the same.

The Harivamsa states that Satyavrata (Trisanku) had been expelled from his home by his father for the offence of carrying off the young wife of one of the citizens under the influence of a criminal passion (verse 718. Yena bhāryyā hritā pūrvam kritodvāhā parasya vai | 720. Jahāra kāmāt kanyām sa kasyachit puravāsinah); and that Vasishtha did not interfere to prevent his banishment. His father retired to the woods to live as a hermit. In consequence of the wickedness which had been committed, Indra did not rain for a period of twelve years. At that time Viśvāmitra had left his wife and children and gone to practice austerities on the sea-shore. His wife, driven to extremity by want, was on the point of selling her second son for a hundred cows, in order to support the others; but this arrangement was stopped by the intervention of Satyavrata, who liberated the son when bound, 174 and maintained the family by providing them with the flesh of wild animals: and according to his father's injunction, consecrated himself for the performance of a silent penance for twelve years (verse 732. Upāmša-vratam āsthāya dīkshām dvādaša-vārshikīm | pitur niyogād avahat tasmin vana-gate nripe). The story proceeds thus:

¹⁷³ In the Mahābh. S'āntip. verses 5330 ff. (referred to by Weber, Ind. St. i. 475, note) there is a story of Visvāmitra determining to eat dog's flesh in a period of famine between the end of the the Tretā-age and the beginning of the Dvāpara; and holding a conversation on this subject with a Chanḍāla. The circumstance is referred to in Manu, x. 108: Kshudhārttas chāttum abhyāgād Viśvāmitraḥ śva-jāghanīm | han-ḍāla-hastād ādāya dharmādharma-vichakshanaḥ | "And Visvāmitra, who knew right and wrong, resolved to eat a dog's thigh, taking it from the hand of a Chanḍāla."

¹⁷⁴ See in Ind. Stud. ii. 121 ff. Professor Roth's remarks on the peculiar relation in which he regards this story as standing to that of S'unassepa, as given in the Aitareya Brāhmana. The various incidents in the one present in many respects a curious parallel to those of the other, which he considers can hardly be accidental; and he thinks this version of the legend of Trišanku may have arisen out of a transformation and distortion of that of S'unassepa.

Verse 733. Ayodhyām chaiva rāshtram cha tathaivāntahpuram munih | yājyopādhyāya-sambandhād Vasishthah paryarakshata | Satyavratas tu bālyād vai bhāvino 'rthasya vā balāt | Vasishthe 'bhyadhikam manyum dhārayāmāsa nityadā | 735. Pitrā hi tañ tadā rājyāt tyajyamānañ svam ātmajam | na vārayāmāsa munir Vasishthah kāranena ha | pānigrahana-mantrānām nishthā syāt saptame pade | na cha Satyavratas tasmād dhritavān saptame pade | jūnan dharmān Vasishthas tu na mām trātīti Bhārata | Satyavratas tadā rosham Vasishthe manasā 'karot | guna-buddhyā tu bhagavān Vasishthah kritavāms tadā | na cha Satyavratas tasya tam upāmsum abudhyata | 740. Tena tv idānīm vahatā dīkshām tām durvahām bhuvi | "kulasya nishkritis tāta kritā sā vai bhaved" iti | na tam Vasishtho bhaqavan pitra tyaktam nyavarayat | abhishekshyāmy aham putram asyety evam matir muneh | sa tu dvādaśavarshāni tām dīkshām udvahan balī | avidyamāne māmse tu Vasishthasya mahātmanah | sarva-kāma-dughām dogdhrīm dadarśa sa nripātmajah | tām vai krodhāch cha mohāch cha śramāch chaiva kshudhārditah | daśadharma-gato rājā jaghāna Janamejaya \ 745. Tach cha māmsam svayam chaiva Viśvāmitrasya chātmajān | bhojayāmāsa tach chhrutvā Vasishtho'py asya chukrudhe | 750. Viśvāmitras tu dārānām āgato bharane krite | sa tu tasmai varam prādād munih prītas Triśankave | chhandyamāno varenātha varam vavre nripātmajah | saśarīro vraje svargam ity evam yāchito varah | anāvrishţi-bhaye tasmin gate dvādaśa-vārshike | pitrye 'bhishichya rājye tu yājayāmāsa tam munih | mishatām devatānām cha Vasishthasya cha Kausikah | sasarīram tadā tam tu divam āropayat prabhuh |

733. "Meanwhile Vasishtha, from the relation subsisting between the king (Satyavrata's father) and himself, as disciple 175 and spiritual preceptor, governed the city of Ayodhyā, the country, and the interior apartments of the royal palace. But Satyavrata, whether through folly or the force of destiny, cherished constantly an increased indignation against Vasishtha, who for a (proper) reason had not interposed to prevent his exclusion from the royal power by his father. ! The formulas of the marriage ceremonial are only binding,' said Satyavrata, 'when the seventh step has been taken, 176 and this had not been done when I seized the damsel: still Vasishtha, who knows the precepts of the law, does not come to my aid.' Thus Satyavrata was incensed in his mind against Vasishtha, who, however, had acted from a sense of what was right. Nor did Satyavrata understand (the propriety of) that silent penance imposed upon him by his father. 740. When he had supported this arduous rite, (he supposed that) he had redeemed his family position. The venerable muni Vasishtha did not, however, (as has been said) prevent his father from setting him aside, but resolved to install his son as king. When the powerful prince Satyavrata had endured the penance for twelve years, he beheld, when he was without flesh to eat, the milch cow of Vasishtha which yielded all objects of desire; and under the influence of anger, delusion, and exhaustion, distressed by hunger, and failing in the ten duties [the opposites of which are then enumerated he slew her (745) and both partook of her flesh himself, and gave it to Viśvāmitra's sons to eat. Vaśishtha hearing of this, became incensed against him," and imposed on him the name of Triśanku as he had committed three sins (verses 747-749). "750. On his return home, Viśvāmitra was gratified by the support which his wife had received, and offered Triśanku the choice of a boon. When this proposal was made, Triśanku chose the boon of ascending bodily to heaven. All apprehension from the twelve years' drought being now at an end, the muni (Viśvāmitra) installed Triśanku in his father's kingdom, and offered sacrifice on his behalf. The mighty Kauśika then, in spite of the resistance of the gods and of Vaśishtha, exalted the king alive to heaven."

¹⁷⁵ Literally "the person in whose behalf sacrifice was to be performed."

The legend of Triśanku is also related, though differently, in the Bālakānḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa; but as it is there introduced as a portion of the history of Viśvāmitra's various contests with Vaśishtha recorded in the 51st to 65th sections of that book, I shall reserve it till I take up that narrative.

^{176 &}quot;The next ceremony is the bride's stepping seven steps. It is the most material of all the nuptial rites; for the marriage is complete and irrevocable so soon as she has taken the seventh step, and no sooner." Colebrooke's Misc. Ess. i. 218, where further details will be found.

SECT. IX.-Legend of Harischandra.

The son of Triśanku, the subject of the preceding story, was Hariśchandra, whose name is mentioned in the Vishnu P., but without any allusion to the events of his life. According to the Markandeva Purāna, 177 however, he gave up his whole country, and sold his wife and son, and finally himself, in satisfaction of Viśvāmitra's demands for The following is a summary of the story as there told, book i. sections 7-9. We may perhaps regard it as having in part a polemical import, and as intended to represent Viśvāmitra, the Kshattriya rival of the Brāhmans, in the most unfavourable colours. The sufferings of Harischandra, his wife, and son, are very pathetically depicted, and the effect of the various incidents is heightened with great artistic skill. The story, in fact, appears to me one of the most touching to be found in Indian literature. Hariśchandra, the Purāna tells us, was a royal rishi (rājarshi) who lived in the Tretā age, and was renowned for his virtues, and the universal prosperity, moral and physical, which prevailed during his reign. On one occasion, when hunting, the king heard a sound of female lamentation which proceeded, it appears, from the Sciences who were becoming mastered by the austerely-fervid sage Viśvāmitra, in a way they had never been before by anyone else; and were consequently crying out in alarm at his superiority. In fulfilment of his duty as a Kshattriya to defend the weak, and inspired by the god Ganeśa, who had entered into him, Harischandra exclaimed (i. 7, 12) "' What sinner is this who is binding fire in the hem of his garment, while I, his lord, am present, resplendent with force and fiery vigour?' He shall today enter on his long sleep, pierced in all his limbs by arrows, which, by their discharge from my bow, illuminate all the quarters of the firmament" (12. Ko'yam badhnāti vastrānte pāvakam pāpa-krin narah | baloshna-tejasā dīpte mayi patyāv upasthite | 13. So 'dya mat-kārmukākshepa - vidīpita - digantaraih | śarair vibhinna - sarvāngo dīrghanidrām pravekshyati |). Viśvāmitra was provoked by this address. In consequence of his wrath the Sciences instantly perished, and Harischandra, trembling like the leaf of an asyattha tree, submissively represented that ¹⁷⁷ The same story is told in the Padma Purāna also. See Wilson's V.P. vol. iii. p. 287, and note. The glory of Haris'chandra is described in the M.Bh. Sabhāp. verses 489 ff.

he had merely done his duty as a king, which he defined as consisting in the bestowal of gifts on eminent Brāhmans and other persons of slender means, the protection of the timid, and war against enemies. Viśvāmitra hereupon demands a gift as a Brāhman intent upon receiving one. The king offers him whatever he may ask: Gold, his own son, wife, body, life, kingdom, good fortune (hiranyam vā suvarnam vā putrah patnī kalevaram | prānāh rājyam puram lakshmīr yad abhipretam ātmanah |). The saint first requires the present for the Rajasuya sacrifice. On this being promised, and still more offered, he asks for the empire of the whole earth, including everything but Harischandra himself, his wife and son, and his virtue which follows its possessor wherever he goes 178 (i. 7, 28. Vinā bhāryyām cha putram cha śarīram cha tavānagha | 29. Dharmañ cha sarva-dharma-jna yo yantam anugachhati). Hariśchandra joyfully agrees. Viśvāmitra then requires him to strip off all his ornaments, to clothe himself in the bark of trees, and to quit the kingdom with his wife Saivyā and his son. When he is departing the sage stops him and demands payment of his yet unpaid sacrificial The king replies that he has only the persons of his wife, his son, and himself left. Viśvāmitra insists that he must nevertheless pay; and that "unfulfilled promises of gifts to Brahmans bring destruction" (i. 7. 35. Viśeshato brāhmanānām hanty adattam pratisrutam). The unfortunate prince, after being threatened with a curse, engages to make the payment in a month; and commences his journey with a wife unused to such fatigues, amid the universal lamentations of his subjects. While he lingers, listening to their affectionate remonstrances against his desertion of his kingdom, Viśvāmitra comes up, and being 178 Compare Manu's very striking verses, viii. 17, and iv. 239 ff., which may be freely rendered as follows:

"Our virtue is the only friend that follows us in death;
All other ties and friendships end with our departing breath.

Nor father, mother, wife, nor son beside us then can stay,
Nor kinsfolk:—virtue is the one companion of our way.

Alone each creature sees the light, alone the world he leaves;
Alone of actions, wrong or right, the recompence receives.

Like log or clod, beneath the sod their lifeless kinsman laid,
His friends turn round and quit the ground; but virtue tends the dead.

Be then a hoard of virtue stored, to help in day of doom;
By virtue led, we cross the dread, immeasurable gloom."

See the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, vol. xix. for 1862, p. 303 f.

incensed at the delay and the king's apparent hesitation, strikes the queen with his staff, as she is dragged on by her husband. All this Harischandra endures with patience, uttering no complaint. Then the five Viśvedevas, merciful gods, exclaimed, "'To what worlds shall this sinner Viśvāmitra go, who has thrust down this most excellent of sacrificers from the royal dignity? Whose faith shall now sanctify the soma-juice poured out with recitation of texts at the great sacrifice, that we may drink it, and become exhilarated ' " (i. 7, 62. Atha viśve tadā devāh pancha prāhuh kripālavah | Viśvāmitrah supāpo 'yam lokān kān samavāpsyati | 63. Yenāyam yajvanām śreshthah sva-rājyād avaropitaḥ | kasya vā śraddhayā pūtam̃ sutam̃ somam mahādhvare | pītvā vayam prayāsyāmo mudam mantra - purassaram |). Viśvāmitra heard what they said, and by a curse doomed them to become men; he relented, however, so far as to exempt them from having offspring, and from other family ties and human weaknesses, and promised that they should eventually be restored to their pristine position as gods. They in consequence became partially incarnate as the five Pandus, the sons of Draupadī. Resuming the story of Harischandra, the writer tells us that he then proceeded with his wife and little son to Benares, imagining that this divine city, as the special property of Siva, could not be possessed by any mortal. Here he found the relentless Viśvāmitra waiting for him, and ready to press his demand for the payment of his sacrificial gift, even before the expiration of the full period of grace. In this extremity Saivyā the queen suggests with a sobbing voice that her husband should sell her. On hearing this proposal Harischandra swoons, then recovers, utters lamentations, and swoons again, and his wife, seeing his sad condition, swoons also. While they are in a state of unconsciousness, their famished child exclaims in distress, "O father, father, give me bread; O mother, mother, give me food: hunger overpowers me; and my tongue is parched" (i. 8, 35. Tāta tāta dadasvānnam ambāmba bhojanam dada | kshud me balavatī jātā jihvāgram śushyate tathā). At this moment Viśvāmitra returns, and after recalling Hariśchandra to consciousness by sprinkling water over him, again urges payment of the present. The king again swoons, and is again restored. The sage threatens to curse him if his engagement is not fulfilled by sunset. Being now pressed by his wife, the king agrees to sell her, adding, however, "If my voice can utter such a wicked word, I do what the most inhuman wretches cannot perpetrate" (i. 8, 48 f. Nriśamsair api yat karttum na śakyam tat karomy aham I yadi me śakyate vānī vaktum īdrik sudurvachah). He then goes into the city, and in self-accusing language offers his queen for sale as a slave. A rich old ... Brāhman offers to buy her at a price corresponding to her value, to do his household work. Harischandra's heart was torn, and he could make no reply. The Brahman paid down the money, and was dragging away the queen by the hair of her head, when her little son Rohitasva, seeing his mother about to be taken away from him, began to cry, and laid hold of her skirts. The mother then exclaims: i. 8, 59, "Muncharyya muncha mām tāvad yāvat pāśyāmy aham śiśum | durlabham darśanam tāta punar asya bhavishyati | 60. Paśyaihi vatsa mām evam mātaram dāsyatām gatām | mām mā sprākshīḥ rāja-puttra aspriśyā 'ham tavādhunā" | 61. Tatah sa bālah sahasā drishtvā krishtām tu mātaram | samabhyadhāvad ambeti rudan sāsrāvilekshanah | 62. Tam āgatañ dvijah kretā bālam abhyāhanat padā | vadams tathāpi so 'mbeti naivāmunchata mātaram | 63. Rājapatny uvācha | "prasādam kuru me nātha krīnīshvemam̃ cha bālakam | krītā 'pi nāham bhavato vinainam̃ kāryya-sādhikā | 64. Ittham mamālpa-bhāgyāyāh prasāda-sumukho bhava | mām samyojaya bālena vatseneva payasvinīm" | 65. Brāhmanah uvācha | "grihyatām vittam etat te dīyatām bālako mama" | "Let me go, let me go, venerable sir, till I look upon my son. I shall hardly ever behold him again. Come, my darling, see thy mother now become a slave. Touch me not, young prince; I may no longer be handled by thee.' Seeing his mother dragged away, the child ran after her, his eyes dimmed with tears, and crying 'mother.' The Brāhman purchaser kicked him when he came up; but he would not let his mother go, and continued crying 'mother, mother.' The queen then said to the Brahman, 'Be so kind, my master, as to buy also this child, as without him I shall prove to thee but a useless purchase. 64. Be thus merciful to me in my wretchedness; unite me with my son, like a cow to her calf.'179 The Brāhman agrees: 'Take this money and give me the boy.'" When his wife and son were being carried away, Harischandra broke out into lamentations: i. 8, 68. Yām na vāyur na chādityo nendur na cha prithag-janah | drishtavantah purā patnīm seyam dāsītvam āgatā | 69. Sūrya-vam̃śa-prasūto 'yam̃ sukumāra-karānguliḥ | samprāpto vikrayam

¹⁷⁹ The whole of this reads like a scene from "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

bālo dhiñ mām astu sudurmatim | "She, my spouse, whom neither air. nor sun, nor moon, nor stranger had beheld, is now gone into slavery. This my son, a scion of the solar race, with his delicate hands and • fingers, has been sold. Woe to me, wicked wretch that I am.'" After the Brāhman had gone out of sight with his purchases, Viśvāmitra again appeared and renewed his demands; and when the afflicted Harischandra offered him the small sum he had obtained by the sale of his wife and son, he angrily replied, i. 8, 74: Kshattrabandho mamemām tvam sadrišīm yajna-dakshinām | manyase yadi tat kshipram pasya tvam me balam param | 75. Tapaso 'ttra sutaptasya brāhmanyasyāmalasya cha | mat-prabhāvasya chograsya śuddhasyādhyayanasya cha | " 'If, miserable Kshattriya, thou thinkest this a sacrificial gift befitting my deserts, thou shalt soon behold the transcendent power of my ardent austere-fervour, of my spotless Brāhmanhood, of my terrible majesty, and of my holy study." Harischandra promises an additional gift, and Viśvāmitra allows him the remaining quarter of the day for its liquidation. On the terrified and afflicted prince offering himself for sale, in order to gain the means of meeting this cruel demand, Dharma (Righteousness) appears in the form of a hideous and offensive Chandala, and agrees to buy him at his own price, large or small. Hariśchandra declines such a degrading servitude, and declares that he would rather be consumed by the fire of his persecutor's curse than submit to such a fate. Viśvāmitra however again comes on the scene, asks why he does not accept the large sum offered by the Chandala; and, when he pleads in excuse his descent from the solar race, threatens to fulminate a curse against him if he does not accept that method of meeting his liability. Harischandra implores that he may be spared this extreme of degradation, and offers to become Viśvāmitra's slave in payment of the residue of his debt; whereupon the sage rejoins, "If thou art my slave, then I sell thee as such to the Chandala for a hundred millions of money" (i. 8, 95. Yadi preshyo mama bhavan chandalaya tato mayā | dāsa-bhāvam anuprāpto datto vittārbudena vai |). The Chandala, delighted, pays down the money, and carries off Harischandra, bound, beaten, confused, and afflicted, to his own place of abode. Morning, noon, and evening the unfortunate prince repeats these words: i. 8, 99. Bālā dīna-mukhī drishtvā bālam dīna-mukham purah | mām smaraty asukhāvishţā "mochayishyati nau nripaḥ | 100. Upātta-vitto viprāya dattvā vittam ato 'dhikam" | na sā mām mṛiga-śāvākshī vetti pāpataram kritam | 101. Rājya-nāśah suhrit-tyāgo bhāryyā-tanaya-vikrayah | prāptā chandālatā cheyam aho duhkha-paramparā | "My tender wife, dejected, looking upon my dejected boy, calls me to mind while she says. 'The king will ransom us (100) after he has gained money, and paid the Brāhman a larger sum than he gave for us.' But my fawn-eyed spouse is ignorant that I have become yet more wretched than before. 101. Loss of my kingdom, abandonment of friends, sale of my wife and son, and this fall into the condition of a Chandala,what a succession of miseries!" Harischandra is sent by the Chandala to steal grave-clothes in a cemetery (which is described at tedious length, with all its horrors and repulsive features), and is told that he will receive two-sixths of the value for his hire; three-sixths going to his master, and one-sixth to the king. In this horrid spot, and in this degrading occupation, he spent, in great misery, twelve months, which seemed to him like a hundred years (i. 8, 127. Evam dvādaśa-māsās tu nītāh śata-samopamāh). He then falls asleep and has a series of dreams suggested by the life he had been leading (śmaśānābhyāsa-yogena, verse 129). After he awoke, his wife came to the cemetery to perform the obsequies of their son, who had died from the bite of a serpent (verses 171 ff.). At first the husband and wife did not recognize each other, from the change in appearance which had been wrought upon them both by their miseries. Harischandra, however, soon discovers from the tenor of her lamentations that it is his wife, and falls into a swoon; as the queen does also when she recognizes her husband. When consciousness returns, they both break out into lamentations, the father bewailing in a touching strain the loss of his son, and the wife the degradation of the king. She then falls on his neck, embraces him, and asks "whether all this is a dream, or a reality, as she is utterly bewildered;" and adds, that "if it be a reality, then righteousness is unavailing to those who practise it" (verse 210. Rājan svapno 'tha tathyam vā yad etad manyate bhavān | tat kathyatām mahābhāga mano vai muhyate mama | 211. Yady etad evam dharmajna nāsti dharme sahāyatā |). After hesitating to devote himself to death on his son's funeral pyre without receiving his master's leave, (as such an act of insubordination might send him to hell) (verses 215 ff.), Harischandra resolves to do so, braving all the consequences, and consoling himself with the hopeful anticipation: verse 224. Yadi dattam yadi hutam guravo yadi toshitāḥ | paratra sangamo bhūyāt puttreṇa saha cha tvayā | "If I have given gifts, and offered sacrifices, and gratified my religious teachers, then may I be reunited with my son and with thee (my wife) in another world." The queen determines to die in the same manner. When Hariśchandra, after placing his son's body on the funeral pile, is meditating on the lord Hari Nārāyaṇa Kṛishṇa, the supreme spirit, all the gods arrive, headed by Dharma (Righteousness), and accompanied by Viśvāmitra. Dharma entreats the king to desist from his rash in-

180 In the following verses of the Atharva-veda a hope is expressed that families may be re-united in the next world: vi. 120, 3. Yattra suhārddah suhrido madanti vihāya rogam tanvah svāyāh | aslonāh angair ahrutāh svarge tattra pasyema pitarau cha putran | "In heaven, where our friends, and intimates live in blessedness, having left behind them the infirmities of their bodies, free from lameness or distortion of limb, -may we behold our parents and our children." ix. 5, 27. Yā pūrvam patim vittvā athānyam vindate 'param | panchaudanam cha tūv ajam dadāto na vi yoshatah | 28. Samānaloko bhavati punarbhuvā 'parah patih | yo 'jam panchaudanam dakshinājyotisham dadoti | "When a woman has had one husband before, and takes another, if they present the aja panchaudana offering they shall not be separated. 28. A second husband dwells in the same (future) world with his re-wedded wife, if he offers the aja panchaudana, illuminated by presents." xii. 3, 17. Svargam lokam abhi no nayāsi sam jayaya saha puttraih syama | "Mayest thou conduct us to heaven; may we be with our wives and children." xviii. 3, 23. Svan gachhatu te mano adha pitrin upa drava | "May thy soul go to its own (its kindred) and hasten to the fathers." From the texts cited by Mr. Colebrooke "on the duties of a faithful Hindu widow," (Misc. Ess. 115 ff.) it appears that the widow who becomes a satī (i.e. burns herself with her husband's corpse, or, in certain cases, afterwards) has the promise of rejoining her lord in another life, and enjoying celestial felicity in his society. In order to ensure such a result in all cases it was necessary either that both husband and wife should have by their lives merited equal rewards in another existence, or that the heroism of the wife, in sacrificing herself on her husband's funeral-pile should have the vicarious effect of expiating his offences, and raising him to the same heavenly region with herself. And it is indeed the doctrine of the authorities cited by Mr. Colebrooke that the self-immolation of the wife had this atoning effect. But in other cases where the different members of a family had by their actions during life merited different kinds of retribution, they might, according to the doctrine of the transmigration of souls current in later ages, be re-born in the shape of different animals, and so rendered incapable of any mutual communication after death. In regard to the absence of any traces of the tenet of metempsychosis from the earliest Indian writings, see Professor Weber's remarks in the Journ, of the Germ. Or. Soc. ix, 327 ff. and the abstract of them given in Journ. Roy. As. Soc. for 1865, pp. 305 ff.

181 An attempt is here made, verses 234 f., to give the etymology of Visvāmitra: Visva-trayena yo mitram karttum na s'akitāh purā | Visvāmitras tu te māittrīm ishtam chāharitum ichhati | "That Visvāmitra, whom the three Visvas formerly could not induce to be their friend, wishes to offer thee his friendship, and whatsoever thou desirest."

tention; and Indra announces to him that he, his wife, and son have conquered heaven by their good works. Ambrosia, the antidote of death, and flowers, are rained by the god from the sky; and the king's son is restored to life and the bloom of youth. The king, adorned with celestial clothing and garlands, and the queen, embrace their son. Harischandra, however, declares that he cannot go to heaven till he has received his master the Chandala's permission, and has paid him a ransom. Dharma then reveals to the king that it was he himself who had miraculously assumed the form of a Chandala. The king next objects that he cannot depart unless his faithful subjects, who are sharers in his merits, are allowed to accompany him to heaven, at least for one day. This request is granted by Indra; and after Visvāmitra has inaugurated Rohitāśva the king's son to be his successor, Hariśchandra, his friends and followers, all ascend in company to heaven. Even after this great consummation, however, Vasishtha, the family-priest of Harischandra, hearing, at the end of a twelve years' abode in the waters of the Ganges, an account of all that has occurred, becomes vehemently incensed at the humiliation inflicted on the excellent monarch, whose virtues and devotion to the gods and Brahmans he celebrates. declares that his indignation had not been so greatly roused even when his own hundred sons had been slain by Viśvāmitra, and in the following words dooms the latter to be transformed into a crane: i. 9, 9. Tasmād durātmā brahma-dviţ prājnānām avaropitah | mach-chhāpopahato mudhah sa vakatvam avapsyati | "Wherefore that wicked man, enemy of the Brahmans, smitten by my curse, shall be expelled from the society of intelligent beings, and losing his understanding shall be transformed into a Vaka." Visvāmitra reciprocates the curse, and changes Vasishtha into a bird of the species called Ari. In their new shapes the two have a furious fight, 182 the Āri being of the portentous height of two thousand yojanas (= 18000 miles), and the Vaka of 3090 yojanas. They first assail each other with their wings; then the Vaka smites his antagonist in the same manner, while the Ari strikes with his talons. Falling mountains, overturned by the blasts of wind raised by the ¹⁸² On the subject of this fight the Bhāgavata Purāna has the following verse: ix. 7, 6. Traišankavo Harischandro Višvāmitra-Vas'ishthayoh | yan-nimittam abhūd yuddham pakshinor bahu-vārshikam | "The son of Trišanku was Harischandra, on whose account Visvāmitra and Vasishtha in the form of birds had a battle of many flapping of their wings, shake the whole earth, the waters of the ocean overflow, the earth itself, thrown off its perpendicular, slopes downwards towards Pātāla, the lower regions. Many creatures perish by these various convulsions. Attracted by the dire disorder, Brahmā arrives, attended by all the gods, on the spot, and commands the combatants to desist from their fray. They were too fiercely infuriated to regard this injunction: but Brahmā put an end to the conflict by restoring them to their natural forms, and counselling them to be reconciled: i. 9, 28. Na chāpi Kauśika-śreshthas tasya rājno 'parādhyate | svarga-prāptikaro brahmann upakāra-pade sthitah | 29. Tapo-vighnasya karttārau kāma-krodha-vasam gatau | parityajata bhadram no brahma hi prachuram balam | 'The son of Kusika has not inflicted any wrong on Hariśchandra: inasmuch as he has caused the king's elevation to heaven he stands in the position of a benefactor. 29. Since ye have yielded to the influence of desire and anger ve have obstructed your austere fervour; leave off, bless you; the Brahmanical power is transcendent.' The sages were accordingly pacified, and embraced each other."

This interesting legend may be held to have had a double object, viz. first to portray in lively colours the heroic fortitude and sense of duty exhibited by Hariśchandra and his wife in enduring the long series of severe trials to which they were subjected; and secondly, to represent Viśvāmitra in an unamiable light, as an oppressive assertor of those sacerdotal prerogatives, which he had conquered for himself by his austerities, 183 to place him in striking contrast with the genuine Brāhman Vasishṭha who expresses strong indignation at the harsh procedure of his rival, and to recall the memory of those conflicts between years duration." On this the Commentator remarks: Viśvāmitro rājasūya-dakshinā-chhalena Hariśchandrasya sarva-svam apahritya yātayāmāsa | tach chhrutvā kupito Vasishtho'pi Viśvāmitrañ "tvam ārī bhava" iti sašāpa | so pi "tvam vako bhava" iti Vasishtham śašāpa | tayos cha yuddham abhūd iti prasiddam | "Viśvāmitra under pretence of taking a present for a rajasūya sacrifice, stripped Hariśchandra of all his property, and afflicted him. Vasishtha hearing of this, became incensed, and by an imprecation turned him into an Ārī. Viśvāmitra retorted the curse and changed Vasishtha into a Văka. And then a battle took place between them, as is well known." Here it will be seen that the Commentator changes the birds into which the rishis were transformed, making Viśvāmitra the Ārī and Vasishtha the Văka.

183 It is true that the Brähman rishi Durväsas also is represented as a very irascible personage. See vol. iv. of this work, pp. 165, 169, 208, 407; and Weber's Ind. St. iii. 398.

the Brāhmans and Kshattriyas, which were exemplified in the persons of these two sages, of whom the one is said to have been made the "lord of Brāhmans" (Vaśishtham īśam viprāṇām, M.Bh. Sāntip. v. 4499), and the other is declared in the story before us to have been the "enemy of the priests."

Sect. X.—Contest of Vasishtha and Visvāmitra according to the Mahābhārata.

In the Ādiparvan of the Mahābhārata, verses 6638 ff., we find another legend, in the Brahmanical interest, regarding the same two great personages, which begins with a panegyric on Vasishṭha, at the expense of the rival rishi:

6638. Brahmano mānasah putro Vasishtho'rundhatī-patih | tāpasā nirjitau śaśvad ajeyāv amarair api | kāma-krodhāv ubhau yasya charanau samvavāhatuh | yas tu nochchhedanam chakre Kuśikānām udāra-dhīh | Viśvāmitrāparādhena dhārayan manyum uttamam | 6640. Putra-vyasanasantaptah śaktiman apy aśakta-vat | Viśvamitra-vinaśaya na chakre karma darunam | mṛitāms cha punar āharttum yaḥ sa putrān Yama-kshayāt | kritantam natichakrama velam iva mahodadhih | yam prapya vijitatmanam mahātmānam narādhipāḥ | Ikshvākavo mahīpālāḥ lebhire prithivīm imām | purohitam imam prāpya Vasishtham rishi-sattamam | ījire kratubhis chaiva nṛipās te Kuru-nandana ¦ sa hi tān yājayāmāsa sarvān nripati-sattamān | brahmarshih Pāndava-śreshtha Vrihaspatir ivāmarān | 6645. Tasmād dharma-pradhānātmā veda-dharma-vid īpsitah | brāhmano gunavān kašchit purodhāh paridrišyatām | kshattriyenābhijātena prithivīm jetum ichhatā | pūrvam purohitah kūryyah pārtha rājyābhisiddhaye | mahīm jigīshatā rājnā brahma kāryam purassaram | . . . 6666. Kshattriyo 'ham bhavān vipras tapah-svādhyāya-sādhanah | brāhmaneshu kuto vīryyam praśūnteshu dhṛitūtmasu | arbudena gavām yas tvam na dadāsi mamepsitam | sva-dharmam na prahāsyāmi neshyāmi cha balena gām | 6679. "Sthīyatām" iti tach chhrutvā Vasishthasya payasvinī | ūrddhvānchita-śiro-grīvā prababhau raudra-daršanā | 6680. Krodha-raktekshanā sā gaur hambhā-rava-ghana-svanā | Viśvāmitrasya tat sainyam vyadrāvayata sarvašaļ | kašāgra-dandābhihatā kālyamānā tatastataļ | krodha-raktekshanā krodham bhūya eva samūdadhe | āditya iva madhyāhne krodha-dīpta-vapur babhau | angāra-varsham munchantī muhur bāladhito

mahat | asrijat Pahlavān puchhāt prasravād Drāvidān Sakān | yonidešāch cha Yavanān šakritah Savarān bahūn | 6691. Drishtvā tad mahad āścharyam brahma-tejo-bhavam tadā | Viśvāmitrah kshattra-bhāvād nirvinno vākyam abravīt | "dhig balam kshattriya-balam brahma-tejo-balam balam | balābalam viniśchitya tapah eva param balam" | sa rājyam sphītam utsrijya tām cha dīptām nripa-śriyam | bhogāmś cha prishthatah kritvā tapasy eva mano dadhe | sa gatvā tapasā siddhim lokān vishtabhya tejasā | 6695. Tatāpa sarvān dīptaujāh brāhmanatvam avāptavān | apibach cha tatah somam Indrena saha Kaušikah |

6638. "Vasishtha," a Gandharva informs Arjuna, "was the mindborn son of Brahmā and husband of Arundhatī. By his austere fervour, lust and anger, invincible even by the immortals, were constantly vanquished and embraced his feet. Restraining his indignation at the wrong done by Viśvāmitra, he magnanimously abstained from exterminating the Kuśikas. 6640. Distressed by the loss of his sons, he acted, although powerful, like one who was powerless, and took no

184 Arundhatī is again mentioned as the wife of Vasishtha, in the following lines of the M. Bh. Adip. 7351 f. addressed to Draupadi: Yathendrani Harihaye Svoha chaiva Vibhāvasau | Rohinī cha yathā Some Damayantī yathā Nale | yathā Vaiśravane Bhadrā Vasishthe chāpy Arundhatī | yathā Nārāyane Lakshmīs tathā tvam bhava bharttrishu | "What Indrani is to Indra, Svaha to the Sun, Rohini to the Moon, Damayantī to Nala, Bhadrā to Kuvera, Arundhatī to Vasishtha, and Lakshmī to Nārāyana, that be thou to thy husbands." She is again noticed in verses 8455 ff. : Suvratā chāpi kalyānī sarva-bhūteshu viśrutā | Arundhatī mahātmānam Vašishtham paryasankata | visuddha-bhāvam atyantam sadā priya-hiteratam | saptarshi-madhyagam vīram avamene cha tam munim | apadhyānena sā tena dhūmāruna-sama-prabhā | lakshyā'lakshyā nābhirūpā nimittam iva pasyati | "The faithful and beautiful Arundhatī, renowned among all creatures, was suspicious about the great Vasishtha. whose nature was eminently pure, who was devoted to the welfare of those he loved, who was one of the seven rishis, and heroic; and she despised the muni. In consequence of these evil surmises, becoming of the dusky colour of smoke, both to be seen and not to be seen, devoid of beauty, she looks like a (bad) omen." This version of the last line is suggested by Prof. Aufrecht. The Commentator explains it thus: "Nimittam" bharttur lakshmanam "iva pasyati" kapatena | atah eva "nabhirupa prachhannaveshā | tena hetunā "lakshyā'lakshyā cha" | " She regards as it were' i.e. by guile 'the omen' afforded by her husband's (bodily) marks, hence she assumed a disguise, and was 'both to be seen and not to be seen."

passage from the Vishnu Purāna, i. 9, 16 ff., where the irascible Durvāsas (to whom I lately referred, and who is said, in verse 2, to be a partial incarnation of S'iva, S'ankarasyāmsah), addressing Indra, who, he conceived, had insulted him, thus speaks of that sage's amiable temper, as contrasted with his own fierce and revengeful disposition: 15. Nāham kripālu-hridayo na cha mām bhajate kshamā anye te mun-dreadful measures for the destruction of Visvamitra. To recover those sons from the abode of Yama, he would not overstep fate, as the ocean respects its shores. Having gained this great self-mastering personage, the kings of Ikshvāku's race acquired (the dominion of) this earth. Obtaining this most excellent of rishis for their family-priest, they offered sacrifices. This Brahman-rishi officiated as priest for all those monarchs, as Vrihaspati does for the gods. 6645. Wherefore let some desirable, virtuous Brahman, with whom righteousness is the chief thing, and skilled in Vedic observances, be selected for this office. Let a well-born Kshattriya, who wishes to subdue the earth, first of all appoint a family-priest in order that he may augment his dominion. Let a king, who desires to conquer the earth, give precedence to the Brahmanical power." The Gandharva then, at Arjuna's request, goes on (verses 6650 ff.) to relate the "ancient story of Vasishtha" (vāsishtham ākhyānam purānam) and to describe the cause of enmity between that rishi and Viśvāmitra. It happened that the latter, who was son of Gādhi, king of Kānyakubja (Kanouj), and grandson of Kuśika, when out hunting, came to the hermitage of Vasishtha, where he was received with all honour, entertained together with his attendants with delicious food and drink, and presented with precious jewels and dresses obtained by the sage from his wonder-working cow, the fulfiller of all his desires. The cupidity of Viśvāmitra is aroused by the sight of this beautiful animal (all of whose fine points are enumerated in the legend), and he offers Vasishtha a hundred million cows, or his kingdom, in exchange for her. Vasishtha, however, replies that he is unable to part with her even in return for the kingdom. Viśvāmitra then tells him that he will, enforce the law of the stronger: 6665. "I am a Kshattriya, thou art a Brāhman, whose functions are austere fervour, and sacred study. How can there be any vigour in Brāhmans who are calm and selfrestrained? Since thou doest not give up to me, in exchange for a ayah S'akra Durvūsasam avehi mām | Gautamādibhir anyais tvam garvam āpūdito mudhā | akshānti-sāra-sarvasvam Durvūsasam avehi mām | 17. Vasishthādyair dayā-sāraih stotram kurvadbhir uchchakaih | garvam gato'si yenaivam mām athādyāva-manyase | 15. "I am not tender-hearted: patience lodges not in me. Those munis are different: know me to be Durvūsas. 16. In vain hast thou been rendered proud by Gautama and others: know me to be Durvūsas, whose nature and whose entire substance is irascibility. 17. Thou hast become proud through the loud praises of Vasishtha and other merciful saints, since thou thus contemnest me to-day."

hundred million of cows, that which I desire, I shall not abandon my own class-characteristic; I will carry away the cow by force." Vasishtha, confident, no doubt, of his own superior power, tells him to do as he proposes without loss of time. Viśvāmitra accordingly seizes the wonder-working cow; but she will not move from the hermitage, though beaten with whip and stick, and pushed hither and thither. Witnessing this, Vasishtha asks her what he, a patient Brāhman, can do? She demands of him why he overlooks the violence to which she is subjected. Vasishtha replies: "Force is the strength of Kshattriyas, patience that of Brahmans. As patience possesses me, go, if thou pleasest" (6676. Kshattriyanam balam tejo brahmananam kshama balam | kshama mām bhajate yasmāt gamyatām yadi rochate). The cow enquires if he means to abandon her; as, unless he forsakes her, she can never be carried off by force. She is assured by Vasishtha that he does not forsake her, and that she should remain if she could. "Hearing these words of her master, the cow tosses her head aloft, assumes a terrific aspect, (6680) her eyes become red with rage, she utters a deep bellowing sound, and puts to flight the entire army of Viśvāmitra. Being (again) beaten with whip and stick, and pushed hither and thither, she becomes more incensed, her eyes are red with anger, her whole body, kindled by her indignation, glows like the noonday sun, she discharges showers of firebrands from her tail, creates Pahlavas from the same member, Drāvidas and Sakas, Yavanas, Sabaras," Kānchis, Sarabhas, Paundras, Kirātas, Sinhalas, Vasas, and other tribes of armed warriors from her sweat, urine, excrement, etc., who assail Viśvāmitra's army, and put it to a complete rout. 6692. "Beholding this great miracle, the product of Brahmanical might. Viśvāmitra was humbled at (the impotence of) a Kshattriya's nature, and exclaimed, 'Shame on a Kshattriya's force; it is the force of a Brahman's might that is force indeed.' Examining what was and was not force, and (ascertaining) that austere fervour is the supreme force, he abandoned his prosperous kingdom and all its brilliant regal splendour; and casting all enjoyments behind its back, he devoted himself to austerity. Having by this means attained perfection, and Brāhmanhood, he arrested the worlds by his fiery vigour, and disturbed them all by the blaze of his glory; and at length the Kauśika drank soma with Indra." 186

¹⁸⁶ See above, p. 342, and note 134.

The same legend is repeated in the Salyaparvan, verses 2295 ff.:

Tathā cha Kausikas tāta tapo-nityo jitendriyah | tapusā vai sutaptena brāhmaṇatvam avāptavān | Gādhir nāma mahān āsīt kshattriyaḥ prathito bhuvi | tasya puttro 'bhavad rājan Viśvāmitrah pratāpavān | sa rājā Kauśikas tāta mahāyogy abhavat kila | sa puttram abhishichyātha Viśvāmitram mahātapāḥ | deha-nyāse manas chakre tam ūchuḥ pranatāḥ prajāḥ | "na gantavyam mahāprājna trāhi chāsmān mahābhayāt" | evam uktah pratyuvācha tato Gādhih prajās tatah ! "višvasya jagato goptā bhavishyati suto mama" | 2300. Ity uktvā tu tato Gādhir Viśvāmitram niveśya cha | jagāma tridivam rājan Viśvāmitro 'bhavad nṛipaḥ | na sa šaknoti prithivīm yatnavān api rakshitum | tatah śuśrāva rājā sa rākshasebhyo mahābhayam | niryayau nagarāch chāpi chatur-anga-balānvitaḥ | sa yätvä düram adhvänam Vasishthäsramam abhyagat | tasya te sainikäh rājams chakrus tattrālayān bahūn | tatas tu bhagavān vipro Vasishtho Brahmanah sutah | dadriśe 'tha tatah sarvam bhajyamānam mahāvanam | tasya kruddho mahārāja Vasishtho muni-sattamah | 2305. "Srijasva Savarān ghorān" iti svām gām uvācha ha | tathoktā sā 'srijad dhenuh purushān ghora-darśanān | te cha tad balam āsādya babhanjuh sarvato diśam | tach chhrutvā vidrutam sainyam Viśvāmitras tu Gādhijah | tapah param manyamānas tapasy eva mano dadhe | so 'smims tīrtha-vare rūjan Sarasvatyāh samāhitah | niyamais chopavāsais cha karshayan deham ātmanah | jalāhāro vāyubhakshah parnāhāras cha so 'bhavat | tathā sthandila-śāyī cha ye chānye niyamāh prithak | asakrit tasya devās tu vratavighnam prachakrire | 2310. Na chāsya niyamād buddhir apayāti mahātmanah | tatah parena yatnena taptvā bahu-vidham tapah | tejasā bhāskarākāro Gādhijah samapadyata | tapasā tu tathā yuktam Viśvāmitram Pitāmahah | amanyata mahātejāh vara-do varam asya tat | sa tu vavre varam rājan " syām aham brāhmaṇas tv" iti | tatheti chābravīd Brahmā sarva-loka-pitāmahah | sa labdhvā tapasogrena brihmanatvam mahāyaśāh | vichachara mahīm kritsnām kritakāmah suropanah |

"2295. So too the Kauśika, constant in austerities, and subduing his senses, acquired Brāhmanhood by the severity of his exercises. There was a great Kshattriya named Gādhi, renowned in the world, whose son was the powerful Viśvāmitra. This Kauśika prince (Gādhi) was greatly addicted to contemplation (mahāyogī): and after having installed his son as king, he resolved to abandon his corporal existence. His subjects, however, submissively said to him, 'Do not go, o great sage, but deliver us from our great alarm.' He replied, 'My son shall become the protector of the whole world.' 2300. Having accordingly installed Viśvāmitra, Gādhi went to heaven, and his son became king. Viśvāmitra, however, though energetic, was unable to protect the earth. He then heard that there was great cause of apprehension from the Rākshasas, and issued forth from the city, with an army consisting of four kinds of forces. Having performed a long journey, he arrived at the hermitage of Vasishtha. There his soldiers constructed many dwellings. In consequence the divine Brāhman Vasishtha, son of Brahmā, beheld the whole forest being cut up; and becoming enraged, he said to his cow, (2305) 'Create terrible Savaras.' The cow, so addressed, created men of dreadful aspect, who broke and scattered in all directions the army of Viśvāmitra. Hearing of this rout of his army, the son of Gādhi devoted himself to austerities, which he regarded as the highest (resource). In this sacred spot on the Sarasvatī he macerated his body with acts of self-restraint and fastings, absorbed in contemplation, and living on water, air, and leaves, sleeping on the sacrificial ground, and practising all the other Several times the gods threw impediments in his way; (2310) but his attention was never distracted from his observances. thus with strenuous effort undergone manifold austerities, the son of Gādhi became luminous as the sun; and Brahmā regarded his achievements as most eminent. The boon which Viśvāmitra chose was to become a Brāhman; and Brahmā replied, 'So be it.' Having attained Brāhmanhood, the object of his desire, by his severe austerities, the renowned sage traversed the whole earth, like a god."

We have already seen how the power of austere fervour (tapas) is exemplified in the legend of Nahusha (above, pp. 308 ff.). In regard to the sense of this word tapas, and the potency of the exercise which it denotes, I may refer to my articles in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society for 1865, p. 348 f., and for 1864, p. 63, as well as to the fourth volume of this work, pp. 20 ff. and 288; and to pp. 23 and 28 of the present volume. In further illustration of the same subject I quote the following panegyric upon tapas from Manu, xi. 234 ff. where, however, the word cannot have the same sense in all the verses:

Tapo-mūlam idam sarvam daiva-mūnushakam sukham | tapo-madhyam budhaiḥ proktam tapo'ntam veda-darsibhiḥ | 235. Brāhmanasya tapo jnā-nam tapaḥ kshattrasya rakshanam | vaisyasya tu tapo vārttā tapaḥ sūdra-

sya sevanam | 236. Rishayah samyatātmānah phala-mūlānilāśanāh | tapasaiva prapaśyanti trailokyam sa-charācharam | 237. Aushadhāny agado vidyā daivī cha vividhā sthitih | tapasaiva prasiddhyanti tapas teshām hi sādhanam | 238. Yad dustaram yad durāpam yad durgam yach cha dushkaram | sarvam tu tapasā sādhyam tapo hi duratikramam | 239. Mahāpātakinaś chaiva śeshāś chākāryya-kāriṇah | tapasaiva sutaptena muchyante kilvishāt tatah | 240. Kītāś chāhi-patangāś cha paśavaś cha vayāmsi cha | sthāvarāṇi cha bhūtāni divam yānti tapo-balāt | 241. Yat kinchid enah kurvanti mano-vān-mūrttibhir janāh | tat sarvam nirdahanty āśu tapasaiva tapodhanāh | 242. Tapasaiva viśuddhasya brāhmaṇasya divaukasah | ijyāś cha pratigrihṇanti kāmān samvarddhayanti cha | 243. Prajāpatir idam śāstram tapasaivāsrijat prabhuh | tathaiva vedān rishayas tapasā pratipedire | 244. Ity etat tapaso devāh mahābhāgyam prachakshate | sarvasyāsya prapaśyantas tapasah punyam uttamam |

"234. All the enjoyment, whether of gods or men, has its root, its centre, and its end in tapas; so it is declared by the wise who have studied the Veda. 235. Knowledge is a Brāhman's tapas; protection that of a Kshattriva; traffic that of Vaisya; and service that of a Südra. 236. It is by tapas that rishis of subdued souls, subsisting on fruits, roots, and air obtain a vision of the three worlds with all things moving and stationary. 237. Medicines, health, science, and the various divine conditions are attained by tapas alone as their instrument of acquisition. 238. Whatever is hard to be traversed, or obtained, or reached, or effected, is all to be accomplished through tapas, of which the potency is irresistible. 239. Both those who are guilty of the great sins, and all other transgressors, are freed from sin by fervid tapas. 240. Worms, serpents, insects, beasts, birds, and beings without motion attain to heaven through the force of tapas. 241. Whatever sin men commit by thought, word, or bodily acts, by tapas they speedily consume it all, when they become rich in devotion. 242. The gods both accept the sacrifices and augment the enjoyments of the Brāhman who has been purified by tapas. 243. It was by tapas that Prajapati the lord created this scripture; and through it that the rishis obtained the Vedas. 244. Such is the great dignity which the gods ascribe to tapas, beholding its transcendent merit."

I return for a moment to the story of Vasishtha and his cow.

Lassen remarks (Ind. Alt. 2nd ed. i. 631, note) that Atharvan is given in the Lexicons as a name of Vasishtha (see Wilson's Dictionry, s.v.). Weber (Ind. St. i. 289) quotes from Mallinatha's Commentary on the the Kirātārjunīya the following words: Atharvanas tu mantroddhāro · Vasishthena kritah ity āgamah | "There is a passage of scripture to the effect that the mantras of the Atharvan were selected by Vasishtha." In Böhtlingk and Roth's Lexicon, s.v. Atharvan, it is noticed that the eleventh hymn of the fifth book of the Atharva-veda contains a conversation between Atharvan and Varuna about the possession of a wonderful cow bestowed by the latter on the former; and it is remarked that this circumstance may explain the subsequent identification of Atharvan Prof. Roth, however (Diss. on the A.V., Tübingen, with Vasishtha. 1865, p. 9), thinks the two sages are distinct. The cow is spoken of in A.V. vii. 104, as the "brindled cow given by Varuna to Atharvan which never lacked a calf" (priśnim dhenum Varunena dattām Atharvane nitya-vatsām). The following is the curious hymn referred to:

A.V. v. 11, 1. Katham mahe asurāya abravīr iha katham pitre haraye tvesha-nrimrah | priśnim Varuna dakshinām dadāvān punarmaghatvam 187 manasā 'chikitsīḥ | 2. Na kāmena punarmagho bhavāmi sam chakshe kam priśnim etām upāje | kena nu tvam Atharvan kāvyena kena jūtena asi jāta-vedāh | 3. Satyam aham gabhīrah kāryena satyam jātena asmi jātavedāḥ | na me dāso na āryyo mahitvā vratam mīmāya yad aham dharishye | 4. Na tvad anyah kavitaro na medhayā dhīrataro Varuṇa svadhāvan | tvam̃ tā viśvā bhuvanāni vettha sa chid nu tvaj jano māyī bibhāya | 5. Tvam hi anga Varuna svadhāvan viśvā vettha janimā supranīte | kim rajasah enā paro anyad asti enā kim parena avaram amūra | 6. Ekam rajasah enā paro anyad asti enā parah ekena durnasam chid arvāk | tat te vidvān Varuna pra bravīmi adhovarchasah panayo bhavantu | nīchair dāsāḥ upa sarpantu bhūmim | 7. Tvam hi anga Varuna bravīshi punarmagheshu avadyāni bhūri | mo shu panīr abhi etāvato bhūr mā tvā vochann arādhasam janāsah | 8. Mā mā vochann arādhasam janāsah punas te prišnim jaritar dadāmi | stotrum me višvam ā yāhi śachībhir antar viśvāsu mānushīshu vikshu | 9. Ā te stotrāni udyatāni yantu antar viśvāsu mānushīshu vikshu | dehi nu me yad me ādatto asi yujyo me sapta-padah sakhā 'si | 10. Samāno bandhur Varuna samā jā vedāham tad yad nāv eshā samā jā | dadāmi tad yat te ādatto asmi yujyas te sapta-padah sakhā 'smi | 11. Devo devāya gṛiṇate vayodāh vipro viprāya stuvate sumedhāh | ajījano hi Varuṇa svadhāvann Atharvāṇam pitaram deva-bandhum | tasmai u rādhah kṛiṇuhi supraśastam sakhā no asi paramaś cha bandhuḥ |

¹⁸⁷ This is the reading proposed by Professor Aufrecht instead of punarmagha tvam, which is found in Roth and Whitney's edition of the A.V.

1. (Atharvan speaks) "How hast thou, who art mighty in energy, declared before the great deity, how before the shining father (that the cow was mine)? 158 Having bestowed a brindled cow (on me) as a sacrificial gift, thou hast resolved in thy mind to take her back. 2. (Varuna replies) It is not through desire that I revoke the gift; I drive hither this brindled cow that I may contemplate her. But by what wisdom, o Atharvan, in virtue of what nature, doest thou know the nature of beings? 3. (Atharvan answers) In truth I am profound in wisdom; in truth by my nature I know the nature of beings. Neither Dasa nor Aryya can hinder the design which I shall undertake. 4. There is none other wiser or sager in understanding than thou, o self-dependent Varuna. Thou knowest all creatures; even the man of deep devices is afraid of thee. 5. Thou, o self-dependent Varuna, o wise director, knowest all creatures. What other thing is beyond this atmosphere? and what is nearer than that remotest thing, o thou unerring? 6. (Varuna replies) There is one thing beyond this atmosphere; and on this side of that one there is that which is near though inaccessible. Knowing that thing I declare it to thee. Let the glory of the niggards be cast down; let the Dasas sink downward into the earth. 7. (Atharvan rejoins) Thou, o Varuna, sayest many evil things of those who revoke their gifts. Be not thou numbered among so many niggards; let not men call thee illiberal. 8. (Varuna replies) Let not men call me illiberal; I restore to thee, o worshipper, the brindled cow. Attend with all thy powers at every hymn in my honour among all the tribes of men. 9. (Atharvan answers) Let hymns ascend to thee among all the tribes of men. Give me that which thou hast taken from me; thou art to me an intimate friend of seven-fold value. 10. We two have a common bond, o Varuna, a common descent. I know what this common descent of ours is. (Varuna answers) I give thee that which I have taken from thee. I am thy intimate friend of seven-fold vieapon who, myself a god, confer life on thee a god [or priest, devāya] whis praisest me, an intelligent sage on thee a sage. (The poet says) Thous o self-dependent Varuna, hast begotten our father Atharvan, a kinsmana of the gods. Grant to him most excellent wealth; thou art our friend and most eminent kinsman."

¹⁸⁸ Professor Aufrecht thinks that Dyaus, 'the Heaven,' is denoted by make asurāya, and that pitre haraye, if the correct reading, can only mean the Sun, the word hari being several times applied to that great luminary. I am otherwise indebted to Prof. A. for the correct sense of this line, and for other suggestions.

Sect. XI .- The same, and other legends, according to the Rāmāyana.

The story told in the preceding section is related at greater length in chapters 51-65 189 of the Balakanda, or first book, of the Ramayana, of which I shall furnish an outline, noting any important variations from, or aditions to, the account in the Mahabharata, and at the same time giving an abstract of the other legends which are interwoven with the narrative. There was formerly, we are told, a king called Kuśa, son of Prajāpati, who had a son called Kuśanābha, who was father of Gādhi, the father of Viśvāmitra. The latter ruled the earth for many thousand years. On one occasion, when he was making a circuit of the earth, he came to Vasishtha's hermitage, the pleasant abode of many saints, sages, and holy devotees (chapter 51, verses 11-29), where, after at first declining, he allowed himself to be hospitably entertained with his followers by the son of Brahmā (ch. 52). Viśvāmitra (ch. 53), however, coveting the wondrous cow, which had supplied all the dainties of the feast, first of all asked that she should be given to him in exchange for a hundred thousand common cows. adding that "she was a gem, that gems were the property of the king, and that, therefore, the cow was his by right" (53, 9. Ratnam hi bhagavann etad ratna-hārī eha pārthivaḥ | 10. Tasmād me śabalām dehi mamaishā dharmato dvija). On this price being refused, the king advances immensely in his offers, but all without effect. He then proceeds (ch. 54)-very ungratefully and tyrannically, it must be allowed-to have the cow removed by force, but she breaks away from his attendants, and rushes back to her master, complaining that he was deserting He replies that he was not deserting her, but that the king was te sagi more powerful than he. She answers, 54, 14: Na balam kshatsturjusyāhur brāhmanāh balavattarāh | brahman brahma-balam divyam dehāttrāch cha balabattaram | aprameyam balam tubhyam na tvayā balapattarah | Viśvāmitro mahāvīryo tejas tava durāsadam | niyunkshva mām . mahātejas tvam brahma-bala-sambhritām | tasya darpam balam yatnam nāśayāmi durātmanaķ | "Men do not ascribe strength to a Kshattriya: the Brahmans are stronger. The strength of Brahmans is divine, and superior to that of Kshattriyas. 15. Thy strength is immeasurable. Viśvāmitra, though of great vigour, is not more powerful than thou. Thy energy is invincible. Commission me, who have been acquired by thy Brahmanical power, and I will destroy the pride, and force, and attempt of this wicked prince." 190 She accordingly by her bellowing creates hundreds of Pahlavas, who destroy the entire host (nāśayanti balam sarvam, verse 19) of Viśvāmitra, but are slain by him in their turn. Sakas and Yavanas, of great power and valour, and well armed, were then produced, who consumed the king's soldiers, 191 but were routed by him. The cow then (ch. 55) calls into existence by her bellowing, and from different parts of her body, other warriors of various tribes, who again destroyed Visvāmitra's entire army, foot soldiers, elephants, horses, chariots, and all. A hundred of the monarch's sons, armed with various weapons, then rushed in great fury on Vasishtha, but were all reduced to ashes in a moment by the blast of that sage's mouth. 192 Viśvāmitra, being thus utterly vanquished and humbled, appointed one of his sons to be regent, and travelled to the Himālaya, where he betook himself to austerities, and thereby obtained a vision of Mahadeva, who at his desire revealed to him the science of arms in all its branches, and gave him celestial weapons with which, elated and full of pride, he consumed the hermitage of Vasishtha, and put its inhabitants to flight. Vasishtha then threatens Visvāmitra and uplifts his Brahmanical mace. Viśvāmitra, too, raises his fiery weapon and calls out to his adversary to stand. Vasishtha bids him to show his strength, and boasts that he will soon humble his pride. He asks: (56, 4) Kva cha te kshattriya-balam kva cha brahma-balam mahat | paśya brahma-balam divyam mama kshattriya-pamsana | tasyastram Gadhiputrasya ghoram agneyam udyatam | brahma-dandena tach chhantam agner vegah ivāmbhasā | "' What comparison is there between a Kshattriya's might, and the great might of a Brāhman? Behold, thou contemptible Kshattriya, my divine Brahmanical power.' The dreadful fiery weapon uplifted by the son of Gadhi was then quenched by the rod of the Brahman, as fire is by water." Many and various other celestial missiles, as the nooses of Brahmā, Kāla (Time), and Varuna, the discus of Vishnu, and the trident of Siva, were hurled by Viśvāmitra at his antagonist, but the son of Brahmā swallowed them up in his all-devouring mace. Finally, to the intense consternation of all the gods, the warrior shot off the terrific weapon of Brahma (brahmastra); but this was equally ineffectual against the Brahmanical sage. Vasishtha had now assumed a direful appearance: (58, 18) Roma-kūpeshu sarveshu Vašishthasya mahātmanah | marīchyah iva nishpetur agner dhāmākulārchishah | prājvalad brahma-dandaś cha Vaśishthasya karodyatah | vidhūmah iva kālūgnir Yama-dandah iraparah | "Jets of fire mingled with smoke darted from the pores of his body; (19) the Brahmanical mace blazed in his hand like a smokeless 193 mundane conflagration, or a second sceptre of Yama." Being appeased, however, by the munis, who proclaimed his superiority to his rival, the sage stayed his vengeance; and Viśvāmitra exclaimed with a grean: (56, 23) Dhig balam kshattriya-balam brahma-tejo-balam balam | ekena brahma-dandena sarvāstrāni hatāni me | "'Shame on a Kshattriya's strength: the strength of a Brahman's might alone is strength: by the single Brahmanical mace all my weapons have been destroyed." No alternative now remains to the humiliated monarch, but either to acquiesce in this helpless inferiority, or to work out his own elevation to the Brahmanical order. He embraces the latter alternative: (56, 24) Tad etat prasamīkshyāham prasannendriya-mānasah tapo mahat samāsthāsye yad vai brahmatva-kāranam | "Having pondered well this defeat, I shall betake myself, with composed senses and mind,

¹⁸⁹ These are the sections of Schlegel's and the Bombay editions, which correspond to sections 52-67 of Gorresio's edition.

¹⁹⁰ Compare Manu, xi. 32: Sva-vīryād rāja-vīryāch cha sva-vīryam balavattaram | tasmāt svenaiva vīryena nigrihnīyād arīn dvijah | "Of the two, his own, and a king's might, let a Brāhman know that his own is superior. By his own might alone, therefore, let him restrain his enemies."

¹⁹¹ We had been before told that they had been killed, so that this looks like a slaying of the slain, as no resuscitation of the army is alluded to.

¹⁹² On this the Commentator remarks that "though these princes were Kshattriyas, they were not actual kings, and had acted tyrannically; so that a very slight expiation was required for killing them" (kshattriyatve 'pi prithivī-patitvābhāvāt tad-badhe alpa-prāyaschittam ātatāyitvāch cha |).

¹⁹³ The Bombay edition has vidhumah. Schlegel's and Gorresio's editions have sadhumah, "enveloped in smoke."

to strenuous austere fervour, which shall exalt me to the rank of a Brahman." Intensely vexed and mortified, groaning and full of hatred against his enemy, he travelled with his queen to the south, and carried his resolution into effect; (ch. 57) and we are first of all told that three sons Havishyanda, Madhusyanda, and Dridhanetra were born to him. At the end of a thousand years Brahmā appeared, and announced that he had conquered the heaven of royal sages (rājārshis); and, in consequence of his austere fervour, he was recognised as having attained that rank. Viśvāmitra, however, was ashamed, grieved, and incensed at the offer of so very inadequate a reward, and exclaimed: "'I have practised intense austerity, and the gods and rishis regard me only as a rājarshi! 194 Austerities, it appears, are altogether fruitless'" (57, 5. Jitāh rājarshi-lokās te tapasā Kuśikātmaja | 6. Anena tapasā tvam hi rājarshir iti vidmahe | 7. Viśvāmitro 'pi tach chhrutvā hriyā kinchid avān-mukhah | duhkhena mahatā "vishtah samanyur idam abravīt | tapas cha sumahat taptam rajarshir iti mām viduh | devah sarshi-gunah sarve nasti manye tapah-phalam |). Notwithstanding this disappointment, he had ascended one grade, and forthwith recommenced his work of mortification.

194 The Vishnu Purana, iii. 6, 21, says: "There are three kinds of rishis: Brahmarshis, after them Devarshis, and after them Rajarshis" (jneyah brahmarshayah pūrvam tebhyo devarshayah punah | rajarshayah punas tebhyah rishi-prakritayas trayah |). Böhtlingk and Roth, s.v. rishi, mention also (on the authority of the vocabulary called Trikandas'esha) the words maharshi (great rishi), paramarshi (most eminent rishi), śrutarshi (secondary rishi), and kāndarshi, who is explained s.v. to be a teacher of a particular portion $(k\bar{a}nda)$ of the Veda. Devarshis are explained by Professor Wilson (V.P. iii. p. 68, paraphrasing the text of the Vishnu Purana), to be "sages who are demi-gods also;" Brahmärshis to be "sages who are sons of Brahmā or Brahmans;" and Rājarshis to be "princes who have adopted a life of devotion." In a note he adds: "A similar enumeration is given in the Vayu, with some additions: Rishi is derived from rish, 'to go to,' or 'approach;' the Brahmarshis, it is said, are descendants of the five patriarchs, who were the founders of races or gotras of Brahmans, or Kasyapa, Vasishtha, Angiras, Atri, and Bhrigu; the Devarshis are Nara and Nārāyana, the sons of Dharma; the Bālakhilyas, who sprang from Kratu; Kardama, the son of Pulsha; Kuvēra, the son of Pulsstya; Achala, the son of Pratyūsha; Nārada and Parvata, the sons of Kasyapa. Rājarshis are Ikshvāku and other princes. The Brahmarshis dwell in the sphere of Brahma; the Devarshis in the region of the gods; and the Rujarshis in the heaven of Indra." Brahmarshis are evidently rishis who were priests; and Rajarshis, rishis of kingly extraction. If so, a Devarshi, having a divine character, should be something higher than either. Professor Roth, following apparently the Trikandasesha, defines them as "rishis dwelling among the gods." I am not aware how far back this classification of rishis goes in Indian literature. Roth, s.vv. rishi, brahmarshi and devarshi does not give any references to these words as occurring in the Brahmanas; and they are not found in the hymns of the R.V. where, however, the "seven rishis" are mentioned. Regarding rajarshis see pp. 266 ff. above.

At this point of time his austerities were interrupted by the following occurrences: King Triśanku, one of Ikshvāku's descendants, had conceived the design of celebrating a sacrifice by virtue of which he should ascend bodily to heaven. As Vasishtha, on being summoned, declared that the thing was impossible (aśakyam), Triśanku travelled to the south, where the sage's hundred sons were engaged in austerities, and applied to them to do what their father had declined. Though he addressed them with the greatest reverence and humility, and added that "the Ikshvākus regarded their family-priests as their highest resource in difficulties, and that, after their father, he himself looked to them as his tutelary deities" (57, 22. Ikshvākūnām hi sarveshām purodhah paramā gatih | tasmād anantaram sarve bhavanto daivatam mama), he received from the haughty priests the following rebuke for his presumption: (58, 2) Pratyākhyāto'si durbuddhe gurunā satyavādinā | tam katham samatikramya śākhāntaram upeyivān | 3. Ikshvākūnām hi sarveshām purodhāh paramā gatih | na chātikramitum śakyam vachanam satyavādinah | 4. "Aśakyam" iti chovācha Vaśishtho bhagavān rishih | tam vayam vai samāharttum kratum saktāh katham tava | 5. Bālisas tvam nara-śreshtha gamyatām sva-puram punah | yājane bhagavān śaktas trailokyasyāpi pārthiva | avamānam katham kartum tasya śakshyāmahe vayam | "Fool, thou hast been refused by thy truth-speaking preceptor. How is it that, disregarding his authority, thou hast resorted to another school $(\delta \bar{a}kh\bar{a})$? 195 3. The family-priest is the highest oracle of all the Ikshvākus; and the command of that veracious personage cannot be transgressed. 4. Vasishtha, the divine rishi, has declared that 'the thing cannot be;' and how can we undertake thy sacrifice? 5. Thou art foolish, king; return to thy capital. The divine (Vasishtha) is competent to act as priest of the three worlds; how can we shew him disrespect?" Trisanku then gave them to understand, that as his preceptor and "his preceptor's sons had declined compliance with his requests, he should think of some other expedient." In consequence of his venturing to express this presumptuous intention, they condemned him by their imprecation to become a Chandala (58, 7. "Pratyākhyāto bhagavatā guruputrais tathaira cha | anyām gatim gamishyāmi svasti vo 'stu tapodhanāh" | rishi-putrās tu tach chhrutvā vākyam ghorābhisamhitam | śepuh parama-sankruddhāś "chāndālatvam gamishyasi" |). As this curse soon took effect, and the unhappy king's form was changed into that of a degraded outcast, he resorted to Viśvāmitra (who, as we have seen, was also dwelling at this period in the south), enlarging on his own virtues and piety, and bewailing his fate. Viśvāmitra commiserated his condition (ch. 59), and promised to sacrifice on his behalf, and exalt him to heaven in the same Chandala-form to which he had been condemned by his preceptors' curse. "Heaven is now as good as in thy possession, since thou hast resorted to the son of Kuśika" (59, 4. Guru-śāpa-kṛitam rūpam yad idam tvayi varttate | anena saha rūpena sasarīro gamishyasi | hasta-praptam aham manye svargam tava naradhipa | yas tvam Kauśikam agamya śaranyah śaranam gatah |). He then directed that preparations should be made for the sacrifice, and that all the rishis, including the family of Vasishtha, should be invited to the ceremony. The disciples of Viśvāmitra, who had conveyed his message, reported the result on their return in these words: (59, 11) Srutvā te vachanam sarve samāyānti dvijātayah | sarva-dešeshu chāgachhan varjayitvā Mahodayam | Vāśishtham tach chhatam sarvam krodha-paryākulāksharam | yad uvācha vacho ghoram śrinu tvam muni-pungava | "kshattriyo yājako yasya chandālasya višeshatah | katham sadasi bhoktāro havis tasya surarshayah | brahmanah va mahatmano bhuktva chandala-bhojanam | katham svargam gamishyanti Viśvāmitrena pālitāh'' | etad vachana-naishthuryyam üchuh samrakta - lochanah | Vasishthah muni-sardula sarve saha-maho-.. dayāḥ I " Having heard your message, all the Brāhmans are assembling in all the countries, and have arrived, excepting Mahodaya (Vasishtha?). Hear what dreadful words those hundred Vasishthas, their voices quivering with rage, have uttered: 'How can the gods and rishis 196 con-

196 It does not appear how Trisanku, in asking the aid of Vasishtha's sons after applying in vain to their father, could be charged with resorting to another $s\bar{a}kh\bar{a}$ (school), in the ordinary sense of that word: as it is not conceivable that the sons should have been of another S'ākhā from the father, whose cause they espouse with so much warmth. The Commentator in the Bombay edition explains the word $s\bar{a}kh\bar{a}nta-ram$ as $=y\bar{a}jan\bar{a}din\bar{a}$ rakshakāntaram, "one who by sacrificing for thee, etc., will be another protector." Gorresio's Gauda text, which may often be used as a commentary on the older one, has the following paraphrase of the words in question, ch. 60, 3 Mūlam utsrijya kasmāt tvam sākhāsv ichhasi lumbitum ["Why, forsaking the root, dost thou desire to hang upon the branches."

¹⁹⁶ The rishis as priests (ritvik) would be entitled to eat the remains of the sacrifice, according to the Commentator.

sume the oblation at the sacrifice of that man, especially if he be a Chandala, for whom a Kshattriya is officiating-priest? How can illustrious Brāhmans ascend to heaven, after eating the food of a Chandala, and being entertained by Viśvāmitra?' These ruthless words all the Vasishthas, together with Mahodaya, uttered, their eyes inflamed with anger." Viśvāmitra, who was greatly incensed on receiving this message, by a curse doomed the sons of Vasishtha to be reduced to ashes, and reborn as degraded outcasts (mritapāh) for seven hundred births, and Mahodaya to become a Nishāda. Knowing that this curse had taken effect (ch. 60), Viśvāmitra then, after eulogizing Triśanku, proposed to the assembled rishis that the sacrifice should be celebrated. To this they assented, being actuated by fear of the terrible sage's wrath. Viśvāmitra himself officiated at the sacrifice as yājāka; 197 and the other rishis as priests (ritvijah) (with other functions) performed all the ceremonies. Viśvāmitra next invited the gods to partake of the oblations: (60, 11) Nābhyagaman yadā tattra bhāgārtham sarva-devatāh | tatah kopa-samāvishto Viśvāmitro mahāmunih | sruvam udyamya sakrodhas Triśankum idam abravīt | "paśya me tapaso vīryam svārjitasya nareśvara | esha tvām svaśarīrena nayāmi svargam ojasā | dushprāpyam svašarīrena svargam gachchha narešvara | svārjitam kinchid apy asti mayā hi tapasah phalam | "When, however, the deities did not come to receive their portions, Viśvāmitra became full of wrath, and raising aloft the sacrificial ladle, thus addressed Trisanku: 'Behold, o monarch, the power of austere fervour acquired by my own efforts. I myself, by my own energy, will conduct thee to heaven. Ascend to that celestial region which is so arduous to attain in an earthly body. I have surely earned some reward of my austerity." Triśanku ascended instantly to heaven in the sight of the munis. Indra, however, ordered him to be gone, as a person who, having incurred the curse of his spiritual preceptors, was unfit for the abode of the celestials; -and to fall down headlong to earth (60, 17. Triśanko gachha bhūyas tvam nāsi svargakritālayah | guru-śāpa-hato mūdha pata bhūmim avāk-śirāh |). He accordingly began to descend, invoking loudly, as he fell, the help of his spiritual patron. Viśvāmitra, greatly incensed, called out to him to stop: (60, 20) Tato brahma-tapo-yogāt Prajāpatir ivāparah | sasarjja dakshine bhage saptarshin aparan punah | dakshinam disam asthaya

¹⁹⁷ This means as adhvaryu according to the Commentator.

rishi-madhye mahāyaśāḥ | nakshattra-mālām aparām asrijat krodhamürchhitah | anyam Indram karishyāmi loko vā syād anindrakah | daivatāny api sa krodhāt srashtum samupachakrame | 198 "Then by the power of his divine knowledge and austere fervour he created, like another Prajāpati, other Seven Rishis (a constellation so called) in the southern part of the sky. Having proceeded to this quarter of the heavens, the renowned sage, in the midst of the rishis, formed another garland of stars, being overcome with fury. Exclaiming, 'I will create another Indra, or the world shall have no Indra at all,' he began, in his rage, to call gods also into being." The rishis, gods (Suras), and Asuras now became seriously alarmed and said to Viśvāmitra, in a conciliatory tone, that Triśanku, "as he had been cursed by his preceptors, should not be admitted bodily into heaven, until he had undergone some lustration" (60, 24. Ayam rājā mahābhāga guru-śāpa-parikshataḥ | saśarīro divam yātum nārhaty akrita-pāvanah |).199 The sage replied that he had given a promise to Triśanku, and appealed to the gods to permit his protegé to remain bodily in heaven, and the newly created stars to retain their places in perpetuity. The gods agreed that "these numerous stars should remain, but beyond the sun's path, and that Triśanku, like an immortal, with his head downwards, should shine among them, and be followed by them," adding "that his object would be thus attained, and his renown secured, and he would be like a dweller in heaven" (60, 29. Evam bhavatu bhadram te tishthantv etani sarvasah | gagane tany anekāni vaišvānara - pathād vahih | nakshattrāni muni - śreshtha teshu jyottishshu jajvalan | avāk-śirās Triśankuś cha tishthatv amara-sannibhah | anuyāsyanti chaitāni jyotīmshi nripa-sattamam | kritārtham kīrttimantam cha svarga-loka-gatam yatha |). Thus was this great dispute adjusted by a compromise, which Viśvāmitra accepted.

This story of Triśanku, it will have been observed, differs materially from the one quoted above (p. 375 ff.) from the Harivamśa; but brings out more distinctly the character of the conflict between Vaśishtha and Viśvāmitra.

When all the gods and rishis had departed at the conclusion of the ¹⁹⁸ I follow Schlegel's text, which differs verbally, though not in substance, both from the Bombay edition and from Gorresio's.

¹⁹⁹ The last compound word akritapāvanah, "without lustration," is given by Schlegel and Gorresio. The Bombay edition has instead of it eva tapodhana, "o sage rich in austerity."

sacrifice. Viśvāmitra said to his attendant devotees: (61, 2) Mahān vighnah pravritto 'yam dakshinam asthito disam | disam anyam prapatsyāmas tattra tansyāmahe tanah | "This has been a great interruption Tto our austerities which has occurred in the southern region: we must proceed in another direction to continue our penances." He accordingly went to a forest in the west, and began his austerities anew. Here the narrative is again interrupted by the introduction of another story, that of king Ambarīsha, king of Avodhvā, who was, according to the Rāmāyana, the twenty-eighth in descent from Ikshvāku, and the twentysecond from Triśanku. (Compare the genealogy in the Rāmāyana, i. 70, and ii. 110, 6 ff., with that in Wilson's Vishnu Purana, vol. iii. pp. 260 ff. 280, 284 ff. and 303; which is different.) Viśvāmitra is nevertheless represented as flourishing contemporaneously with both of these princes. The story relates that Ambarīsha was engaged in performing a sacrifice, when Indra carried away the victim. The priest said that this ill-omened event had occurred owing to the king's bad administration; and would call for a great expiation, unless a human victim could be produced (61, 8. Prāyaśchittam mahad hy etad naram vā purusharshabha | ānayasva pāśum śīghram yāvat karma pravarttate |). After a long search the royal-rishi (Ambarīsha) came upon the Brāhman-rishi Richīka, a descendant of Bhrigu, and asked him to sell one of his sons for a victim, at the price of a hundred thousand cows. Richīka answered that he would not sell his eldest son; and his wife added that she would not sell the youngest: "eldest sons," she observed, "being generally the favourites of their fathers, and youngest sons of their mothers" (61, 18. Prāyena hi nara-śreshtha jyeshthāh pitrishu vallabhāḥ | mātrīnām cha kanīyāmsas tasmād rakshe kanīyasam |). The second son, S'unassepa, then said that in that case he regarded himself as the one who was to be sold, and desired the king to remove him. The hundred thousand cows, with ten millions of gold-pieces and heaps of jewels, were paid down, and S'unassepa carried away. As they were passing through Pushkara (ch. 62) S'unassepa beheld his maternal uncle Viśvāmitra (see Rāmāyana, i. 34, 7,200 and p. 352 above) who was engaged in austerities there with other rishis, threw himself into his arms,

²⁰⁰ Pūrvajā bhaginī chāpi mama Rāghava suvratā | nāmnā Satyavatī nāma Richīke pratipāditā | "And I have a religious sister older than myself called Satyavatī, who was given in marriage to Richīka."

and implored his assistance, urging his orphan, friendless, and helpless state, as claims on the sage's benevolence (62, 4. Na me 'sti mātā na pitā jnātayo bandhavāh kutah | trātum arhasi mām saumya dharmena muni-pungava | 7. Na me nātho hy anāthasya bhava bhavyena chetasā |). Viśvāmitra soothed him; and pressed his own sons to offer themselves as victims in the room of S'unassepa. This proposition met with no favour from Madhushyanda 201 and the other sons of the royal hermit, who answered with haughtiness and derision: (62, 14) Katham ātma-sutān hitvā trāyase 'nya-sutān vibho | akāryyam iva paśyāmah svamāmsam iva bhojane | "How is it that thou sacrificest thine own sons, and seekest to rescue those of others? We look upon this as wrong, and like the eating of one's own flesh." 202 The sage was exceedingly wroth . at this disregard of his injunction, and doomed his sons to be born in the most degraded classes, like Vasishtha's sons, and to eat dog's flesh, 203 for a thousand years. He then said to Sunassepa: (62, 19) Pavitrapāśair ābaddho rakta-mālyānulepanah | Vaishnavam yūpam āsādya vāgbhir Agnim udāhara | ime cha gāthe dve divye gāyethāh muni-puttraka | Ambarīshasya yajne 'smims tatah siddhim avāpsyasi | "When thou art bound with hallowed cords, decked with a red garland, and anointed with unguents, and fastened to the sacrificial post of Vishnu, then address thyself to Agni, and sing these two divine verses (gāthās), at the sacrifice of Ambarisha; then shalt thou attain the fulfilment [of thy desire]." Being furnished with the two gathas, S'unassepa proposed at once to king Ambarisha that they should set out for their destination. When bound at the stake to be immolated, dressed in a red garment, "he celebrated the two gods, Indra and his younger brother (Vishnu), with the excellent verses. The Thousand-eved (Indra) was pleased with the secret hymn, and bestowed long life on Sunassepa" (62, 25. Sa baddho vägbhir agryābhir abhitushṭāva vai surau | Indram Indrānujam chaiva yathāvad muni-puttrakah | tasmai prītah sahasrāksho ²⁰¹ The word is written thus in Schlegel's and Gorresio's editions. The Bombay edition reads Madhuchhanda.

²⁰² Schlegel and Gorresio read svamāmsam, "one's own flesh," which seems much more appropriate than śva-māmsam, "dog's flesh," the reading of the Bombay edition.

²⁰³ Gorresio's edition alone reads sva-māmsa-vrittayah, "subsisting on your own flesh," and makes this to be allusion to what the sons had just said and a punishment for their impertinence (64, 16. Yasmāt sva-māmsam uddishṭam yushmābhir avamanya mām).

rahasya-stuti-toshitah | dīrgham āyus tadā prādāch Chhunaśśephāya Vā-savah |).²⁰⁴ King Ambarīsha also received great beuefits from this sacrifice. Viśvāmitra meanwhile proceeded with his austerities, which he prolonged for a thousand years.

At the end of this time (ch. 63) the gods came to allot his reward; and Brahmā announced that he had attained the rank of a rishi, thus apparently advancing an additional step. Dissatisfied, as it would seem, with this, the sage commenced his task of penance anew. After a length of time he beheld the nymph (Apsaras) Menaka, who had come to bathe in the lake of Pushkara. She flashed on his view, unequalled in her radiant beauty, like lightning in a cloud (63, 5. Rupenapratimām tattra vidyutam jalade yathā). He was smitten by her charms, invited her to be his companion in his hermitage, and for ten years remained a slave to her witchery, to the great prejudice of his austerities.205 At length he became ashamed of this ignoble subjection, and full of indignation at what he believed to be a device of the gods to disturb his devotion; and, dismissing the nymph with gentle accents, he departed for the northern mountains, where he practised severe austerities for a thousand years on the banks of the Kauśikī river. The gods became alarmed at the progress he was making, and decided that he should be dignified with the appellation of great rishi (maharshi); and Brahmā, giving effect to the general opinion of the deities, announced that he had conferred that rank upon him. Joining his hands and bowing his head. Viśvāmitra replied that he should consider himself to have indeed completely subdued his senses, if the incomparable title of Brāhman-rishi were conferred upon him (63, 31. Brahmarshi-sabdam atulam svārjitaih karmabhih subhaih | yadi me bhagavān āha tato 'ham vijitendriyah |). Brahmā informed him in answer, that he had not yet acquired the power of perfectly controlling his senses; but should make further efforts with that view. The sage then began to put himself through a yet more rigorous course of austerities, standing with his arms erect, without support, feeding on air, in summer exposed to five fires (i.e. one on each of four sides, and the sun overhead), in the rainy season remaining unsheltered from the wet, and in ²⁰⁴ I have alluded above, p. 358, note, to the differences which exist between this legend of S'unaséepa and the older one in the Aitareya Brähmana.

²⁰⁵ Compare Mr. Leckie's History of Rationalism, vol. i. p. 86.

winter lying on a watery couch night and day. This he continued for a thousand years. At last Indra and the other deities became greatly distressed at the idea of the merit he was storing up, and the power which he was thereby acquiring: and the chief of the celestials desired (ch. 64) the nymph Rămbhā to go and bewitch him by her blandish-She expressed great reluctance to expose herself to the wrath of the formidable muni, but obeyed the repeated injunction of Indra. who promised that he and Kandarpa (the god of love) should stand by her, and assumed her most attractive aspect with the view of overcoming the sage's impassibility. He, however, suspected this design, and becoming greatly incensed, he doomed the nymph by a curse to be turned into stone and to continue in that state for a thousand years.200 The curse took effect, and Kandarpa and Indra slunk away. In this way, though he resisted the allurements of sensual love,207 he lost the whole fruit of his austerities by yielding to anger; and had to begin his work over again. He resolved to check his irascibility, to remain silent, not even to breathe for hundreds of years; to dry up his body; and to fast and stop his breath till he had obtained the coveted character of a Brahman. He then (ch. 65) left the Himālaya and travelled to the east, where he underwent a dreadful exercise, unequalled in the whole history of austerities, maintaining silence, according to a vow, for a thousand years. At the end of this time he had attained to perfection, and although thwarted by many obstacles, he remained unmoved by anger. On the expiration of this course of austerity, he prepared some food to eat; which Indra, coming in the form of a Brāhman, begged that he would give him. Viśvāmitra did so, and though he had none left for himself, and was obliged to remain fasting, he said nothing to the Brahman, on account of his vow of silence. 65, 8. Tasyānuchchhvasamānasya mūrdhni dhūmo vyajāyata | 9. Trailokyam yena sambhrantam ātāpitam ivābhavat | 11. "Bahubhih kāranair deva Viśvāmitro mahāmunih | lobhitah krodhitaś chaiva tapasā chābhivardhate | 12. Na dīyate yadi tv asya manasā yad abhīpsitam | 13. Vināšayati trailokyam tapasā sa-charācharam | vyākulāś cha diśah sarvāh na cha kinchit prakāšate | 14. Sāgarah kshubhitāh sarve viśīryante cha parvatāḥ | prakampate cha vasudhā vāyur vātīha sankulaḥ | 15. Brahman na pratijānīmo nāstiko jāyate janah | 16. Buddhim na kurute yāvad nāśe deva mahāmuniķ | 17. Tāvat prasādyo bhagavān agnirūpo mahādyutih" | 19. Brahmarshe svāgatam te 'stu tapasā smah sutoshitah | 20. Brāhmanyam tapasogrena prāptavān asi Kauśika | dīrgham āyus che te brahman dadāmi sa-marud-qanah | 21. svasti prāpnuhi bhadram te gachha saumya yathāsukham | . . . 22. . . . brāhmanyam yadi me prāptam dīrgham āyus tathaiva cha | 23. Omkāro 'tha vashaţkāro vedāś cha varayantu mām | kshattra-veda-vidām śreshtho brahma-veda-vidām api | 24. Brahma-putro Vasishtho mām evam vadatu devatāḥ | 25. Tataḥ prasādito devair Vasishtho japatām varaḥ | sakhyam chakāra brahmarshir "evam astv" iti chābravīt | 26. "Brahmarshitvam na sandehah sarvam sampadyate tava" | 27. Viśvāmitro 'pi dharmātmā labdhvā brāhmanyam uttamam | pūjayāmāsa brahmarshim Vasishtham japatām varam | "As he continued to suspend his breath, smoke issued from his head, to the great consternation and distress of the three worlds." The gods, rishis, etc., then addressed Brahmā: "The great muni Viśvāmitra has been allured and provoked in various ways, but still advances in his sanctity. If his wish is not conceded, he will destroy the three worlds by the force of his austerity. All the regions of the universe are confounded, no light anywhere shines; all the oceans are tossed, and the mountains crumble, the earth quakes, and the wind blows confusedly. 15. We cannot, o Brahmā, guarantee that mankind shall not become atheistic. . . . 16. Before the great and glorious sage of fiery form resolves to destroy (everything) let him be propitiated." The gods, headed by Brahmā, then addressed Viśvāmitra: "'Hail Brāhman rishi, we are gratified by thy austerities; o Kauśika, thou hast, through their intensity, attained to Brāhmanhood. I, o Brāhman, associated with the Maruts, confer on thee long life. May every blessing attend thee; depart wherever thou wilt.' The sage, delighted, made his obeisance to the gods, and said: 'If I have obtained Brahmanhood, and long life, then let the mystic monosyllable (omkara) and the sacrificial formula (väshätkāra) and the Vedas recognise me in that capacity. And let Vasishtha, the son of Brahmā, the most eminent of those who are skilled in the Kshattra-veda, and the Brāhma-veda (the knowledge of the Kshattriya and the Brahmanical disciplines), address me similarly.' Accordingly Vasishtha, being propitiated by the gods, became reconciled to Viśvāmitra, and recognised his claim to all the prerogatives of a Brāhman rishi. . . . Viśvāmitra, too, having attained the Brahmanical rank, paid all honour to Vasishtha." Such was the grand result achieved by Viśvāmitra, at the cost of many thousand years of intense mortification of the body, and discipline of the soul. During the course of the struggle he had manifested, as the story tells us, a power little, if at all, inferior to that of Indra, the king of the gods; and as in a former legend we have seen King Nahusha actually occupying the throne of that deity, we cannot doubt that-according to the recognised principles of Indian mythology-Viśvāmitra had only to recommence his career of self-mortification in order to raise himself yet higher than he had yet risen, to the rank of a devarshi, or divine rishi (if this be, indeed, a superior grade to that of brahmarshi), or to any other elevation he might desire. But, as far as the account in the Rāmāyana informs us, he was content with his success. He stood on a footing of perfect equality with his rival Vasishtha, and became indifferent to further honours. In fact, it was not necessary for the purpose of the inventors of the legend to carry him any higher. They. only wished to account for his exercising the prerogatives of a Brāhman; and this had been already accomplished to their satisfaction.

²⁰⁶ On this the Commentator remarks that this incident shews that anger is more difficult to conquer than even lust (etena kāmād api krodho durjeyaḥ iti sūchitam).

²⁰⁷ The Commentator, however, suggests that the sudden sight of Rambhā may at first have excited in him some feelings of this kind (āpātato Rambhā-darśana-pravṛit-tyā kāmenāpi tapah-kshayah).

In the story of Sakuntalā, however, as narrated in the Mahābhārata, Adiparvan, sixty-ninth and following sections, we are informed that, to the great alarm of Indra, Viśvāmitra renewed his austerities, even long after he had attained the position of a Brāhman, verse 2914: Tapyamānah kila purā Viśvāmitro mahat tapah | subhriśam tāpayāmāsa Sakram sura-ganeśvaram | tapasā dīpta-vīryyo'yam sthānād mām chyāvayed iti | "Formerly Viśvāmitra, who was practising intense austerefervour, occasioned great distress to S'akra (Indra), the lord of the deities, lest by the flery energy so acquired by the saint he himself should be cast down from his place." Indra accordingly resorted to the usual device of sending one of the Apsarases, Menakā, to seduce the sage by the display of her charms, and the exercise of all her allurements, "by beauty, youth, sweetness, gestures, smiles, and words" (verse 2920, Rūpa-yauvana-mādhuryya-cheshţita-smita-bhāshitaih), into the indulgence of sensual love; and thus put an end to his efforts after increased sanctity. Menakā urges the dangers of the mission arising from the great power and irascibility of the sage, of whom, she remarked, even Indra himself was afraid, as a reason for excusing her from undertaking it; and refers to some incidents in Viśvāmitra's history, verse 2923: Mahābhāgam • Vaśishtham yah putrair ishtair vyayojayat | kshattra-jātaś cha yah pūrvam abhavad brāhmano balāt ; śauchārtham yo nadīm chakre durgamām bahubhir jalaih | yam tam punyatamam loke Kausikiti vidur janah | 2925. Babhāra yatrāsya purā kāle durge mahātmanaḥ | dārān Matango dharmātmā rājarshir vyādhatām gataḥ | atīta-kāle durbhikshe abhyetya punar āśramam | munih Pāreti nadyāh vai nāma chakre tadā prabhuh | Matangam yājayānchakre yatra prīta-manāh svayam | tvam cha somam bhayād yasya gatah pātum sureśvara | chakārānyam cha lokam vai kruddho nakshattra-sampadā | pratiśravana-pūrvāni nakshattrāni chakāra yah | guru-śāpa-hatasyāpi Trišankoh śaranam dadau | "2923. He deprived the great Vasishtha of his beloved sons; and though born a Kshattriya, he formerly became a Brahman by force. For the purpose of purification he rendered the holy river, known in the world as the Kauśikī, unfordable from the mass of water. 2925. His wife was once maintained there in a time of distress by the righteous rajarshi Matanga, who had become a huntsman; and when the famine was past, the muni returned to his hermitage, gave to the river the name of Pārā, and being gratified, sacrificed for Matanga on its banks; and then thou thyself, Indra, from fear of him wentest to drink his soma. He created, too, when incensed, another world, with a garland of stars, formed agreeably to his promise, and gave his protection to Triśanku, even when smitten by his preceptor's curse." Menakā, however, ends by saying that she cannot decline the commission which has been imposed upon her; but begs that she may receive such succours as may ensure her success. She accordingly shows herself in the neighbourhood of Viśvāmitra's hermitage. The saint yields to the influence of love, invites her to become his companion, and as a result of their intercourse Sakuntalā is born. The Apsaras then returns to Indra's paradise.

Sect. XII.—Other accounts, from the Mahābhārata, of the way in which Viśvāmitra became a Brāhman.

In the Udyogaparvan of the Mahābhārata, sections 105-118, a story is told regarding Viśvāmitra and his pupil Gālava, in which a different account is given of the manner in which Viśvāmitra attained the rank of a Brāhman; viz. by the gift of Dharma, or Righteousness, appearing in the form of his rival. M. Bh. Udyogap. 3721: Viśvāmitram tapasyantam Dharmo jijnāsayā purā | abhyāgachhat svayam bhūtvā Vaśishṭho _ bhagavān rishiḥ | 3728. Atha varsha-śate pūrne Dharmah punar upāgamat | Vāśishtham veśam āsthāya Kauśikam bhojanepsayā | sa drishtvā širasā bhaktam dhriyamāṇam maharshiṇā | tishṭhatā vāyubhaksheṇa Viśvāmitrena dhīmatā | pratigrihya tato Dharmas tathaivoshnam tathā navam | bhuktvā "prīto 'smi viprarshe" tam uktvā sa munir gatah | kshattra-bhāvād apagato brāhmanatvam upāgataḥ | Dharmasya vachanāt prīto Viśvāmitras tathā 'bhavat | "Dharma, assuming the personality of the sage Vasishtha, once came to prove Visvamitra, when he was living a life of austerity;" and after consuming some food, given him by other devotees, desired Viśvāmitra, who brought him some freshly cooked charu, quite hot, to stand still for the present. Viśvāmitra accordingly stood still, nourished only by air, with the boiled rice on his head. "The same personage, Dharma, in the same disguise, reappeared after a hundred years, desiring food, and consumed the rice (still quite hot and fresh), which he saw supported upon the hermit's head, while he himself remained motionless, feeding on air. Dharma then said to him, 'I am pleased with thee, o Brāhman rishi;' and went away. . Viśvāmitra, having become thus transformed from a Kshattriya into a Brāhman by the word of Dharma, was delighted."

In the Anuśāsanaparvan of the Mahābhārata, we have another reference to the story of Viśvāmitra. King Yudhishthira enquires of Bhīshma (verse 181) how, if Brāhmanhood is so difficult to be attained by men of the other three castes, it happened that the great Kshattriya acquired that dignity. The prince then recapitulates the chief exploits of Viśvāmitra: 183. Tena hy amita-vīryeṇa Vaśishṭhasya mahātmanaḥ | hatam putra-śatam sadyas tapasā'pi pitāmaha | yātudhānāś cha bahavo rākshasās tigma-tejasaḥ | manyunā "vishṭa-dehena srishṭāḥ kālāntakopamāḥ | 185. Mahān Kuśika-vamśaś cha brahmarshi-śata-sankulaḥ | sthāpito nara-loke 'smin vidvān brāhmaṇa-samyutaḥ | Richīkasyātmajaś chaiva Sunaḥśepho mahātapāḥ | vinokshito mahāsattrāt paśutām apy upāgataḥ | Hariśchandra-kratau devāms toshayitvā "tma-tejasā | putratām anusamprāpto Viśvāmitrasya dhīmataḥ | nābhivādayato jyeshṭham Devarātam narā-

dhipa | puttrāh panchāśad evāpi śaptāh śvapachatām gatāh | Triśankur bandhubhir muktah Aikshvākuh prīti-pūrvakam | avāk-śirāh divam nīto dakshinām āśrito diśam | . . . tato vighnakarī chaiva Panchachūdā susammatā | Rambhā nāmāpsarāḥ śāpād yasya śailatvam āgatā | tathaivāsya bhayād baddhvā Vaśishṭhaḥ salile purā | ātmānam majjayan śrīmān vipāśah punar utthitah | "For he destroyed Vasishtha's hundred sons by the power of austere-fervour; when possessed by anger, he created many demons, fierce and destructive as death; he (185) established the great and wise family of the Kuśikas, which was full of Brāhmans and hundreds of Brāhman rishis; he delivered S'unassepha, son of Richīka, who was on the point of being slaughtered as a victim, and who became his son, after he had, at Hariśchandra's sacrifice, through his own power, propitiated the gods; he cursed his fifty sons who would not do homage to Devarāta, (adopted as) the eldest, so that they became outcastes; through affection he elevated Triśanku, when forsaken by his relations, to heaven, where he remained fixed with his head downwards in the southern heavens; (191) he changed the troublesome nymph Rambhā, known as Panchachūdā, by his curse into a form of stone; he occasioned Vasishtha through fear to bind and throw himself into the river, though he emerged thence unbound;" and performed other deeds calculated to excite astonishment. Yudhishthira ends by enquiring, "how this Kshattriya became a Brahman without transmigrating into another body" (197. Dehāntaram anāsādya katham sa brāhmaņo 'bhavat |). In answer to this question, Bhīshma (verses 200 ff.) deduces the descent of Viśvāmitra from Ajamīdha, of the race of Bharata, who was a pious priest, or sacrificer (yajvā dharma-bhritām varah), the father of Jahnu, who again was the progenitor of Kuśika, the father of Gādhi; and narrates the same legend of the birth of Viśvāmitra, which has been already extracted from the Vishnu Purāna (see above, pp. 349 f.). The conclusion of the story as here given is, that the wife of Richīka bore Jamadagni, while "the wife of Gādhi, by the grace of the rishi, gave birth to Viśvāmitra, who was a Brāhman rishi, and an utterer of the Veda; who, though a Kshattriya, attained to Brāhmanhood, and became afterwards also the founder of a Brāhman race" (246. Viśvāmitram chājanayad Gādhi-bhāryyā yaśasvinī | risheh prasādād rājendra brahmarshim brahmavādinam | tato brāhmanatām yāto Viśvāmitro mahātapaḥ | kshattriyaḥ so 'py atha tathā brahma-vamsasya kārakaḥ |).

of which the members are detailed, ²⁰⁸ including the great rishi Kapila. In regard to the mode in which Viśvāmitra was transformed from a Kshattriya into a Brāhman, we are only told that he belonged to the former class, and that "Richīka infused into him this exalted Brāhmanhood" (259. Tathaiva kshattriyo rājan Viśvāmitro mahātapāh | Richīkenāhitam brahma param etad Yudhishthira |).

This version of the story is different from all those preceding ones which enter into any detail, as it makes no mention of Viśvāmitra having extorted the Brahmanical rank from the gods by force of his austerities; and ascribes his transformation to a virtue communicated by the sage Richīka.

I have above (p. 296 f.) quoted a passage from Manu on the subject of submissive and refractory monarchs, in which reference is made to Viśvāmitra's elevation to the Brahmanical order. Nothing is there said of his conflict with Vaśishtha, or of his arduous penances, endured with the view of conquering for himself an equality with his rival. On the contrary, it is to his submissiveness, i.e. to his dutiful recognition of the superiority of the Brāhmans, that his admission into their class is ascribed. Kullūka, indeed, explains the word submissiveness (vināya) to mean virtue in general; but the contrast which is drawn between Prithu, Manu, and Viśvāmitra, on the one hand, and Veṇa, Nahusha, Sudās, and Nimi, the resisters of Brāhmanical prerogatives (as all the legends declare them to have been), on the other, makes it tolerably evident that the merit which Manu means to ascribe to Viśvāmitra is that of implicit submission to the spiritual authority of the Brāhmans.

SECT. XIII .- Legend of Saudāsa.

In the reign of Mitrasaha, also called Saudāsa, and Kalmāshapāda, the son of Sudāsa, and the descendant of Triśanku in the twenty-second generation (see p. 337, above), we still find Vaśishtha figuring in the legend, as the priest of that monarch, and causing him, by an imprecation, to become a cannibal, because he had, under the influence of a delusion, offered the priest human flesh to eat. I shall not extract the version of the story given in the Vishnu Purāna in detail (Wilson, V.P. vol. iii. pp. 304 ff.), as it does not in any way illustrate the rivalry of Vasishtha and Viśvāmitra.

 $^{^{208}}$ The names in this list differ considerably from those given above, p. 352, from the Harivamsa.

• The Mahābhārata gives the following variation of the history (Ādiparvan, sect. 176): "Kalmāshapāda was a king of the race of Ikshvāku. Viśvāmitra wished to be employed by him as his officiating priest; but the king preferred Vasishtha" (verse 6699. Akāmayat tam yājyārthe Viśvāmitrah pratāpavān | sa tu rājā mahātmānam Vasishtham rishi-sattamam |). It happened, however, that the king went out to hunt, and after having killed a large quantity of game, he became very much fatigued, as well as hungry and thirsty. Meeting Saktri, the eldest of Vasishtha's hundred sons, on the road, he ordered him to get out of his way. The priest civilly replied (verse 6703): Mama panthāḥ mahārāja dharmah esha sanātanah | rājnā sarveshu dharmeshu deyah panthāh dvijātaye | "The path is mine, o king; this is the immemorial law; in all observances the king must cede the way to the Brahman." Neither party would yield, and the dispute waxing warmer, the king struck the muni with his whip. The muni, resorting to the usual expedient of offended sages, by a curse doomed the king to become a man-eater. "It happened that at that time enmity existed between Viśvāmitra and Vasishtha on account of their respective claims to be priest to Kalmashapāda" (verse 6710. Tato yājya-nimittam tu Viśvāmitra-Vaśishthayoh) vairam āsīt tadā tam tu Viśvāmitro'nvapadyata |). Viśvāmitra had followed the king; and approached while he was disputing with Saktri. Perceiving, however, the son of his rival Vasishtha, Visvāmitra made himself invisible, and passed them, watching his opportunity. The king began to implore S'aktri's clemency: but Viśvāmitra wishing to prevent their reconciliation, commanded a Rākshasa (a man-devouring demon) to enter into the king. Owing to the conjoint influence of the Brāhman-rishi's curse, and Viśvāmitra's command, the demon obeyed the injunction. Perceiving that his object was gained, Viśvāmitra left things to take their course, and absented himself from the country. The king having happened to meet a hungry Brāhman, and sent him, by the hand of his cook (who could procure nothing else), some human flesh to eat, was cursed by him also to the same effect as by Saktri. The curse, being now augmented in force, took effect, and S'aktri himself was the first victim, being eaten up by the king. The same fate befell all the other sons of Vasishtha at the instigation of Visvāmitra: 6736. S'aktrim tam tu mritam drishtvā Viśvāmitrah punah punah | Vaśishthasyaiva putreshu tad rakshah sandidesa ha 1 sa tan S'aktry-avaran putran Vasishthasya mahatmanah | bhakshayamasa sankruddhah simhah kshudra-mrigan iva | Vasishtho ghātitān śrutvā Visvāmitrena tān sutān | dhārayāmāsa tam śokam mahādrir iva medinīm | chakre chātma-vināśāya buddhim sa muni-sattamah | na tv eva Kauśikochhedam mene matimatām varah | 6740. Sa Meru-kūţād ātmānam mumocha bhagavān rishih | gires tasya śilāyām tu tūla-rāśāv ivāpatat | na mamāra cha pātena sa yadā tena Pāndara | tadā 'gnim iddham bhagavān samviveśa mahāvane | tam tadā susamiddho'pi na dadāha hutāśanah | dīpyamāno'py amitra-ghna śīto 'gnir abharat tatah | sa samudram abhiprekshya śokāvishto mahāmunih | baddhvā kanthe śilām gurvīm nipapāta tadā 'mbhasi | sa samudror-* mi-vegena sthale nyasto mahāmunih | jagāma sa tataḥ khinnaḥ punar evāśramam prati | 6745. Tato drishtvā "śrama-padam rahitam taih sutair munih | nirjagāma suduhkhārttah punar apy āśramāt tatah | so'paśyat saritam pūrnām prāvrit-kāle navāmbhasā | vrikshān bahuvidhān pārtha harantīm tīra-jan bahūn | atha chintām samāpede punah kaurava-nandana | "ambhasy asyām nimajjeyam" iti duhkha-samanvitah | tatah pāśais tadā "tmānam gādham baddhvā mahāmunih | tasyāh jale mahānadyāh nimamajja suduhkhitah | atha chhittvā nadī pāśāms tasyāri-bala-sūdana | sthala-stham tam rishim kritvā vipāśam samavāsrijat | 6750. Uttatāra tatah pāśair vinuktah sa mahān rishih | Vipāśeti cha nāmāsyāh nadyāś chakre mahān rishih | 6752. Drishtvā sa punar evarshir nadīm haimavatīm tadā | chandragrāhavatīm bhīmām tasyāh srotasy apātayat | sā tam agni-samam vipram anuchintya sarid varā | śatadhā vidrutā yasmāch śatadrur iti viśrutā | 6774. Saudāso'ham mahābhāga yājyas te muni-sattama | asmin kāle yad ishţam te brūhi kim karavāni te | Vaśiskęka uvācha | vrittam etad yathā-kālam gachka rājyam praśādhi vai | brāhmaṇāms tu manushyendra mā 'vamamsthāḥ kadāchana | rājā uvācha | nāvamamsye mahābhāga kadāchid brāhmanarshabhān | tvan-nidese sthitah samyak pūjayishyāmy aham dvijān | Ikshvākunām cha yenāham anrinah syām dvijottama | tat tvattah prāptum ichhāmi sarva-veda-vidām vara | apatyam īpsitam mahyam dātum arhasi sattama | "Perceiving Saktri to be dead, Viśvāmitra again and again incited the Rākshasa against the sons of Vasishtha; and accordingly the furious demon devoured those of his sons who were younger than Saktri, as a lion eats up the small beasts of the forest. 200 On hearing of the destruction of his sons by Viśvāmitra, Vasishtha supported his affliction, as the great mountain sustains the earth. He meditated his own destruction, but never thought of exterminating the Kausikas. 6740. This divine sage hurled himself from the summit of Meru, but fell upon the rocks as if on a heap of cotton. Escaping alive from his fall, he entered a glowing fire in the forest; but the fire, though fiercely blazing, not only failed to burn him, but seemed perfectly cool. He next threw himself into the sea with a heavy stone attached to his neck; but was cast up by the waves on the dry land. He then went home to his hermitage; (6745) but seeing it empty and desolate, he was again overcome by grief and went out; and seeing the river Vipāśā which was swollen by the recent rains, and sweeping along many trees torn from its banks, he conceived the design of drowning himself into its waters: he accordingly tied himself firmly with cords, and threw himself in; but the river severing his bonds, deposited him unbound $(vip\bar{a}\acute{s}a)$ on dry land; whence the name of the stream, as imposed by the sage. 210 6752. He afterwards saw and threw himself into the dreadful Satadru (Sutlej), which was full of alligators, etc., and derived its name from rushing away in a hundred directions on seeing the Brāhman brilliant as fire. In consequence of this he was once more stranded; and seeing he could not kill himself, he went back to his hermitage. After roaming about over many mountains and countries, he was followed home by his daughter-in-law Adrisyanti, Saktri's widow, from whose womb he heard a sound of the recitation of the Vedas, as she was pregnant with a child, which, when born, received the name of Parāśara, verse 6794. Learning from her that there was ²⁰⁹ See above (pp. 327 ff.), the passages quoted from the Brāhmaṇas, about the slaughter of Vasishtha's sons. In the Panchaviñs'a Br. (cited by Prof. Weber, Ind St. i. 32) Vasishtha is spoken of as puttra-hatah.

²¹⁰ The Nirukta, ix. 26, after giving other etymologies of the word Vipās, adds a verse: Pāsāḥ asyām vyapāsyanta Vasishṭhasya mumūrshataḥ | tasmād Vipād uchyate pūrvam āsīd Urunjirā | "In it the bonds of Vasishṭha were loosed, when he was on the point of death: hence it is called Vipās'. It formerly bore the name of Urunjirā." It does not appear whether or not this verse is older than the Mahābhārata. On this text of the Nirukta, Durga (as quoted by Prof. Müller, Rig-veda, ii. Pref. p. liv.) annotates: Vasishṭhaḥ kila nimamajja asyām mumūrshuḥ puttra-maraṇa-śokārttaḥ pāsair ātmānam baddhvā | tasya kila te pāsāḥ asyām vyapāsyanta vyamuchyanta uda-kena | "Vasishṭha plunged into it, after binding himself with bonds, wishing to die when grieved at the death of his sons. In it (the river) his bonds were loosed by the water."

thus a hope of his line being continued, he abstained from further attempts on his own life. King Kalmāshapāda, however, whom they encountered in the forest, was about to devour them both, when Vasishtha stopped him by a blast from his mouth; and sprinkling him with . water consecrated by a holy text, he delivered him from the curse by which he had been affected for twelve years. The king then addressed Vasishtha thus: "'Most excellent sage, I am Saudāsa, whose priest thou art: what can I do that would be pleasing to thee?' Vasishtha answered: 'This which has happened has been owing to the force of destiny: go, and rule thy kingdom; but, o monarch, never contemn the Brahmans.' The king replied: 'Never shall I despise the most excellent Brahmans; but submitting to thy commands I shall pay them all honour. And I must obtain from thee the means of discharging my debt to the Ikshvākus. Thou must give me the offspring which I desire." Vasishtha promised to comply with his request. They then returned to Ayodhyā. And Vasishtha having been solicited by the king to beget an heir to the throne 211 (verse 6787. Rājnas tasyājnayā devī Vasishtham upachakrame | maharshih samvidam kritvā sambabhūva tayā saha | devyā divyena vidhinā Vasishtho bhagavān rishih), the queen became pregnant by him, and brought forth a son at the end of twelve years. This extraordinary proceeding, so contrary to all the recognized rules of morality, is afterwards (verses 6888-6912) explained to have been necessitated by the curse of a Brāhmanī, whose husband Kalmāshapada had devoured when in the forest, and who had doomed him to die if he should attempt to become a father, and had foretold that Vasishtha should be the instrument of propagating his race (verse 6906: Patnīm ritāv anuprāpya sadyas tyakshyasi jīvitam | yasya charsher Vaśishthasya tvayā putrāh vināśitāh | tena sangamya te bhāryyā tanayam janayishyati).212

²¹¹ The same story is told in the Vishnu Pur. iv., 4, 38 (Wilson, vol. 3, p. 310).
212 This incident is alluded to in the Adip., section 122. It is there stated that in the olden time women were subject to no restraint, and incurred no blame for abandoning their husbands and cohabiting with anyone they pleased (verse 4719. Anāvritāḥ kila purā striyaḥ āsan varānane | kāma-chāra-vihārinyaḥ svatantrās chāru-hāsini | tāsām vyuchcharamānānām kaumārāt subhage patīn | nādharmo 'bhūd varārohe sa hi dharmaḥ purā 'bhavat, compare verse 4729). A stop was, however, put to this practice by Uddālaka S'vetaketu, whose indignation was on one occasion aroused by a Brālman taking his mother by the hand, and inviting her to go away with him, although his father, in whose presence this occurred, informed him that

The Mahābhārata has a further legend, regarding Viśvāmitra's jealousy of Vaśishtha, which again exhibits the former in a very odious light, and as destitute of the moral dispositions befitting a saint, while Vaśishtha is represented as manifesting a noble spirit of disinterestedness and generosity.

Salyap. 2360. Viśvāmitrasya viprarsher Vasishthasya cha Bhārata bhriśam vairam abhūd rājams tapah-sparddhā-kritam mahat | āśramo vai Vaśishthasya sthānu-tīrthe 'bhavad mahān | pūrvatah pārśvataś chāsīd Viśvāmitrasya dhīmataḥ | 2366. Viśvāmitra - Vaśishṭhau tāv ahany ahani Bhārata | sparddhām tapah-kritām tīvrām chakratus tau tapo-dhanau | tattrāpy adhika-santapto Viśvāmitro mahāmunih | drishţvā tejo Vasishthasya chintām ati jagāma ha | tasya buddhir iyam hy āsīd dharma-nityasya Bhārata | iyam Sarasvatī tūrnam mat-samīpam tapo-dhanam | ānayishyati vegena Vasishtham japatām varam | ihāgatam dvija-śreshtham hanishyāmi na samsayah | 2370. Evam nischitya bhagavān Viśvāmitro mahāmunih! sasmāra saritam śreshthām krodhasamrakta-lochanah | sā dhyātā muninā tena vyākulatvam jagāma ha | jajne chainam mahāvīryyam mahākopam cha bhāvinī tatah enam vepamānā vivarnā prānjalis tadā | upatasthe muni-varam Viśvāmitram Sarasvatī | hata-vīrā yathā nārī sā 'bhavad duḥkhitā bhrisam | brūhi kim karavānīti provācha muni-sattamam | tām uvācha munih kruddho "Vaśishtham śīghram anaya | yavad enam nihanmy adya" tach chhrutva vyathitā nadī | 2375. Prānjalim tu tataķ kritvā pundarīka-nibhekshanā | there was no reason for his displeasure, as the custom was one which had prevailed from time immemorial (verse 4726. S'vetaketoh kila purā samaksham mātaram pituh | jagrāha brāhmaṇaḥ pāṇau "gachhāva" iti chābravīt | rishis-puttras tataḥ kopam chakārāmarsha-choditah | mātaram tām tathā drishtvā nīyamānām balād iva | kruddham tam tu pitā drishtvā S'vetaketum uvācha ha | "mā tāta kopam kārshīs tvam esha dharmah sanātanah | "). But S'vetaketu could not tolerate the practice, and introduced the existing rule (verse 4730. Rishi-puttro 'tha tam dharmam S'vetaketur na chakshame | chakara chaiva maryadam imam strī-pumsayor bhuvi |). A wife and a husband indulging in promiscuous intercourse were therefore thenceforward guilty of sin. But a wife, when appointed by her husband to raise up seed to him (by having intercourse with another man), is in like manner guilty if she refuse (4734. Patya niyuktā yā chaiva patnī puttrārtham eva cha | na karishyati tasyās cha bhavishyati tad eva hi | iti tena purā bhīru maryādā sthāpitā balāt |). Pāndu, the speaker, then proceeds to give an instance of the latter procedure in the case of Madayanti, the wife of Saudasa, who, by her husband's command, visited Vasishtha for the purpose in question (4736. Saudāsena cha rambhoru niyuktā puttra-janmani | Madayantī jagāmarshim Vasishiham iti nah srutam |). Compare what is said above, p. 224, of Angiras, and in pp. 232 and 233 of Dirgatamas or Dirghatapas; and see p. 423, below.

prākampata bhriśam bhītā vāyunevāhatā latā | ... 2377. Sā tasya vachanam śrutvā jnātvā pāpa-chikīrshitam | Vaśishṭhasya prabhāvam cha jānanty apratimam bhuvi | sā'dhigamya Vasishtham cha imam artham achodayat | yad uktā saritām śreshthā Viśvāmitrena dhīmatā | ubhayoh śāpayor bhītā vepamānā punah punah | . . . 2380. Tām kṛiśām cha vivarṇām cha drishtvā chintā-samanvitām | uvācha rājan dharmātmā Vasishtho dvipadām varah | Vasishthah uvācha | " pāhy ātmānam sarich-chhresthe vaha mām sīghra-gāmini | Visvāmitrah saped hi tvām mā krithās tvam vichāranam" | tasya tad vachanam śrutvā kripā-śīlasya sā sarit | chintayāmāsa Kauravya kim kritvā sukritam bhavet | tasyāś chintā samutpannā "Vaśishtho mayy atīva hi | kritavān hi dayām nityam tasya kāryyam hitam mayā" | atha kūle svake rājan japantam rishi-sattamam | juhvānam Kauśikam prekshya sarasvaty abhyachintayat | 2385. "Idam antaram" ity eva tatak sā saritām varā | kūlāpahāram akarot svena vegena sā sarit | tena kūlāpahāreņa Maitrāvaruņir auhyata | ūhyamānah sa tushţāva tadā rājan Sarasvatīm | Pitāmahasya sarasah pravrittā 'si Sarasvati | vyāptam chedam jagat sarvam tavaivambhobhir uttamaih | tvam evākāśa-gā devi megheshūtsrijase payah | sarvās chāpas tvam eveti tvatto vayam adhīmahi | pushtir dyutis tathā kīrttih siddhir buddhir umā tathā | tvam eva vānī svāhā tvam tavāyattam idam jagat | 2390. Tvam eva sarva-bhūteshu vasasīha chaturvidhā | 2392. Tam ūnītam Sarasvatyā drishtvā kopa-samanvitāh | athānveshat praharanam Vasishthanta-karam tadā | tam tu kruddham abhiprekshya brahma-badhya-bhayad nadī | apovaha Vasishtham tu prāchīm diśam atandritā | ubhayoh kurvatī vākyam vanchayitvā cha Gādhijam tato 'pavāhitam drishtvā Vasishtham rishisattamam | 2395. Abravid duḥkha-sankruddho Viśvāmitro hy amarshanah | "yasmād mām tvam sarich-chhreshthe vanchayitvā punargatā | sonitam vaha kalyani raksho-'gra-mani-sammatam'' | tatah Sarasvatī śaptā Viśvāmitrena dhīmatā | avahach chhonitonmiśram toyam samvatsāram tadā | 2401. Athājagmus tato rājan rākshasās tattra Bhārata | tattra te śonitam sarve pivantah sukham āsate | 2402. Nrityantas cha hasantas cha yathā svarga-jitas tathā | 2407. tān drishtvā rākshasān rājan munayah samsita-vratāh | paritrāne Sarasvatyāh param yatnam prachakrire

"2360. There existed a great enmity, arising from rivalry in their austerities, between Viśvāmitra and the Brāhman rishi Vaśishtha. Vaśishtha had an extensive hermitage in Sthānutīrtha, to the east of which was Viśvāmitra's 2366. These two great ascetics were every day exhibiting intense emulation in regard to their respective austerities. But Viśvāmitra, beholding the might of Vasishtha, was the most chagrined; and fell into deep thought. The idea of this sage, constant in duty (!), was the following: 'This river Sarasvatī will speedily bring to me on her current the austere Vasishtha, the most eminent of all mutterers of prayers. When that most excellent Brāhman has come, I shall most assuredly kill him.' 2370. Having thus determined, the divine sage Viśvāmitra, his eyes reddened by anger, called to mind the chief of rivers. She being thus the subject of his thoughts, became very anxious, as she knew him to be very powerful and very irascible. Then trembling, pallid, and with joined hands, the Sarasvatī stood before the chief of munis. Like a woman whose husband has been slain, she was greatly distressed; and said to him, 'What shall I do?' The incensed muni replied, 'Bring Vasishtha hither speedily, that I may slay him.' 2375. The lotus-eyed goddess, joining her hands, trembled in great fear, like a creeping plant agitated by the wind." Viśvāmitra, however, although he saw her condition, repeated his command. 2377. "The Sarasvatī, who knew how sinful was his design, and that the might of Vasishtha was unequalled, went trembling, and in great dread of being cursed by both the sages, to Vasishtha, and told him what his rival had said. 2380. Vasishtha seeing her emaciated, pale, and anxious, spoke thus: 'Deliver thyself, o chief of rivers; carry me unhesitatingly to Viśvāmitra, lest he curse thee.' Hearing these words of the merciful sage, the Sarasvatī considered how she could act most wisely. She reflected, 'Vasishtha has always shown me great kindness; I must seek his welfare.' Then observing the Kausika sage [so in the text, but does not the sense require Vasishtha? praying and sacrificing on her brink, she regarded (2385) that as a good opportunity, and swept away the bank by the force of her current. In this way the son of Mitra and Varuna (Vasishtha) 218 was carried down; and while he was being borne along, he thus celebrated the river: 'Thou, o Sarasvatī, issuest from the lake of Brahmā, and pervadest the whole world with thy excellent streams. Residing in the sky, thou dischargest water into the clouds. Thou alone art all waters. By thee we study.' [Here the river Sarasvatī is identified with Sarasvatī the goddess of speech.] 214 'Thou art nourishment, radiance, fame, perfection, intellect, light. Thou art speech; thou art Svāhā; this world is subject to thee. 2390. Thou, in fourfold form, dwellest in all creatures.' 2392. Beholding Vasishtha brought near by the Sarasvatī. Viśvāmitra searched for a weapon with which to make an end of him. Perceiving his anger, and dreading lest Brahmanicide should ensue, the river promptly carried away Vasishtha in an easterly direction; thus fulfilling the commands of both sages, but eluding Viśvāmitra. Seeing Vasishtha so carried away, (2395) Visvāmitra, impatient, and enraged by vexation, said to her: 'Since thou, o chief of rivers, hast eluded me, and hast receded, roll in waves of blood acceptable to the chief of demons." [which are fabled to gloat on blood]. "The Sarasvatī, being thus cursed, flowed for a year in a stream mingled with blood. . . . 2401. Rākshasas came to the place of pilgrimage, where Vasishtha had been swept away, and revelled in drinking to satiety the bloody stream in security, dancing and laughing, as if they had conquered heaven." Some rishis who arrived at the spot some time after were horrified to see the blood-stained water, and the Rakshasas quaffing it, and (2407) "made the most strenuous efforts to rescue the Sarasvati." After learning from her the cause of the pollution of her waters, they propitiated Mahadeva by the most various austerities, and thus obtained the restoration of the river to her pristine purity (2413 ff.).

213 See above, pp. 316 and 320 f.

We have another reference to the connection of the families of Sudās and Vasishṭha in the legend of Paraśurāma, 215 the destroyer of the Kshattriyas, in the 49th section of the Santiparvan of the Mahābhārata. Sarvakarman, a descendant of Sudās, is there mentioned as one of those ²¹⁴ See the remarks on Sarasvatī in my "Contributions to a knowledge of the Vedic Theogony and Mythology No. II.," in the Journ. R. A. S., for 1866, pp. 18 ff.

²¹⁵ Parasurāma was the son of Jamadagnī, regarding whose birth, as well as that of Viśvāmitra and the incarnation of Indra in the person of his father Gādhi, the same legend as has been already given above, p, 349 ff, is repeated at the commencement of the story referred to in the text. In discoursing with his wife Satyavatī about the exchange of her own and her mother's messes, Richīka tells her, verse 1741: Brahmabhūtam hi sakalam pitus tava kulam bhavet | "All the family of thy father (Gādhi) shall be Brahmanical;" and Vāsudeva, the narrator of the the legend, says, verse 1745: Viśvāmitram cha dāyādam Gādhih Kusikanandanah | yam prāpa brahmasammitam viśvair brahmagunair yutam | "And Gādhi begot a son, Viśvāmitra, whom he obtained equal to a Brāhman, and possessed of all Brahmanical qualities."

Kshattriyas who had been preserved from the general massacre by Parāśara, grandson of Vaśishṭha: verse 1792. Tathā 'nukampamānena yajvanā 'mita-tejasā | Parāśareṇa dāyādaḥ Saudāsasyābhirakshitaḥ | sarva-karmāṇi kurute śūdra-vat tasya vai dvijaḥ | Sarvakarmety abhi-khyātaḥ sa mām̄ rakshatu pārthivaḥ | "Sarvakarman, the son of Saudāsa, was preserved by the tender-hearted priest Paraśara, who performed, though a Brāhman, all menial offices for bim, like a S'ūdra; whence the prince's name;—may this king protect me (the earth)." The same book of the Mahābhārata, when recording a number of good deeds done to Brāhmans, has also the following allusion to Mitrasaha and Vaśishṭha: verse 8604. Rājā Mitrasahaś chāpi Vaśishṭhāya mahātmane | Damayantīm priyām dattvā tayā saha divam̄ gataḥ | "King Mitrasaha, having bestowed his dear Damayantī on Vaśishṭha, ascended to heaven along with her." 216

The same passage has two further allusions to Vasishtha, which, though unconnected with our present subject, may be introduced here. In verse 8591 it is said: Rantidevas cha Sānkrityo Vasishthāya mahātmane | apaḥ pradāya sītoshṇāḥ nāka-prishthe mahīyate | "Rantideva, son of Sankriti, who gave Vasishtha tepid water, is exalted to the heavenly regions." (See the Bhāg. Pur. ix. 21, 2-18, where the various acts of self-sacrifice practised by this prince are celebrated.) It is said of Vasishtha in verse 8601: Avarshati cha Parjanya sarva-bhūtāni bhūta-krit | Vasishtho jīvayāmāsa prajāpatir ivāparaḥ | "When Parjanya failed to send rain, the creative Vasishtha, like Brahmā, gave life to all beings."

Vasishtha, in short, is continually reappearing in the Mahābhārata. I will here adduce but one other passage. In the Santiparvan, verses 10,118 ff., it is said: Tasya Vrittrārdditasyātha mohaḥ āsīch chhatakratoḥ | rathantareṇa tam tattra Vasishthaḥ samabodhayat | Vasishthaḥ uvācha | deva-śreshtho'si devendra daityāsura-nibarhaṇa | trailokya-bala-

²¹⁶ This appears to refer to the story told above, p. 418 ff., of Kalmāshapāda (who was the same as Mitrasaha), allowing Vas'ishtha to be the agent in propagating the royal race; for both there (v. 6910) and in the Vishnu Pur. (Wilson, vol. iii., pp. 308 and 310), the name of the queen is said to have been Madayantī, which is probably the right reading here also, the first two letters only having been transposed. If so, however, it is to be observed that a quite different turn is given to the story here, where it is represented as a meritorious act on the king's part, and as a favour to Vas'ishtha, that the queen was given up to him; whilst, according to the other account, the king's sole object in what he did was to get progeny.

samyuktah kasmāch chhakra nishīdasi | esha Brahmā cha Vishnuś cha S'ivaś chaiva jagat-patih | Somaś cha bhagavān devah sarve cha paramar-shayah | mā kārshīh kaśmalam S'akra kaśchid evetaro yathā | āryyām yuddhe matim kritvā jahi śatrūn surādhipa | "By reciting the Rathantāra, Vaśishtha encouraged Indra, when he had become bewildered and distressed in his conflict with Vrittra, saying to him, 'Thou art the chief of the gods, o slayer of the Daityas and Asuras, possessing all the strength of the three worlds: wherefore, Indra, dost thou despond? There are here present Brahmā, Vishnu, Siva, the divine Soma, and all the chief rishis. Faint not, o Indra, like an ordinary being. Assume a heroic spirit for the fight, and slay thine enemies, etc.'" Strength was thus infused into Indra.

In a later work, the Raja Tarangini, Book IV. verses 619-655 (pp. 188 ff. and note, pp. 521 and 522, of Troyer's edition, vol. i. and vol. ii. 189, 469, note), a curious echo of these old legends is found still reverberating. A story is there told of a king Jayapida who oppressed his people, and persecuted the Brahmans, and was eventually destroyed by them in a miraculous manner. He is compared to Saudasa in verse 625: Sa Saudāsah ivāneka - loka - prānāpahārakrit | astutya - kritya - sauhityam svapne 'pi na samāyayau | "Like Saudāsa, depriving many persons of their lives, he was not satiated with wicked deeds even in his dreams." One of the Brahmans stood up on behalf of the rest to remonstrate: Āha sma "Viśvāmitro vā Vaśishtho vā taponidhih | tvam Agastyo'thavā kim stha" iti darpena tam nripah | bhavān yatra Harischandras Trišankur Nahusho 'pi vā | Visvāmitra-mukhebhyo 'ham tattraiko bhavitum kshamah | vihasyovācha tam rājā "Viśvāmitrādikopatah | Harischandrayo nashtas tvayi kruddhe tu kim bhavet" | pāninā tādayann ūrvim tatah kruddho 'bhyadhād dvijah | "mayi kruddhe kshanad eva brahma-dandah pated na kim" | tach chhrutvā vihasan rājā kopād brāhmanam abravīt | "patatu brahma-dando'sau kim adyāpi vilambate" | nanv ayam patito jālmety atha viprena bhāshite | rājnah kanaka-dando 'nge vitāna-skhalito 'patat | "The king haughtily asked him: 'Art thou Viśvāmitra, or Vasishtha, so rich in devotion? or Agastya? or what art thou?' The Brahman answered, swelling with indignation: 'Just as thou art a Harischandra, a Trisanku, or a Nahusha, so too have I power to be a Viśvāmitra, or one of those other rishis.' The king answered with a smile of contempt: 'Hariśchandra and the rest perished by the wrath of Viśvāmitra and the other sages: but what will come of thy wrath?' The Brāhman angrily replied, smiting the ground with his hand, 'When I am incensed, shall not the Brahmanical bolt instantly descend?' The king retorted with an angry laugh: 'Let it descend; why does it not come down at once?' 'Has it not fallen, tyrant?' said the Brāhman; and he had no sooner spoken, than a golden beam fell from the canopy and smote the king," so that he became tortured by worms, and shortly after died; and went, as the story concludes, to hell.

Professor Lassen, who quotes the stories regarding Vasishtha and Visvāmitra (Ind. Alt. 2nd ed. i. 718 f.), makes the following remarks on their import:

"The legend of the struggle between Vasishtha and Visvāmitra embraces two distinct points: one is the contest between the priests and warriors for the highest rank; the other is the temporary alienation of the Ikshvākus from their family priests. Vasishtha is represented as the exemplar of such a priest; and the story of Kalmashapada is related for the express purpose of showing by an example that the Ikshvakus, after they had retained him, were victorious, and fulfilled perfectly the duties of sacrifice (see above, p. 390): in his capacity of priest he continues to live on, and is the representative of his whole race. We may conclude from the legend that his descendants had acquired the position of family priests to the Ikshvākus, though neither he himself nor his son Saktri belonged to their number. Triśanku is the first prince who forsook them, and had recourse to Viśvāmitra. His successor Ambarīsha received support from that personage, as well as from Richīka, one of the Bhrigus;—a family whose connection with the Kuśikas appears also in the story of Parasurama. The hostility between the Ikshvākus and the family of Vasishtha continued down to Kalmāshapāda. Viśvāmitra is represented as having intentionally fostered the alienation; while Vasishtha is described as forbearing (though he had the power) to annihilate his rival.

"The conflict between the two rivals with its motives and machinery is described in the forms peculiar to the fully developed epos. To this style of poetry is to be referred the wonder-working cow, which supplies all objects of desire. There is no ground for believing in any actual war with weapons between the contending parties, or in any participation of degraded Kshattriyas, or aboriginal tribes, in the contest; for all these things are mere poetical creations. Besides, the proper victory of Vasishtha was not gained by arms, but by his rod. The legend represents the superiority of the Brāhmans as complete, since Viśvāmitra is forced to acknowledge the insufficiency of a warrior's power; and acquires his position as a Brāhman by purely Brahmanical methods.

"From Viśvāmitra are derived many of the sacerdotal families, which bear the common name of Kauśika, and to which many rishis famous in tradition belong. As there were also kings in this family, we have here an example of the fact that one of the old Vedic races became divided, and in later times belonged to both of the two higher castes. It appears impossible that any of the aboriginal tribes should have been among the descendants of Viśvāmitra's sons, as the legend represents; and the meaning of this account may therefore be that some of his sons and their descendants accepted the position of priests among these tribes, and are in consequence described as accursed." 217

Sect. XIV.—Story from the S'atapatha Brāhmaṇa about king Janaka becoming a Brāhman.

The Satapatha Brāhmana has the following account of a discussion between Janaka, king of Videha, and some Brāhmans: 218

xi. 6, 2, 1. Janako ha vai Vaideho brūhmanair dhūvayadbhir samājagūma S'vetaketunā Āruneyena Somaśushmena Sūtyayajninā Yūjnavalkyena | tūn ha uvūcha "katham katham agnihotram juhutha" iti | 2. Sa ha uvūcha S'vetaketur Āruneyo "gharmāv eva samrād aham ajasrau yaśasā visyandamanūv anyo nyasmin juhomi" iti | "katham tad" iti | ūdityo vai gharmas tam sūyam agnau juhomi agnir vai gharmas tam pratar ūditye juhomi" iti | "kim sa bhavati yah evam juhoti" | "ajasrah eva śriyā yaśasā bhavaty etayoś cha devatayoh sūyujyam salokatūm jayati" iti | 3. Atha ha uvūcha Somaśushmah Sūtyayajnih "tejah eva samrūd aham tejasi juhomi" iti | "katham tad" iti | "Ādityo vai tejas tam sūyam agnau juhomi | agnir vai tejas tam prūtar ūditye juhomi"

See also Prof. Müller's Anc. Sansk. Lit., pp. 80 f., 383 f., 408, 413 ff., 485 f.
 This passage is referred to and translated by Prof. Müller, Anc. Sansk. Lit. pp. 421 ff.

iti | "kim sa bhavati yah evam juhoti" iti | "tejasvī yasasvy annādo bhavaty etayoś chaiva devatayoh sāyujyam salokatām jayati" iti | 4. Atha ha uvācha Yājnavalkyah "yad aham agnim uddharāmy agnihotram eva tad udyachhāmi | ādityam vai astam yantam sarve devāh anuyanti | te me etam agnim uddhritam drishtvā upāvarttante atha aham pātrāni nir nijya upavāpya āgnihotrīm dohayitvā pasyan pasyatas tarpayāmi" iti \ tvam nedishtham yajnavalkya agnihotrasya amīmāmsishthah | dhenuśatam dadāmi" iti ha urācha "na tv eva enayos tvam utkrāntim na gatim na pratishthām na triptim na punarāvrittim na lokam pratyuthāyinam" | ity uktvā ratham āsthāya pradhāvayān chakāra | 5. Te ha ūchur "ati vai no 'yam rājanyabandhur avādīd hanta enam brahmodyam āhvayāmahai" iti | sa ha uvācha Yājnavalkyo "brāhmanāh vai vayam smo rājanyabandhur asau yady amum vayam jayema kam ajaishma iti brūyāma atha yady asāv asmān jayed brāhmanān rājanyabandhur ajaishīd iti no brūyuh | mā idam ādridhvam" iti | tad ha asya jajnuh | atha ha Yājnavalkyo ratham āsthāya pradhāvayānchakāra tam ha anvājagāma | sa ha uvācha "agnihotram Yājnavalkya veditum" iti | "agnihotram samrād" iti | 6. "Te vai ete āhutī hute utkrāmatas te antariksham āvišatas te antariksham eva āhavanīyam kurvāte vāyum samidham marīchīr eva sukrām āhutim te antariksham tarpayatas te tatah utkrāmatah | 7. Te divam āvišatas te divam eva āhavanīyam kurvāte ādityam samidham chandramasam eva śukrām āhutim te divam tarpayatas te tatah āvarttete | 8. Te imām āviśatas te imām eva āhavanīyam kurvāte agnim samidham oshadhīr eva śukrām āhutim te imām tarpayatas te tatah utkrāmatah | 9. Te purusham āvišatas tasya mukham eva āhavanīyam kurvāte jihvām samidham annam eva śukrām āhutim te purusham tarpayatah | sa yah evam vidvān asnāty-agnihotram eva asya hutam bhavati | te tatah utkrāmatah | 10. Te striyam āvišatas tasyāh upastham eva āhavanīyam kurvāte dhārakām samidham (dhārakā ha vai nāma eshā | etayā ha vai Prajāpatih prajāh dhārayānchakāra) retah eva sukrām āhutim te striyam tarpayatah | sa yah evam vidvān mithunam upaity agnihotram eva asya hutam bhavati yas tatah putro jāyate sa lokah pratyutthāyī | etad agnihotram Yājnavalkya na atah param asti" iti ha uvācha | tasmai Yājnavalkyo varam dadau | sa ha uvācha "kāmapraśnah eva me tvayi Yājnavalkya asad" iti | tato brahmā Janakah āsa |

"Janaka of Videha met with some travelling Brāhmans, Svetaketu Aruneya, Somaśushma Sātyayajni, and Yājnavalkya, and said to them, 'How do ye respectively offer the agnihotra oblation?' 2. S'vetaketu replied, 'I, o monarch, in sacrificing, throw the one of the two eternal heats which pervade the world with their splendour into the other.' . 'How is that done,' asked the king. (S'. replied), 'Aditya (the sun) is one heat; in the evening I throw him into Agni (Fire). Agni is the other heat; in the morning I throw him into Aditya.' 'What' (enquired the king) 'does he become who thus sacrifices?' 'He acquires' (replied S.) 'perpetual prosperity and renown; conquers for himself an union with these two deities, and dwells in the same region as they.' 3. Then Somasushma answered, 'I, o monarch, in sacrificing, throw light into light.' 'How is that done,' asked the king. 'The Sun" (answered S.) 'is light; in the evening I throw him into Fire: and Fire is light; in the morning I throw him into the Sun.' 'What' (enquired the king) 'does he become who thus sacrifices?' 'He becomes' (rejoined S.) 'luminous, and renowned, an eater of food, and conquers for himself an union with these two deities, and dwells in the same region as they.' 4. Then Yājnavalkya said, 'When I take up the fire I lift the agnihotra. All the gods follow the Sun when he sets; and when they see me take up the Fire, they come back to me. Then, after washing and putting down the vessels, and having the Agnihotra Cow milked, beholding them as they behold me, I satisfy them (with sacrificial food).' The king answered, 'Thou hast approached very close to a solution of the Agnihotra, o Yājnavalkya; I give thee a hundred milch-cows: but thou hast not discovered the ascent of these two (oblations), nor the course, nor the resting-place, nor the satisfaction, nor the return, nor the world where they reappear (?).' Having so spoken, Janaka mounted his car and drove away. 5. The Brāhmans then said amongst themselves, 'This Rājanya has surpassed us in speaking; come, let us invite him to a theological discussion.' Yājnavalkya, however, interposed, 'We are Brāhmans, and he a Rajanya; if we overcome him, we shall ask ourselves, whom have we overcome? but if he overcome us, men will say to us, a Rājanya has overcome Brāhmans. Do not follow this course.' They assented to his advice. Then Yājnavalkya mounted his car, and drove after the king; and came up to him. Janaka asked, 'is it to learn the agnihotra (that thou hast come), Yājnavalkya?' 'The agnihotra, o monarch,' said Y. 6. The king rejoined, 'These two oblations, when offered, ascend; they enter the air, they make the air their ahavanīya fire, the wind their fuel, the rays their bright oblation, they satisfy the . air, and thence ascend. 7. They enter the sky, they make the sky their ahavanīva fire, the sun their fuel, the moon their bright oblation: they satisfy the sky, they return thence. 8. They enter this earth, they make this earth their ahavaniva fire, Agni their fuel, the plants their bright oblation; they satisfy the earth, they ascend thence. They enter man, they make his mouth their ahavaniya fire, his tongue their fuel, food their bright oblation; they satisfy man. (He who, thus knowing, eats, truly offers the agnihotra). 9. They ascend from him, they enter into woman [the details which follow are better left untranslated, they satisfy her. The man who, thus knowing, approaches his wife, truly offers the agnihotra. The son who is then born is the world of re-appearance. This is the agnihotra, o Yājnavalkya; there is nothing beyond this.' Y. offered the king the choice of a boon. He replied, 'Let me enquire of thee whatever I desire, o Yājnayalkya.' Henceforward Janaka was a Brahman." 219

By Brāhmān in the last sentence we have, I presume, to understand a Brāhman. Even if it were taken to dignify a priest of the kind called Brāhmān, the conclusion would be the same; as at the time when the Satapatha Brāhmana was written, none but Brāhmans could officiate as priests.²²⁰

Janaka's name occurs frequently in the Mahābhārata. In the Vanaparvan of that poem (8089) he is called a rājarshi. In the S'ānti-parvan, verse 6640, it is said: Atrāpy udāharantīmam itihāsam purātanam | gītam Videha-rājena Janakena praśāmyatā | "anantam vata me vittam yasya me nāsti kinchana | Mithilāyām pradīptāyām na me dahyati kinchana" | "They here relate an ancient story,—the words recited by Janaka the tranquil-minded king of Videha:

'Though worldly pelf I own no more, Of wealth I have a boundless store: While Mithilā the flames devour, My goods can all defy their power.'"

 219 The Commentator explains $\mathit{brahm\bar{a}}$ by $\mathit{brahmishthah},$ "Most full of divine knowledge."

²²⁰ Prof. Müller remarks in his article on Caste (Chips from a German Workshop, ii. 338): "That king Janaka of Videha possessed superior knowledge is acknowledged by one of the most learned among the Brahmans, by Yājnavalkya himself; and in the S'atapatha Brāhmana, which is believed to have been the work of Yājnavalkya, it is said that king Janaka became a Brahman."

The same sentiment is ascribed to the same royal rishi in verse 7891:

Api cha bhavati Maithilena gītam nagaram upāhitam agninā 'bhivīkshya |

"na khalu mama hi dahyate 'ttra kinchit'' svayam idam āha sma bhūmipālah | "And these words were repeated by the king of Mithilā when ' he beheld the city enveloped in fire, 'nothing of mine is burnt here;'
—so said the king himself."

Another "ancient story" of Janaka is related in verses 7882-7983 of the same book. It is there stated that this king was constantly engaged in thinking on matters connected with a future life; and that he had a hundred religious teachers to instruct him on different points of duty (verse 7884). He was, however, visited by the rishi Panchaśikha 221 (verses 7886, 7888), a pupil of Āsuri (verse 7890), who so confounded the king's hundred instructors by his reasoning, that they were abandoned by their pupil, who followed this new teacher (7898. Upetya śatam āchāryān mohayāmāsa hetubhih | 7899. Janakas tv abhisamraktah Kāpileyānudaršanāt | utsrijya šatam āchāryyān prishthato 'nujagāma tam). Panchasikha appears also, at verse 11839, as his instructor. At verse 10699 Janaka is again brought forward as receiving religious information from Parāśara; in verses 11545-11836 as being taught by the rishi Yajnavalkya the principles of the Yoga and Sankhya philosophies; and in verses 11854-12043 as holding a conversation with a travelling female mendicant (bhikshukī), named Sulabhā, who sought to prove him, and to whom he declares himself to be a pupil of Panchaśikha (here said to belong to the family of Parāśara, verse 11875), and an adept in the systems just mentioned; and from whom, in answer to some reproaches he had addressed to her regarding her procedure, he learns that she belongs to the Rajanya class, like himself, of the family of the rajarshi Pradhana, that she had obtained no suitable husband, and wandered about, following an ascetic life, and seeking final emancipation (verses 12033 ff.).

A further story in illustration of Janaka's indifference to worldly objects is told in the Aśvamedhikaparvan, verses 887 ff.

²²¹ See Prof. Wilson's Sānkhya-kārikā, p. 190; and Dr. Hall's Preface to his edition of the Sānkhya-pravachana-bhāshya, pp. 9 ff.

Sect. XV.—Other instances in which Brāhmans are said to have been instructed in divine knowledge by Kshattriyas.

Two other cases in which Brāhmans are recorded to have received instruction from Kshattriyas are thus stated by Professor Müller: 222

"For a Kshattriya to teach the law was a crime (sva-dharmātikrama), and it is only by a most artificial line of argument that the dogmatic philosophers of the Mīmamsā school tried to explain this away. The Brāhmans seem to have forgotten that, according to their own Upanishads, Ajātaśatru, the king of Kāśi, possessed more knowledge than Gārgya, the son of Balāka, who was renowned as a reader of the Veda, and that Gārgya desired to become his pupil, though it was not right, as the king himself remarked, that a Kshatriya should initiate a Brāhman. They must have forgotten that Pravāhaṇa Jaivali, king of the Panchālas, silenced Svetaketu Āruṇeya and his father, and then communicated to them doctrines which Kshatriyas only, but no Brāhmans, had ever known before." I subjoin two separate versions of each of these stories. The first is that of Ajātaśatru:

Kaushītakī Brāhmaṇa Upanishad, iv. 1. Atha ha vai Gārgyo Bālākir anūchānaḥ saṃspashṭaḥ āsa | so 'vasad Uśīnareshu savasan Matsyeshu Kuru-panchāleshu Kāśi-videheshv iti | sa ha Ajātaśatruṃ Kāśyam āvrajya uvācha "brahma te bravāṇi" iti | taṃ ha uvācha Ajātaśatruḥ "sahasraṃ dadmaḥ" iti "etasyāṃ vāchi | 'Janako Janakaḥ' iti vai u janāḥ dhāvanti" iti | 19. Tataḥ u ha Bālākis tūshṇīm āsa | taṃ ha uvācha Ajātaśatrur "etāvad nu Bālāke" iti | "etāvad" iti ha uvācha Bālākiḥ" | tam ha uvācha Ajātaśatrur "mṛishā vai khalu mā saṃvādayishṭhāḥ "brahma te bravāṇi" iti | yo vai Bālāke eteshām purushāṇāṃ karttā yasya vai tat karma sa vai veditavyaḥ" iti | tataḥ u ha Bālākiḥ samit-pāṇiḥ pratichakrame "upāyāni" iti | taṃ ha uvācha Ajātaśatruḥ "pratiloma-rūpam eva tad manye yat kshattriyo brāhmaṇam upanayeta ehi vy eva tvā jnapayishyāmi" iti | taṃ ha pāṇāv abhipadya pravavrājd |

"Now Gārgya Bālāki was renowned as a man well read in the Veda. He dwelt among the Ušīnaras, Matsyas, Kurus, Panchālas, Kāśis, and Videhas, travelling from place to place. He came to ²²² Chips from a German Workshop, vol. ii. p. 338.

Ajātaśatru, the Kāśya, and said, 'Let me declare to thee divine knowledge.' Ajātaśatru said, 'We bestow on thee a thousand (cows) for this word.' Men run to us crying, 'Janaka, Janaka.'" The learned man accordingly addresses Ajātaśatru in a series of statements regarding the object of his own worship, but is silenced by the king's display of superior knowledge on every topic.223 The story ends thus: 19. "Then the son of Balāka remained silent. Ajātaśatru said to him, 'Dost (thou know only) so much, o Bālāki.' 'Only so much,' he answered. The king rejoined, 'Thou hast vainly proposed to me, let me teach thee divine knowledge.' He, son of Balaka, who is the maker of these souls, whose work that is, - he is the object of knowledge.' Then the son of Balaka approached the king with fuel in his hand, and said, 'Let me attend thee (as thy pupil).' The king replied, 'I regard it as an inversion of the proper rule that a Kshattriya should initiate a Brahman. (But) come, I will instruct thee. Then, having taken him by the hand, he departed."

Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, xiv. 5, 1, 1 (= Bṛihadāraṇyaka Upanishad, ii. 1, 1, p. 334 of Cal. edit.). Dṛiptabālākir ha anūchāno Gārgyah āsa | sa ha uvācha Ajātaśatrum Kāśyam "brahma te bravāṇi" iti | sa uvācha Ajātaśatruḥ "sahasram etasyām vāchi dadmaḥ 'Janako Janakaḥ' iti vai janāḥ dhāvanti" iti | 12. Sa ha tūshnīm āsa Gārgyaḥ | 13. Sa ha uvācha Ajātaśatrur "etavad nu" iti | "etāvad hi" iti | "na etāvatā viditam bhavati" iti | sa ha uvācha Gārgyaḥ "upa tvā ayāni" iti | 14. Sa ha uvācha Ajātaśatruḥ "pratilomam vai tad yad brāhmaṇaḥ kshattriyam upeyād 'brahma me vakshyati' iti | vy eva tvā jnāpayishyāmi" iti | tam pāṇāv ādāya uttasthau |

"Driptabālāki Gārgyya was well read in the Veda. He said to Ajātaśatru, the Kāśya, 'Let me declare to thee divine knowledge.' Ajātaśatra replied, 'We give thee a thousand (cows) for this word. Men run to me calling out, "Janaka, Janaka." At the end of their conversation we are told: 12. "Gārgya remained silent. 13. Then Ajātaśatru asked him, '(Dost thou know) so much only?' 'Only so much,' he replied. 'But this,' rejoined Ajātaśatru, 'does not comprehend the whole of knowlege.' Then said Gārgya, 'Let me come to thee (as thy disciple).' Ajātasatru answered, 'This is an inversion of the proper rule, that a Brāhman should attend a Kshattriya with the view of being instructed in divine knowledge. (But) I will teach thee.' He took him by the hand, and rose."

²²³ See Prof. Cowell's Translation of the Upanishad, pp. 167 ff.

The second story is that of Pravāhana Jaivali:

Satapatha Brāhmana, xiv. 9, 1, 1 (= Brihadāranyaka Upanishad, vi. 2, 1, p. 1030 of Cal. edit.). S'vetaketur ha vai Āruņeyah Panchālānām parishadam ājagāma | sa ājagāma Pravāhanam Jaivalim parichārayamānam | tam udīkshya abhyuvāda "kumāra" iti | sa "bhoh" iti pratišuśrāva | "anuśishto nv asi pitrā" | "om" iti ha uvācha | 2. "Vettha yathā imāh prajāh prayatyo vipratipadyante" iti | "na" iti ha uvācha | "vettha yāthā imam lokam punar āpadyante" iti | "na" iti ha eva uvācha | "vettha yathā 'sau lokah evam bahubhih punah punah prayadbhir na sampūryyate" iti | "na" iti ha eva uvācha | 3. "Vettha yatithyām āhutyām hutāyām āpah purusha-vācho bhūtvā samutthāya vadanti" iti | "na" iti ha eva uvācha | "vettha u devayānasya vā pathaḥ pratipadam pitriyāṇasya vā yat kritvā devayānam vā panthānam pratipadyate pitriyānam vā | 4. Api hi nah risher vachah śrutam (R.V. x. 88, 15 = Vāj. S. 19, 47) 'dve sritī asrinavam pitrīnām aham devānām uta marttyānām | tābhyām idam visvam ejat sameti yad antarā pitaram mātaram cha''' iti | "na aham atah ekanchana veda" iti ha uvācha | 5. Atha ha enam vasatyā upamantrayānchakre | anādritya vasatim kumārah pradadrāva | sa ājagāma pitaram | tam ha uvācha "iti vāva kila no bhavān purā 'nuśishtān avochah'' 224 iti | "katham sumedhah" iti | " pancha mā praśnān rājanyabandhur aprākshīt tato na ekanchana veda" iti ha uvācha | "katame te" iti | "ime" iti ha pratīkāny udājahāra | 6. Sa ha uvācha | " tathā nas tvam tāta jānīthāh yathā yad aham kincha veda sarvam aham tat tubhyam avocham | prehi tu tattra pratītya brahmacharyyam vatsyāva" iti | bhavān eva gachhatv" iti | 7. Sa ājagāma Gautamo yatra Pravāhanasya Jaivaler āsa | tasmai āsanam āhāryya²²⁵ udakam āhārayānchakāra | atha ha asmai araham 226 chākara | 8. Sa ha uvācha "varam bhavate Gautamāya dadmah" iti | sa ha uvācha "pratijnāto me esha varah | yām tu kumārasya ante vācham abhāshathās tām me brūhi" iti | 9. Sa ha uvācha "daiveshu vai Gautama tad vareshu | mānushānām brūhi" iti | 10. Sa ha uvācha "vijnāyate ha asti hiranyasya apāttam go-aśvānām dāsīnām pravarānām paridhānānām | mā no bhavān bahor anantasya aparyantasya abhy avadānyo bhūd" iti | "sa vai Gautama tīrthena ichhāsai" iti | "upaimy aham bhavantam" iti "vāchā ha sma eva pūrve upayanti" | 11. Sa ha upāyana-kīrttā 227 uvācha | "tathā nas tvam Gautama mā parādhās tava cha pitāmahāh yathā | iyam vidyā , itah pūrvam na kasmimśchana brāhmane uvāsa | tām tv aham tubhyam vakshyāmi | ko hi tvā evam bruvantam arhati pratyākhyātum" iti |

²²⁴ The text of the Brihadāranyaka Up. reads avochat.

²²⁵ The Brih. Ār. reads āhritya.

²²⁶ The Brih. Ar. reads arghyam.

"Syetaketu Āruneva came to the assembly of the Panchālas. came to Pravāhana Jaivali, who was receiving service from his attendants. Seeing S'vetaketu, the king said, 'o youth.' 'Sire,' he answered. (King) 'Hast thou been instructed by thy father?' (S'vetaketu) 'I have.' 2. (K.) 'Dost thou know how these creatures, when departing, proceed in different directions?' (S.) 'No.' (K.) 'Dost thou know how they return to this world?' (S.) 'No.' (K.) 'Dost thou know how it is that the other world is not filled with those numerous beings who are thus constantly departing?' (S.) 'No.' 3. (K.) 'Dost thou know after the offering of what oblation the waters, acquiring human voices, rise and speak?' (S'.) 'No.' (K.) Dost thou know the means of attaining the path which leads to the gods, or that which leads to the Pitris; by what act the one or the other is gained? 4. And we have heard the words of the rishi: (R.V. x. 88, 15 = Vaj. S. 19, 47) "I have heard of two paths for mortals, one to the pitris, another to the gods. By these proceeds every moving thing that exists between the father and the mother (i.e. between Dyaus and Prithivi, heaven and earth)."' 'I know none of all these things,' answered Svetaketu. 5. The king then invited him to stay. The youth, however, did not accept this invitation, but hastened away, and came to his father, to whom he said, 'Thou didst formerly declare me to be instructed.' 'How now (my) intelligent (son)?' asked his father. 'The Rājanya,' replied the son, 'asked me five questions, of which I know not even one.' 'What were the questions?' 'They were these,' and he told him the initial words of each of them. 6. The father then said, 'Be assured, my son, that I told thee all that I myself know. But come, let us proceed thither, and become (his) pupils.' 'Do thou thyself go,' rejoined the son. 7. Gantama accordingly arrived (at the abode) of Pravāhana Jaivali, who caused a seat to be brought, and water and the madhuparka mess to be presented: 8. and said, 'We offer thee a boon, Gautama.' Gautama replied, 'Thou hast promised me this boon: explain to me the questions which thou hast proposed to the youth.' 9. The king replied, 'That is one of the divine boons; ask one of those that are human.' 10. Gautama rejoined, 'Thou knowest that I have received gold, cows, horses, female slaves, attendants, raiment; be not illiberal towards us in respect to that which is immense, infinite, boundless.' 'This, o Gautama,' said the king, 'thou rightly desirest.' 'I approach thee (as thy) disciple,' answered Gautama. The men of old used to approach (their teachers) with words (merely). He (accordingly) attended him by merely intimating his intention to do so.²²⁸ 'Do not,' then said the king, 'attach any blame to me, as your ancestors (did not). This knowledge has never heretofore dwelt in any Brāhman; but I shall declare it to thee. For who should refuse thee when thou so speakest?'"

²²⁷ The text of the Brih. Ar. Up. reads kirttyā uvāsa.

Chhāndogya Upanishad, v. 3, 1. S'vetaketur ha Āruneyah Panchālānām samitim eyāya | tam ha Pravāhano Jaivalir uvācha "kumāra anu tvā 'śishat pitā" iti | "anu hi bhagavah" iti | 2. "Vettha yad ito 'dhi prajāh prayanti" iti | "na bhagavah" iti | "vettha yathā punar āvarttante" iti | "na bhagavah" iti | "vettha pathor deva-yānasya pitriyānasya cha vyāvarttane" iti \ "na bhagavah" iti \ 3. "Vettha yathā 'sau loko na sampūryyate" | "na bhagavah" iti | "vettha yathā panchamyām āhutāv āpah purusha-vachaso bhavanti" iti | "naiva bhagavah" iti | 4. "Atha nu kim anusishto vochathāh | yo hi imāni na vidyāt katham so 'nuśishto bravīta" iti | sa ha āyastah pitur arddham eyāya | tam ha uvācha "ananusishya vāva kila mā bhagavān abravīd anu tvā 'śisham''' iti | 5. "Pancha mā rājanyabandhuh praśnān aprākshīt teshām na ekanchana asakam vivaktum" iti | sa ha uvācha "yathā mā tvam tadā etān avado yathā 'ham eshām na ekanchana veda yady aham imān avedishyam katham te na avakshyam" iti | 6. Sa ha Gautamo rājno 'rddham eyāya | tasmai ha prāptāya arhām chakāra | sa ha prātah sabhāgah udeyāya | tam ha uvācha "mānushasya bhagavan Gautama vittasya varam vṛinīthāḥ" iti | sa ha uvācha "tava eva rājan mānusham vittam | yām eva kumārasya ante vācham abhāshathās tām eva me brūhi" iti | 7. Sa ha krichhrī babhūva | tam ha "chiram vasa" ity ājnāpayān-

²²⁸ Or, "by merely intimating, not performing, the respectful mode of approach by touching his feet," according to the Commentator.

chakāra | tam ha uvācha "yathā mā tvam Gautama avado yathā iyam na prāk tvattaķ purā brāhmanān gachhati tasmād u sarveshu lokeshu kshattrasya eva praśūsanam abhūd" iti | tasmai ha uvācha |

"1. Svetaketu Āruneya came to the assembly of the Panchālas. Pravahana Jaivali asked him, 'Young man, has thy father instructed thee?' 'He has, sire,' replied S'vetaketu. 2. 'Dost thou know,' asked the king, 'whither living creatures proceed when they go hence?' (S.) 'No, sire.' (King) 'Dost thou know how they return?' (S.) 'No, sire.' (K.) 'Dost thou know the divergences of the two paths whereof one leads to the gods, and the other to the pitris?' (S.) 'No, sire.' 3. (K.) 'Dost thou know how it is that the other world is not filled?' (S.) 'No, sire.' (K.) 'Dost thou know how at the fifth oblation the waters acquire human voices?' (S.) 'I do not, sire.' 4. (K.) 'And hast thou then said "I have been instructed?" for how can he who does not know these things allege that he has been so?' The young man, mortified, went to his father, and said, 'Thou didst tell me, I have instructed thee, when thou hadst not done so. 5. That Rajanya proposed to me five questions, of which I could not solve even one.' The father replied, 'As thou didst then say to me regarding these five questions, I know not one of them,—(so I ask thee whether) if I had known them, I would not have told them to thee?' 6. Gautama went to the king, who received him with honour. In the morning, having received his share (of attention), he presented himself before the king, who said to him, 'Ask, o reverend Gautama, a present of human riches.' He replied, 'To thee, o king, belongs wealth of that description. Declare to me the questions which thou proposedst to the youth.' 7. The king was perplexed and desired him to make a long stay: and said to him, 'As thou hast declared to me, o Gautama, that this knowledge has not formerly reached the Brahmans (who lived) before thee, it has therefore been among all peoples a discipline inculcated by the Kshattriya class alone.' He then declared it to him."

Sect. XVI.—Story of King Viśvantara and the Syaparna Brahmans.

Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, vii. 27. Viśvantaro ha Saushadmanah S'yāparnān parichakshāṇo viśyāparṇam yajnam ājahre | tad ha anubudhya S'yāparṇās tam yajnam ājagmuḥ | te ha tad-antarvedy āsānchakrire | tān ha drishtvā

uvācha "pāpasya vai ime karmanah karttārah āsate apūtāyai vācho vaditāro yach chhyāparnāh imān utthāpayata ime me 'ntarvedim āsishata" iti | "tathā" iti tān utthāpayānchakruh | te ha utthāpyamānāh ruruvire "ye tebhyo Bhūtavīrebhyah Asitamrigāh Kasyapānām somapītham abhijigyuh Pārikshitasya Janamejayasya vikasyape yaine tais te tattra vīravantah āsuh | kah svit so 'smāka asti vīro yah imam somapītham abhijeshyati" iti | "ayam aham asmi vo vīrah" iti ha uvācha Rāmo Mārgaveyah | Rāmo ha āsa Mārgaveyo 'nūchānah Syāparnīyah | teshām ha uttishthatām uvācha "api nu rājann itthamvidam veder utthāpayanti" iti | "yas tvam katham vettha brahmabandho" iti | 28. "Yattra Indram devatāh paryavrinjan Visvarūpam Tvāshţram abhyamamsta Vrittram astrita yatīn sālāvrikebhyah prādād Arurmaghān avadhīd Brihaspateh pratyavadhīd" iti | "tattra Indrah somapīthena vyārdhyata | Indrasya anu vyriddhim kshattram somapīthena vyārdhyata | api Indrah somapīthe 'bhavat Tvashtur āmushya somam | tad vyriddham eva adyāpi kshattram somapīthena | sa yas tam bhakshañ vidyād yah kshattrasya somapīthena vyriddhasya yena kshattram samridhyate katham tam veder utthapayanti" iti | "vettha brāhmana tvam tam bhaksham" | "veda hi" iti | "tam vai no brāhmana brūhi" iti | "tasmai vai te rājann" iti ha uvācha | 29. Trayānām bhakshānām ekam āharishyanti somam vā dadhi vā apo vā sa yadi somam brāhmanānām sa bhakshah | brāhmanāms tena bhakshena jinvishyasi | brāhmana-kalpas te prajāyām ājanishyate ādāyī āpāyī āvasāyī yathā-kāma-prayāpyah | yadā vai kshattriyāya pāpam bhavati brāhmaṇa-kalpo 'sya prājāyām ājāyate īśvaro ha asmād dvitīyo vā tritīyo vā brāhmanatām abhyupaitoh sa brahmabandhavena jijyūshatah | atha yadi dadhi vaisyānām sa bhakshah | vaisyāms tena bhakshena jinvishyasi | vaiśya-kalpas te prajāyām ājanishyate 'nyasya bali-krid anyasya ādyo yathā-kāma-jyeyah \ yadā vai kshattriyāya pāpam bhavati vaisya-kalpo 'sya prajāyām ājāyate īśvaro ha asmād dvitīyo vā tritīyo vā vaiśyatām abhyupaitoh sa vaiśyatayā jijyūshitah | atha yady apah śūdrānām sa bhakshah | śūdrāms tena bhakshena jinvishyasi | śūdra-kalpas te prajāyām ājanishyate 'nyasya preshyah kāmotthāpyo yathākāma-vadhyah | yadā vai kshattriyāya pāpam bhavati śūdra-kalpo 'sya prajāyām ājāyate | īśvaro ha asmād dvitīyo vā tritīyo vā śūdratām abhyupaitoh | sa śūdratayā jijyūshitah | 30. Ete vai te trayo bhakshāh rājann" iti ha uvācha "yeshām āśām na iyāt kshattriyo yajamānah atha asya esha svo 'bhakshah" ityādi

"Viśvantara, the son of Sushadman, setting aside the Syaparnas, was performing a sacrifice without their aid. Hearing of this the Syaparnas came to the ceremony, and sat down within the sacrificial enclosure Observing them, the king said, 'Remove these Syaparnas, doers of evil deeds, and speakers of impure language, 229 who have sat down within my sacrificial enclosure.' Saying, 'So be it,' they removed them. When they were being removed, they exclaimed, 'The Kasyapas found champions in the Asitamrigas who conquered for them from the Bhūtavīras the soma-draught at the sacrifice which Janamejaya, the son of Parikshit, was performing without their (the Kaśyapas') aid. Who is the champion who will conquer for us this soma-draught?' 'I am your champion,' cried Rāma Mārgaveya. This Rāma was a learned man, belonging to the Syaparna race. When the Syaparnas were moving away, he said, 'Do they, o king, remove from the sacrificial enclosure a man who possesses such knowledge [as I]?' 'How dost thou possess it. Brāhman?' asked the king. 28. (Rāma answered) "When the deities rejected Indra, who had killed Tvāshṭra, 230 prostrated Vrittra, given over the Yatis to the wolves, slain the Arurmaghas, and contradicted Brihaspati, then he (Indra) forfeited the soma-draught. In consequence of his forfeiture, the Kshattra (Kshattriya) class lost it

229 Prof. Weber (Ind. St. i., 215) thinks the words "doers of evil deeds" appear to refer to some variety of ceremonial peculiar to the S'yāparnas, and the words "speakers of impure language" to a difference in their dialect; and he is inclined to derive the patronymic of Rāma, Mārgavēya, from the impure caste of Mārgavas mentioned in Manu, x. 34; by which supposition, he thinks, a ground would be discovered for the reproaches which Visvantara addresses to the S'yaparna family. In reference to the story of Janamejaya, alluded to in this passage, Weber remarks (Ind. Stud. i. 204): "The same work (the Aitareya Brahmana, vii., 27) makes mention of a dispute which this king had with the sacerdotal family of the Bhūtavīras, a branch of the Kasyapas; and which was adjusted by the intervention of the Asitamrigas, who belonged to the same race." A S'yaparna is alluded to in S' P. Br. x., 4, 1, 10 (quoted by Prof. Weber, Ind. St. i., 215): Etad ha sma vai tad vidvān S'yāparnah Sāyakāyanah āha " yad vai me idam karma samāpsyata mama eva prajā Salvānam rajāno bhavishyan mama brāhmanāh mama vaisyāh yat tu me etāvat karmanah samāpi tena me ubhayathā Salvan prajā 'tirekshyate'' iti | "Knowing this Sāyakāyana, the S'yāparna, said, 'If this my rite had been completed, my offspring would have become the kings of the Salvas, mine their Brahmans, mine their Vaisyas. But as (only) so much of the rite has been completed, my offspring shall, in both respects, excel the Salvas." See also Ind. St. x. 18.

²³⁰ See Dr. Haug's note, p. 487, where he states why he cannot follow Sāyaṇa in rendering abhyanamsta by "killed." Prof. Weber (Ind. St. ix. 326) defends Sāyaṇa's interpretation.

also. (But Indra recovered a share in the soma-draught, having stolen Tvashtri's soma.) Hence at present also the Kshattriyas are excluded from the soma-draught. Why do they remove from the sacrificial en-• closure a man who knows that (other) draught which (properly belongs) to the Kshattriyas who are excluded from the soma-draught, and by which they are rendered prosperous?' 'Dost thou, o Brāhman, know that draught?' asked the king. 'I know it,' answered Rāma. 'Declare it then to us,' rejoined the prince. 'I declare it to thee, o king, said the other. 29. 'Of the three draughts they shall bring one, either soma, or curds, or water. If he (the priest, bring) the soma, that is the draught of the Brāhmans, and with it thou shalt satisfy the Brāhmans. One like a Brāhman shall be born in thy line, a receiver of gifts, a drinker (of soma), a seeker of food, 231 a rover at will.' Whenever the offence (of drinking the Brāhman's draught)282 is chargeable to a Kshattriya, one like a Brāhman is born in his line, who in the second or third generation from him has the power of becoming a Brahman. and likes to live as a Brāhman. Next, if (the priest bring) curds, that is the Vaisya's draught; with it thou shalt satisfy the Vaisyas. One like a Vaisya shall be born in thy line, one who is tributary to another, who is to be used (lit. eaten) by another, and who may be oppressed at will. Whenever the offence (of consuming the Vaisya's portion) is chargeable to a Kshattriya, one like a Vaisya is born in his line, who in the second or third generation from him has the power of becoming a Vaisya, and is desirous of living as a Vaisya. Next, if (the priest bring) water, that is the S'ūdra's draught; with it thou shalt satify the S'ūdras. One like a S'ūdra shall be born in thy line, the servant of another, who may be expelled and slain at pleasure. When the offence (of drinking the S'ūdra's draught) is chargeable against a Kshattriya, one like a S'ūdra is born in his line, who in the second or third generation from him has the power of becoming a Sudra, and desires to live like a S'ūdra. 30. 'These, o king, are the three draughts, which the Kshattriya when sacrificing should not desire. His own proper draught is as follows: Let him squeeze the descending branches of the nyagrodha (Indian fig) tree, with the fruits of the udumbara, the asvattha, and the plaksha trees, and drink these juices. This is his own proper draught."

²³¹ Prof. Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 326) would prefer to translate āvasayī (überall-) wohnend, "dwelling everywhere."

²³² Dr. Haug translates "when there is any fault on the Kshattriya (who, when sacrificing, eats the Brähmana portion)," etc. See the beginning of par. 30 below.

The continuation may be read in Dr. Hang's translation, pp. 486 ff. After the priest has given the king a deal of further information the result is told in par. 34, as follows:

Tam evam etam bhaksham provācha Rāmo Mārgaveyo Viśvantarāya Saushadmanāya | tasmin ha uvācha prokte "sahasram u ha brāhmaṇa tubhyam dadmaḥ | saśyāparṇaḥ u me yajnaḥ" iti |

"This draught did Rāma Mārgaveya declare to Viśvantara the son of Sushadman. When it had been declared the king said, 'Brāhman, we give thee a thousand (cows): and my sacrifice (shall be performed) with (the aid of the) S'yāparnas.'"

Sect. XVII.—Story of Matanga who tried in vain to raise himself to the position of a Brahman.

The legend of Matanga, which is narrated in the Anuśasana-parvan of the Mahabharata, verses 1872 ff., is introduced by a question which Yudhishthira addresses to Bhīshma, verse 1867: Kshattriyo yadi vā vaisyah śūdro vā rājasattama | brāhmanyam prāpnuyād yena tad me vyākhyātum arhasi | tapasā vā sumahatā karmanā vā śrutena vā | brāhmanyam atha ched ichhet tad me brūhi samāsatah | Bhīshmah uvācha | 1870. Brāhmanyam tāta dushprāpyam varnaih kshattrādibhis tribhih | param hi sarva-bhūtānām sthānam etad Yudhishthira | bahvīs tu samsaran yonir jayamanah punah punah | paryaye tata kasmimschid brahmano nama jayate | "Explain to me the means—whether it be intense austere-fervour, or ceremonies, or Vedic learning-whereby a Kshattriya, a Vaisya, or a Sudra, if he desire it, can attain to the state of a Brāhman. Bhīshma replies (1870), The state of a Brāhman is hard to be acquired by men of the other three classes, the Kshattrivas, etc.: for this Brahmanhood is the highest rank among all living creatures. It is only after passing through numerous wombs, and being born again and again, that such a man, in some revolution of being, becomes a Brahman." Bhīshma proceeds to illustrate this principle by the case of Matanga, who was apparently the son of a Brāhman, was distinguished for his good qualities, and was esteemed to be himself of the same class as his father (verse 1873: dvijāteḥ kasyachit tāta tulya-varnah sutas tv abhūt | Matango nāma nāmnā vai sarvaih samudito gunaih |) He was, however, discovered to be of spurious birth in the following manner: He happened to be sent somewhere by his father to perform sacrifice, and was travelling in a car drawn by asses. On his way he repeatedly pierced on its nose with the goad the colt which was conveying him along with its mother. Feeling for the wound thus inflicted on her offspring, the she-ass said: "Be not distressed, my son, it is a Chandala who is on the car. There is nothing dreadful in a Brāhman; he is declared to be kindly, a teacher who instructs all creatures: how then can he smite any one? This man of wicked disposition shows no pity to a tender colt, and thereby indicates his origin; for it is birth which determines the character" (verse 1876. Uvācha mā śuchah puttra chandālas tv adhitishthati | brāhmane dārunam nāsti maitro brāhmana uchyate | āchāryah sarva-bhūtānām śāstā kim praharishyati | ayam tu pāpa-prakritir bāle na kurute dayām | sva-yonim mānayaty esha bhāvo bhāvam niyachhati |). Overhearing this colloquy, Matanga instantly got down from the car and besought the she-ass, whom he honoured with the epithet of "most intelligent," to tell him how she knew him to be a Chandala and how his mother had been corrupted. The she-ass informs him that his mother when intoxicated had received the embraces of a low-born barber, and that he was the offspring of this connection and consequently no Brāhman (verse 1882. Brāhmanyām vrishalena tvam mattāyām nāpitena ha | jātas tvam asi chandālo brāhmanyam tena te 'naśat |). On receiving this unwelcome revelation, Matanga returned home, and being questioned by his reputed father about the cause of his speedy reappearance, he told him what he had heard; and expressed his determination to enter on a course of austerities. He does so accordingly with such effect that he alarms the gods, and receives the offer of a boon from Indra. He asks for Brāhmanhood; but Indra tells him that he must perish if he continues to make that request, as the high position he seeks cannot be obtained by one born as a Chandala (verse 1895). Matanga, however, continues his exercises for a hundred years, when Indra repeats his former determination, and supports it by reasons, explaining (1901 ff.) that a Chandala can only become a Sudra in a thousand births, a S'ūdra a Vaisya after a period thirty times as long, a Vaisya a Rājanya after a period sixty times the length, a Rājanya a Brāhman after a period of sixty times the duration, and so on, a Brāhman only becoming a Kāndaprishtha, a Kāndaprishtha a Japa, a Japa a Srotriya, after immense intervals. Indra therefore advises Matanga to choose some other boon. But the devotee is still dissatisfied with the god's decision, and renews his austerities for a thousand years. At the end of that period he receives still the same answer, and the same advice. But though distressed he did not yet despair; but proceeded to balance himself on his great toe; which, although reduced to skin and bone, he succeeded in doing for a hundred years without falling. At length, when he was on the point of tumbling, Indra ran up and supported him; but continued inexorably to refuse his request; and though further importuned, would only consent to give him the power of moving about like a bird, and changing his shape at will, and of being honoured and renowned (verses 1934 ff.).

The assertion here made of the impossibility of a Kshattriya becoming a Brāhman until he has passed through a long series of births is of course in flagrant contradiction with the stories of Viśvāmitra, Vītahavya, and others.

Matanga (or a Matanga) is mentioned in a passage already quoted in p. 411 as a rājarshi who supported Viśvāmitra's family and for whom that sage sacrificed. He is also named in the Sabhā-parvan, verse 340, as sitting in Yama's assembly along with Agastya, Kāla, and Mrityu, etc., etc.; in the Vana-parvan, 8079, as a great rishi (maharshi); and in the Sānti-parvan, 10875, as one of certain sages who had acquired their position by austerities (see above, p. 132). His disciples, he himself, and his forest are mentioned in the Rāmāyana, iii. 73, 23, 29, 30.

Sect. XVIII.—Legend of the Brāhman Paraśurāma, the exterminator of the Kshattriyas.

As Parasurama belonged to the race of the Bhrigus, it may be advisable to premise some particulars regarding that family.

In his Lexicon, s.v., Professor Roth tells us that the Bhrigus were a class of mythical beings, who, according to the Nirukta, xi. 19, belonged to the middle or aërial class of gods ("mādhyamiko deva-gaṇah" iti Nairuktāh). They were the discoverers of fire and brought it to men

(R.V. x. 46, 2, etc.)283 He adds, however, that this race has also a connection with history, as one of the chief Brahmanical families bears this name, and allusions are made to this fact even in the hymns of the Rig-veda (vii. 18, 6; viii. 3, 9, 16; viii. 6, 18; viii. 91, 4). Bhrigu is also, as Prof. Roth observes, the name of a rishi representing a family, who is mentioned in Atharva-veda, v. 19, 1, as suffering injury at the hands of the Srinjayas (see above, p. 286). As regards his birth, it is said in the Aitareya Brāhmana, iii. 34, that first the Sun, and then Bhrigu arose out of the seed which had issued from Prajapati,254 that Bhrigu was adopted by Varuna, and was consequently called Vāruni, etc. (Tasya yad retasah prathamam udadīpyata tad asāv ādityo 'bhavat | yad dvitīyam āsīt tad Bhrigur abhavat | tam Varuno nyagrihnīta | tasmāt sa Bhrigur Vārunih). He is accordingly called by this name in the S. P. Br. xi. 6, 1, 1, where he is said to have conceived himself to be superior in knowledge to his father Varuna (Bhrigur ha vai Vārunir Varunam pitaram vidyayā 'timene'); and also in the Taittirīya Upanishad (Bibl. Ind. p. 123: Bhrigur vai Vārunir Varunam pitaram upasasāra).235 The preceding story of Bhrigu's birth is developed and modified in the Anusasana-parvan of the Mahabharata, verse 4104 ff.: Vaśishthaḥ uvācha | api chedam purā Rāma śrutam me Brahma-darśanam | Pitāmahasya yad vrittam Brahmanah paramātmanah | devasya mahatas tāta Vārunīm bibhratas tanum | aiśvaryye vārune Rāma Rudrasyeśasya vai prabhoh | "Vasishtha said, 4104: I have also heard, o Rāma (i.e. Paraśurāma), of this vision of Brahmā, of that which occurred regarding Pitāmaha, Brahma, the supreme spirit, the great god (i.e. Mahādeva), Rudra, Īśa, the lord, assuming the body of Varuna, and invested with the dominion of Varuna." After this singular description of Mahādeva as identified with Brahmā, Brahma the supreme spirit, and Varuna, the speaker goes on to tell us that the munis, the gods headed by Agni, the embodied portions of the sacrifice, and the Vedas, etc., assembled on the occasion referred to, and then proceeds, verse 4112: Esha Brahmā S'ivo Rudro Varuno 'gnih Prajāpatih | kīrttyate bhagavān devah sarva-bhūta-patih śivah | tasya yajnah

 $^{^{233}}$ See my article on "Manu, the progenitor of the Āryyan Indians" in Journ. R. A. S. for 1863, p. 415 f.; and above, pp. 168 and 170.

²³⁴ The commencement of the story, of which this is part of the sequel, is given above, p. 107 f.

²³⁵ See Ind. Stud. ii. 231, and Journ. of the German Or. Soc. ix. 240.

Paśupates tapah kratava eva cha | dīkshā dīpta-vratā devī diśaś cha sadigīśvarāh | deva-patnyaś cha kanyāś cha devānām chaiva mātarah | ājagmuh sahitās tattra tadā Bhrigu-kulodvaha | 4115. Yajnam Paśupateh prītāh Varunasya mahātmanah | Svayambhuvas tu tāh drishtvā retah samapatad bhuvi | tasya śukrasya visyandāt pāmśūn sangrihya bhūmitah | prāsyat Pūshā karābhyām vai tasminn eva hutāśane ! tatas tasmin sampravritte sattre įvalita-pāvake | Brahmano juhvatas tattra prādurbhāvo babhūva ha | skanna-mātram cha tach chhukram śruvena parigrihya sah | ājya-vad mantratas chāpi so 'juhod Bhrigu-nandana | tatas tu janayāmāsa bhūta-grāmam cha vīryyavān | 4121. S'ukre hute'gnau tasmims tu prādurāsams trayah prabho | purushāh vapushā yuktāh svaih svaih prasava-jair-gunaih \ "bhrig" ity eva Bhriguh pūrvam angārebhyo 'ngirā 'bhavat | angāra-samsrayāch chaivo Kavir ity aparo'bhavat | saha įvālābhir utpanno Bhrigus tasmād Bhriguh smritah | 4140. "Varunas chesvaro devo labhatām kāmam īpsitam" | nisargād Brahmanas chāpi Varuno yādasāmpatih | jagrāha vai Bhrigum pūrvam apatyam sūrya-varchasam | Īśvaro 'ngirasam chāgner apatyārtham akalpayat | Pitāmahas tv apatyam vai Kavim jagrāha tattva-vit | tadā sa Vārunah khyāto Bhriguh prasava-karma-krit | Āgneyas tv Angirāh śrīmān Kavir Brāhmo mahāyaśāh | Bhārgavāngirasau loke loka-santāna-lakshanau | ete hi prasavāh sarve prajānām patayas trayah | sarvam santānam eteshām idam ity upadhāraya | Bhrigos tu puttrāh saptāsan sarve tulyāh Bhrigor gunaih | Chyavano Vajrašīrshas cha S'uchir Aurvas tathaira cha | S'ukro Varenyas cha Vibhuh Savanas cheti sapta te | Bhārgavāh Vārunāh sarve yeshām vamso bhavān api | "4112. This adorable and gracious god, lord of all creatures, is known as Brahmā, Siva, Rudra, Varuna, Agni, Prajāpati. This Pasupati (had) a sacrifice. 236 Austere-fervour, Oblations, Consecration, (Dīkshā) that goddess with brilliant rites, the Points of the compass, their regents, the wives, daughters and mothers of the gods came all together with joy (4115) to this sacrifice of Pasupati the great Varuna. When Svayambhū (Brahmā) saw these goddesses his seed fell to the ground. Pūshan in consequence collected the particles of dust which were thus moistened, and threw them into the fire. When the sacrifice with its blazing fires had begun, there was seen an apparition of Brahmā offering an oblation. Collecting with the sacrificial ladle that which had fallen, ²³⁶ Such seems to be the construction of this line.

he cast it, like butter, with sacred texts, into the fire. And thence the powerful god generated all beings. 4121. When the seed had been cast into the fire, there arose three men endowed with bodies, and with their own respective qualities derived from their generation. Bhrigu sprang first from bhrik (the blazing of the fire), Angiras from the cinders, and Kavi 237 from a heap of cinders. Bhrigu was so named because he was produced together with flames." The god, called Mahādeva, Varuna, and Pavana, claimed these three men as his own, and the fruit of his sacrifice (verse 4133 f.). Agni and Brahmā also claimed them (4135 f.). The other gods, however, entreated Brahmā to accede to the wishes of Agni and Varuna: "4140. 'And let Varuna, the lord, the god, also receive the object of his desire.' By the gift of Brahmã, Varuna, lord of sea-monsters, first received for his offspring Bhrigu brilliant as the sun. And Iśvara (Mahādeva) appointed Angiras to be Agni's son. And Pitāmaha, who knows the reality of things took Kavi as his offspring, Then Bhrigu, the progenitor of creatures, was named the son of Varuna, Angiras the son of Agni, and the glorious Kavi the son of Brahmā. The Bhārgava and the Āngirasa are distinguished in the world as the propagators of mankind. For all these three lords of creatures were propagators. Know the whole of this world to be their offspring. Bhrigu had seven sons, all equal to their father in good qualities, Chyavana, Vajraśīrsha, S'uchi, Aurva, S'ukra, Varenya, Vibhu, and Savana. These were all Bhargavas, and Varunas, to whose race you (Paraśurāma) yourself also belong."

In another passage of the M. Bh. Ādip. 869, it is similarly said: Bhṛigur maharshir bhagavān Brahmaṇā vai Svayambhuvā | Varuṇasya kratau jātaḥ pāvakād iti naḥ śrutam | "We have heard that the great and venerable rishi Bhṛigu was produced by Brahmā from fire at the sacrifice of Varuṇa."

The Nirukta, iii. 17, has the following etymology of Bhṛigu: Archishi Bhṛiguḥ sambabhūva | Bhṛigur bhṛijyamāno na dehe | "Bhṛigu was produced in the flame; though roasted, he was not consumed."

The Taitt. Br. i. 8, 2, 5, has a different account: Indrasya sushuvānasya tredhā indryam vīryyam parāpatat | Bhrigus tritīyam abhavat |

²³⁷ In the M. Bh. Adip. v. 2606, Kavi is said to be Bhrigu's son (Bhrigoh puttrah Kavir vidvān S'ukraḥ). On the other hand he, or another person of the same name, is said in the Anusasana-p. 4150, to be, along with Kavi, a son of Kavi.

"While Indra was continuing to pour out Soma, his manly vigour fell in three portions. The third became Bhṛigu."

Bhrigu is declared in the Vishnu P. (see above, p. 65) to have been one of the nine Brahmās, mental sons of Brahmā. The Bhāg. P. iii. 12, 23, says he sprang from the skin of the creator (Bhrigus tvachi). The M. Bh. Adip. 2605, on the contrary declares: Brahmano hridayam bhittvā nissrito bhagavān Bhriguh | "The venerable Bhrigu, having split Brahmā's heart, issued forth" (Weber, Ind. St. ii. 231). So, too, the Vāyu P. i. 9, 100: Bhrigus tu hridayāj jajne rishih Salilajanmanah | "Bhrigu was produced from the heart of the Water-born (Brahmā);" and adds, verse 103: Ity ete mānasāh puttrāh vijneyāh Brahmanah sutāh | Bhrigv-ādayas tu ye srishtāh navaite brahma-vādinah | 104. Grihamedhinah purānas dharmas taih prāk pravarttitah | "These were the mind-born sons of Brahmā. Bhrigu, and the others, nine in all, who were created, were declarers of sacred knowledge and ancient householders; by them was duty of old established." Manu mentions Bhrigu (i. 35, see above, p. 36) as one of his own ten sons. He also speaks of him (i. 59, 60, above, p. 38) as commissioned by himself (Manu) to promulgate his code. In Manu, v. 1. however, the sage is said to have sprung from fire (idam üchur mahātmānam anala-prabhavam Bhrigum). As, however, he had been previously declared to be one of Manu's ten sons, and is so called also in the third verse of book v. and the second of book vii., where he is styled Manaro Bhriguh, Kulluka thinks it necessary to explain this other alleged descent from fire by saying that that had been the sage's origin in a previous mundane era (Kalpa): Yadyapi prathamādhyāye daśa-prajāpati-madhye "Bhrigum Nāradam eva cha" iti Bhrigu-srishtir api Manutah eva uktā tathāpi kalpa-bhedena agni-prabhavatvam uchyate | tathā cha śrutih "tasya yad retasah prathamam dedīpyate tad asāv ādityo 'bhavat | yad dvitīyam āsīd Bhrigur'' iti | atah eva bhrashtad retasah utpannatvad Bhriguh | "Though the creation of Bhrigu, as one of the ten Prajapatis, is declared, in the 35th verse of the first book, to have proceeded from Manu, still he is here said to have been produced from fire, from the difference in the manner of his birth in the different Kalpas. And so the Veda says (in the passage quoted above from the Ait. Br.). Hence he is called Bhrigu, because he sprang from the seed which fell (bhrashtāt).288

238 See Prof. Wilson's note, Vishnu Purana, vol. i. p. 100 ff., in the course of Professor Roth (Lit. and History of the Veda, p. 135) says: "The Bhrigus are one of the most important Vedic families, to which Jamadagni, Chyavana, Aurva, Apnavana, and other rishis are assigned. Many conjectures might be formed in connection with the part which these several Bhrigus play in the later legends; but it seems to me unsafe to draw any conclusions till we are in possession of the intermediate links. and especially till we have learnt more precisely from the Vedic hymns themselves the relations of these families to each other. Nevertheless I will remark that S'unahsepha, the adopted son of Visvamitra, is, according to the Puranas, a Bhrigu; and consequently the Bhrigus appear in intimate connection with the enemy of Vasishtha; and further, that Sagara, who was reared by the Bhrigu Aurva, is restrained by Vasishtha in his war of extermination against the Sakas and other barbarous tribes. His enemies, when hard pressed, had resorted to Vasishtha as an intercessor." (See above, p. 337, and Wilson's Vishnu Purāna, vol. iii. p. 291.)

The story of Paraśurāma and the Kshattriyas is briefly mentioned in the second section of the Ādiparvan of the Mahābhārata (verses 272—280), where the events referred to are said to have occurred in the interval between the Tretā and Dvāpara ages (Tretā-dvāparayoḥ sandhau Rāmaḥ śastra-bhritām varaḥ | asakrit pārthivam kshattram jaghānāmar-sha-choditaḥ | sa sarvam kshattram utsādya sva-vīryyeṇānala-dyutiḥ |). The history is more fully told in other parts of the Mahābhārata. In the 178th-180th sections of the Ādiparvan there is a legend in which no mention is made of Paraśurāma, or the slaughter of the Kshattriyas; but in which we have the following particulars: Parāśara was son of Saktri, and grandson of Vaśishtha, as we have seen above, p. 417. When he heard of the way in which his father had met his death, he determined to execute a general slaughter of all creatures (v. 6800); 230 but his grandfather restrained him by narrating the history of the which he says, "The Vāyu has also another account of their (the Prajūpatis) origin, and states them to have sprung from the fires of a sacrifice offered by Brahmā; an allegorical mode of expressing their probable original—considering them to be in some degree real persons—from the Brahmanical ritual, of which they were the first institutors and observers."

²³⁹ Reference is made in the commencement of the Vishnu Purāna to the same circumstance (Wilson's Vishnu Purāna, vol. i. pp. 7 ff.) Parāsara is the narrator of the Vishnu Purāna (ibid. p. 11).

Bhrigus and Kshattriyas, as follows: There was a king named Kritavīryya, by whose liberality the Bhrigus, learned in the Vedas, who officiated as his priests, had been greatly enriched with corn and money (verse 6802. Yājyo veda-vidām loke Bhrigunam parthivarshabhah | sa tān agra-bhujas tāta dhānyena cha dhanena cha | somānte tarpayāmāsa vipulena višāmpate 1). After he had gone to heaven, his descendants were in want of money, and came to beg for a supply from the Bhrigus, of whose wealth they were aware. Some of the latter hid their money under ground, others bestowed it on Brāhmans, being afraid of the Kshattriyas, while others again gave these last what they wanted. It happened, however, that a Kshattriya, while digging the ground, discovered some money buried in the house of a Bhrigu. Kshattriyas then assembled and saw this treasure, and, being incensed, slew in consequence all the Bhrigus, whom they regarded with contempt, down to the children in the womb (verse 6809. Avamanya tatah krodhād Bhrigūms tān śaraṇāgatān | nijaghnuḥ parameshvāsāḥ sarvāms tān niśitaih śaraih | ā-garbhād avakrintantaś cheruh sarvām vasundha $r\bar{a}m$). The widows, however, fled to the Himālaya mountains. One of them concealed her unborn child in her thigh. The Kshattriyas, hearing of its existence from a Brahmani informant, sought to kill it; but it issued forth from its mother's thigh with lustre, and blinded the persecutors. After wandering about bewildered among the mountains for a time, they humbly supplicated the mother of the child for the restoration of their sight; but she referred them to her wonderful infant Aurva into whom the whole Veda, with its six Vedangas, had entered (verse 6823. Shad-angas chākhilo vedah imam garbhastham eva ha | viveśa Bhrigu-vamśasya bhūyah priya-chikīrshayā |), as the person who (in retaliation of the slaughter of his relatives) had robbed them of their eyesight, and who alone could restore it. They accordingly had recourse to him, and their eyesight was restored. Aurva, however, meditated the destruction of all living creatures, in revenge for the slaughter of the Bhrigus, and entered on a course of austerities which alarmed both gods, asuras, and men; but his progenitors (Pitris) themselves appeared, and sought to turn him from his purpose by saying that they had no desire to be revenged on the Kshattriyas: 6834. Nānīśair hi tadā tāta Bhrigubhir bhāvitātmabhih | badho hy upekshitah sarvaih kshattriyānām vihimsatām | āyushā viprakrishtena yadā nah kheda avisat | tada 'smabhir badhas tata kshattriyair apsitah svayam | nikhātam yach cha vai vittam kenachid Bhrigu-vesmani | vairāyaiva tadā nyastam kshattriyan kopayishnubhih kim hi vittena nah karyyam svargepsūnām dvijottama | 6841. Mā badhīh kshattriyāms tāta na lokān sapta puttraka | dūshayantam tapas-tejaḥ krodham utpatitam jahi | "6834. It was not from weakness that the devout Bhrigus overlooked the massacre perpetrated by the murderous Kshattriyas. When we became distressed by old age, we ourselves desired to be slaughtered by them. The money which was buried by some one in a Bhrigu's house was placed there for the purpose of exciting hatred, by those who wished to provoke the Kshattriyas. For what had we, who were desiring heaven, to do with money?" They add that they hit upon this device because they did not wish to be guilty of suicide, and concluded by calling upon Aurva to restrain his wrath; and abstain from the sin he was meditating, verse 6841: "Destroy not the Kshattriyas, o son, nor the seven worlds. Suppress thy kindled anger which nullifies the power of austere-fervour." Aurva, however, replies that he cannot allow his threat to remain unexecuted. His anger, unless wreaked upon some other object, will, he says, consume himself. And he argues on grounds of justice, expediency, and duty, against the clemency which his progenitors recommend. He is, however, persuaded by the Pitris to throw the fire of his anger into the sea, where they say it will find exercise in assailing the watery element, and in this way his threat will be fulfilled. "It accordingly became the great Hayasiras, known to those who are acquainted with the Veda, which vomits forth that fire and drinks up the waters" (Mahad Hayasiro bhūtvā yat tad vedavido viduh | tam agnim udgirad vaktrāt pibaty āpo mahodadhau). It is worthy of remark that in a legend, one object of which, at least, would seem to be to hold up to abhorrence the impiety of the Kshattriyas in oppressing the Brahmans, we should thus find a palliation of the conduct of the oppressors, coming from the other world. But here the principle of the nothingness of mundane existence asserts itself; and the final superiority of the Brāhmans is vindicated, while their magnanimity is exemplified.

The next version of this legend, which I shall quote, is that given in the 115th-117th sections of the Vanaparvan. Arjuna, son of Kritavīrya, and king of the Haihāyas, had, we are told, a thousand arms.

He obtained from Dattatreya an aërial car of gold, the march of which was irresistible. He thus trod down gods, Yakshas, rishis, and oppressed all creatures (10137. Avyāhata-gatis chaiva rathas tasya mahātmanah | rathena tena tu tadā vara-dānena vīryyavān | mamardda devān yakshāms cha rishīms chaiva samantataḥ | bhūtāms chaiva sa sarvāms tu pīdayāmāsa sarvataķ |). The gods and rishis applied to Vishnu, and he along with Indra, who had been insulted by Arjuna, devised the means of destroying the latter. At this time, the story goes on, there lived a king of Kānyakubja, called Gādhi, who had a daughter named Satyavatī. The marriage of this princess to the rishi Richīka, and the birth of Jamadagni, are then told in nearly the same way as above narrated in page 350. Jamadagni and Satyavatī had five sons, the youngest of whom was the redoubtable Parasurama. By his father's command he kills his mother (who, by the indulgence of impure desire, had fallen from her previous sanctity), after the four elder sons had refused this matricidal office, and had in consequence been deprived of reason by their father's curse. At Parasurama's desire, however, his mother is restored by his father to life, and his brothers to reason; and he himself is absolved from all the guilt of murder; and obtains the boon of invincibility and long life from his father. His history now begins to be connected with that of king Arjuna (or Kārtavīrva). The latter had come to Jamadagni's hermitage, and had been respectfully received by his wife; but he had requited this honour by carrying away by force the calf of the sage's sacrificial cow, and breaking down his lofty trees. On being informed of this violence, Parasurama was filled with indignation, attacked Arjuna, cut off his thousand arms, and slew him. Arjuna's sons, in return, slew the peaceful sage Jamadagni, in the absence of Paraśurāma. The narrative thus proceeds:

10201. Dadāha pitaram chūgnau Rāmaḥ para-puranjayaḥ | pratijajne badham chūpi sarva-kshattrasya Bhūrata | sa kruddho'tibalaḥ sankhye śastram ādāya vīryyavān | jaghnivān Kūrttavīryyasya sutān eko'ntakopanaḥ | Teshām chūnugatāḥ ye cha kshattriyāḥ kshattriyarshabha | tāmś cha sarvān avāmridhnād Rāmaḥ praharatām varaḥ | trissaptakritvaḥ prithivīm kritvā niḥkshattriyām prabhuḥ | samantapanchake pancha chakūra raudhirān hradān | 10205. Sa teshu tarpayāmāsa Bhrigūn Bhrigu-kulodvahaḥ | sākshād dadarśa charchīkam sa cha Rāmam

nyavedayat | tato yajnena mahatā Jāmadagnyaḥ pratāpavān | tarpayāmāsa devendram ritvigbhyaḥ pradadau mahīm | vedīm chāpy adadād haimīm Kaśyapāya mahātmane | daśa-vyāmāyatām kritvā navotsedhām viśāmpate | tām Kaśyapasyānumater brāhmanāḥ khandaśas tadā | vyabhajams te tadā rājan prakhyātāḥ Khāndavāyanāḥ | sa pradāya mahīm tasmai Kaśyapāya mahātmane | asmin mahendre śailendre vasaty amitavikramaḥ | evam vairam abhūt tasya kshattriyair loka-vāsibhiḥ | prithivī chāpi vijitā Rāmenāmita-tejasā |

"Rāma, after performing, on his return, his father's funeral obsequies, vowed to destroy the whole Kshattriya race; and executed his threat by killing first Arjuna's sons and their followers. Twenty-one times did he sweep away all the Kshattriyas from the earth, and formed five lakes of blood in Samantapanchaka; (10,205) in which he satiated the manes of the Bhrigus, and beheld face to face (his grandfather) Richīka, who addressed himself to Rāma. The latter gratified Indra by offering to him a grand sacrifice, and gave the earth to the officiating priests. He bestowed also a golden altar, ten fathoms long and nine high, on the mighty Kaśyapa. This, by his permission, the Brāhmans divided among themselves, deriving thence the name of Khāndavāyanas. Having given away the earth to Kaśyapa, Paraśurāma himself dwells on the mountain Mahendra. Thus did enmity arise between him and the Kshattriyas, and thus was the earth conquered by Rāma of boundless might."

The means by which the Kshattriya race was restored are described in the following passage from the Ādiparvan, verses 2459 ff.:

Trissapta-kritvah prithivīm kritvā nihkshattriyām purā | Jāmadagnyas tapas tepe Mahendre parvatottame | 2460. Tadā nihkshattriye loke Bhārgaveņa krite sati | brāhmaṇān kshattriyāḥ rājan sutārthinyo 'bhichakramuḥ | tābhiḥ saha samāpetur brāhmaṇāḥ śamsita-vratāḥ | ritāv ritau nara-vyāghra na kāmād nānritau tathā | tebhyaś cha lebhire garbham kshattriyās taḥ sahasraśaḥ | tataḥ sushuvire rājan kshattriyān vīryyævattarān | kumāramś cha kumārīś cha punaḥ kshattrābhivriddhyaye | evam tad brāhmaṇaiḥ kshattram kshattriyāsu tapasvibhiḥ | jātam vriddham cha dharmeṇa sudīrghenāyushānvitam | chatvāro 'pi tato varṇāḥ babhūvur brāhmaṇottarāḥ |

"2459. Having one and twenty times swept away all the Kshattriyas from the earth, the son of Jamadagni engaged in austerities on Mahendra the most excellent of mountains. 2460. After he had cleared the world of Kshattriyas, their widows came to the Brāhmans, praying for offspring. The religious Brāhmans, free from any impulse of lust, cohabited at the proper seasons with these women, who in consequence became pregnant, and brought forth valiant Kshattriya boys and girls, to continue the Kshattriya stock. Thus was the Kshattriya race virtuously begotten by Brāhmans on Kshattriya women, and became multiplied and long-lived. Thence there arose four castes inferior to the Brāhmans."

This restoration of the Kshattriyas and their rule is said to have been followed by a state of great virtue, happiness, and prosperity. As one exemplification of the religious perfection which prevailed, it is said that "the Brāhmans did not sell their sacred lore, nor recite the Vedas in the vicinity of S'ūdras" (verse 2474. Na cha vikrīnate brahma brāhmanās cha tadā nṛipa | na cha śūdra-samābhyāse vedān uchchāra-yanty uta |).

Another version of this legend is given in the Santiparvan, section 49. The birth of Jamadagni as the son of Richīka and Satyavatī is related very much as in the Vishnu Purana (see above, p. 349 f.); but Richika tells his wife that the whole of her father's race shall become Brahmanical (verse 1741. Brahma-bhūtam hi sakalam pitus tava kulam bhavet); and of Viśvāmitra, the son of Gādhi, we are told that he "had the character of a Brāhman, and was possessed of all Brahmanical qualities" (1745. Viśvāmitram cha dāyādam Gādhih Kusika-nandanah | yam prāpa brahma-samitam viśvair brahma-gunair yutam |). Jamadagni was father of the dreadful Parasurāma, "who became perfect in science, thoroughly versed in archery, and the slayer of the Kshattriyas, himself violent as flaming fire. By propitiating Mahadeva he obtained, among other weapons, the irresistible axe (paraśu)" (1747. Sarva - vidyānta - gam śreshtham dhanur-vedasya pāragam | Rāmam kshattriya-hantāram pradīptam iva pāvakam | toshayitvā Mahādevam parvate Gandhamādane | astrāni varayāmāsa parašum chātitejasam |), from which his name is derived. Arjuna, son of Kritavīrya, king of the Haihayas, is here also represented as having a thousand arms, but in opposition to the previous account he is described as a "dutiful and religious monarch, who at an aśvamedha (horse-sacrifice) bestowed on the Brāhmans the earth with its seven continents and mountains, which he had conquered by his arms and weapons" (verse 1751. Chakravarttī mahātejā viprānām āśvamedhike | dadau sa prithivīm sarvām sapta-dvīpām sa-parvatām | svabāhv-astra-balenājau jitvā parama-dharma-vit |). He had, however, at

• the solicitation of Agni permitted that voracious deity to consume his towns, villages, forests, etc.; and as the hermitage of Āpava (Vaśishtha) had been destroyed in the conflagration, Arjuna was doomed by the sage's curse to have his arms cut off by Paraśurāma. The story proceeds:

Verse 1769. Arjunas tu mahātejā balī nityam śamātmekah | brahmanyaś cha śaranyaś dātā śūraś cha Bhārata | 1760. Nāchintayat tadā śāpam tena dattam mahātmanā | tasya putrās tu balinaḥ śāpenāsur pitur badhe | nimittād avaliptāh vai nriśamsāś chaiva sarvadā | Jamadagni-dhenvās te vatsam āninyur Bharatarshabha | ajnātam Kārttavīryena Haihayendrena dhīmatā | tannimittam abhūd yuddham Jāmadagner mahātmanah | tato 'rjunasya bāhums tān chhittvā Rāmo rushā 'nvitah | . . . 1766. Tatah pitri-badhāmarshād Rāmah parama-manyumān | niḥkshattriyām pratiśrutya mahīm śastram agrihnata | tataḥ sa Bhriguśārdūlah Kārttavīryasya vīryavān | vikramya vijaghānūśu puttrān pauttrāms cha sarvasah | sa Haihaya-sahasrāni hatvā parama-manyumān | chakāra Bhārgavo rājan mahīm śonita-kardamām | sa tathā "śu mahātejāḥ kṛitvā niḥkshattriyām mahīm | 1770. Kṛipayā parayā "vishṭo vanam eva jagāma ha | tato varsha-sahasreshu samatīteshu keshuchit | kshepam samprāptavāms tattra prakrityā kopanaķ prabhuķ | Viśvāmitrasya pauttras tu Raibhya-puttro mahātapāḥ | Parāvasur mahārāja kshiptāha (kshiptvā "ha?) jana-samsadi | "ye te Yayāti-patane yajne santaḥ samāgatāḥ | Pratarddana-prabhritayo Rāma kim kshattriyāh na te | mithyā-pratijno Rāma tvam katthase jana-samsadi | bhayat kshattriya-vīranam parvatam samupāśritaķ | sā punaķ kshattriya-śataiķ prithivī sarvatas tritā" | 1775. Parāvasor vachaḥ śrutvā śastram jagrāha Bhārgavaḥ | tato ye Kshattriyāh rājan satasas tena varjjitāh | te vivriddhāh mahāvīryyāh prithivīpatayo 'bhavan | sa punas tān jaghānāśu bālān api narādhipa | garbhasthais tu mahī vyāptā punar evābhavat tadā | jātam̃ jātam̃ sa garbham̃ tu punar eva jaghāna ha | arakshams tu sutān kāmschit tadā kshattriyayoshitah | trissapta-kritvah prithivīm kritvā nihkshattriyām prabhuh | dakshinām aśvamedhānte Kaśyapāyādadāt tadā | sa kshattriyānām śeshārtham karenoddiśya Kaśyapaḥ | 1780. Sruk-pragrahavaṭā rājams tato vākyam athābravīt | "gachha tīram samudrasya dakshinasya mahāmune | na te mad-vishaye Rāma vastavyam iha karhichit" | tataḥ

S'urpārakam deśam sāgaras tasya nirmame | sahasā Jāmadagnyasya so 'parānta-mahītalam | Kaśyapas tām mahārāja pratigrihya vasundharām | kritvā brāhmana-samsthām vai pravishtah sumahāvanam | tatah śūdrāś cha vaisyās cha yathā - svaira - prachārinah | avarttanta dvijāgryānām c dareshu Bharatarshabha | arajake jiva-loke durbalah balavattaraih | 1785. Pīdyante na hi vitteshu prabhutvam kasyachit tadā | tatah kālena prithivī pīdyamānā durātmabhih | viparyayena tenāśu praviveśa rasātalam | arakshyamānā vidhivat kshattriyair dharma-rakshibhih | tām drishtvā dravatīm tattra santrāsāt sa mahāmanāh | ūrunā dhārayāmāsa Kaśyapah prithivim tatah | dhrita tenoruna yena tenorvīti mahī smrita | rakshanārtham samuddišya yayāche prithivī tadā | prasādya Kaśyapam devī varayāmāsa bhūmipam | prithivy uvācha | 1790. "Santi brahman mayā guptāh strīshu kshattriya-pungavāh | Haihayānām kule jātās te samrakshantu mām mune | asti Paurava-dāyādo Vidūratha-sutah prabho | rikshaih samvardhito vipra rikshavaty atha parvate | tatha 'nukampamānena yajvanā 'py amitaujasā | Parāśarena dāyādah Saudāsasyābhirakshitah | sarva-karmāni kurute śūdra-vat tasya sa dvijah | Sarvakarmety abhikhyātah sa mām rakshatu pārthivah | 1799. Ete kshattriya-dāyādās tattra tattra pariśritāh | dyokāra-hema-kārādi-jātim nityam samāśritāh | 1800. Yadi mām abhirakshanti tadā sthāsyāmi niśchala | etesham pitaraś chaiva tathaiva cha pitamahah | mad-artham nihatāh yuddhe Rāmenāklishţa-karmanā | teshām apachitis chaiva mayā kāryyā mahāmune | na hy aham kāmaye nityam atikrāntena rakshanam | varttamānena vartteyam tat kshipram samvidhīyatām" | tatah prithivyā nirdishţāms tān samānīya Kaśyapah | abhyashinchad mahīpālān kshattriyan virya-sammatan |

"Being of a meek, pious, kind, and charitable turn of mind, the valiant Arjuna thought nothing of the curse; but his sons, who were of an arrogant and barbarous disposition, became the cause of its resulting in his death. Without their father's knowledge they took away Jamadagni's calf; and in consequence Paraśurāma attacked Arjuna and cut off his arms." His sons retaliated by killing Jamadagni. 1766. Paraśurāma incensed at the slaughter of his father, having vowed in consequence to sweep away all Kshattriyas from the earth, seized his weapons; and slaying all the sons and grandsons of Arjuna, with thousands of the Haihayas, he turned the earth into a mass of ensanguined mud. 1770. Having thus cleared the earth of Kshattriyas, he became penetrated by deep compassion and retired to the forest. After some thousands of years had elapsed, the hero, naturally irascible, was taunted by Paravasu, the son of Raibhya and grandson of Viśvāmitra, in a public assembly in these words: 'Are not these virtuous men, Pratardana and the others, who are assembled at the sacrifice in the city of Yayati, -are they not Kshattriyas? Thou hast failed to excecute thy threat, and vainly boastest in the assembly. Thou hast withdrawn to the mountain from fear of those valiant Kshattriyas, while the earth has again become overrun by hundreds of their race.' Hearing these words, Rāma seized his weapons. The hundreds of Kshattriyas who had before been spared had now grown powerful kings. These, however, Parasurama now slew with their children, and all the numerous infants then unborn as they came into the world. Some, however, were preserved by their mothers. Having twenty-one times cleared the earth of Kshattriyas, Rāma gave her as a sacrificial fee to Kaśyapa at the conclusion of an asvamedha. 1780. Making a signal with his hand, in which he held the sacrificial ladle, Kaśyapa, in order that the remaining Kshattriyas should be spared, said to Parasurāma, 'Go, great muni, to the shore of the southern ocean. Thou must not dwell in my territory.' Sāgara (the ocean) created for him a country called S'ūrpāraka on the remotest verge of the earth. Having received dominion over the earth, Kaśyapa made it an abode of Brāhmans, and himself withdrew to the forest. S'ūdras and Vaisyas then began to act lawlessly towards the wives of the Brāhmans; and, in consequence of there being no government, the weak (1785) were oppressed by the strong, and no one was master of any property. The Earth, being distressed by the wicked, in consequence of that disorder, and unprotected according to rule by the Kshattriyas, the guardians of justice, descended to the lower regions. Perceiving her moving from place to place in terror, Kasyapa upheld her with his thigh (uru). From this circumstance she derives her name of urvī. 240 The goddess Earth then propitiated Kaśyapa, and supplicated him for protection, and for a king. 'I have,' she said, 'preserved among females many Kshattriyas who have been born in the race of the Haihayas; let them be my protectors. There is the heir of the Pauravas, the son of Vidūratha, who has been brought up by bears on the mountain Rikshavat: let him protect me. So, too, the heir of Saudāsa has been preserved by the tender-hearted and glorious priest, Parāśara, who has performed, though a Brāhman, all menial offices (sarvakarmāṇi) for him, like a Sūdra;— whence the prince's name Sarvakarman." After enumerating other kings who had been rescued, the Earth proceeds: "All these Kshattriyas' descendants have been preserved in different places, abiding continually among the classes of dyokāras and goldsmiths. If they protect me, I shall continue unshaken. Their fathers and grandfathers were slain on my account by Rāma, energetic in action. It is incumbent on me to avenge their cause. For I do not desire to be always protected by an extraordinary person [such as Kaśyapa]; but I will be content with an ordinary ruler. Let this be speedily fulfilled.' Kaśyapa then sent for these Kshattriyas who had been pointed out by the Earth, and installed them in the kingly office."

240 Urvi really means "the broad," signifying the same as prithivi.

This reference to the bestowal of the Earth upon Kasyapa is founded on an older story which occurs both in the Aitareya and the Satapatha Brāhmaṇas. The passage in the first-named work is as follows, viii. 21. Etena ha vai Aindrena mahābhishekeṇa Kasyapo Viśvakarmāṇam Bhauvanam abhishishecha | tasmād u Viśvākarmā Bhauvanah samantam sarvatah prithivīm jayan parīyāya aśvena cha medhyena īje | bhūmir ha jagāv ity udāharanti "na mā marttyah kaśchana dātum arhati Viśvakarman Bhauvana mām didāsitha | nimankshye ham salilasya madhye moghas te esha Kaśyapāyāsa sangarah" iti | "With this great inauguration like that of Indra did Kaśyapa consecrate Viśvakarman Bhauvana, who in consequence went round the Earth in all directions, conquering it; and offered an aśvamedha sacrifice. They relate that the Earth then recited this verse:

"Me may no mortal give away; but thou, oh king, dost so essay; Deep will I plunge beneath the main; thy pledge to Kas'yapa is vain."

The Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, xiii. 7, 1. 15, says: Tam ha Kaśyapo yājayānchakāra | tad api bhūmih slokam jagau "na mā marttyah kaśchana
dātum arhati Viśvakarman Bhauvana mandah āsitha | upamankshyati
syā salilasya madhye mrishaisha te sangarah Kaśyapāya" iti | "Kaśyapa officiated for him at this sacrifice. Wherefore also the Earth recited this verse: 'No mortal may give me away. Viśvakarman, son of Bhauvana, thou wast foolish (in offering to do so). She will sink into the midst of the waters. Thy promise to Kaśyapa is vain." "241

The story is also related in the Bhagavata Purana in a similar way. I note the chief points and variations. When Gadhi's daughter was demanded in marriage by the rishi Richīka, the king considered that the suitor was not a fit husband for a daughter of his noble race; and said, "Give me a thousand horses white as the moon, each with one black ear, as a marriage gift for the maiden; for we are Kuśikas" (ix. 15, 5. Varam visadriśam matvā Gādhir Bhārgavam abravīt | 6. Ekatah śyāma-karnānām hayānām chandra-varchasām | sahasram dīyatām śulkam kanyāyāh Kuśikāh vayam |). The youngest offspring of their union was, we are told, "Parasurāma, who is declared to have been a portion of Vāsudeva (Vishnu in the form of Krishna),242 and who exterminated the Haihaya race. Thrice seven times he swept away from this earth all the Kshattriyas, that depraved and impious race, full of passion and darkness, with which she was burthened. He destroyed them, though the offence which they had committed was but insignificant (v. 14. Yam āhur Vāsudevāmsam Haihayānam kulāntakam | trissaptakritvo yah imām chakre nihkshattriyam mahim | dushtam kshattram bhuvo bharam abrahmanyam anīnašat | rajas-tamo-vritam ahan phalguny api krite 'm̃hasi |). King Arjuna, who had been endowed with miraculous powers, took Rāvana prisoner, then released him, and afterwards carried away by force Jamadagni's cow and calf. Parasurama, in revenge, after a terrible battle, and the defeat of the king's army, cut off Arjuna's arms and head, and recovered the cow and calf. When his father was informed of the king's death, he said to Paraśurāma: "Rāma, Rāma, thou hast committed sin, in that thou hast causelessly slain the lord of men, who is composed of all the deities.243 It is by longsuffering that we, the Brāhmans, have acquired respect; the same means whereby the deity, the instructor of all worlds, attained the highest rank of godhead. By

²⁴¹ It will be observed that there are some varieties of reading in the verse, as given in the two Brāhmaṇas. Manda āsitha in the S'. P. Br. looks like a corruption of the mām didāsitha of the Aitareya. The story of Arjuna, Parasurāma, and the Kshattriyas is briefly told again in the Āsvamedhika-parvan, but without any new circumstances of particular interest.

²⁴² See above, p. 350, and note 146. None of the passages I have quoted from the Mahäbhärata allude to Paras'urāma being an incarnation of Vishnu.

²⁴³ Compare the passages quoted above in p. 300 from the Vishnu Purāna, and from Manu.

patience the fortune of Brahmā shines like the splendour of the Sun. Hari, the lord, is speedily pleased with those who are patient. The murder of a king who has been formally inaugurated is worse than that of a Brahman. Go and expiate thy sin by visiting holy places, with thy mind intent upon Achyuta (Vishnu)" (ix. 15, 38. Rāma Rāma mahābhāga bhavān pāpam akārashīt244 | abadhīd nara-devam yat sarvadevamayam vrithā | vayam hi brāhmanās tāta kshamayā 'rhanatām gatāh | yayā loka-gurur devah pārameshthyam ayāt padam | kshamayā rochate lakshmīr Brāhmī saurī yathā prabhā | kshaminām āśu bhagavāms tushyate Harir iśvarah | rājno mūrdhābhishiktasya badho brahma-badhād guruh | tīrtha-samsevayā chāmho jahy angāchyuta-chetanah |). On his return from this pilgrimage Rama was desired by his father to kill his mother (on grounds similar to those stated in the account quoted above, p. 450, from the Mahabharata), as well as his brothers, and executed the order; but at his intercession they were all restored to life. During his absence in the forest, his father Jamadagni was slain, and his head cut off, notwithstanding the entreaties of his wife, by the sons of Arjuna, in revenge for the loss of their own father. Paraśurāma, hearing his mother's outcries, hastened back to the hermitage, and laying hold of his axe, proceeded to avenge this outrage: ix. 16, 17. Gatvā Māhishmatīm Rāmo brahma-ghna-vihata-śriyam | teshām sa śīrshabhih rājan madhye chakre mahāgirim | 18. Tad-raktena nadīm ghorām abrahmanya-bhayavaham | hetum kritva pitri-badham kshattre mangalakārini | 20. Pituh kāyena sandhāya śirah ādāya barhishi | sarvadevamayam devam ātmānam ayajad makhaih | 21. Dadau prāchīm diśam hotre brahmane dakshinām diśam | adhvaryave pratīchīm vai udgātre uttarām diśam | 22. Anyebhyo 'vāntara-diśaḥ Kaśyapāya cha madhyatah | āryāvarttam upadrashtre sadasyebhyas tatah param | 23. Tataś chāvabhritha-snāna-vidhūtāśesha-kilvishah | Sarasvatyām brahma-nadyām reje vyabhrah ivāmsumān | 26. Āste 'dyāpi Mahendrādrau nyastadandah prasantadhih | upagiyamana-charitah siddha-qandharva-charanaiḥ | 27. Evam Bhṛigushu viśvātmā bhagavān Harir īśvaraḥ | avatīrya param bhāram bhuvo 'han bahuso nṛipān | "17. He went to the city of Māhishmatī, which had been robbed of its glory by those Brāhmanslayers, and raised in the midst of it a great mountain composed of their heads. With their blood he formed a dreadful river, which struck fear into the impious; justifying his action against the oppressive Kshattriyas by their murder of his father. 20. He then united his father's head to his body, laying it on the sacred grass; and offered a sacrifice to the divine Spirit, who is formed of all the deities. On this occasion he gave the eastern region of the earth to the hotri priest. the south to the brahman, the west to the adhvaryu, and the north to the udgatri. To others he gave the intermediate regions (south-east, south-west, etc.), to Kaśyapa the central; on the upadrashtri he bestowed Āryāvartta, and on the Sadasyas what was beyond. Having then cleansed all his impurity by the avabhritha ablution in the Sarasvatī, the river of Brahmā, he shone like the sun unobscured by clouds. . . . 26. Having laid aside his weapons, he sits to this day in tranquillity of mind on the mountain Mahendra, whilst his exploits are celebrated by the Siddhas, Gandharvas, and Chāranas. Thus did the universal Spirit, the divine lord, Hari, become incarnate in the Bhrigus, and destroy numerous kings who were a burden to the earth." It is singular that sin requiring expiation should be, as it is in this narrative, imputed to Paraśurāma, while he is at the same time declared to have been a portion of Vishnu, the supreme Spirit.

244 So in the Bombay edition. Burnouf's text has the usual form akārshīt.

The story of Parasurama is also told in the Dronaparvan of the Mahābhārata, verses 2427 ff., after those of many other kings and warriors, to illustrate the truth that death must sooner or later overtake even the most pious and distinguished personages. The earlier incidents are briefly narrated; but some of the details, as the slaughter of the Kshattriyas, are dwelt on at greater length than in the other accounts. Some of the victims of the hero's vengeance are described as "haters of Brāhmans" (brahma-dvishām, verse 2431). The Kshattriyas who were slain are described as of various provinces, viz. Kāśmīras, Daradas, Kuntis, Kshudrakas, Mālavas, Angas, Vangas, Kalingas, Videhas, Tāmraliptakas, Rakshovāhas, Vītihotras, Trigarttas, Mārttikāvatas, S'ivis, and other Rājanyas (S'ivīn anyāms cha rājanyān, verse 2437). At verse 2443 the narrative proceeds: Nirdasyum prithivīm kritvā sishţeshţa-jana-sankulām Kaśyapāya dadau Rāmo haya-medhe mahāmakhe | trisapta-vārān prithivīm kritvā niķkshattriyām prabhuķ | ishţvā kratu-śatair vīro brāhmanebhyo hy amanyata | sapta-dvīpām vasumatīm Mārīcho 'gṛihnata dvijaḥ | Rāmam provācha "nirgachha vasudhāto mamājnayā | sa Kaśyapasya vachanāt protsārya saritāmpatim | ishupātair yudhām śreshṭhaḥ kurvan brāhmaṇa-sāsanam | adhyāvasad giri-śreshṭham Mahendram parvatottamam | "2443. Having freed the earth from Dasyus (or robbers), and filled her with respectable and desirable inhabitants, he gave her to Kaśyapa at an aśvamedha. Having twenty-one times cleared the earth of Kshattriyas, and offered hundreds of sacrifices, he destined the earth for the Brāhmaus. The Brāhman, the son of Marīchi (i.e. Kaśyapa), received the earth, and then said to Rāma, 'Depart out of her by my command.' Having repelled the ocean by his arrows, and established the rule of the Brāhmans, Rāma dwelt on the mountain Mahendra.''

The Anuśasanaparvan of the same poem has another "ancient story" about Parasurama, which, like the preceding passage from the Bhagavata Purana, adverts to the pollution incurred by that warrior from his numerous deeds of blood. It begins as follows: verse 3960. Jāmadagnyena Rāmeņa tīvra-roshānvitena vai | trissapta-kritvah prithivī kritā nihkshattriyā purā tato jitvā mahīm kritsnām Rāmo rājīva-lochanah ājahāra kratum vīro brahma-kshattreņa pūjitam | vāji-medham mahārāja sarva-kāma-samanvitam | pāvanam sarva-bhūtānām tejo-dyuti-vivarddhanam | vipāpmā sa cha tejasvī tena kratu-phalena cha | naivātmano 'tha laghutām Jāmadagnyo 'dhyagachhata | sa tu kratu-vareneshtvā mahātmā dakshinavata | 3965. Paprachhagama - sampannan rishin devams cha Bhārgavah | "pāvanam yat param nrīnām ugre karmani varttatām | tad uchyatām mahābhāgāh" iti jāta-ghrino 'bravīt | ity uktāh vedasāstra-jnās tam ūchus te maharshayah | "Rāma viprāh satkriyantām veda-prāmānya-daršanāt | bhūyašcha viprarshi-ganāh prashtavyāh pāvanam prati | te yad brūyur mahāprājnās tach chaica samudāchara | "3960. Rama, son of Jamadagni, having thrice seven times cleared the world of Kshattriyas, and conquered the whole earth, performed the horse-sacrifice, venerated by Brāhmans and Kshattriyas, which confers all objects of desire, which cleanses all creatures, and augments power and lustre; and became thereby sinless and glorious. He did not, however, feel relieved in his mind, but after offering the most excellent of sacrifices, at which presents were bestowed, he (3965) enquired of the rishis skilled in the scriptures, and of the gods, what was that which most perfectly cleansed those men who had committed deeds of violence; for he felt compunction for what he had done. The rishis skilled in the Vedas and Sastras replied, 'Let the Brahmans be the objects of your liberality, as the authority of the Vedas requires: let the Brāhman-rishis be further consulted in regard to the means of lustration; and do whatever these wise men may enjoin." Paraśurāma accordingly consulted Vasishtha, Agastya, and Kasyapa. They replied that a sinner was cleansed by bestowing cows, land, and other property, and especially gold, the purifying power of which was very great. "Those who bestow it, bestow the gods," a proposition which is thus compendiously proved: "for Agni comprehends all the gods; and gold is of the essence of Agni" (verse 3987. Devatās te prayachhanti ye suvarnam dadaty atha | Agnir hi devatāh sarvāh suvarnam cha tadātmakam). In regard to the origin of this precious metal, Vasishtha tells a very long story, which he had heard Prajapati relate, how it was born by the goddess Gangā to Agni, by whom she had been impregnated, and was thus the son of that god. "Thus was gold born the offspring of Jatavedas (Agni). That which is produced in Jambunada is the best, and a fit ornament even for the gods. It is called the chief of gems and of ornaments, the most pure of all pure things, the most auspicious of all auspicious objects; and one with the divine Agni, the lord Prajāpati" (verse 4099. Evam suvarnam utpannam apatyam Jātavedasah | tatra Jāmbūnadam śreshtham devānām api bhūshaṇam | 4001. Ratnānām uttamam ratnam bhūshaṇānām tathottamam | pavitram cha pavitranam mangalanam cha mangalam | yat suvarnam sa bhagavan Agnir īśah prajāpatih |). It must be highly consolatory for those who are disposed to be liberal to the Brāhman, to be assured that the gold which they bestow has such a high mystical, as well as current, exchangeable value. "Paraśurāma," the story concludes, "after being thus addressed by Vasishtha, gave gold to the Brāhmans, and was freed from sin" (verse 4183. Ity uktah sa Vasishthena Jāmadagnyah pratāpavān | dadau suvarnam viprebhyo vyamuchyata cha kilvishāt).

It is interesting to remark how the different distinctive principles of Indian religion and sentiment severally assert themselves in turn, and thus, occasionally, come into conflict with each other, as in the story of Paraśurāma. The primary object of this legend is no doubt to illustrate the vengeance which inevitably overtakes all those who violate the sacredness of the Brāhmanical prerogative, and the meritorious character of those who act as its defenders. No sooner, however, is this end accomplished, and the impious foes of the priesthood swept away again and again from the face of the earth, than a revulsion of feeling takes place, and the higher principles of the sacredness of life, and of the blessedness of mercy, come forward to claim recognition; and a deep sense of the pollution of bloodshed calls aloud for atonement. In the Bhāgavata, as we have seen, Jamadagni imputes it as a crime to the avenger of the Brāhmans that he had slain a king; and even goes the length of declaring that in doing so he had incurred greater guilt than if he had murdered a Brāhman.

In the same book of the Mahabharata, verses 7163 ff., an extravagant description is given of the prerogatives and powers of the Brahmans; and Arjuna is again brought forward, in verses 7187 ff., as at first scouting their pretensions, but as ultimately conceding their unapproachable superiority: "The magnificent and mighty Karttavīrya (Arjuna), possessing a thousand arms, was lord of this whole world, living in Mahishmati. This Haihaya of unquestioned valour ruled over the whole sea-girt earth, with its oceans and continents" (verse 7187. Sahasra-bhuja-bhrit śrīmān Kārttavīryo 'bhavat prabhuh | asya lokasya sarvasya Māhishmatyām mahābalah | sa tu ratnākaravatīm sadvīpām sāgarāmbarām | śaśāsa prithivīm sarvām Haihayah satya-vikramah). He obtained boons from the muni Dattātreya, a thousand arms whenever he should go into battle, power to make the conquest of the whole earth, a disposition to rule it with justice? and the promise of instruction from the virtuous in the event of his going astray. 7196. Tatah sa ratham asthaya jvalanarka-samadyutim | abravid vīryyasammohūt "ko nv asti sadrišo mama | dhairuye viryye yasah-sauryye vikramenaujasa 'pi va'' | tad-vakyante 'ntarikshe vai vāg uvāchāśarīrīnī | " na tvam mūdha vijānīshe brāhmanam kshuttriyad varam | sahito brahmaneneha kshuttriyah śasti vai prajāh" | Arjuna uvācha | kuryām bhūtāni tushto'ham kruddho nāśam tathā naye | karmanā manasā vāchā na matto sti varo dvijah | 7200. Pürvo brahmottaro vādo dvitīyah kshattriyottarah | tvayoktau hetuyuktau tau višeshas tattra drišyate | brāhmaṇāḥ samšritāḥ kshattram na kshattram brūhmanāśritam | śritāh brahmopadhāh viprāh khādanti kshattriyan bhuvi | kshattriyeshv aśrito dharmah prajanam paripalanam | kshattrād vrittir brāhmaṇānām taiḥ katham brāhmaṇo varaḥ | sarva-bhūpradhānāms tān bhaiksha-vrittīn aham sadā | ātma-sambhāvitān viprān sthāpayāmy ātmano vaše | kathitam hy anayā satyam gāyatryā kanyayā divi | vijeshyāmy avaśān sarvān brāhmanāms charma-vāsasah | 7205. Na cha mām chāvayed rāshtrāt trishu lokeshu kaśchana | devo vā mānusho vā 'pi tasmāj jyeshtho dvijād aham | atha brahmottaram lokam karishye kshattriyottaram | na hi me samyuge kaschit sodhum utsahate balam | Arjunasya vachah śrutvā vitrastā 'bhūd niśācharī | athainam antarikshasthas tato Vāyur abhāshata | "tyajainam kalusham bhāvam brāhmanebhyo namaskuru | eteshām kurvatah pāpam rāshtra-kshobho bhavishyati | atha vā tvām mahīpāla samayishyanti vai dvijāh | nirasishyanti te rāshtrād hatotsāham mahābalāh" | 7210. Tam rājā "kas tvam" ity āha tatas tam prāha Mārutah | " Vāyur vai deva-dūto 'smi hitam tvām prabravīmy aham" | Arjunah uvācha | "aho tvayā 'dya vipreshu bhaktirāgah pradaršitah | yādrišam prithivī-bhūtam tādrišam brūhi vai dvijam | vāyor vā sadrišam kinchid brūhi tvam bvāhmanottamam | apām vai sadriśo vahnih sūryyasya nabhaso 'pi vā | "Then ascending his chariot glorious as the resplendent sun, he exclaimed in the intoxication of his prowess, 'Who is like me in fortitude, courage, fame, heroism, energy, and vigour?' At the end of this speech a bodiless voice in the sky addressed him: 'Thou knowest not, o fool, that a Brahman is better than a Kshattriya. It is with the help of the Brahman that the Kshattriya rules his subjects.' Arjuna answers: 'If I am pleased, I can create, or, if displeased, annihilate, living beings; and no Brāhman is superior to me in act, thought, or word. The first proposition is that the Brāhmans are superior; the second that the Kshattriyas are superior; both of these thou hast stated with their grounds, but there is a difference between them (in point of force). The Brāhmans are dependant on the Kshattriyas, and not the Kshattriyas on the Brāhmans; and the Kshattriyas are eaten up by the Brāhmans, who wait upon them, and only make the Vedas a pretence. Justice, the protection of the people, has its seat in the Kshattriyas. From them the Brahmans derive their livelihood: how then can the latter be superior? I always keep in subjection to myself those Brāhmans, the chief of all beings, who subsist on alms, and who have a high opinion of themselves. For truth was spoken by that female the Gayatri in the sky. I shall subdue all those unruly Brāhmans clad in hides. 7200. No one in the three worlds, god or man, can hurl me from my royal authority; wherefore I am superior to any Brahman. Now shall I turn the world in which Brahmans have the upper hand into a place where Kshattriyas shall have the upper hand: for no one dares to encounter my force in battle.' Hearing this speech of Arjuna, the female roving in the night became alarmed. Then Vayu, hovering in the air, said to Arjuna: 'Abandon this sinful disposition, and do obeisance to the Brahmans. If thou shalt do them wrong, thy kingdom shall be convulsed. They will subdue thee: those powerful men will humble thee, and expel thee from thy country.' The king asks him, 'Who art thou?' Vāyu replies, 'I am Vāyu, the messenger of the gods, and tell thee what is for thy benefit.' Arjuna rejoins, 'Oh, thou displayest to-day a great warmth of devotion to the Brahmans. But say that a Brahman is like (any other) earth-born creature. Or say that this most excellent Brahman is something like the wind. But fire is like the waters, or the sun, or the sky." "245 Vayu, however, goes on to answer this spirited banter by adducing various instances in which the superiority or terrible power of the Brähmans had been manifested: 7124. Tyaktrā mahītram bhūmis tu sparddhayā 'nga-nripasya ha | nāśam jagāma täm vipro vyashtambhayata Kāśyapah | "The earth, being offended with king Anga, had abandoned her form and become destroyed: but the Brahman Kasyapa supported her." This is afterwards told more at length, verse 7232: Imām bhūmim dvijātibhyo ditsur vai dakshinām purā | Ango nāma nripo rājams tatas chintām mahī yayau | "dhāranīm sarva-bhūtānām ayam prāpya varo nripah | katham ichhati mām dātum dvijebhyo Brahmanah sutām | sā 'ham tyaktvā gamishyāmi bhūmitvam Brahmanah padam | ayam̃ sa-rāshtro nripatir mā bhūd" iti tato 'gamat | 7235. Tatas tūm Kaśyapo drishtvā vrajantīm prithivīm tadā | praviveša mahīm sadyo muktrā "tmānam samāhitah | riddhā sā sarvato jajne trinaushadhi-samanritā | 7238. Athāgamya mahārāja namaskritya cha Kaśyapam | prithivī Kūśyapī jajne sutā tasya mahātmanah | esha rajann idriśo vai brahmanah Kaśyapo 'bhavat | anyam prabrūhi vā tvam cha Kasyapāt kehattriyam varam | "King Anga wished to bestow this earth on the Brahmans as a sacrificial fee. The earth then reflected, 'How does this excellent king, after having obtained me, the daughter of Brahmā, and the supporter of all creatures, desire to give me to the Brāhmans? I shall abandon my earthly form, and depart to the world of Brahmā. Let this king be without any realm.' Accordingly she departed. 7235. Beholding her going away, Kaśyapa, sunk in contemplation, entered into her, leaving his own body. She then became replenished, and covered with grass and plants, etc., etc. 7238. She afterwards came and did obeisance to Kaśyapa, and became his daughter. Such was the Brāhman Kaśyapa: Declare, on your part, any Kshattriya who has been superior to him."

²⁴⁵ The drift of the last line is not very clear, unless it be a reply by anticipation to line 225, which will be found a little further on.

Further illustrations of the tremendous power of the Brāhmans are the following:

7215. Apibat tejasā hy āpah svayam evāngirāh purā | sa tāh piban kshīram iva nātripyata mahāmanāh | apūrayad mahaughena mahīm sarvăm cha parthiva | tasminn aham cha kruddhe vai jagat tyaktvā tato gatah | vyatishtham agnihotre cha chiram Angiraso bhayāt | atha śaptaś cha bhagavān Gautamena Purandarah | Ahalyām kāmayāno vai dharmārtham cha na himsitah | yathā samudro nripate pūrno mrishtas cha vārinā | brāhmanair abhisaptah san babhūva lavanodakah | 7223. Dandakānām mahad rājyam brāhmanena vināsitam | Tālajangham mahākshattram Aurvenaikena nāsitam | 7225. Agnim tvam yajase nityam kasmād brāhmanam Arjuna | sa hi sarvasya lokasya havya-vāt kim na vetsi tam | 7241, Bhadrā Somasya duhitā rūpena paramā matā | yasyās tulyam patim Somah Utathyam samapasyata | sā cha tīvram tapas tepe mahābhāgā yaśasvinī \ Utathyārthe tu chārvāngī param niyamam āsthitā | tatah āhūya sotathyam dadāv Atrir yasasvinīm | bhāryyārthe sa tu jagrāha vidhivad bhūri-dakshinah | tām tv akāmayata śrīmān Varunah pūrvam eva ha | sa chāgamya vanaprastham Yamunāyām jahāra tām | 7245. Jalesvaras tu hritvā tām anayat svapuram prati l paramādbhuta-sankāśam shat-sahasra-śatam hradam | na hi ramyataram kinchit tasmād anyat purottamam | prāsādair apsarobhiś cha divyaih kāmaiś cha śobhitam | tatra devas tayā sārddham reme rājan jaleśvarah | athākhyātam Utathyāya tatah patny-avamarddanam | tach chhrutvā Nāradāt sarvam Utathyo Nāradam tadā | provācha "gachha brūhi tvam Varunam parusham vachah | madvākyād muncha me bhāryyām kasmāt tām hritavān asi | lokapālo 'si lokānām na lokasya vilumpakah | Somena duttā me bhāryyā tvayā chāpahritā 'dya vai" | 7251. Iti śrutvā vachas tasya tatas tam Varuno 'bravīt | "mamaishā supriyā bhīrur nainām utsrashţum utsahe" | ity ukto Varunenātha Nāradaḥ prāpya vai munim | Utathyam abravīd vākyam nātihṛishta-manāḥ iva | "gale grihītvā kshipto 'smi Varunena mahāmune | na prayachhati te bharyyam yat te karyyam kurushva tat" | Naradasya vachah śrutva kruddhah prājvalad Angirāh | 7255. Apibat tejasā vāri vishtabhya sa mahātapāḥ | pīyamāne tu sarvasmims toye vai salilesvaraḥ | suhridbhiḥ kshobhyamāno vai naivāmunchata tām tadā | tatah kruddho'bravīd bhūmim Utathyo brāhmanottamāh | daršayasva chhalam bhadre shat-sahasraśatam hradam | tatas tad īrinam jātam samudras chāvasarpitah | tasmād deśān nadīm chaira provāchāsau dvijottamaļ \ "adriśyā gachha bhīru tvam Sarasvati marūn prati | apunyah esha bhavatu deśas tyaktas tvayū śubłe" | tasmin samśoshite deśe Bhadram adaya varipah | 7260. Adadat śaranam gatvā bhāryyām Āngirasāya vai | pratigrihya tu tām bhāryyām Utathyah sumanā 'bhavat | mumocha cha jagad duḥkhād Varunam chaiva Haihaya | 7262. Mamaishā tapasā prāptā krośatas te jalādhipa | 7263. esha rajann īdriśo vai Utathyo brāhmanottamah | bravīmy aham brūhi vā tvam Utathyāt kshattriyam varam |

"Angiras, too, himself formerly drank up the waters by his own might. Drinking them up like milk he was not satisfied: and filled the whole earth with a great flood. When he was thus wroth, I abandoned the world and departed, and dwelt for a long time in the agnihotra. The divine Purandara (Indra), who had a passion for Ahalyā, was cursed by (her husband) Gautama; but, from motives of religion, he was not injured. The sea, which is filled and purified by water, being cursed by the Brāhmans, became salt." 7223. The great king-

246 See above pp. 121 and 310; and also pp. 107-113. In this same Anusāsana Parva, verses 2262 ff., there is found another story (told to illustrate the frailty of the female sex) of Indra being enamoured of Ruchi, the wife of the rishi Devasarman, and of the method which that sage's disciple, Vipula, (to whose care his preceptor's wife had been entrusted during her husband's absence,) devised to preserve his charge from being corrupted by the licentious immortal who was in the habit of assuming manifold Protean disguises in order to carry out his unworthy designs, and to save the female from being "licked up by the king of the gods, as a mischievous dog licks up the butter deposited at the sacrifice" (Yathā Ruchim nāvalihed devendro Bhrigu-sattama | kratāv upahite nyastam haviķ šveva durātmavān), a respectful comparison, truly, to be applied to the chief of the Indian pantheon! The plan which Vipula adopted to save the virtue of his master's wife against her will was to take possession of her body with his own spirit, and to restrain her movements by the force of Yoga, and compel her to say the contrary of what she desired. The story ends by his re-entering his own body, reproaching Indra with his disgraceful behaviour, and compelling him to retire abashed.

dom of the Dandakas was overthrown by a Brāhman; and the great Kshattriya family of the Tālajanghas was destroyed by Aurva alone. 7225. And why dost thou, o Arjuna, worship Agni (who is) a Brāhman? for knowest thou not that he bears the oblations of the whole world?" The story of Utathya, of the race of Angiras, is afterwards told: "7241. Bhadrā was the daughter of Soma, and considered to be a a person of great beauty. Soma regarded Utathya as a fitting husband for her. She practised severe austerities in order to gain him. Atri (the father of Soma, according to the Vishnu Purāna, Wilson, 1st ed. p. 392) then sent for Utathya, and gave her to him, and he married her in due form, presenting large gifts. 7245. The god Varuna, however, who had formerly been enamoured of her, came and carried her off from the abode of the hermit, who was living on the banks of the Yamuna, and took her to his own city, to a very wonderful lake of six hundred thousand (yojanas). No city was more delightful than that, adorned as it was by palaces and apsarases, and rich in celestial objects of enjoyment. There the god enjoyed her society. His wife's dishonour being made known to Utathya by Nārada, he requested the latter to go and deliver a severe message to Varuna: 'I command thee to let my wife go, who was given to me by Soma; wherefore hast thou carried her away? Thou art a guardian of the world, not a robber.'... 7251. Varuna answered, 'She is my beloved; I cannot bear to give her up.' Nārada, in no very gratified humour, reported this answer to Utathya, and said, 'Varuna took me by the throat, and cast me out. He will not give up thy wife. Take whatever measures thou esteemest proper.' Utathya was greatly incensed (7255), and stopped up and drank all the Still Varuna, though urged by his friends, would not give up the female. Utathya then desired the earth to try some other stratagem; and the lake above described was turned into a salt wilderness, and the ocean swept away. The saint then addressed himself to the courgies and to the river: 'Sarasvatī, disappear into the deserts; and let this land, deserted by thee, become impure.' After the country had become dried up, Varuna submitted himself to Utathya, and brought back Bhadra. The sage was pleased to get his wife, and released both the world and Varuna from their sufferings. He said to the latter (7262) 'This, my wife, was gained by my austerities in spite of thy remonstrances.' 7263. 'Such, o king, I say, was the Brāhman Utathya; tell me of any Kshattriya superior to him."

A story is next told (verses 7265 ff.) of the gods being conquered by the Asuras or Dānavas, deprived of all oblations, and stripped of their dignity, and of their coming to earth, where they saw the sage Agastya, and applied to him for protection. The succour they implored was granted to them by the sage, who scorched the Dānavas, expelled them from heaven and earth, and made them fly to the south. Thus were the gods reinstated in their dominion.

We have then, verses 7280-7290, the following legend of Vasishtha: The Adityas were performing a sacrifice, bearing Vasishtha in their remembrance, when they were attacked by the Dānavas, called Khalins, who came in tens of thousands to slay them:

Verse 7284. Tatas tair ardditāh devāh śaraṇam Vāsavam yayuh | sa cha tair vyathitah Sakro Vaśishtham śaraṇam yayau | tato'bhayam dadau tebhyo Vaśishtho bhagavān rishih | tadā tān duhkhitān jnātvā ānriśamsya-paro munih | ayatnenādahat sarvān Khalinah svena tejasā | 7289. Evam sendrāh Vaśishthena rakshitās tridivaukasah | Brahma-datta-varāś chaiva hatāh daityāh mahātmanā | etat karma Vaśishthasya kathitam hi mayā'nagha | bravīmy aham brūhi vā tvam Vaśishthāt kshattriyam varam |

"The gods being distressed by them, resorted to Indra; and he too, being harassed by them, went to Vasishtha for help. This reverend and benevolent sage gave them all his protection; and being aware of their distress, without any exertion, burnt up all the Dānavas 7289. Thus were the gods, including Indra, preserved by Vasishtha, and the Daityas, even although they had obtained a boon from Brahmā, were slain. Such was the exploit of Vasishtha: can you tell me of any Kshattriya who was superior to him?"

A further tale is told of the prowess of the sage Atri, who interposed to deliver the gods and restore light to the celestial luminaries:

Verse 7292. Ghore tamasy ayudhyanta sahitāh deva-dānavāh | avidhyata śarais tattra Svarbhānuh Soma-bhāskarau | atha te tamasā grastāh vihanyante sma dānavaih | devāh nripati-śārdūla sahaiva Balibhis tadā | asurair badhyamānās te kshīṇa-prāṇāh divaukasah | apaśyanta tapasyantam Atrim vipram tapodhanam | . . . 7297. Te'bruvamś "chandramāh bhava | timira-ghnaś cha savitā dasyu-hantā cha no bhava" | evam uktas tadā 'trir vai tamo-nud abhavat śaśī | apaśyat saumya-bhāvāch cha soma-

vat-priya-darśanah | drishţvā nātiprabham somam tathā sūryam cha pār-thiva | prakāśam akarod Atris tapasā svena samyuge | 7300. Jagad vitimiram chāpi prakāśam akarot tadā | vyajayat śatru-samghāmś cha devānām svena tejasā | 7303. Dvijenāgni-dvitīyena japatā charmavāsasā | phala-bhakshena rājarshe paśya karmāttrinā kritam | 7304. brūhi vā tvam Atritah kshattriyam varam |

"The gods and Dānavas fought together in dreadful darkness; when Svarbhānu pierced with his arrows the sun and moon. Enveloped in gloom the gods were slaughtered by the Dānavas, together with the Balis. Being thus slain and exhausted, the celestials beheld the Brāhman Atri employed in austerities;" and invoked his aid in their extremity. He asked what he should do. They reply, verse 2297: "Become the moon, and the gloom-dispelling sun, the slayer of the Dasyus.' Atri then became the gloom-dispelling moon, and in his character as such looked beautiful as Soma. Perceiving the sun and moon to be shorn of their brightness, Atri threw light upon the conflict, (7300) freed the world from darkness, by the power of his austerefervour, and vanquished the enemies of the gods. . . . 7303. Behold the deed done by Atri, the Brāhman, attended by Agni, the mutterer of prayers, clad in a skin, and living upon fruits. 7304. 'Tell me of any Kshattriya superior to Atri.'"

This story is founded on some verses of the Rig-veda, v. 40, 5: Yat tvā sūryya Svarbhānus tamasā 'vidhyad āsuraḥ | akshetra-vid yathā mudgho bhuvanāni adīdhayuḥ | 6. Svarbhānor adha yad Indra māyāḥ avo divo varttamānāḥ avāhan | gūlham sūryyam tamasā 'pavratena turīyeṇa brahmaṇā 'vindad Atriḥ | 8. Grāvṇo brahmā 'yujujānaḥ saparyyan kīriṇā devān namasopaśikshan | Atriḥ sūryasya divi chakshur ādhāt Svarbhānor apa māyāḥ aghukshat | 9. Yam vai sūryyam Svarbhānus tamasā 'vidhyad āsuraḥ | Atrayas tam anv avindan nahi anye aśaknuvan |

"When Svarbhānu of the Asura race pierced thee, o Sun, with darkness, all worlds appeared like a man who is bewildered in a region which he does not know. 6. When, Indra, thou didst sweep away the magical arts of Svarbhānu, which were operating beneath the sky, Atri discovered by the fourth text the Sun, which had been hidden by the hostile darkness. 8. Applying the (soma-crushing) stones, performing worship, serving the gods with reverence and praise, the priest Atri placed the eye of the Sun in the sky, and dispelled the illusions of Svarbhānu. 9. The Atris discovered the Sun which Svarbhānu had pierced with darkness. No others could."

We have next a curious legend about the sage Chyavana, of the race of Bhrigu:

7306. Aśvinoh pratisamśrutya Chyavanah Pākaśāsanam | provācha sahito devaih "somapāv Aśvinau kuru" | Indrah uvācha | "asmābhir ninditāv etau bhavetām somapau katham | devair na sammitāv etau tasmād maivam vadasva nah | Aśvibhyām saha nechhāmah somam pātum mahāvrata | yad anyad vakshyase vipra tat karishyama te vachah" | Chyavanah uvācha | "pibetām Aśvinau somam bhavadbhih sahitāv ubhau | ubhāv etāv api surau sūryya-puttrau sureśvara | 7310. Kriyatām mad-vacho devāh yathā vai samudāhritam | etad vah kurvatām śreyo bhaved naitad akurvatām" | Indrah uvācha | "Aśvibhyām saha somam vai na pāsyāmi dvijottama | pibantv anye yathākāmam nāham pātum ihotsahe" | Chyavanah uvācha!! " na chet karishyasi vacho mayoktam bala-sūdana | mayā pramathitah sadyah somam pasyasi vai makhe" | tatah karma samarabdham hitaya sahasa 'śvinoḥ | Chyavanena tato mantrair abhibhūtāḥ surā 'bhavan | tat tu karma samārabdham drishtvendrah krodha-mūrchhitah | udyamya vipulam śailam Chyavanam samupādravat | 7315. Tathā vajrena bhagavān amarshākula-lochanah | tam āpatantam drishtvaiva Chyavanas tapasā 'nvitaḥ | adbhiḥ siktvā 'stambhayat tam sa-vajram saha-parvatam | athendrasya mahaghoram so 'srijat satrum eva hi | Mayam namahutimayam vyāditāsyam mahāmunih | 7319. Jihvā-mūlāsthitās tasya sarve devāh sa-vāsavāh | timer āsyam anupraptāh yathā matsyāh mahārnave | te sammantrya tato deva Madasyāsya samīpagāh | abruvan sahitāh S'akram pranamāsmai dvijātaye | Aśvibhyām saha somam cha pibāma vigata-jvarāḥ | tataḥ sa pranataḥ S'akraś chakāra Chyavanasya tat | Chyavanah kritavān etāv Aśvinau soma-pāyinau | tatah pratyāharat karma Madam cha vyabhajad munih i

"Having given a promise to that effect, Chyavana applied, along with the other gods, to Indra, to allow the Aśvins to partake in the soma juice. Indra answered, 'How can they become drinkers of the soma, seeing they are reviled by us, and are not on an equality with the gods? We do not wish to drink soma in their company; but we shall accede to your wishes in any other respect.' Chyavana repeats his request, and urges that the Aśvins also are gods, and the offspring of the Sun. 7310. He adds that it will be well for the gods if they accede to this demand, and ill if they do not. Indra rejoins that the other gods may drink with the Asvins if they please, but he cannot bring himself to do it. Chyavana retorts that if he does not, he shall be chastised by the sage, and made to drink soma (with them) at the sacrifice. A ceremony was then instantly begun by Chyavana for the benefit of the Asvins; and the gods were vanquished by sacred texts. Indra, seeing this rite commenced, became incensed, uplifted a vast mountain (7315), and rushed with his thunderbolt, and with angry eyes, on Chyavana. The sage, however, sprinkling him with water, arrested him with his mountain and thunderbolt. Chyavana then created a fearful open-mouthed monster, called Mada, formed of the substance of the oblation," who is further described as having teeth and grinders of portentous length, and jaws, one of which enclosed the earth and the other the sky: and the gods, including Indra, are said (7319), "to have been at the root of his tongue [ready to be devoured] like fishes in the mouth of a sea monster. Finding themselves int his predicament, the gods took counsel and said to Indra, 'Make salutation to Chyavana, and let us drink soma along with the Asvins, and so escape from our sufferings.' Indra then, making obeisence, granted the demand of Chyavana, who was thus the cause of the Asvins becoming drinkers of the soma. He then performed the ceremony, and clove Mada to pieces."

Does this legend mean that this rishi of the Bhrigu family was the first to introduce the Asvins within the circle of the Arian worship?

Compare the passages from the Satapatha Brāhmana iv. 1, 5, 1 ff., and from the Vanaparvan of the M. Bh. verses 10316 ff. quoted in my "Contributions to a knowledge of the Vedic theogony and mythology," No. II., in the Journ. R. A. S., for 1866, pp 11 ff.; Ind. St. i. 188, and the Āśvamedhikā-parvan of the M. Bh., verses 249 ff., there referred to. The Aśvins are, in different passages of the Rig-veda, as iii. 58, 7, 9; viii. 8, 5; viii. 35, 7-10, invited to drink the soma-juice.

Vāyu relates to Arjuna yet one more instance of the irresistible power of the Brāhmans:

7327. Madasyāsyam anuprāptāh yadā sendrāh divaukasah | tadaiva Chyavaneneha hritā teshām vasundharā | ubhau lokau hritau matvā te devāh duhkhitāh bhrisam | śokārttāś cha mahātmāno Brahmānam śaraṇam yayuh | devāh ūchuh | Madāsya-vyatisiktānām asmākam loka-pūjita | Chyavanena hritā bhūmih Kapaiś chaiva divam prabho | Brahmā uvācha |

7330. Gachhadhvam saranam viprān āsu sendrāh divaukasah | prasādya tān ubhau lokāv avāpsyatha yathā purā | te yayuh śaranam viprān ūchus te "kān jayāmahe" | ity uktās te dvijān prāhur "jayateha Kapān" iti | "bhūgatān hi vijetāro vayam" ity abruvan "dvijāh" | tatah karma samārabdham brāhmanaih Kapa-nāśanam | tat śrutvā preshito dūto brāhmanebhyo Dhanī Kapaiḥ | bhū-gatān brāhmaṇān āha Dhanī Kapa-vacho vathā | "bhavadbhih sadriśāh sarve Kapāh kim iha varttate | sarve vedavidah prājnāh sarve cha kratu-yājinah | 7335. Sarve satyavratāś chaiva sarve tulyāh maharshibhih | śrīś chaiva ramataiteshu dhārayanti śriyañ cha te | 7339. Etaiś chānyaiś cha bahubhir gunair yuktān katham Kapān | 7340. Vijeshyatha nivarttadhvam nivrittānām śubham hi vaḥ" | Brāhmanāh ūchuh | Kapān vayam vijeshyāmo ye devās te vayam smṛitāh | tasmād badhyāh Kapā 'smākam Dhanin yāhi yathāgatam | Dhanī gatvā Kapān āha "na no viprāh priyankarāh | grihītvā 'strāny atho viprān Kapāh sarve samādravan | samudagra-dhvajān drishtvā Kapān sarve dvijātayah | vyasrijan įvalitān agnīn Kapānām prāna-nāśanān | brahmasrishtāh havyabhujah Kapān hatvā sanātanāh | nabhasīva yathā 'bhrāni vyarājanta narādhipa | Hatvā vai dānavān devāh sarve sambhūya samyuge | tenābhyajānan hi tadā brāhmanair nihatān Kapān | athāgamya mahātejāh Nārado 'kathayad vibho | yathā hatāh mahābhāgais tejasā brāhmanaih Kapāh | Nāradasya vachah śrutvā prītāh sarve divaukasah | praśaśamsuh dvijamś chapi brahmanamś cha yaśasvinah

"When the gods, including Indra, were enclosed within the mouth of Mada, the earth was taken from them by Chyavana. The gods then considering that they had lost both worlds, in their distress resorted to Brahmā, and said, 'Since we have been swallowed up in the mouth of Mada, the earth has been taken from us by Chyavana, and the heaven by the Kapas.' Brahmā answered, 'Go speedily, ye gods, with Indra, to the Brāhmans for help. After propitiating them ye shall regain both worlds.' They did so, and the Brāhmans, after ascertaining that the gods would themselves deal with those of their enemies who were on earth, began a ceremony for the destruction of the Kapas. The Kapas upon this sent a messenger to the Brāhmans, to say that they themselves were all, like them, skilled in the Vedas, learned, and offerers of sacrifice, all pure in their observances, and all resembling great rishis, etc., etc. How then should the Brāhmans be able to conquer them? It would be more for their interest to desist from the attempt. The Brāhmans, however, would not be persuaded; and when, in consequence, the Kapas assailed them, they hurled forth fires by which the Kapas were destroyed. The gods themselves conquered the Dānavas, and learning from Nārada what the illustrious Brāhmans had effected, they sang their praises." ²⁴⁷

Hearing of all these testimonies to the terrible might of the Brāhmans, Arjuna at length gives in, saying:

7350. Jīvāmy aham brāhmaṇārtham sarvathā satatam prabho | brahmaṇyo brāhmaṇebhyaś cha praṇamāmi cha nityaśaḥ | Dattāttreya-prasādāch cha mayā prāptam idam balam | loke cha paramā kīrttir dharmaś cha charito mahān | aho brāhmaṇa-karmāṇi mayā Māruta tattvataḥ | tvayā proktāni kārtsnyena śrutāni prayatena cha | Vāyur uvācha | brāhmaṇān kshāttra-dharmeṇa pālayasvendriyāṇi cha | Bhrigubhyas te bhayam ghoram tat tu kālād bhavishyati |

"I live altogether and always for the sake of the Brāhmans. I am devoted to the Brāhmans, and do obeisance to them continually. And it is through the favour of Dattāttreya (a Brāhman) that I have obtained all this power and high renown, and that I have practised righteousness. Thou hast declared to me truly all the acts of the Brāhmans, and I have listened intently." Vāyu then says to him: "Protect the Brāhmans, fulfilling a Kshattriya's function; and restrain your senses. A dreadful cause of apprehension impends over you from the Bhṛigus, but it will only take effect after some time." This last remark may have been introduced to bring this story into harmony with the other legend about the destruction of Arjuna and the Kshattriyas.

The narrative, which has just been quoted, is, as I have already stated, preceded by a panegyric of some length pronounced by Bhīshma on the Brāhmans (verses 7163-7184), of which the following are specimens:

7163. Brāhmaṇānām paribhavaḥ sādayed api devatāḥ | 7164. Te hi lokān imān sarvān dhārayanti manīshiṇaḥ | 7175. Chandane mala-panke cha bhojane'bhojane samāḥ | vāso yeshām dukūlam cha śāna-kshaumājināni cha | 7177. Adaivam daivatam kuryur daivatam vā 'py adaivatam | lokān anyān srijeyus te lokapālāmś cha kopitāḥ | 7179. Devānām api ye devāḥ kāraṇam kāraṇasya cha | 7181. Avidvān brāhmaṇo devaḥ | vidvān bhūyas tato devaḥ pūrṇa-sāgara-sannibhaḥ |

"The prowess of the Brāhmans can destroy even the gods. 7164.

Those wise beings uphold all these worlds. 7175. To them it is indifferent whether they are perfumed with sandal wood or deformed with mire, whether they eat or fast, whether they are clad in silk, or in sackcloth or skins. 7177. They can turn what is not divine into what is divine, and the converse; and can in their anger create other worlds with their guardians. 7179. They are the gods of the gods; and the cause of the cause. 7181. An ignorant Brāhman is a god, whilst a learned Brāhman is yet more a god, like the full ocean." (Compare the similar eulogies in p. 130, above.)

In the Anuśāsanaparvan, sections 52 ff., we have the story of Paraśurāma, in connection with that of Viśvāmitra, yet once more handled. Yudhishṭhira says he is very curious to know something more about these two personages:

2718. Katham esha samutpanno Rāmaḥ satya-parākramaḥ | katham brahmarshi-vam̃śo 'yam̃ kshattra-dharmā vyajāyata | tad asya sambhavam̃ rājan nikhilenānukīrttaya | Kauśikāch cha katham̃ vam̃śāt kshattrād vai brāhmano 'bhavat | aho prabhāvaḥ sumahān āsīd vai sumahātmanaḥ | Rāmasya cha nara-vyāghra Viśvāmitrasya chaiva hi | katham putirān atikramya teshām̃ naptrishv athābhavat | esha doshaḥ sutān hitvā tat tvam̃ vyākhyātum arhasi |

"How was this valiant Rāma, descended from the family of a Brāhman-rishi, born with the qualities of a Kshattriya? Tell me the whole story: and how did a Brāhman spring from the Kshattriya race of Kuśika? Great was the might of Rāma, and of Viśvāmitra. How did it happen that, passing over the sons [of Richīka and Kuśika], this defect showed itself in their grandsons?"

Then there follows a long dialogue related by Bhīshma as having taken place between king Kuśika and the sage Chyavana. The latter, it seems, "foreseeing that this disgrace was about to befall his race [from connection with the Kuśikas], and entertaining, in consequence, after he had weighed all the good and evil, and the strength and weakness (on either side), the desire of burning up that whole family" (verse 2723. Etam dosham purā drishtvā Bhārgavaś Chyavanas tadā | agāminam mahābuddhih sva-vaṃśe muni-sattamaḥ | niśchitya manasā sarvaṃ guṇa-dosham balābalam | dagdhu-kāmaḥ kulaṃ sarvaṃ Kuśikānāṃ tapodhanaḥ |), came to Kuśika. Chyavana is welcomed and treated with great attention, and receives from Kuśika the offer of all his kingdom, etc. The saint, however, does not requite this honour with corresponding kindness, but makes the king and his wife perform many menial offices, rub his feet, attend while he sleeps, bring him food, and draw him in a chariot, while he lacerates their backs with a goad. All this is submitted to so patiently, that the sage is propitiated, addresses them in kindly tones, and touches their wounded bodies with his godlike hands. After creating a magical golden palace, with all the accompaniments of pleasure (2826 ff.), in order to give them a conception of heaven, (2892 ff.) the sage offers to bestow any boon the king may choose; and to solve any of his doubts. Kuśika asks the reason of the sage's unaccountable procedure. Chyavana answers that he had heard from Brahmā that there would be "a confusion of families in consequence of the hostility of Brahmans and Kshattriyas, and that a grandson of great glory and heroism would be born to Kuśika" (verse 2878. Brahma-kshattra-virodhena bhavitā kula-sankarah | pautras te bhavitā rājams tejo-vīryya-samanvitah |); that he had intended in consequence to burn up the race of the Kuśikas, but that the king had come so well out of the severe ordeal to which he had been subjected, that the sage had become thoroughly pacified, and would grant the boon which Kuśika desired:

2897. Bhavishyaty esha te kāmas Kauśikāt Kauśiko dvijaḥ | tritīyam purusham tubhyam brāhmanatvam gamishyati | vamśas te pārthiva-śreshtha Bhrigūnām eva tejasā | pautras te bhavitā vipras tapasvī pāvanadyutiḥ | yah sa-deva-manushyānām bhayam utpādayishyati |

"This thy desire shall be fulfilled; from a Kauśika a Kauśika Brāhman shall arise: in the third generation thy race shall attain to Brāhmanhood by the might of the Bhrigus. Thy son's son shall become a Brāhman, a devotee, splendid as fire, who shall alarm both gods and men." Kuśika being anxious to know how all this was to be brought to pass, Chyavana informs him:

2995. Bhṛigūṇām̃ kshattriyāḥ yājyāḥ nityam etaj janādhipa | te cha bhedam̃ gamishyanti daiva-yuktena hetunā | kshattriyāś cha Bhṛigūn sarvān badhishyanti narādhipa | āgarbhād anukṛintanto daiva-daṇḍa nipī-ditāḥ | tataḥ utpatsyate 'smākam̃ kula-gotra-vivardhanaḥ | Ūrvo nāma mahātejā jvalanārka-sama-dyutiḥ | sa trailokya-vināśāya kopāgnim̃ jana-yishyati | mahīm̃ sa-parvata-vanām̃ yaḥ karishyati bhasmasāt | kanchit kālam̃ tu vahnim̃ cha sa eva śamayishyati | samudre vaḍavā-vaktre prak-

shipya muni-sattamah | 2910. Puttram tasya maharaja Richikam Bhrigu-nandanam | sākshāt kritsno dhanur-vedah samupasthāsyate 'nagha | kshattriyānām abhāvāya daiva-yuktena hetunā | sa tu tam pratigrihyaiva puttram sankrāmayishyati | Jamadagnau mahābhāge tapasā bhāvitātmani | sa chāni Bhriqu-śārdūlas tam vedam dhārayishyati | kulāt tu tava dharmātman kanyām so'dhigamishyati | udbhāvanārtham bhavato vamśasya Bharatarshabha | Gādher duhitaram prāpya pauttrīm tava mahātapāh | brāhmanam kshattra-dharmānam puttram utpādayishyati | 2915. Kshattriyam vipra-karmānam Vrihaspatim ivaujasā | Viśvāmitram tava kule Gädheh puttram sudharmikam | tapasa mahata yuktam pradasyati mahādyute | striyau tu kāranam tattra parivartte bhavishyatah | Pitāmaha-niyoqad vai nanyathaitad bhavishyati | tritiye purushe tubhyam brāhmanatvam upaishyati | bhavitā tvam cha sambandhī Bhrigūnām bhāvitātmanām | 2923. Etat te kathitam sarvam aseshena mayā nripa | Bhrigūnam Kuśikūnām cha abhisambandha-kūranam | yathoktam rishinā chāpi tadā tad abhavad nripa | janma Rāmasya cha muner Viśvāmitrasya chaiva hi

"The Bhrigus have always been the priests of the Kshattriyas; but these will become hostile to each other for a fated reason. The Kshattriyas shall slay all the Bhrigus, even to children in the womb, being oppressed by a divine nemesis. Then shall arise the glorious Urva, 248 like the sun in splendour, who shall augment the glory of our race. He shall create a fire of wrath for the destruction of the three worlds, which shall reduce the earth with its mountains and forests to ashes. After a time he will extinguish the fire, throwing it into the ocean into the mouth of Vadavā (the submarine fire). Into his son Richīka shall 248 Ūrva is here said (verse 2907) to belong to the race of Chyavana, but whether as a near or remote descendant is not stated. In verse 2910 Richīka is said to be the son of Ūrva. In the Ādiparvan, verses 2610 ff., the matter is somewhat differently stated: Ārushī tu Manoh kanyā tasya patnī yaśasvinī | Aurvas tasyām samabhavad ūrum bhittvā mahāyaśāḥ | mahātejāḥ mahāvīryyo bālaḥ eva guṇair yutaḥ | Richīkas tasya puttras tu Jamadagnis tato 'bhavat | "Ārushī, the daughter of Manu, was the wife of the sage (Chyavana); of her was the illustrious Aurva born, having split his mother's thigh. He was great in glory and might, and from his childhood endowed with eminent qualities. Richīka was his son, and Richīka's was Jamadagni." Here Aurva is said to derive his name from having divided his mother's thigh (ūru); and no allusion is made to Ūrva, though the same person appears to be meant. In the passage of the Auusāsana-parvan, however, we have an Ūrva, the father of Richīka, whose patronymic will thus be Aurva; as it is, in fact, in the Vishnu Purāṇa, as quoted above in p. 352.

enter the entire embodied Dhanur-veda (science of archery), for the destined destruction of the Kshattriyas. This science he shall transmit to his great son Jamadagni, whose mind shall be spiritualized by devotion. and who shall possess that Veda. He (Richīka) shall obtain [for his wife a maiden of thy family, to prolong thy race. This great devotee, wedding thy grand-daughter, the daughter of Gādhi, shall beget a Brāhman (i.e. Paraśurāma), fulfilling the functions of a Kshattriya; (2915) and shall bestow on thy family a Kshattriya who shall perform the functions of a Brāhman, Viśvāmitra, the son of Gādhi, an austere devotee, and glorious as Vrihaspati. The two wives shall be the cause of this interchange of characters. According to the decree of Brahmā all this shall so happen. Brāhmanhood shall come to thee in the third generation, and thou shalt become connected with the spiritual-minded Bhrigus." 2923. "Thus (concludes Bhīshma) have I told thee at length the cause of the connection between the Bhrigus and the Kuśikas. All this was accordingly fulfilled in the births of Parasurama and Visvāmitra."

Is this legend intended to account for a real fact? Was Paraśurāma of a sacerdotal tribe, and yet by profession a warrior, just as Viśvāmitra was conversely of royal extraction, and yet a priest by profession?

According to the Vishnu Purāna, iv. 11, 3 (Wilson, 4to. ed. pp. 416, 417), Arjuna was of the race of Yadu, and the ninth in descent from Haihaya, the great-grandson of that prince. It is there said of him:

Kritavīryyād Arjunah sapta-dvīpapatir bāhu-sahasrī jajne yo'sau bhagavad-amśam Atri-kula-prasūtam Dattūttreyūkhyam ārādhya bāhu-sahasram adharma-sevā-nivāraṇam dharmeṇa prithivījayam dharmataś chānupālanam arātibhyo'parājayam akhila-jagat-prakhyāta-purushāch cha mrityum ity etān varān abhilashitavān lebhe cha | tena iyam aśeshadvīpavatī prithvī samyak paripālitā | daśa-yajna-sahasrāṇy asāv ayajat | tasya cha śloko'dyāpi gīyate "na nūṇam kārttavīryyasya gatim yāsyanti pārthivāh | yajnair dānair tapobhir vā praśrayeṇa damena cha" | anashṭadravyatā tasya rājye'bhavat | 4. Evam panchāśīti-sahasrāṇy abdān avyāhatārogya-śrī-bala-parākramo rājyam akarot | Māhishmatyām dig-vijayābhyāgato Narmadā-jalāvagāhana-krīḍā-nipāna-madākulena ayatnenaiva tena aśesha-deva-daitya-gandharveśa-jayodbhūta-madāvalepo'pi Rāvaṇah paśur iva baddhah svanagaraikānte sthāpitaḥ | 5. Yaḥ panchāśīti-varsha-sahasropalakshaṇa-kālāvasāne bhagavan-nārāyaṇāmśena Paraśurāmeṇa upasamhritah |

"From Kritavīrya sprang Arjuna, who was lord of the seven dvīpas [circular and concentric continents of which the earth is composed], and had a thousand arms. Having worshipped a portion of the divine Being, called Dattattreva, sprung from the race of Atri, he sought and obtained these boons, viz. a thousand arms, the power of restraining wrong by justice, the conquest of the earth, and the disposition to rule it righteously, invincibility by enemies, and death at the hands of a man renowned over the whole world. By him this earth, with all its dvīpas, was perfectly governed. He offered ten thousand sacrifices. To this day this verse is repeated respecting him: 'No other king shall ever equal Kartavirya in regard to sacrifices, liberality, austerities, courtesy, and self-restraint.' In his reign no property was ever lost. 4. Thus he ruled for eighty-five thousand years with unbroken health, prosperity, strength, and valour. When he was excited by sporting in the Narmada and by drinking wine, he had no difficulty in binding like a beast Rāvana, who had arrived in Māhishmatī in his career of conquest, and who was filled with arrogance, arising from the pride of victory over all the gods, daityas, and gandharva chiefs, and imprisoning him in a secret place in his capital. At the end of his reign of eightyfive thousand years Arjuna was destroyed by Paraśurāma, who was a portion of the divine Nārāyana."

The Bhāgavata Purāṇa, ix. 23, 20-27, assigns to him the same descent, and relates of him nearly the same particulars. Verse 23 says: Arjunah Kritavīryyasya sapta-dvīpeśvaro 'bhavat | Dattāttreyād Harer aṃśūt prāpta-yoga-mahāguṇah | "Arjuna was the son of Kritavīrya, and ruler of the seven dvīpas. He obtained the great attribute of Yoga (supernatural powers arising from devotion) from Dattāttreya, who was a portion of Hari," etc.

The legend of Parasurāma, as related, is of course fabulous. Not to speak of the miraculous powers which are ascribed to this hero, and the incredible number of the exterminations which he is said to have executed, we cannot even suppose it probable that the Brāhmans should in general have been sufficiently powerful and warlike to overcome the Kshattriyas by force of arms. But the legend may have had some small foundation in fact. Before the provinces of the sacerdotal and military classes were accurately defined, there may have been cases in which ambitious men of the former successfully aspired to kingly dominion, just as scions of royal races became distinguished as priests and sages. But even without this assumption, the existence of such legends is sufficiently explained by the position which the Brāhmans eventually occupied. With the view of maintaining their own ascendancy over the minds of the chiefs on whose good will they were dependent, and of securing for themselves honour and profit, they would have an interest in working upon the superstitious feelings of their contemporaries by fabricating stories of supernatural punishments inflicted by their own forefathers on their royal oppressors, as well as by painting in lively colours the prosperity of those princes who were submissive to the spiritual order.

CHAPTER V.

RELATION OF THE BRAHMANICAL INDIANS TO THE NEIGHBOURING TRIBES, ACCORDING TO MANU AND THE PURANAS.

I now propose to enquire what account the Indian writers give of the origin of those tribes which were not comprehended in their own polity, but with which, as dwelling within, or adjacent to, the boundaries of Hindustan, their countrymen were, in ancient times, brought into continual and familiar contact.

It appears to have been the opinion of Manu, the great authority in all matters regarding the Hindu religion and institutions in their full development, that there was no original race of men except the four castes of Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaisyas, and S'ūdras; and that all other nations were derived from these. His own words (x. 4) are these: Brāhmanah kshattriyo vaisyas trayo varnāh dvijātayah | chaturthah ekajātis tu śūdro nāsti tu panchamah | "Three castes, the Brāhman, the Kshattriya, and the Vaisya, are twice-born; the fourth, the S'ūdra, is once-born; and there is no fifth." On the last clause of this verse Kullūka Bhatta annotates thus: Panchamah punar varno nāsti sankīrna-jātīnām tv aśvatara-vad mātā-pitri-jāti-vyatirikta-jāty-antaratvād na varnatvam | ayam cha jāty-antaropadeśah śāstre samvyavaharanārthah | "There is no fifth caste; for caste cannot be predicated of the mixed tribes, from the fact that, like mules, they belong to another species, distinct from that of their father and mother. reference, which is made in the Sastras to castes other than the four, is merely for the sake of convenience and conformity to common usage."

Accordingly, in the following description which Manu gives in the same chapter of the rise of the inferior castes, they are all, even the very lowest, such as Nishādas and Chandālas, derived from the mixture the four so-called original castes. Thus, in verse 8: Brāhmanād vaiśyakanyāyām ambashtho nāma jāyate | nishādah śūdra-kanyāyām yah parāśara uchyate | "From a Brāhman father and a Vaisva mother springs an Ambashtha: from a Brāhman father and a S'ūdra mother is born a Nishāda, called also Parāśava." Again, in verse 12. S'udrād āyogavah kshattā chāndālas chādhamo nrinām | vaisya - rājanya - viprāsu jāyante varna-sankarāh | "From a S'ūdra, by women of the Vaisya, Kshattriya, and Brāhman castes are born those mixed classes, the Ayogava, the Kshattri, and the Chandala, lowest of men." Again, in verse 20: Dvijātayah savarnāsu janayanty avratāms tu yān | tān sāvitrīparibhrashtan vratyah iti vinirdiset | "Persons whom the twice-born beget on women of their own classes, but who omit the prescribed rites, and have abandoned the gayatrī, are to be designated as Vrātyas."2 In the next three verses the inferior tribes, which spring from the Brāhman Vrātya, the Kshattriya Vrātya, and the Vaiśya Vrātya respectively, are enumerated.

In verses 43 and 44 it is stated: S'anakais tu kriyā-lopād imāḥ

¹ It does not appear how the account of the origin of the Nishāda race from king Vena, given above in pp. 301 and 303, can be reconciled with this theory of Manu; unless recourse be had to the explanation that that story relates to the Svāyambhuva Manvantara. But Manu's narrative seems to refer to the same period. See above, p. 39. If the Vedic expressions panchajanāh and the other corresponding phrases signifying "the five tribes" be rightly interpreted of the "four castes, and the Nishādas," we might understand this as intimating that the Nishādas had at one time been regarded as a distinct race. But the phrase is variously understood by the old Vedic commentators; as has been shewn above, p. 177.

² Manu says, ii. 38 f.: Ā-shoḍasād brāhmaṇasya sāvitrī nātivarttate | ā-dvāvimsāt kshattrabhandhor ā-chaturvimsater visaḥ | ataḥ ūrddham trayo'py ete yathā-kālam asamskritāḥ | sāvitrī-patitāḥ vrātyāḥ bhavanty āryya-nigarhitāḥ | "The gāyatrī should not, in the case of a Brāhman, be deferred beyond the sixteenth year; nor in the case of a Kshattriya beyond the twenty-second; nor in that of a Vais'ya beyond the twenty-fourth. After these periods youths of the three classes, who have not been invested, become fallen from the gāyatrī, Vrātyas, contemned by respectable men (Āryyas)." In the following verse of the Mahābhārata, Anusāsanaparvan, line 2621, a different origin is ascribed to the Vrātyas: Chānḍālo vrātya-vaidyau cha brāhmanyām kshattriyāsu cha | vaisyāyām chaiva sūdrasya lakshyante 'pasadās trayaḥ | "The three outcaste classes are the Chānḍāla, the Vrātya, and the Vaidya, begotten by a S'ūdra on females of the Brāhman, Kshattriya, and Vaisya castes respectively." A Vrātya, therefore, according to this account, is the son of a S'ūdra man and a Kshattriya woman. On the Vrātyas, see Weber's Indische Studien, i. 33, 52, 138, 139, 445, 446, etc.

kshattriya-jātayaḥ | vrishalatvam gatāḥ loke brāhmaṇādarśanena cha | Pauṇḍrakāś choḍra-draviḍāḥ Kāmbojāḥ Yavanāḥ S'akāḥ | Pāradāḥ Pahlavāś Chīnāḥ Kirātāḥ Daradāḥ Khaśāḥ | "The following tribes of Kshattriyas have gradually sunk into the state of Vrishalas (outcasts), from the extinction of sacred rites, and from having no communication with Brāhmans; viz. Pauṇḍrakas, Oḍras, Draviḍas, Kāmbojas, Yavanas, Sakas, Pāradas, Pahlavas, Chīnas, Kirātas, Daradas, and Khaśas."

The same thing is affirmed in the Mahābhārata, Anuśāsanaparvan, verses 2103 f.: Sakāh Yavana-kāmbojās tās tāh kshattriya-jātayah | vrishalatvam parigatāh brāhmaṇānām adarśanāt | Drāvidāś cha Kalindāś cha Pulindāś chāpy Uśīnarāh | Kolisarpāh Māhishakās tās tāh kshattriya-jātayah ityādi | "These tribes of Kshattriyas, viz. Sakas, Yavanas, Kāmbojas, Drāvidas, Kalindas, Pulindas, Uśīnaras, Kolisarpas, and Māhishakas, have become Vrishalas from seeing no Brāhmans." This is repeated in verses 2158-9, where the following additional tribes are named: Mekalas, Lāṭas, Konvaśiras, Saundīkas, Darvas, Chauras, Savaras, Barbaras, and Kirātas, and the cause of degradation is, as in verse 2103, restricted to the absence of Brāhmans. (Then follow the lines (2160 ff.) in glorification of the Brāhmans, already quoted in p. 130.)

The Yavanas are said in the Mahābhārata, Ādiparvan, section 85, verse 3533, "to be descended from Turvasu, the Vaibhojas from Druhyu, and the Mlechha tribes from Anu" (Yados tu Yādavāḥ jātās Turvasor Yavanāḥ smritāḥ | Druhyoh sutās tu Vaibhojāḥ Anos tu mlechha-jātayaḥ|). Is it meant by this that the Yavanas are not to be reckoned among the Mlechhas? Their descent from Turvasu is not however, necessarily in conflict with the assertion of the authorities above quoted, that they are degraded Kshattriyas.

I shall not attempt to determine who the Yavanas, and other tribes mentioned in the text, were.

The verse which succeeds that last quoted from Manu is the following: 45. Mukha-bāhūru-paj-jānām yāḥ loke jātayo vahiḥ | mlechha-vāchaś chāryya-vāchaḥ sarve te dasyavaḥ smritaḥ | "Those tribes which are outside of the classes produced from the mouth, arms, thighs, and feet, [of Brahmā, i.e. Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and S'ūdras,] whether they speak the language of the Mlechhas or of the Āryas, are called Dasyus." The interpretation to be given to this verse turns upon the sense which we assign to "outside" (vahih). Does it mean that the Dasyus were of a stock originally distinct from that of the four primeval castes, and therefore altogether separate from those tribes which sprang from the intermixture of those four castes, or which, by the neglect of sacred rites, apostatized from their communion? Or does it merely mean that the Dasyus became eventually excluded from the fellowship of the four castes? If the latter sense be adopted, then Dasyu will be little else than a general term embracing all the tribes enumerated in verses 43 and 44. The commentator Kullūka understands the word in the latter sense. His words are: Brahmana-kshattriya-vaisyaśūdrānām kriyā-lopādinā yāh jātayo vāhyāh jātāh mlechha-bhāshāyuktāh āryya-bhāshopetāh vā te dasyavah sarve smritāh | "All the tribes, which by loss of sacred rites, and so forth, have become outcasts from the pale of the four castes, Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and Sudras; whether they speak the language of the Mlechhas or of the Aryas, are called Dasyus." His view is confirmed by a short passage in the Aitareya Brāhmana, quoted above (p. 358), where Viśvamitra, speaking to his sons, says: "Let your descendants possess the furthest ends (of the country)," and the author of the Brahmana adds: "These are the numerous border-tribes, the Andhras, Pundras, Sabaras, Pulindas, Mūtibas. Most of the Dasyus are sprung from Viśvāmitra." Here the writer of this ancient Brāhmana connects together certain tribes named either in Manu, or in the Mahābhārata, as degraded Kshattriyas, with the appellation Dasyu, thus intimating that the latter was a general name embracing all the former. This view is further confirmed by the following lines of the Mahābhārata, book ii. verses 1031-2: Daradān saha Kāmbojair ajayat Pākašāsanih | prāguttarām diśam ye cha vasanty āśritya Dasyavah | "The son of Indra conquered the Daradas with the Kāmbojas, and the Dasyus who dwell in the north-east region;" and still more by the annexed verses from the Dronaparvan, of the same epic poem, 4747: Kāmbojānām sahasraiścha Sakānām cha viśāmpate | S'avarānām Kirātānām Varvaranām tathaiva cha | agamya-rūpām prithivīm māmsa-sonita-karddamām | kritavāms tattra S'aineyah kshapayams tāvakam balam | Dasyūnām sa-śirastrānaih śrobhir lūna-mūrddhajaih | dīrgha-kūrchair mahī kīrnā vivarhair andajair iva | "Saineya, destroying thy host, converted the beautiful earth into a mass of mud with the flesh and blood of thousands of Kāmbojas, Sakas, Sabaras, Kirātas, and Varvaras. The ground was covered with the shorn and hairless but long-bearded heads of the Dasyus, and their helmets, as if with birds bereft of their plumes." Here the word Dasyu is evidently a general term for the tribes named just before. Some of these same tribes had previously been called Mlechhas in verses 4716, 4723, and 4745. See also Sabhāp. 1198 f.

There is a passage in the Santiparvan, section 65, lines 2429 ff., which is worth quoting, as it shows that the Brahmans of that age regarded the Dasyus as owing allegiance to Brahmanical institutions.

King Mandhatri had performed a sacrifice in the hope of obtaining a vision of Vishnu; who accordingly appeared to him in the form of Indra (verse 2399). The following is a part of their conversation. Mandhatri asks:

2429. Yavanāḥ Kirātāḥ Gāndhārāś Chīnāḥ S'avara-varvarāḥ | S'akās Tushārāḥ Kankāś cha Pahlavāś chāndhra-madrakāḥ | 2430. Paundrāḥ Pulindāḥ Ramaṭhāḥ Kāmbojāś chaiva sarvaśaḥ | brahma-kshattra-prasūtāś cha vaiśyāḥ śūdrāś cha mānavāḥ | katham dharmāmś charishyanti sarve vishaya-vāsinah | mad-vidhais cha katham sthāpyāh sarve vai dasyujīvinah | etad ichhāmy aham śrotum bhagavams tad bravīhi me | tvam bandhu-bhūto hy asmākam kshattriyānām sureśvara | Indrah uvācha | mātāpitror hi śuśrūshā karttavyā sarva-dasyubhih | āchāryya-guru-śuśrūshā tathaivāśrama-vāsinām | bhūmipānām cha śuśrūshā karttavyā sarva-dasyubhiḥ | veda-dharma-kriyāś chaiva teshām dharmo vidhīyate | 2435. Pitṛiyajnās tathā kūpāh prapās cha sayanāni cha | dānāni cha yathā-kālam dvijebhyo visrijet sadā | ahimsā satyam akrodho vritti-dāyānupālanam | bharanam puttra-dārānām śaucham adroha eva cha | dakshinā sarvayajnānām dātavyā bhūtim ichhatā | pākayajnāh mahārhās cha dātavyāh sarva-dasyubhih | etāny evamprakārāni vihitāni purā 'nagha | sarvalokasya karmāni karttavyānīha pārthiva | Mandhātā uvācha | driśyante mānushe loke sarva-varneshu Dasyavah | lingāntare varttamānāh āśrameshu chaturshv api | Indrah uvācha | 2440. Vinashtāyām danda-nītyām rāja-dharme nirākrite | sampramuhyanti bhūtāni rāja-daurātmyato 'nagha | asankhyātāḥ bhavishyanti bhikshavo linginas tathā | aśramāṇāñ vikalpās cha nivritte'smin krite yuge | asrinvantah purānānām dharmānām paramāh gatīh | utpatham pratipatsyante kāma-manyu-samīritāh | "'The Yavanas, Kirātas, Gāndhāras, Chīnas, Savaras, Varvaras, lindas, Ramathas, Kāmbojas, men sprung from Brāhmans, and from Kshattrivas, persons of the Vaisva and Sudra castes-how shall all these people of different countries practise duty, and what rules shall kings like me prescribe for those who are living as Dasyus? Instruct me on these points; for thou art the friend of our Kshattriya race.' Indra answers: 'All the Dasyus should obey their parents, their spiritual directors, persons practising the rules of the four orders, and It is also their duty to perform the ceremonies ordained in the Vedas. They should sacrifice to the Pitris, construct wells, buildings for the distribution of water, and resting places for travellers, and should on proper occasions bestow gifts on the Brahmans. should practise innocence, veracity, meekness, purity, and inoffensiveness; should maintain their wives and families; and make a just division of their property. Gifts should be distributed at all sacrifices by those who desire to prosper. All the Dasyus should offer costly paka oblations. Such duties as these, which have been ordained of old, ought to be observed by all people.' Mandhatri observes: 'In this world of men, Dasyus are to be seen in all castes, living, under other garbs, even among men of the four orders (āśramas).' Indra replies: 'When criminal justice has perished, and the duties of government are disregarded, mankind become bewildered through the wickedness of their kings. When this Krita age has come to a close, innumerable mendicants and hypocrites shall arise, and the four orders become disorganized. Disregarding the excellent paths of ancient duty, and impelled by passion and by anger, men shall fall into wickedness," etc. In these last lines it is implied that the Brahmanical polity of castes and orders was fully developed in the Krita [or golden] age. idea, however, is opposed to the representations which we find in some though not in all other passages. See above, the various texts adduced in the first chapter.

Sakas, Tushāras, Kankas, Pahlavas, Andhras, Madras, Paundras, Pu-

In the Vishuu Purāna, Bhāratavarsha (India) is said to "have its eastern border occupied by the Kirātas; and the western by the Yavanas; while the middle is inhabited by Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and S'ūdras, engaged in their several fixed occupations of sacrifice, war, trade, etc." (Vishuu Purāna, ii. 3, 7. Pūrve Kirātāḥ yasyānte paśchime Yavanāḥ sthitāḥ | brāhmaṇāḥ kshattriyāḥ vaiśyāḥ madhye śūdrāś cha bhāgašaḥ | ijyā-yuddha-vaṇijyādyair varttayanto vyavasthithāḥ |).

Manu's account of the origin of the Yavanas, Sakas, Kāmbojas, etc., corresponds with the tenor of the following story, which we find in the fourth book of the Vishnu Purāṇa, sect. 3. Bāhu, the seventh king in descent from Hariśchandra (see above, p. 379) was overcome by the Haihāyas and Tālajanghas, and compelled to fly with his queens to the forests, where he died. After his death one of his wives gave birth to a son, who received the name of Sagara. When he had grown up, the youth learnt from his mother all that had befallen his father.

Para. 18. Tatah pitri-rājya-haranāmarshito Haihaya-Tālajanghādi-badhāya pratijnām akarot prāyaśaścha Haihayān jaghāna | S'aka-Yavana-Kāmboja-Pārada-Pahlavāh hanyamānās tat-kula-gurum Vaśishtham śaranam yayuh | 19. Atha etān Vaśishtho jīvan-mritakān kritvā Sagaram āha "vatsa vatsa alam ebhir ati-jīvan-mritakair anusritaih | 20. Ete cha mayā eva tvat-pratijnā-paripālanāya nija-dharma-dvija-sanga-parityāgam kāritāh" | 21. Sa "tathā" iti tad guru-vachanam abhinandya teshām veshānyatvam akārayat | Yavanān apamundita-śiraśo 'rdāhamundān S'akān pralamba-keśān Pāradān Pahlavāms cha śmaśru-dharān nih-svādhyāya-vāshaṭkārān etān anyāmś cha kshattriyān chakāra | te cha nija-dharma-parityāgād brāhmanaiś parityaktāh mlechhatām yayuh |

"Being vexed at the loss of his paternal kingdom, he vowed to exterminate the Haihayas and other enemies who had conquered it. Accordingly he destroyed nearly all the Haihayas. When the Sakas, Yavanas, Kāmbojas, Pāradas, and Pahlavas were about to undergo a similar fate, they had recourse to Vasishtha, the king's family-priest, who interposed in their behalf in these words addressed to Sagara, representing them as virtually dead: 'You have done enough, my son, in the way of pursuing these men, who are as good as dead. In order that your vow might be fulfilled, I have compelled them to abandon the duties of their caste, and all association with the twice-born.' Agreeing to his spiritual guide's proposal, Sagara compelled these tribes to alter their costume. He made the Yavanas shave their heads, the Sakas shave half their heads, the Pāradas wear long hair, and the Pahlavas beards. These and other Kshatriyas he deprived of the study of the Vedas, and the vashaṭkāra. In consequence of their abandonment of their proper duties, and of their rdesertion by the Brāhmans, they became Mlechhas."

See Wilson's Vishnu Purāna, 4to. edit., p. 416 and 418 note. In the note to p. 418 the Āvantyas are mentioned, on the authority of the Väyu Purāna, as being a branch of the Haihayas. In Manu, x. 21, the Āvantyas are said to be descended from Brāhman Vrātyas.

This story is also related in the Harivamsa, from which I extract the concluding part of the narrative:

773. Aurvas tu jātakarmādi tasya kritvā mahātmanah i adhyāpya vedan akhilan tato 'stram pratyapadayat | agneyam tu mahabahur amarair api dussaham | sa tenāstra-balenājau balena cha samanvitah | Haihayān nijaghānāśu kruddho Rudrah paśūn iva | ājahāra cha lokeshu kīrttim kīrttimatām varaḥ | tataḥ S'akān sa-yavanān Kāmbojān Pāradāms tathā | Pahlavāms chaiva nisseshān karttum vyavasitah kila te badhyamānāh vīrena Sagarena mahātmanā | Vasishtham saranam gatvā pranipetur manīshinam | Vasishthas tv atha tān drishtvā samayena mahādyutih | Sagaram vārayāmāsa teshām dattvā 'bhyam tadā | Sagarah svām pratijnām cha guror vākyam niśamya cha | dharmam jaghāna teshām vai vešānyatvam chakāra ha | arddham S'akānām śiraso mundayitvā vyasarjayat | Yavanānām śirah sarvam Kāmbojānām tathaiva cha | Pāradāh mukta-keśāścha Pahlavāh śmaśru-dhārinah | nissvādhyāya-vashatkārāh kritās tena mahātmanā | S'akāh Yavana-kāmbojāh Pāradāh Pahlavās tathā | Kolisarpāh sa-Mahishāh Dārvas Cholāh sa-Keralāh | sarve te kshattriyās tāta teshām dharmo nirākritah | Vasishtha-vachanād rājan Sagarena mahātmanā 1

"Aurva having performed Sagara's natal and other rites, and taught him all the Vedas, then provided him with a fiery missile, such as even the gods could not withstand. By the power of this weapon, and accompanied by an army, Sagara, incensed, speedily slew the Haihayas, as Rudra slaughters beasts; and acquired great renown throughout the world. He then set himself to exterminate the Sakas, Yavanas, Kāmbojas, Pāradas, and Pahlavas. But they, when on the point of being slaughtered by Sagara, had recourse to the sage Vasishtha, and fell down before him. Vasishtha beholding them, by a sign restrained Sagara, giving them assurance of protection. Sagara, after considering his own vow, and listening to what his teacher had to say, destroyed their caste (dharma), and made them change their costumes. He released the Sakas, after causing the half of their heads to be shaven;—and the Yavanas and Kāmbojas, after having had their heads entirely shaved. The Pāradas were made to wear long hair, and the Pahlavas to wear beards. They were all excluded from the study of the Vedas, and from the vashaṭkāra. The Sakas, Yavanas, Kāmbojas, Pāradas, Pahlavas, Kolisarpas, Mahishas, Dārvas, Cholas, and Keralas had all been Kshattriyas; but were deprived of their social and religious position by the great Sagara, according to the advice of Vaśishṭha." Other tribes are mentioned in the following line who seem to have undergone the same treatment.

It would appear from this legend, as well as from the quotations which preceded it, that the Epic and Puranic writers believed all the surrounding tribes to belong to the same original stock with themselves; though they, at the same time, erroneously imagined that these tribes had fallen away from the Brahmanical institutions; thus assigning to their own polity an antiquity to which it could in reality lay no claim. Any further explanations on these points, however, must be sought in the second volume of this work.

In the passages quoted above, pp. 391, 393, and 398 from the Mahābhārata and Rāmāyaṇa, it is stated that Sakas, Yavanas, Pahlavas, etc., were created by Vaśishṭha's wonder-working cow, in order to repel the aggression of Viśvāmitra. It does not, however, appear that it is the object of that legend to represent this miraculous creation as the origin of those tribes. The narrators, if they had any distinct meaning, may not have intended anything more than that the cow called into existence large armies, of the same stock with particular tribes previously existing.

It is not very easy to say whether it is only the inhabitants of Bhāratavarsha (viz. that portion of Jambudvīpa which answers to India) whom the Puranic writers intend to represent as deriving their origin from the four primeval Indian castes. Perhaps the writers themselves had no very clear ideas. At all events the conditions of life are different in the two cases. The accounts which these writers give us of the other divisions of Jambudvīpa, and of the other Dvīpas, or continents, of which they imagined the earth to be composed, and their respective inhabitants, will be considered in the next chapter.

CHAPTER VI.

PURANIC ACCOUNTS OF THE PARTS OF THE EARTH EXTERIOR TO BHARATAVARSHA, OR INDIA.

It will clearly appear from the contents of the present chapter that the authors or compilers of the Purāṇas in reality knew nothing of any part of the world except that immediately around them. Whenever they wander away beyond their own neighbourhood, they at once lose themselves in a misty region of fiction, and give the most unbridled scope to their fantastic imaginations.

The following is the account given in the Vishnu Purāṇa regarding the divisions of the earth, and their inhabitants. Priyavrata, son of Svāyambhuva, or the first Manu (see above, pp. 65 and 72) who is separated from the present time by an enormous interval (see pp. 43 ff. and 298, above), "distributed the seven dvīpas," of which the earth is composed, among seven of his sons" (ii. 1, 7. Priyavrato dadau teshām saptānām muni-sattama | vibhajya sapta dvīpāni Maitreya sumahātmanām).

The Bhāgavata Purāṇa gives us the following account, v. 1. 30. Tad anabhinandan sama-javena rathena jyotirmayena rajanīm api dinam karishyāmi iti saptakṛitvas taraṇim anuparyyakrāmad dvitīyaḥ iva patangaḥ | [evam kurvāṇam Priyavratam āgatya Chaturānanas "tavādhikāro 'yam na bhavati" iti nivārayāmāsa] (The words in brackets are not in the Bombay edition, but are taken from Burnouf's.) 31. Ye vai u ha tad-ratha-charaṇa-nemi-kṛita-parikhātās te sapta sindhavaḥ āsan yataḥ eva kṛitāḥ sapta bhuvo dvīpāḥ |² "Priyavrata, being dissatisfied that only

¹ The original division of the earth into seven continents is assigned to Nārāyaṇa in the form of Brahmā; see above, pp. 51 and 76.

² In this passage we find the particles vai, u, ha, occurring all together as they do in the Vedic hymns and Brähmanas. This circumstance might seem to suggest the half the earth was illuminated at one time by the solar rays, "followed the sun seven times round the earth in his own flaming car of equal velocity, like another celestial orb, resolved to turn night into day. [Brahmā, however, came and stopped him, saying this was not his province.] The ruts which were formed by the motion of his chariot wheels were the seven oceans. In this way the seven continents of the earth were made."

The same circumstance is alluded to at the commencement of the 16th section of the same book, where the king says to the rishi: verse 2. Tattrāpi Priyavrata-ratha-charaṇa-parikhātaih saptabhih sapta sindhavaḥ upaklriptāh | yataḥ etasyāḥ sapta-dvīpa-višesha-vikalpas tvayā bhagavan khalu sūchitaḥ | "The seven oceans were formed by the seven ruts of the wheels of Priyavrata's chariot; hence, as you have indicated, the earth has become divided into seven different continents."

It is clear that this account given by the Bhāgavata Purāṇa of the manner in which the seven oceans and continents were formed does not agree with the description in the Vishṇu Purāṇa, as quoted above in p. 51.

These seven continents are called "Jambu dvīpa, Plaksha dvīpa, S'ālpossibility of the passage, or its substance, being derived from some of the Brahmanas (to which, as we have seen, p. 155 note, the compiler of this Purana was in the habit of resorting for his materials); but the style has otherwise nothing of an archaic caste, and I am not aware that the dvipas are mentioned in any of the Brühmanas. It is also remarkable that the words sapta sindhavah are here used for "seven oceans." This phrase occurs several times in the Vedas. For instance, it is to be found in the Vājasanēvi Sanhitā (of the Yajur-veda), 38, 26. yāvatī dyāvāprithivi yavach cha sapta sindhavo vitasthire | "As wide as are the earth and sky, and as far as the seven oceans extend." The commentator Mahidhara understands the latter in the Puranic sense, as the oceans of milk, etc. (sapta sindhavah sapta samudrāh kshīrādyāh). The hemistich I have quoted from the Vāj. Sanhitā occurs somewhat modified, and in a different connexion, in the Atharva-veda, iv. 6, 2. The same phrase, sapta sindhavah, is to be found also in several places in the first Book of the Rig-veda. (See Benfey's Glossary to Sama-veda, sub voce saptan.) In Rig-veda i. 32, 12, it is said to Indra avasrijah sarttave sapta sindhun | "Thou hast let loose the seven rivers to flow." Sayana understands this of the Ganges and other rivers, seven in number, mentioned in the Rig Veda, x. 75, 5: imam me Gange Yamune Sarasvati S'utudri stomam sachata Parushnya | " Receive this my hymn with favour, o Găngă, Yamunā, Sarasvatī, S'utudrī, with the Parushnī, etc.;" but in this distich ten rivers in all are mentioned. (See Wilson's note to Rig-veda, i. 32, 12, vol. i. p. 88, of his translation). See also hymns 34, 8; 35, 8; 71, 7; and 102, 2, of the first, and 58. 12, and 85, 1, of the eighth Books of the Rig-veda. The "seven rivers" of the Veda are, according to Professor Müller (Chips from a German Workshop, vol. i. p. 63), "the Indus, the five rivers of the Penjab and the Sarasvati."

mali dvīpa, Kuśa dvīpa, Krauncha dvīpa, S'āka dvīpa, and Pushkara dvīpa. They are surrounded severally by seven great seas, of salt water, sugarcane juice, wine, clarified butter, curds, milk, and fresh water" (V.P. ii. 2, 4. Jambū-plakshāhvayau dvīpau S'ālmaliś chāparo dvija \ Kuśah Kraunchas tathā S'ākaḥ Pushkaraś chaiva saptamaḥ 1 5. Ete dvīpāḥ samudrais tu sapta saptabhir āvritāh | lavanekshu-surā-sarpir-dadhi-dugdha-jalaih samam |). Jambu dvīpa is in the centre of all these continents (Wilson, vol. ii. p. 110). It fell to the lot of Agnīdhra, son of Priyavrata, who again divided it among his nine sons (Wilson, ii. 101). In the centre of Jambu dvīpa is the golden mountain Meru, 84,000 yojanas high, and crowned by the great city of Brahmā (ibid. p. 118). There are in this continent six cross-ranges of boundary-mountains, those of Himavat (= Himādri, or Himālaya), Hemakūţa, and Nishadha lying south of Meru; and those of Nīla, S'veta, and S'ringin, situated to the northward. Of these, Nishadha and Nīla are the nearest to Meru, while Himavat and Sringin are at the south and north extremities. The nine Varshas or divisions of Jambu dvīpa, separated by these and other ranges, are Bhārata (India), south of the Himavat mountains, and the southernmost of all; then (2) Kimpurusha, (3) Harivarsha, (4) Ilāvrita, (5) Ramyaka, (6) Hiranmaya, and (7) Uttara Kuru, each to the north of the last; while (8) Bhadrasva and (9) Ketumāla lie respectively to the east and west of Ilavrita, the central region. Bharata Varsha, and Uttara Kuru, as well as Bhadrāśva and Ketumāla,3 are situated on the exterior of the mountain ranges. (Wilson, ii. pp. 114-116, and 123.) The eight Varshas to the north of Bhārata Varsha (or India) are thus described:

V.P. ii. 1, 11. Yāni Kimpurushādīni varshāny ashtau mahāmune | teshām svābhāvikī siddhiḥ sukha-prāyā hy ayatnataḥ | 12. Viparyyayo

³ The Mahābhārata tells us, Bhīshmaparvan, verses 227-8, in regard to the Varsha of Ketumāla: āyur daśa sahasrāni varshānām tattra Bhārata | suvarna-varnāś cha narāh striyas' chāpsarasopamāh | anāmayāh vīta-śokāh nityam mudita-mānasāh | jāyante mānavās tattra nishṭapta-kanaka-prabhāh | "The people there live ten thousand years. The men are of the colour of gold, and the women fair as celestial nymphs. Men are born there of the colour of burnished gold, live free from sickness and sorrow, and enjoy perpetual happiness." The men by the side of the mountain Gandhamādana, west of Meru, are said (v. 231) "to be black, of great strength and vigour, while the women are of the colour of blue lotuses, and very beautiful" (tattra krishāh narāh rājams tejo-yuktāh mahābalāh | striyas chotpala-varnābhāh sarvāh supriya-darśanāh).

na tattrāsti jarā-mṛityu-bhayam na cha | dharmādharmau na teshv āstām nottamādhama-madhyamāḥ | na teshv asti yugāvasthā kshettreshv ashṭasu sarvadā |

"In the eight Varshas, called Kimpurusha and the rest (i.e. in all except Bharata Varsha) the inhabitants enjoy a natural perfection attended with complete happiness obtained without exertion. There is there no vicissitude, nor decrepitude, nor death, nor fear; no distinction of virtue and vice, none of the inequalities denoted by the words best, worst, and intermediate, nor any change resulting from the succession of the four yugas." And again:

ii. 2, 35. Yāni Kimpurushādyāni varshāny ashtau mahāmune | na teshu śoko nāyāso nodvega-kshud-bhayādikam | susthāḥ prajāḥ nirātankāḥ sarva-duḥkha-vivarjjitāḥ | 36. Daśa-dvādaśa-varshānām sahasrāni sthirā-yushaḥ | na teshu varshate devo bhaumyāny ambhāmsi teshu vai | 37. Krita-tretādikā naiva teshu sthāneshu kalpanā |

"In those eight Varshas there is neither grief, nor weariness, nor anxiety, nor hunger, nor fear. The people live in perfect health, free from every suffering, for ten or twelve thousand years. Indra does not rain on those Varshas, for they have abundance of springs. There is there no division of time into the Krita, Tretā, and other ages."

The Uttara Kurus, it should be remarked, may have been a real people, as they are mentioned in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, viii. 14:4

Atha enam udīchyām diśi viśvo devāh shadbhiś chaiva panchavimśair ahobhir abhyashinchann etena cha trichena etena cha yajushā etābhiś cha vyāhritibhir vairājyāya | tasmād etasyām udīchyām diśi ye ke cha parena Himavantam janapadāḥ "Uttara-Kuravaḥ Uttara-Madrāḥ" iti vairā-jyāya eva te 'bhishichyante |

"Then in the northern region during six days on which the Panchaviñsa stoma was recited, the Viśve-devas inaugurated him (Indra) for glorious dominion with these three rik-verses, this yajush-verse, and these mystic monosyllables. Wherefore the several nations who dwell in this northern quarter, beyond the Himavat, the Uttara Kurus and the Uttara Madras, are consecrated to glorious dominion (vairājya), and people term them the glorious (virāj)." See Colebrooke's Misc. Essays, i. 38-43; Dr. Haug's translation of the Ait. Brāhmaṇa; and Prof. Weber's review of this translation in Ind. Studien, ix. pp. 341 f.

⁴ Quoted by Weber in Ind. St. i. 218.

In another passage of the same work, however, the Uttara Kurus are treated as belonging to the domain of mythology:

Ait. Br. viii. 23. Etam ha vai aindram mahābhishekam Vāsishṭhaḥ Sātahavyo'tyarātaye Jānantapaye provācha | tasmād u Atyarātir Jānantapir arājā san vidyayā samantam sarvataḥ prithivīm jayan parīyāya | sa ha uvācha Vāsishṭhaḥ Sātyahavyaḥ "ajaishīr vai samantam sarvataḥ prithivīm mahad mā gamaya" iti | sa ha uvācha Atyarātir Jānantapir "yadā brāhmaṇa uttara-kurūn jayeyam tvam u ha eva prithivyai rājā syāḥ senāpatir eva te 'ham syām" iti | sa ha uvācha Vāsishṭhaḥ Sātyahavyo "deva-kshettram vai tad na vai tad marttyo jetum arhaty adruksho me ā 'taḥ idam dade" iti | tato ha Atyarātim Jānantapim ātta-vīryyam niśśukram amitra-tapanaḥ Sushmiṇah Saivyo rājā jaghāna | tasmād evam-vidushe brāhmaṇāya evam-chakrushe kshattriyo na druhyed na id rāshṭrād avapadyeyad (?) na id vāma-prāṇo jahad iti |

"Sātyahavya of the family of Vasishtha declared this great inauguration similar to Indra's to Atyarāti, son of Janantapa; and in consequence Atyarāti, though not a king, by his knowledge, went round the earth on every side to its ends, reducing it to subjection. Sātyahavya then said to him, 'Thou hast subdued the earth in all directions to its limits; exalt me now to greatness.' Atyarāti replied, 'When, o Brāhman, I conquer the Uttara Kurus, thou shalt be king of the earth, and I will be only thy general.' Sātyahavya rejoined, 'That is the realm of the gods; no mortal may make the conquest of it: Thou hast wronged me; therefore I take all this away from thee.' In consequence Sushmina, king of the Sivis, vexer of his foes, slew Atyarāti son of Janantapa who had been bereft of his valour and energy. Wherefore let no Kshattriya wrong a Brāhman who possesses such knowledge and has so acted, lest he should be expelled from his kingdom, be short-lived, and perish."

The Uttara Kurus are also mentioned in the description of the northern region in the Kishkindhā Kāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa, 43, 38, Uttarāh Kuravas tatra krita-puṇya-pratiśrāyaḥ | "There are the Uttara Kurus, the abodes of those who have performed works of merit." In v. 57 it is said: na kathanchana gantavyañ kurūṇām uttareṇa vaḥ | anyeshām api bhūtānām nānukrāmati vai gatiḥ | "You must not go to the north of the Kurus: other beings also may not proceed further."

⁵ See Colebrooke's Essays, i. 43; Dr. Haug's translation; and Ind. Stud. ix. 346.

In the same way when Arjuna, in his career of conquest, arrives at the country of the Uttara Kurus in Harivarsha, he is thus addressed by the guards at the gate of the city, M. Bh. Sabhāparvan, 1045:

Pārtha nedam tvayā śakyam puram jetum kathanchana | upāvarttasva kalyāna paryāptam idam Achyuta | idam puram yaḥ praviśed dhruvam na sa bhaved naraḥ | na chāttra kinchij jetavyam Arjunāttra pradriśyate | Uttarāḥ Kuravo hy ete nāttra yuddham pravarttate | pravishţo 'pi hi Kaunteya neha drakshyasi kinchana | na hi mānusha-dehena śakyam attrābhivīkshitum |

"Thou canst not, son of Prithā, subdue this city. Refrain, fortunate man, for it is completely secure. He who shall enter this city must be certainly more than man.... Nor is there anything to be seen here which thou canst conquer. Here are the Uttara Kurus, whom no one attempts to assail. And even if thou shouldst enter, thou couldst behold nothing. For no one can perceive anything here with human senses."

In the Anuśāsanaparvan, line 2841, Kuśika says, on seeing a magic palace formed by Chyavana (see above, p. 475):

Aho saha sarīreṇa prāpto smi paramām gatim | Uttarān vā Kurūn puṇyān athavā 'py Amarāvatīm |

"I have attained, even in my embodied condition, to the heavenly state; or to the holy Northern Kurus, or to Amarāvatī [the city of Indra]!"

"The country to the north of the ocean, and to the south of the Himādri (or snowy range), is Bhārata Varsha, where the descendants of Bharata dwell" (V.P. ii. 3, 1. Uttaram yad samudrasya Himādreś chaiva dakshinam | varsham tad Bhāratam nāma Bhāratī yattra santatih). It is divided into nine parts (bhedāh), Indradvīpa, Kaserumat, Tāmravarna, Gābhāstimāt, Nāgadvīpa, Saumya, Gāndharva, Vāruna; and "this ninth dvīpa," which is not named, is said to be "surrounded by the ocean" ayam tu navamas teshām dvīpah sāgara-samvritah), and to be a thousand yojanas long from north to south. "On the east side of it are the Kirātas, on the west the Yavanas, and in the centre are the Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and Sūdras, following their respective occupations of sacrifice, arms, trade, etc." (The text of this passage, V.P. ii. 3, 7, has been already quoted in p. 485).

⁶ See the second vol. of this work, pp. 332-337, and vol. iv., p. 375.

The Vishnu Purāna contains a very short list of the tribes inhabiting Bhārata Varsha. (See Wilson, vol. ii. pp. 132 f.) It specifies, as the principal, only the Kurus, Pānchālas, the people of Kāmarūpa, the Pundras, Kalingas, Magadhas, Saurāshtras, Sūras, Bhīras, Arbudas, Kārūshas, Mālavas, Sauvīras, Saindhavas, Hūnas, Sālvas, Sākalas, Madras, Rāmas, Ambashthas, and Pārasikas. These tribes seem to be all confined to India and its vicinity.

The praises of Bhārata Varsha are celebrated as follows:

V.P. ii. 3, 11. Chatvāri Bhārate varshe yugāny attra mahāmune | kritam tretā dvāparaś cha kaliś chānyatra na kvachit | 12. Tapas tapyanti yatayo juhvate chāttra yajvinaḥ | dānāni chāttra dīyante paralokārtham ādarāt | purushair yajna-purusho Jambu-dvīpe sadejyate | yajnair yajnamayo Vishnur anya-dvīpeshu chānyathā | 13. Attrāpi Bhāratam śreshtham Jambu-dvīpe mahāmune | yato hi karma-bhūr eshā ato'nyāḥ bhoga-bhūma-yaḥ | attra janma-sahasrānām sahasrair api sattamam | kadachil labhate jantur mānushyam punya-sanchayam | gāyanti devāḥ kila gītakāni 'dhan-yās tu ye Bhārata-bhūmi-bhāge | svargāpavargasya dahe tu bhūte bhavanti bhūyaḥ purushāḥ suratvāt | 14. Karmāny asankalpita-tat-phalāni sannyasya Vishnau paramātma-rūpe | avāpya tām karma-mahīm anante tasmin layam ye tv amalāḥ prayūnti | 15. Jānīma naitat kva vayam vilīne svarga-prade karmani deha-bandham | prāpsyāma dhanyāḥ khalu te manushyāḥ ye Bhārate nendriya-viprahīnāḥ" |

"In Bhārata Varsha, and nowhere else, do the four Yugas, Kṛita, Tretā, Dvāpara, and Kali exist. 12. Here devotees perform austerities, and priests sacrifice; here gifts are bestowed, to testify honour, for the sake of the future world. In Jambudvīpa Vishnu, the sacrificial Man, whose essence is sacrifice, is continually worshipped by men with sacrifices; and in other ways in the other dvīpas. 13. In this respect Bhārata is the most excellent division of Jambudvīpa; for this is the land of works, while the others are places of enjoyment. Perhaps in a thousand thousand births, a living being obtains here that most excellent condition, humanity, the receptacle of virtue. The gods sing, 'Happy are those beings, who, when the rewards of their merits have been exhausted in heaven, are, after being gods, again born as men in Bhārata Varsha; (14) who, when born in that land of works, resign to the supreme and eternal Vishnu their works, without regard to their fruits, and attain by purity to absorption in him. 15. We know not where we shall next attain a corporeal condition, when the merit of our works shall have become exhausted; but happy are those men who exist in Bhārata Varsha with perfect senses."

⁷ The list in the Mahābhārata (Bhīshmaparvan, 346 ff.), is much longer. See Wilson's Vishnu Purāna, vol. ii. pp. 132 f., and 156 ff.

^{8 &}quot;'In other ways,' i.e. in the form of Soma, Vāyu, Sūryya, etc." (Anyathā Soma-vāyu-sūryyādi-rūpah |). Commentator.

To the same effect the Bhagavata Purana says, v. 17, 11:

Tattrāpi Bhāratam eva varsham karma-kshettram anyāny ashṭa-var-shāṇi svargiṇām puṇya-śeshopabhoga-sthānāni bhaumāni svarga-padāni vyapadiśanti | 12. Eshu purushāṇām ayuta-purushāyur-varshāṇam deva-kalpānām nāgāyuta-prāṇānām vajra-samhanana-vayo-moda-pramudita-ma-hāsaurata-mithuna-vyavāyāpavarga-varsha-dhṛitaika-garbha-kalatrāṇām tretā-yuga-samaḥ kālo varttate |

"Of these, Bhāratavarsha alone is the land of works: the other eight Varshas are places where the celestials enjoy the remaining rewards of their works; they are called terrestrial paradises. 12. In them men pass an existence equal to that of the Tretā age, living for the space of ten thousand ordinary lives, on an equality with gods, having the vitality of ten thousand elephants, and possessed of wives who bear one child after a year's conception following upon sexual intercourse attended by all the gratification arising from adamantine bodies and from vigorous youth."

The commentator remarks on verse 11: Divya-bhauma-bila-bhedāt trividhaḥ svargaḥ | tattra bhauma-svargasya padāni sthānāni vyapa-dišanti | "Heaven is of three kinds, in the sky, on earth, and in the abyss. Here the other Varshas are called terrestrial heavens."

It is curious to remark that in the panegyric on Bhārata Varsha it is mentioned as one of the distinguishing advantages of that division of Jambudvīpa that sacrifice is performed there, though, a little further on, it is said to be practised in Sālmali dvīpa also.

It would at first sight appear from the preceding passage (ii. 3, 11) of the Vishnu Purāṇa (as well as from others which we shall encounter below), to be the intention of the writer to represent the inhabitants of Bhārata Varsha as a different race, or, at least as living under quite different conditions, from the inhabitants of the other dvīpas, and even of the other divisions (varshas) of Jambu dvīpa itself. From the use of the word mānushya (humanity) here applied to the inhabitants of Bhārata Varsha, viewed in reference to the context, it would seem to be a natural inference that all the people exterior to it were beings of a different race. Yet in the descriptions of Kuśa dvīpa and Pushkara dvīpa (see below) the words manujāh and mānavāh "descendants of Manu," or "men," are applied to the dwellers in those continents. In the passage of the Jātimālā, moreover, translated by Mr. Colebrooke (Misc. Essays, ii. 179), we are told that "a chief of the twice - born tribe was brought by Vishnu's eagle from S'āka dvīpa; thus have S'āka dvīpa Brāhmans become known in Jambu dvīpa." According to this verse, too, there should be an affinity of race between the people of these two dvipas. It is also to be noted that the descendants of Priyavrata became kings of all the dvīpas, as well as of all the varshas of Jambu dvīpa (see above, pp. 489, 491). And in the passage quoted above, p. 478, from the Vishnu Purana, iv. 11, 3, it is said of Arjuna, son of Kritavīrva, that he was "lord of the seven dvīpas," "that he ruled over the earth with all its dvīpas." If, however, the kings were of the human race, it is natural to infer the same of the people.

But, in a subject of this sort, where the writers were following the suggestions of imagination only, it is to be expected that we should find inconsistencies.

Jambu dvīpa is surrounded by a sea of salt water (Wilson, V.P. ii. 109); and that sea again is bounded on its outer side by the dvīpa or continent of Plaksha running all round it. (V.P. ii. 4, 1. Kshārodena yathā dvīpo Jambu-sanjno 'bhiveshṭitaḥ | sañveshṭya kshāram udadhim Plaksha-dvīpas tathā sthitaḥ). According to this scheme the several continents and seas form concentric circles, Jambu dvipa being a circular island occupying the centre of the system.

Plaksha dvīpa is of twice the extent of Jambu dvīpa. The character and condition of its inhabitants are described as follows:

V. P. ii. 4, 5. Na chaivāsti yugāvasthā teshu sthāneshu saptasu | 6. Tretā-yuga-samah kālah sarvadaiva mahāmate | Plaksha-dvīpādishu brahman S'ākadvīpāntākeshu vai | 7. Pancha-varsha-sahasrāni janāh jīvanty anāmayāh | dharmāh panchasv athaiteshu varnāsrama-vibhāga-jāh |

⁹ Purūravas is said to have possessed thirteen islands (dvīpas) of the ocean (above p. 307).

varnās tattrāpi chatvāras tān nibodha gadāmi te | Aryyakāḥ Kuravaś chaiva Vivāśāh Bhāvinaś cha ye | vipra-kshattriya-vaiśyās te śūdrāś cha muni-sattama |

"In those seven provinces [which compose Plaksha dvīpa] the division of time into Yugas does not exist: but the character of existence is always that of the Tretā age. In the [five] dvīpas, beginning with Plaksha and ending with Sāka, the people live 5000 years, free from sickness. In those five dvīpas duties arise from the divisions of castes and orders. There are there also four castes, Āryyakas, Kurus, Vivāsas, and Bhāvins, who are the Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaisyas, and Sudras," and whose worship is thus described:

9. Ijyate tattra bhagavāns tair varnair Aryyakādibhih | soma-rūpī jagat-srashtā sarvaḥ sarveśvaro Harih | "Hari who is All, and the lord of all, and the creator of the world, is adored in the form of Soma by these classes, the Āryyakas, etc."

The inhabitants of this dvīpa receive different names in the Bhāgavata Purāṇa, being there called (v. 20, 4) "Hansas, Patangas, Ūrdhvāyanas, and Satyāngas, four castes, who, purified from passion and darkness by the touch of the waters of these rivers, live a thousand years, resemble the gods in their appearance and in their manner of procreation, and worship with the triple Veda the divine Soul, the Sun, who is the gate of heaven, and who is co-essential with the Vedas" (Yāsām jalopasparšana-vidhūta-rajas-tamaso Hamsa-patangorddhvāyana-satyānga-sanjnās chatvāro varṇāḥ sahasrāyusho vibudhopama-sandaršana-prajananāḥ svarga-dvāram trayyā vidyayā bhagavantam trayīmayam sūryam ātmānam yajante).

In regard to Plaksha and the other four following dvīpas, the Bhāgavata Purāṇa says, ibid. para. 6, that "their men are all alike in respect of natural perfection as shewn in length of life, senses, vigour, force, strength, intelligence, and courage" (Plakshādishu panchasu purushāṇām āyur intriyam ojaḥ saho balam buddhir vikramaḥ iti cha sarveshām autpattikī siddhir avišesheṇa varttate |).

Plaksha dvīpa is surrounded by a sea of sugar-cane juice of the same compass as itself. ii. 4, 9, Plaksha - dvīpa - pramāņena Plaksha - dvīpah samāvritah | tathaivekshu-rasodena pariveśānukāriņā | Round the outer margin of this sea, and twice as extensive, runs Sālmala dvīpa (verse 11. S'ālmalena samudro 'sau dvīpenekshu - rasodakah | vistara-dvigunenātha sarvatah samvrītah sthitah |). It is divided into seven Varshas, or divisions. Of their inhabitants it is said:

V. P. ii. 4, 12. Saptaitāni tu varshāni chāturvarnya-yutāni cha | Sālmale ye tu varnās cha vasanti te mahāmune | kapilās chārunāh pītāh krishnās chaiva prithak prithak | brāhmanāh kshattriyāh vaisyāh sūdrās chaiva yajanti te | bhagavantam samastasya Vishnum ātmānam avyayam | Vāyubhūtam makha-śreshthair yajvino yajna-samsthitam | 13. Devānām attra sānnidhyam atīva sumanoharam |

"These seven Varshas have a system of four castes. The castes which dwell there are severally the Kapilas, Arunas, Pītas, and Kṛishnas (or the Tawny, the Purple, the Yellow, and the Black). These, the Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and Sūdras, worship with excellent sacrifices Vishnu, the divine and imperishable Soul of all things, in the form of Vāyu, and abiding in sacrifice. Here the vicinity of the gods is very delightful to the soul."

The Bhāgavata Purāṇa says of this dvīpa, v. 20, 11: Tad-varsha-purushāḥ S'rutadhara-vāryyadhara-vasundhareshundhara-sanjnāḥ bhaga-vantam vedamayam somam ātmānam vedena yajante | "The men of the different divisions of this dvīpa, called S'rutadharas, Vīryadharas, Vasundharas, and Ishundharas, worship with the Veda the divine Soul Soma, who is co-essential with the Veda."

This dvīpa is surrounded by a sea of wine of the same compass as itself (v. 13. Esha dvīpah samudrena surodena samāvritah | vistārāch chhāl-malasyaiva samena tu samantatah). The exterior shore of this sea is encompassed by Kuśa dvīpa, which is twice as extensive as Sālmala dvīpa (v. 13. Surodakah parivritah Kuśadvīpena sarvatah | S'ālmalasya tu vistārād dvigunena samantatah). The inhabitants of Kuśa dvīpa are thus described, V.P. ii 4, 14:

Tasyām vasanti manujāḥ saha Daiteya-dānavaiḥ | tathaiva deva-gandharva - yaksha - kimpurushādayaḥ | varnās tattrāpi chatvāro nijānushthāna-tatparāḥ | Daminaḥ S'ushminaḥ Snehāḥ Mandehāś cha mahāmune | brāhmanāḥ kshattriyāḥ vaiśyāḥ śūdrāś chānukramoditāḥ | 15. Yathokta-karma-karttritvāt svādhikāra-kshayāya te | tattra te tu Kuśa-dvīpe Brahma-rūpam Janārddanam | yajantaḥ kshapayanty ugram adhikāram phalapradam |

"In this set of Varshas (of Kuśa dvipa) dwell men with Daityas, Dānavas, Devas, Gandharvas, Yakshas, Kimpurushas, and other beings. There, too, there are four eastes, pursuing their proper observances, Damins, Sushmins, Snehas, and Mandehas, who in the order specified are Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and Sūdras. In order to destroy their right [to reward] derived from the performance of these works, they worship Janārdana in the form of Brahma, and so neutralize this direful merit which brings rewards."

Of Kuśa dvīpa the Mahābhārata tells us, Bhīshmaparvan, verses 455-7: Eieshu deva-gandharvāh prajāścha jagatīśvara | viharante ramante cha na teshu mriyate janah | na teshu dasyavah santi mlechha-jātyo 'pi vā nripa | gaura-prāyo janah sarvah sukumāras cha pārthiva | "In these (Varshas of Kuśa dvīpa), gods, Gandharvas, and living creatures, amuse and enjoy themselves. No one dies there. There are no Dasyus or Mlechhas there. The people are fair, and of very delicate forms." The Bhāgavata Purāṇa, v. 20, 16, says, "The people of this dvīpa are called Kuśalas, Kovidas, Abhiyuktas, and Kulakas" (Kuśa-dvīpaukasah Kuśala-kovidābhiyukta-kulaka-sanjnāḥ |).

Kuśa dvīpa is surrounded by a sea of clarified butter, of the same circumference as itself.

Around this sea runs Krauncha dvīpa which is twice as large as Kuśa dvīpa. The V. P. says, ii. 4, 19: Sarveshv eteshu ramyeshu varsha-śaila-vareshu cha | nivasanti nirātankāh saha deva-gaṇaih prajāḥ | Pushkarāḥ Pushkalāḥ Dhanyās Tishmāś chāttra mahāmune | brāhmaṇāḥ kshattriyāḥ vaiśyāḥ śūdrāś chānukramoditāḥ | "In all these pleasant division-mountains of this dvīpa the people dwell, free from fear, in the society of the gods. [These people are] the Pushkaras, Pushkalas, Dhanyas, and Tishmas, who, as enumerated in order, are the Brāhmans, Kshattriyas, Vaiśyas, and Sūdras." The inhabitants of this dvīpa are called in the Bhāgavata Purāna, v. 20, 22, "... Purushas, Rishabhas, Draviṇas, and Devakas" (Purusharshabha-draviṇa-devaka-sanjnāḥ). This dvīpa is encompassed by the sea of curds, which is of the same circumference as itself. The sea again, on its exterior edge, is surrounded by Sāka dvīpa, 10 a continent twice the size of Krauncha dvīpa.

Of Saka dvīpa it is said in the Vishnu Purāna, ii. 4, 23 ff.:

Tattra punyāh janapadāś chāturvarnya-samanvitāh | nadyaś chāttra mahāpunyāh sarva-pāpa-bhayāpahāh | tāh pibanti mudā yuktāh Jaladādishu ye sthitāh | varsheshu te janapadāh svargād abhyetya me
10 In the M. Bh. (Bhīshmap. v. 408 ff.) S'ākadvīpa comes next after Jambudvīpa.

dinīm | 24. Dharma-hānir na teshv asti na sangharshaḥ parasparam | maryādā-vyutkramo nāpi teshu deśeshu saptasu | 25. Magāś cha Māga-dhāś chaiva Mānasāḥ Mandagāś tathā | Magāḥ brāhmaṇa-bhūyishṭhāḥ Māgadhāḥ kshattriyās tu te | Vaiśyās tu Mānasāḥ jneyāḥ śūdrās teshām tu Mandagāḥ | 26. S'ākadvīpe tu tair Vishṇuḥ sūrya-rūpa-dharo mune | yathoktair ijyate samyak karmabhir niyatātmabhiḥ |

"There there are holy countries, peopled by persons belonging to the four castes; and holy rivers which remove all sin and fear. . . . The people who dwell in these divisions, Jalada, etc. [of Sāka dvīpa], drink these rivers with pleasure, even when they have come to earth from Svarga. There is among them no defect of virtue; nor any mutual rivalry; nor any transgression of rectitude in those seven countries. [There dwell] Magas, Māgadhas, Mānasas, and Mandagas, of whom the first are principally Brāhmans; the second are Kshattriyas; the third are Vaisyas, and the fourth are Sūdras. By them Vishnu, in the form of the Sun, is worshipped with the prescribed ceremonies, and with intent minds."

Of this dvīpa the Mahābhārata tells us, Bhīshmaparvan, verse 410, that the "people there are holy, and no one dies" (tattra punyāh janapadāh na tattra mriyate narah). One of the mountains there is called Syāma (black), "whence men have got this black colour" (verse 420. Tatah śyāmatvam āpannāh janāh janapadeśvara). Dhritarāshtra then says to his informant Sanjaya that he has great doubts as to "how living creatures have become black." Sanjaya promises in the following lines, the sense of which is not very clear, to explain the mystery: 422. Sarveshv eva mahārāja dvīpeshu Kuru-nandana | gaurah krishnaś cha pātango yato varnāntare dvijāh | śyāmo yasmāt pravritto vai tat te vakshyāmi Bhārata | But as he proceeds no further, we lose the benefit of his solution of this interesting physiological problem. The Bhāgavata Purāṇa, v. 20, 28, gives the four classes of men in this dvīpa the names of Ritavratas, Satyavratas, Dānavratas, and Anuvratas (tadvarsha-purushāh Ritavrata-Satyavrata-Dānavratānuvrata-nāmānah).

This Saka dvīpa is surrounded by the ocean of milk as by an armlet. This ocean again is encompassed on its outer side by Pushkara dvīpa, which is twice as extensive as Sāka dvīpa.

Of Pushkara dvīpa it is said, Vishnu Purāna, ii. 4, 28 ff.:

Daśa-varsha-sahasrāni tattra jīvanti mānavāḥ | nirāmayāḥ viśokāścha

rāga-dvesha-vivarijjitāḥ | adhamottamau na teshv āstām na badhya-badhakau dvija | nershyā 'sūyā bhayam rosho dosho lobhādiko na oha | 29. Ṣatyānrite na tattrāstām dvīpe Pushkara-sanjnite | 30. Tulya-veśāś tu manujāḥ devais tattraika-rūpinaḥ | 31. Varnāśramāchāra-hīnam dharmācharaṇa-varjjitam | trayī-vārttā-daṇḍanīti-śuśrūshā-rahitam cha yat | 32. Varsha-dvayam tu maittreya bhauma-svargo 'yam uttamaḥ | sarvasya sukha-daḥ kūlo jarā-rogādi-varjjitaḥ |

"In this dvipa men live ten thousand years, free from sickness and sorrow, from affection and hatred. There is no distinction among them of highest and lowest, of killer and slain; there is no envy, nor ill-will, nor fear, nor anger, nor defect, nor covetousness, nor other fault; there is there neither truth nor falsehood. Men there are all of the same appearance, of one form with the gods. The two divisions of this dvipa have no rules of caste or orders, nor any observances of duty; the three Vedas, the Purāṇas (or, trade), the rules of criminal law and service do not exist. This [dvipa] is a most excellent terrestrial heaven; where time brings happiness to all, and is exempt from decay, sickness, and all other evils."

Of all the dvīpas together, the Mahābhārata says, Bhīshmaparvan, verses 468 ff.:

Evam dvīpeshu sarveshu prajānām Kuru-nandana | brahmacharyyena satyena prajānām hi damena cha | ārogyāyuḥpramānābhyām dvigunam dvigunam tataḥ | eko janapado rājan dvīpeshv eteshu Bhārata | uktāḥ

¹¹ In the same way as Pushkara, the remotest dvīpa, is here described to be the scene of the greatest perfection, we find Homer placing the Elysian plains on the furthest verge of the earth:

άλλα σ' ès 'Ηλύσιον πεδίον και πείρατα γαίης άβανατοι πέμψουσιν, ὅβι ξανθὸς 'Ραδάμανθυς, τῆπερ ἡηΐστη βιοτή πέλει ἀνθρώποισιν. οὐ νιφετὸς, οὔτ' ἄρ χειμὰν πολὸς οὕτε ποτ' ὅμβρος, ἀλλ' αἰεὶ Ζεφύροιο λιγὸ πνείοντας ἀήτας 'Ωκεανὸς ἀνίησιν ἀναψύχειν ἀνθρώπους. Odyssey Δ. 563-568.

"Thee, favoured man, to earth's remotest end,
The Elysian plain, the immortal gods shall send,—
That realm which fair-haired Rhadamanthys sways,
Where, free from toil, men pass their tranquil days.
No tempests vex that land, no rain, nor snow;
But ceaseless Zephyrs from the ocean blow,
Which sweetly breathe and gently stir the air,
And to the dwellers grateful coolness bear."

Janapadāḥ yeshu karma chaikam pradṛisyate | īśvaro dandam udyamya svayam eva Prajāpatiḥ | dvīpānām tu mahārāja rakshams tishṭhati nit-yadā | sa rājā sa śivo rājan sa pitā prapitāmahaiḥ | gopāyati nara-śreshṭha prajāḥ sa-jaḍa-panḍitāḥ | bhojanam chāttra Kauravya prajāḥ svayam upasthitam | siddham eva mahābāho tad hi bhunjanti nityadā |

"Thus in all these dvīpas each country doubly exceeds the former one in the abstinence, veracity, and self-restraint, in the health and the length of life of its inhabitants. In these dvīpas the people is one, and one sort of action is perceivable. Prajāpati, the lord, wielding his sceptre, himself governs these dvīpas. He, the king, the auspicious one (śiva), the father, along with the patriarchs, protects all creatures, ignorant as well as learned." (So there are differences of intellectual condition in these dvīpas after all!) "All these people eat prepared food, which comes to them of itself."

Pushkara is surrounded by a sea of fresh water equal to itself in compass. What is beyond is afterwards described:

V.P. ii. 4, 37. Svādūdakasya parato drišyate loka-samsthitiḥ | dvigunā kānchanī bhūmiḥ sarva-jantu-vivarjjitā | 38. Lokālokas tataḥ śailo yojanāyuta-vistritaḥ | uchchhrāyeṇāpi tāvanti sahasrāny achalo hi saḥ | tatas tamaḥ samāvritya tam śailam sarvataḥ sthitam | tamaś chānḍa-kaṭāhena samantāt parisveshṭitam |

"On the other side of the sea is beheld a golden land of twice its extent, but without inhabitants. Beyond that is the Lokāloka mountain, which is ten thousand yojanas in breadth, and as many thousands in height. It is on all sides invested with darkness. This darkness is encompassed by the shell of the mundane egg." 12

In a following chapter, however, (the seventh) of this same book, the 12 See Manu, i. verses 9 and 12, quoted above, p. 35. The thirteenth verse is as follows: $T\bar{a}bhy\bar{a}\bar{m}$ sa śakalābhy $\bar{a}\bar{m}$ cha divam bhūmi \bar{m} cha nirmame | madhye vyoma diśaś chāshtāv apā \bar{m} sthāna \bar{m} cha śāśvatam | "From these two halves of the shell he fashioned the heaven and the earth, and in the middle (he formed) the sky, and the eight quarters, and the eternal abode of the waters." In regard to the darkness (tamas) with which the mountain Lokāloka is said to be enveloped, compare Manu iv. 242, where the spirits of the departed are said to pass by their righteousness through the darkness which is hard to be traversed (dharmena hi sahāyena tamas tarati dustaram); and Atharva-veda, ix. 5, 1, "Crossing the darkness, in many directions immense, let the unborn ascend to the third heaven" (tīrtvā tamāmsi bahudhā mahānti ajo nākam ā kramatām tritāyam). See Journal Royal Asiatic Society for 1865, pp. 298, note 2, and p. 304.

shell of the mundane egg is said to be outside of the seven spheres of which this system is composed:

V.P. ii. 7, 19. Ete sapta mayā lokāḥ Maittreya kathitās tava | pātālāni cha saptaiva brahmāṇḍasyaisha vistaraḥ | etad aṇḍa-kaṭāhena tiryak chorddhvam adhas tathā | kapitthasya yathā vījam sarvato vai samāvritam |

"These seven spheres have been described by me; and there are also seven Pātālas: this is the extent of Brahmā's egg. The whole is surrounded by the shell of the egg at the sides, above, and below, just as the seed of the wood-apple (is covered by the rind)."

This system, however, it appears, is but a very small part of the whole of the universe:

Ibid. verse 24. Andānām tu sahasrānām sahasrāny ayutāni cha | idrišānām tathā tattra koṭi-koṭi-śatāni cha |

"There are thousands and ten thousands of thousands of such mundane eggs; nay hundreds of millions of millions."

Indian mythology, when striving after sublimity, and seeking to excite astonishment, often displays an extravagant and puerile facility in the fabrication of large numbers. But, in the sentence last quoted, its conjectures are substantially in unison with the discoveries of modern astronomy; or rather, they are inadequate representations of the simple truth, as no figures can express the contents of infinite space.

APPENDIX.

Page 6, line 24.

Professor Wilson's analyses of the Agni, Brahma-vaivartta, Vishnu and Vāyu Purānas, were originally published, not in the "Gleanings in Science," but in the Journal of the Asiatic Society of Bengal, vol. i.; and are reprinted in the 3rd vol. of Wilson's Collected Works, edited by Dr. R. Rost.

Page 37, line 1.

"Abodes of gods." Böhtlingk and Roth in their Sanskrit Lexicon, s.v. nikāya, shew that in other passages, if not here also, the compound word deva-nikāya should be rendered "classes, or assemblages, of gods."

Page 50, line 25.

Compare the passage, quoted below, in the note on p. 115, from the Santiparvan of the M. Bh., verses 6130 ff.

Pages 90 ff.

The representations of the Krita yuga are not always consistent. In the Dronaparvan, verses 2023 ff. a story is told of King Akampana, who lived in that age, and who was yet so far from enjoying the tranquillity generally predicated of that happy time that he was overcome by his enemies in a battle, in which he lost his son, and suffered in consequence severe affliction.

Page 97, note 190.

It is similarly said in the Dronaparvan, verse 2395: Kshatād nas trāyate sarvān ity evam kshattriyo'bhavat | "He (Prithu) became a Kshattriya by delivering us all from injuries." See also Santiparvan, verse 1031.

Page 115, line 13.

The Santiparvan of the M. Bh., verses 6130 ff., gives a similar description of the original state of all things, and of the birth of Brahmā. Bhīshma is the speaker: Salilaikārnavam tāta purā sarvam abhūd idam nishprakampam anākāśam anirdesya-makītalam i tamasā vritam asparšam api gambhīra-daršanam | niššabdam vā 'prameyam cha tattra jajne Pitāmahah | so 'srijad vātam agnim cha bhāskaram chāpi vīryyavān | ākāśam asrijach chorddhvam adho bhūmim cha nairritīm | nabhah sa-chandratāram cha nakshattrāni grahāms tathā | samvatsarān ritūn māsān pakshan atha lovan kehanan i tatah sariram loka-etham ethapayitva Pitamahah | janayāmāsa bhagavān puttrān uttama-tejasah | 6135. Marīchim rishim Attrim cha Pulastyam Pulaham Kratum | Vasishthangirasau chobhau Rudram cha prabhum isvaram | Prachetasas tatha Dakshah kanyah shashtim ajijanat | tāh vai brahmarshayah sarvāh prajārtham pratipedire | tābhyo viśvāni bhūtāni devāh pitri-ganās tatha | gandharvāpsarasas chaiva rakshūmsi vividhūni cha | 6149. Jajne tāta jagat sarvam tathā sthāvara-jangamam | 6150. Bhūta-sargam imam kritvā sarva - loka - pitāmahah \ śāśvatam veda-pathitam dharmam prayuyuje tatah | tasmin dharme sthitäh deväh sahächäryya-purohitäh | ädityäh rasavo rudrāh sa-sādhyāh marud-aśvinah | "This entire universe was formerly one expanse of water, motionless, without æther, without any distinguishable earth, enveloped in darkness, imperceptible to touch, with an appearance of (vast) depth, silent, and measureless. There Pitāmaha (Brahmā) was born. That mighty god created wind, fire, and the sun, the æther above, and under it the earth belonging to Nirriti, the sky, with the moon, stars, constellations, and planets, the years, seasons, months, half-months, and the minute sub-divisions of time. Having established the frame of the universe, the divine Pitāmaha begot sons of eminent splendour, (6135) Marīchi, the rishi Attri, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu, Vasishtha, Angiras, and the mighty lord Rudra. Daksha, the son of Prachetas, also begot sixty daughters, all of whom were taken by the Brahmarshis 2 for the purpose of propagating offspring. From these females, all beings, gods, pitris, gandharvas, apsarases, and various kinds of rakshases, (6149) this entire world, moving and stationary, was produced. 6150. Having formed this creation of living beings, the parent of all worlds established the eternal rule of duty as read in the Veda. To this rule of duty the gods, with their teachers and domestic priests, the Ādityas, Vasus, Rudras, Sādhyas, Maruts, and Aśvins conformed."

¹ And yet it is elsewhere said (Anus asanap. 2161, quoted above in p. 130) that the æther $(\bar{a}k\bar{a}s'a)$ cannot be created.

² Here this word must mean "rishis, sons of Brahma."

Another account of the creation is given in the same book of the M. Bh., verses 7518 ff., where it is ascribed to Vishnu in the form of Govinda, or Keśava (Krishna), who is identified with the supreme and universal Purusha. Resting on the waters (7527) he created by his thought Sankarshana, the first-born of all beings. Then (7529) a lotus sprang from his (either Sankarshana's or Vishnu's) navel, from which again (7530) Brahmā was produced. Brahmā afterwards created his seven mind-born sons, Marīchi, Attri, Angiras, Pulastya, Pulaha, Kratu, and Daksha (7534).

Compare Bhīshmaparvan, verses 3017 ff.

Page 122, note 223.

Compare the passage quoted in the last note from the Santiparvan, verse 6135.

Page 128, line 20.

The Santiparvan, verses 7548 ff. ascribes the creation of the four castes to Kṛishṇa: Tataḥ Kṛishṇo mahābhāgaḥ punar eva Yudhishṭhira | brāhmaṇānām śatam śreshṭham mukhād evāsrijat prabhuḥ | bāhubhyām kshattriya-śatam vaiśyānām ūrutaḥ śatam | padbhyām śūdra-śatam chaiva Keśavo Bharatarshabha | "Then again the great Kṛishṇa created a hundred Brāhmans, the most excellent (class), from his mouth, a hundred Kshattriyas from his arms, a hundred Vaiśyas from his thighs, and a hundred Sūdras from his feet."

Compare Bhīshmaparvan, verse 3029.

Page 128, note 238.

In another place also, verses 6208 f., the Anuśasanaparvan ranks purchitas with Sūdras: Sūdra-karma tu yaḥ kuryād avahāya sva-karma cha | sa vijneyo yathā śūdro na cha bhojyaḥ kathanchana | chikitsakaḥ kāṇḍapṛishṭhaḥ purādhyakshaḥ purchitaḥ | sāñvatsaro vrithādhyāyī sarve te śūdra-sammitāḥ | "He, who, abandoning his own work, does the work of a Sūdra, is to be regarded as a Sūdra, and not to be invided to a feast. A physician, a kāṇḍapṛishṭha (see above, p. 442), a city governor, a purchita, an astrologer, one who studies to no purpose, —all these are on a level with S'ūdras."

Pages 144 ff.

See above, note on pp. 90 ff.

Page 150, line 4.

Compare Dronaparvan, verse 2397.

Page 220, line 14.

I am indebted to Professor Max Müller for pointing out to me two passages in Indian commentators in which Manu is spoken of as a Kshattriya. The first is from Madhusūdana Sarasvati's Commentary on the Bhagavad-gītā, iv. 1. The words of the text are these: S'rī-Bhagavān uvācha | imam Vivasvate yogam proktavān aham avyayam | Vivasvān Manave prāha Manur Ikshvākave'bravīt | evam paramparā-prāptam imam rājarshayo viduḥ | sa kāleneha mahatā yogo nashtah parantapa | sa evāyam mayā te 'dya yogah proktah purātanah | bhakto 'si me sakhā cheti rahasyam etad uttamam | "The divine Being (Krishna) said: I declared to Vivasvat (the Sun) this imperishable Yoga-doctrine. Vivasvat told it to (his son) Manu; and Manu to (his son) Ikshvāku. Thus do royal rishis know it as handed down by tradition. Through lapse of time however it was lost. I have to day therefore revealed to thee (anew) this ancient system, this most excellent mystery; for thou art devoted to me and my friend."

On this Madhusūdana remarks: "Vivasvate" sarva-kshattriya-vam̃savīja-bhūtāya Ādityāya proktavān | "'I declared it to Vivasvat' i.e. to Āditya (the Sun) who was the source of the whole Kshattriya race."

The second passage is from Someśvara's tīkā on Kumārila Bhatṭa's Mīmānsa-vārttika. I must, however, first adduce a portion of the text of the latter work which forms the subject of Someśvara's annotation. For a copy of this passage, which is otherwise of interest, I am indebted to Professor Goldstücker, who has been kind enough to copy it for me.² The first extract refers to Jaimini's Sūtra, i. 3, 3; where the question under discussion is, in what circumstances authority can be assigned to ² See Professor Müller's Anc. Sansk. Lit. pp. 79 f. where this passage is partly extracted and translated. See also the same author's Chips from a German Workshop, vol. ii. pp. 338 ff.

*the Smriti when the Sruti, or Veda, is silent. After some other remarks Kumārila proceeds: S'ākyādi-vachanāni tu katipaya-dama-dānādi vachana-varjjam sarvāny eva samasta-chaturdaša-vidyā-sthāna-viruddhāni trayī-mārga-vyutthita-viruddhācharanais cha Buddhādidhih pranītāni trāyī-bāhyebhyaś chaturtha-varna-niravasita-prāyebhyo vyāmūdhebhyah samarthitāni iti na veda-mūlatvena sambhāvyante | svadharmātikramena cha yena kshattriyena satā pravaktritva-pratigrahau pratipannau sa dharmam aviplutam upadekshyati iti kah samāśvāsah | uktam cha "paraloka-viruddhani kurvanam duratas tyajet | atmanam yo visamdhatte so 'nyasmai syāt katham hitaḥ'' iti | Buddhādeḥ punar ayam evātikramo'lankāra-buddhau sthito yena evam āha "kali-kalusha-kritāni yāni loke mayi nipatantu | vimuchyatām tu lokah" iti | sa kila loka-hitārtha-kshattriyadharmam atikramya brahmana-vrittim pravaktritvam pratipadya pratishedhātikramāsamarthair brāhmanair ananusishtam dharmam bāhyajanān anuśāsad dharma-pīdām apy ātmano 'ngīkritya parānugraham kritavān ity evamvidhair eva gunaih stūyate | tad-anusishtānusārinas cha sarve eva śruti-smriti-vihita-dharmātikramena vyavaharanto viruddhāchāratvena jnäyante | tena pratyakshayā śrūtyā virodhe grantha-kūrinām grahītrācharitrīnām grantha-prāmānya-bādhanam | na hy eshām pūrvoktena nyāyena śruti-pratibaddhānām sva-mūla-śruty-anumāna-sāmarthyam asti | "But the precepts of Sakya and others, with the exception of a few enjoining dispassion, liberality, etc., are all contrary to the fourteen classes of scientific treatises, and composed by Buddha and others whose practice was opposed to the law of the three Vedas, as well as calculated for men belonging mostly to the fourth caste who are excluded from the Vedas, debarred from pure observances, and deluded: -consequently they cannot be presumed to be founded on the Veda. And what confidence can we have that one (i.e. Buddha) who being a Kshattriya,3 transgressed the obligations of his own order, and assumed the function of teachingand the right to receive presents, would inculcate a pure system of duty? For it has been said: 'Let everyone avoid a man who practises acts destructive to future happiness. How can he who ruins himself be of any benefit to others?' And yet this very transgression of Buddha and his followers is conceived as being a feather in his cap; since he spoke thus, 'Let all the evils resulting from the sin of the Kali age fall upon me; and let the world be redeemed.' Thus, abandoning the duties of a Kshattriya, which are beneficial to the world, assuming the function of a teacher which belongs only to the Brāhmans, and instructing men who were out of the pale in duty which was not taught by the Brāhmans who could not transgress the prohibition (to give such instruction), he sought to do a kindness to others, while consenting to violate his own obligations; and for such merits as these he is praised! And all who follow his instructions, acting in contravention of the prescriptions of the Sruti and Smriti, are notorious for their erroneous practices. Hence from the opposition in which the authors of these books, as well as those who receive and act according to them, stand to manifest injunctions of the Veda, the authority of these works is destroyed. For since they are by the above reasoning opposed by the Veda, the inference that they rest upon independent Vedic authority of their own possesses no force."

³ Compare Colebrooke's Misc. Essays, i. 312.

The next passage is from Kumārila's Vārttika on Jaimini's Sūtra, i. 3, 7: Vedenaivābhyanujnātā yeshām eva pravaktritā | nityānām abhidheyānām manvantara-yugādishu | teshām viparivartteshu kurvatām dharma-samhitāh | vachanāni pramānāni nānyeshām iti niśchayah | tathā cha Manor richah samidhenyo bhavanti ity asya vidher vakya-seshe srayate "Manur vai yat kinchid avadat tad bheshajam bheshajatāyai" iti prāyaschittādyupadeśa-vachanam pāpa-vyādher bheshajam | "It is certain that the precepts of those persons only whose right to expound the eternal meanings of scripture in the different manvantaras and yugas has been recognized by the Veda, are to be regarded as authoritative, when in the revolutions (of those great mundane periods) they compose codes of law. Accordingly by way of complement to the Vedic passage containing the precept (vidhi) beginning 'there are these sāmidheni verses of Manu' it is declared, 'whatever Manu said is a healing remedy; ' i.e. his prescriptions in regard to expiatory rites, etc., are remedies for the malady of sin."

⁵ These words are quoted by Böthlingk and Roth, s.v. bheshajatā, as taken from the Panchavinsa Brāhmana, 23, 16, 7. A similar passage occurs in the Taitt. Sanh. ii. 2, 10, 2.

⁴ The Nyāya-mālā-vistara, i. 3, 4, quotes Kumārila as raising the question whether the practice of innocence, which S'ākya (Buddha) inculcated, was, or was not, a duty from its conformity to the Veda, and as solving it in the negative, since cow's milk put into a dogskin cannot be pure (Sākyoktāhimsanam dharmo na vā dharmaḥ śrutatvataḥ | na dharmo na hi pūtam syād go-kshīram śva-dritau dhritam).

From Someśvara's elaborate comment on the former of these two passages I need only extract the following sentences: Etad abhiyuktavachanena dradhayati "uktam cha" | Manos tu kshattriyasyāpi pravakritvam "yad vai kinchid Manur avadat tad bheshajam" iti vedānujnātatvād aviruddham ity āśayah | "This he confirms by the words of a learned man which he introduces by the phrase 'for it has been said.' But although Manu was a Kshattriya, his assumption of the office of teacher was not opposed to the Veda, because it is sanctioned by the Vedic text 'whatever Manu said was a remedy:' Such is the purport."

Page 254, line 12.

Yas tityāja sachi-vidam, etc. This verse is quoted in the Taittirīya Āranyaka (pp. 159 f. of Cal. edit.), which, however, reads sakhi-vidam instead of sachi-vidam. An explanation of the passage is there given by the Commentator.

Page 264, line 14.

Professor Weber considers (Indische Studien, i. 52) that "the yaudhāḥ and the arhantah were the forerunners of the Rājanyas and the Brāhmans." See the whole passage below in the note on p. 366.

Page 268, note 51.

Compare Āśvalāyana's S'rauta-Sūtras, i. 3, 3 and 4, and commentary (p. 22 of Cal. edit.). Prithī Vainya is, as I find from Böhtlingk and Roth's Lexicon, s.v., referred to also in the Atharva-veda, viii. 10, 24. The words are these: Sā udakrāmat sā manushyān āgachhat | tām manushyāh upāhvayanta "irāvaty ehi" iti | tasyāh Manur Vaivasvato vatsah āśīt prithivī pātram | tām Prithī Vainyo 'dhok tām krishim cha sasyam cha adhok | te krishim cha sasyam cha manushyāh upajīvanti ityādi | "She (i.e. Virāj) ascended: she came to men. Men called her to them, saying, 'Come, Irāvatī.' Manu Vaivasvata was her calf, and the earth her vessel. Prithī Vainya milked her; he milked from her agriculture and grain. Men subsist on agriculture and grain."

See Wilson's Vishnu Purāna, vol. i. pp. 183 ff., where Prithu's (this is the Puranic form of the word) reign is described. It is there stated that this king, "taking the lord Manu Svāyambhuva for his calf, milked from the earth into his own hand all kinds of grain from a desire to benefit his subjects" (V.P. i. 13, 54. Sa kalpayitvā vatsam tu Manum Svāyambhuvam prabhum | sve pānau prithivī-nātho dudoha prithivīm Prithuh | 55. Sasya-jātāni sarvāni prajānām hita-kāmyayā).

See also the passage quoted from the Bhāgavata Purāna by the editor Dr. Hall in pp. 189 ff. The original germ of these accounts is evidently to be found in the passage of the Atharva-veda, from which the short text I have cited is taken.

Prithu's reign is also described in the Dronaparvan, 2394 ff., and Santiparvan, 1030 ff.

Page 286, line 8 from the foot.

The Srinjayas are mentioned in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, xii. 9, 3, 1 ff. and 13 (see Weber's Indische Studien, i. 207), as opposing without effect the celebration of a sacrifice which was proposed to be offered for the restoration of Dushṭarītu Paunsāyana to his ancestral kingdom.

Page 345, line 24.

Professor Aufrecht has pointed out to me a short passage in the Taittirīya Sanhitā, iii. 1, 7, 2, in which Viśvāmitra and Jamadagni are mentioned together as contending with Vasishṭha: Viśvāmitra-Jamadagnī Vasishṭhana asparddhetām | sa etaj Jamadagnir vihavyam apaśyat | tena vai sa Vasishṭhasya indriyam vīryyam avrinkta | yad vihavyam śasyate indriyam eva tad vīryyam yajamāno bhrātrivyasya vrinkte | yasya bhūyāmso yajna-kratavaḥ ity āhuḥ sa devatāḥ vrinkte | "Viśvāmitra and Jamadagni were contending with Vasishṭha. Jamadagni beheld this vihavya text, and with it he destroyed the vigour and energy of Vasishṭha. When the vihavya is recited, then the sacrificer destroys the vigour and energy of his enemy. He whose oblations and all attendant ceremonies are superior destroys the gods (of his opponent)."

Page 366, note 164.

In a notice of Lāṭyāyana's Sūtras, in Indische Studien, i. 50, Professor Weber observes: "At the same time I remark here that the presence of Sūdras at the ceremonies, although on the outside of the sacrificial ground, was permitted—a point which results from the fact that during the dīkshā they were not to be addressed (iii. 3). Here and there a Sūdra appears as acting, although in a degraded position. Compare iv. 3, 5: ăryo (i.e. vaiśyah, according to the commentator Agnisvāmin) antarvedi bahirvedi śūdrah | äryābhāve yah kaś cha āryyo varnah (brāhmaņo vā kshattriyo vā, Agnisvāmin). Thus their position, like that of the Nishādas, was not so wretched as it became afterwards. Toleration was still necessary; indeed the strict Brahmanical principle was not yet generally recognized among the nearest Arian races. This is shown by the following fact. Before entering on the Vrātya-stomas, Lāṭyāyana treats, viii. 5, of an imprecatory rite called Syena (the falcon), which is not taught in the Panchavimsa, but in the Shadvimsa (iv. 2). The tribes mentioned by Panini, v. 3, 112 ff., are there described: Vrātīnānām gudhānām puttrān anūchānān ritvijo vrinīta syenasya | "arhatām eva" iti S'āndilyah" | ("Let the learned sons of warriors, who live by the profession of Vrātas, be chosen as priests for the Syena. 'The sons of arhats only 'Should be chosen says S'andilya"). "Whilst," proceeds Prof. W., "in the beginning of the Sūtra nine things are required for a ritvij (priest), viz. that he should be (1) ārsheyah (ā dasamāt purushād avyavachhinnam ārsham yasya, 'able to trace his unbroken descent for ten generations in the family of a rishi'); (2) anūchānah (śishyebhyo vidyā-sampradānam yah kṛitavān, "one who has imparted knowledge to pupils"); (3) sādhucharanah (shatsu brāhmana-karmasv avasthitah prasasta-karmā, one who has practised the six duties of a Brāhman, a man of approved conduct'); (4) vāgmī (eloquent); (5) anyūnāngah (without deficiency in his members); (6) anatiriktangah (without superfluous members); (7) dvesatah (equal in length above and below the navel); (8) anatikṛishṇaḥ; (9) anatiśvetaḥ (na atibālo na ativṛiddhaḥ, 'neither too young nor too old'),-Lātyāyana here contents himself with putting forward one only of these requirements, the second (i.e. that the priest should be 'learned'), as essential. The title Arhat for teacher, which was at a later period used exclusively by the Buddhists, is found in the Satapatha Brāhmana, (iii. 4, 3, 6) and the Taittirīya Aranyaka,8 and

⁶ Nānā jātīyāh aniyata-vrittayah utsedha-jīvinah sanghāh vrātāh | (Patānjali, quoted by Weber) "Vrātas are the various classes of people who have no fixed profession, and live by violence." Vrātena śarīrāyāsena jīvati vrātīnah (Comm. on Pāṇini, v. 2, 21) "He who lives by bodily labour is a vrātīna." The word means "he who lives by the labour usual among Vrātas," according to another comment cited by Weber.

⁷ Arhatām eva varanam karttavyam iti S'āndilyah | "Arhats only are to be chosen, says S'āndilya" (Agnisvāmin, quoted by Weber).

⁸ It also occurs in Ait. Br. i. 15 (see Böthlingk and Roth, s.v.). To his translation of this passage Dr. Hang appends the following note: "The term is arhat, a word is known in the Gana Brāhmana (Pāṇini, v. 1, 124). The Yaudhāḥ and Arhantaḥ are the forerunners of the Rājanyas and the Brāhmans.' According to Professor Weber, Ind. St. i. 207, note, a Sthapati "means, according to Kātyāyana's Srauta Sūtras, xxii. 11, 11, a Vaiśya, or any other person (according to Kātyāyana, i. 1, 12, he may even be a Nishāda) who has celebrated the Gosava sacrifice, after being chosen by his subjects to be their ruler."

Page 378, lines 1-3.

Compare Dronaparvan, verse 2149: nanv eshām nišchitā nishṭhā nishṭhā saptapadī smṛitā |

Page 400, line 9 from bottom.

If further proof of this sense of brahmarshi be wanted, it may be found in the words viprarshi and dvijarshi, which must be regarded as its synonymes, and which can only mean "Brāhman-rishi."

Page 423, line 12, and foot-note.

The same verse with some variations is repeated in the Anuśāsana-parvan, verse 6262: Rājā Mitrasahaś chaiva Vaśishṭhāya mahātmane | Madayantīm priyām bhāryyām datvā cha tridivam gataḥ | "And king Mitrasaha, having bestowed his dear wife Madayantī on the great Vaśishṭha, went to heaven." Here, it will be observed, the name Madayantī is correctly given.

Page 423, line 17.

This stanza is repeated in Anuśāsanaparvan, verse 6250, with the following variation in the second line: arghyam pradāya vidhival lebhe lokān anuttamān well known, chiefly to the students of Buddhism. Sāyaṇa explains it by "a great Brāhman, or a Brāhman (in general)." In reference to another part of the sentence in which this word occurs, Dr. Haug adds: "That cows were killed at the time of receiving a most distinguished guest is stated in the Smritis. But as Sāyaṇa observes (which entirely agrees with opinions held now-a-days), this custom belongs to former yugas (periods of the world). Thence the word goghna, i.e. 'cowkiller,' means in the more ancient Sanskrit books 'a guest' (see the commentators on Pāṇini, 3, 4, 73) for the reception of a high guest was the death of the cow of the house."

Page 436, line 5 from the foot.

I find that two other instances of Brāhmans receiving instruction from Rājanyas are alluded to by Professor Weber, Ind. Stud. x. 117.

The first is recorded in the Satapatha Brāhmana, x. 6, 1, 2 ff.; where it is stated that six Brāhmans, who were at issue with one another regarding Vaiśvānara (Agni), and were aware that king Aśvapati the Kaikeya was well informed on the subject, repaired to him for instruction and requested that he would treat them as his pupils. first asked them 'if they were not themselves learned in the Veda as well as the sons of learned men, and how they could in that case come to consult him' ("Yan nu bhagavanto'nūchānāh anūchāna-putrāh | kim idam" iti). They, however, persisted in their request, when he asked them severally what they considered Vaiśvānara to be, expressed his concurrence in their replies, though all different, as partial solutions of the question, and ended by giving them some further insight into the subject of their enquiry. The second instance is taken from the Chhandogya Upanishad, i. 8, 1, which commences thus: Trayo ha udgīthe kuśalāh babhūvah S'ilakah S'ālāvatyaś Chaikitāyano Dālbhyah Pravāhano Jaivalir iti | te ha ūchur "udgīthe kathām vadāma" iti | 2. "Tathā" iti ha samupaviviśuh | sa ha Pravāhano Jaivalir uvācha "bhagavantāv agre vadatām | brāhmanayor vadator vācham śroshyāmi" iti | "Three men were skilled in the Udgītha, S'ilaka Salāvatya, Chaikitāyana Dālbhya, and Pravāhana Jaivali. They said, 'We are skilled in the Udgītha; come let us discuss it.' (Saying) 'so be it,' they sat down. Pravāhana Jaivali said, 'Let your reverences speak first; I will listen to the discourse of Brāhmans discussing the question." Silaka S'ālāvatya then asked Chaikitāyana Dālbhya a series of questions; but was dissatisfied with his final reply. Being interrogated in his turn by Chaikitāyana, S'ilaka answered; but his answer was disapproved by Pravāhana Jaivali, who finally proceeded to supply the proper solution.

In two other passages the same Upanishad, as quoted above in p. 195, and explained by the commentator, recognizes the fact of sacred science being possessed, and handed down, by Kshattriyas. See also the note on p. 220, above, p. 508. The doctrines held by Rājanyas are not, however, always treated with such respect. In the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, viii. 1, 4, 10, an opinion in regard to breath (prāṇa) is attributed to Svarijit Nāgnajita, or Nagnajit the Gāndhāra, of which the writer contemptuously remarks that "he said this like a Rājanya" (Yat sa tad uvācha rājanyabandhur iva tv eva tad uvācha); and he then proceeds to refute it (see Weber's Indische Studien, i. 218). It appears that the Smṛiti recognizes the possibility of a Brāhman becoming in certain circumstances the pupil of a Rājanya or a Vaiśya. Thus Manu says, ii. 241:

Abrāhmaṇād adhyayanam āpat-kāle vidhīyate | anuvrajyā cha śuśrāshā yāvad adhyayanam guroḥ | 242. Nābrāhmaṇe gurau śishyo vāsam ātyantikam vaset | brāhmaṇe chānanūchāne kānkshan gatim anuttamām | 241.

"In a time of calamity it is permitted to receive instruction from one who is not a Brāhman; and to wait upon and obey such a teacher during the period of study. 242. But let not a pupil, who aims at the highest future destiny, reside for an excessive period with such a teacher who is not a Brāhman, or with a Brāhman who is not learned in the Veda." Kullūka explains this to mean that when a Brāhman instructor cannot be had a Kshattriya may be resorted to, and in the absence of a Kshattriya, a Vaiśya.

Page 457, note 241.

When I wrote this note, I did not advert to the difficulty presented by the word $did\bar{a}sith\ddot{a}$, which has at once the form of a desiderative verb, and of the second person of the perfect tense. Böhtlingk and Roth, $s.v.~d\ddot{a}$, on a comparison of the two parallel passages, suppose that the present reading of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa is corrupt as regards this word, which, as they quote it, is $did\bar{a}sith\ddot{a}$. May not the correct reading be $d\ddot{a}d\bar{a}sith\ddot{a}$ from the root $d\bar{a}s$?

Page 461, line 14.

The Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, ii. 2, 4, 4 f., says of Prajāpati; So 'surān asrijata | tad asya apriyam āsīt | 5. Tad durvarṇam hiraṇyam abhavat | tad durvarṇasya hiraṇyasya janma | sa devān asrijata tad asya priyam āsīt | tat suvarṇasya hiraṇyasya janma | "He created Asuras. That was displeasing to him. 5. That became the precious metal with the bad colour (silver). This was the origin of silver. He created gods. That was pleasing to him. That became the precious metal with the good colour (gold). That was the origin of gold."

INDEX OF PRINCIPAL NAMES AND MATTERS.

A

Abhimāna, 201 Abhishnātas, 353 Abhiyuktas, 500 Achala, 400 Achhāvāka, 155 Adhipurusha, 111 Adharma, 124 Adhvaryu, 41, 155, 251, 263, 294, 459 Aditi, 18, 26, 72, 116, 122, 221 Adityas, 19 f., 26, 52, 117, 126, 157, 270 Adrisyanti, 417 Agastya, or Agasti, 309 ff., 321, 330, 442, 461 Aghamarshana, 279 Aghamarshanas, 353 Agni, 10, 16, 20 f., 33, 52, 71, 75, 165, 177 f., 180, 270 - one of the triad of deities, 75 Agnidh, 251 Agnīdhra, 155 Agnīdhra (king), 491 Agnihotra, 21, 428 Agni Purāna, 210 Agnisvāmin, 512 Agnivesya, 223 Agnivesyāvana, 223 Ahalyā, 235, 310, 466 the first woman, 121 Ahankāra, 201 Ahavanīya fire, 428 Ahi, 250, 340 Ahura Mazda, 293 Aindra - bārhaspatya oblation, 22

Aitareva Brähmana, 5 quotedii. 33,—180 -34, -166iii. 31,—177 — 34,—443 v. 14,-191 vii. 15,- 48 -17, -355– 19,—367 f. - 27,-436 viii. 14,-492 21, -325, 45623,-369, 493 24, 27,-367 33,-107Ajagava, 301 Ajaka, 349 Ajamīdha, 234, 267, 279, 360,413 Ajātasatru, 431 Ajīgartta, 355 ff., 360 Ajita, 279 Akampana, 505 Ākāsa, 115, 130, 506 Akriya, 232 Akshamālā, 336 Akuli, 189 Akūti, 65, 73 Alarka, 232 Amarāvatī, 494 Amāvasu, 349 Ambarīsha, 224, 266, 279, 362, 405 Ambashtha, 481, 495 Ambhāmsi, 23, 58, 79, 80 Amsa, 27 Anagha, 335 Analā, 116 Ananta, 207 Ananta, 114 Anavadyā, 116

Andhras, 358, 483 f. Anenas, 226 Anga, 232, 298, 464 Angas, 459 Angiras, 36, 65, 116, 122 f., 151, 168, 172, 184, 224 f., 226, 279, 286, 330, 341, 445, 466 Angirases, 192, 194, 224 Anila, 234 Anu, 232, 482 Anus, 179 Anugraha-sarga, 58 Anukramanikā, 228, 266, 328, 348 Anupa, 116 Anushtubh, 16 Anuvratas, 500 Apasya, 279 Apastamba, 2 Apava, 453 Apaya, 345 Apnavāna, 447 Apratiratha, 234 Apsarases, 33, 37, 177, 320, 419, etc. Aranyakas, 2, 5, 32 Arhat, 511, 513 Arishtanemi, 116, 125 Arjuna, 449 ff., 497 Arjuna (the Pandu), 494 Arka, 241 Arrian, quoted, 370 Arshtishena, 272, 279 Artavas, 18 Arunas, 32, 449 Arundhatī, 336, 389 Arurmaghas, 438 Arushī, 124, 476 Arvāksrotas, 57, 61, 65, 157

Ărya, 18
Aryaman, 27, 158
Āryyas, 174 ff., 396, 481
their language, 141, 482
T Aryakas, 498 Asat, 46
Asitomicas 429
Asitamrigas, 438 Ashtaka, 279, 352, 357
Admossin 975
Asmasarin, 275
Asramas, 98
Asurā, 116 Asuras, 23, 24, 29, 33, 37, 58, 79, 130, 139, 177, 187, 228, 469, etc., etc., their prints, 189 f
Asuras, 25, 24, 25, 55, 57, 107 000 460 oto oto their priests, 189 f.
Asuri, 430
Aśvalāyanas's S'rauta Sūtras, 137, 511
Sūtras, 137, 511
Asvamedha (proper name), 267
Asvatara, 336
Asvins, 166, 470, etc.
Atharvan (the sage), 162, 169 his cow, 395
Atharvas, 293
Atharva-veda, 2 quoted— iii. 19, 1,—283 — 24, 2,—179 iv. 6, 1,—21 — 6, 2,—490 — 14, 4,—179 — 29, 3, 5,—330 v. 8, 5,—289 — 11, 1-11,—395 — 17, 1-18,—280 — 18, 1-15,—284 — 19, 1-15,—284 vi. 120, 3,—385 vii. 120, 3,—385 viii. 2, 21,—46
111. 19, 1,—283
- 24, Z,-1/9
IV. 6, 1,—21
- 0, 2,-490
90 2 5 920
20, 0, 0,000 9 5 000
11 1 11 205
17 1-11, -050
19 1 15 994
10 1 15 286
wi 190 3 385
123, 3, f137
vii 104 395
viii 2 21 -46
- 10, 24, 217, 511
- 108 1-5 -254
ix. 5. 1.—503
— 5. 27.—282. 385
x. 8. 7.—9
xi. 10, 2,—32
xii. 1, 15,—163
— 3, 17,—385
— 5, 4-15, — 287
xiii. 3, 14,—171
vii. 104,—395 viii. 2, 21,—46 — 10, 24,—217, 511 — 108, 1-5,—254 ix. 5, 1,—503 — 5, 27,—282, 385 x. 8, 7,—9 xi. 10, 2,—32 xii. 1, 15,—163 — 3, 17,—385 — 5, 4-15,—287 xiii. 3, 14,—171 — 4, 29,—9 xv. 8, 1,—22 — 9, 1,—22
xv. 8, 1,—22
0 1 00
0, 1,44

Atharva-veda continuedxviii. 3, 15,-330 3, 23, -385 3, 34, -179xix. 6, 1 ff.,—8, 9 — 6, 6,— 10 -9, 12, -288- 22, 21,-288 -23, 30, -288- 43, 8,-289 1,-282 - 62, Atibalā, 116 Atmavat, 279 Atri, 36, 61, 116, 122 f., 171 f., 178, 225, 242, 248, 267, 303, 330, 468 Atvarāti, 493 Audumbaras, 353 Aufrecht, Professor, his Catalogue of Bodleian Sanskrit MSS, referred to, 203 - information or suggestions from him, 14. 19, 20, 29, 93, 137, 163 f., 210, 247f., 254ff., 319, 325 f., 340, 346, 389, 395, 512 Augha, 217 Aupamanyaya, 177 Aurva, 279, 445, 447, 448 f., 476 Avantyas, 486 Avyakta, 41 Ayasya, 355 Ayodhya, 115 Ayu, 170, 171 f., 174, 180 Ayus, 170 Ayus (king), 226, 308, 353

В

Bābhravas, 356
Babhrus, 353
Badarī, 199
Bāhu, 486
Bahuputra, 116
Bahvasva, 235
Bala, 279
Balā, 116
Balāhaka, 207
Balākāšva, 353
Bālakhilyas, 32, 305, 400
Bāleya, 232
Bali, 232
Balis, 469

Banerjea, Rev. Prof., his Dialogues on Hindu Philosophy referred to, 120 - his edition of the Mārkandeva Purāna referred to, 223 Banga, 232 Barbaras, 482 Baresma, 293 Bauddhas, 305 Benfey, Prof., his translation of the Sama-veda quoted, 164 his glossary to ditto, his translation of the Rig-veda quoted or referred to, 167, 180, 247, 331, 348 Bhagavadgītā quoted, 508 Bhadra, 389, 467 Bhadrās'va (a division of Jambudvīpa), 491 Bhaga, 27 Bhāgavata Purāna-3, 15,-213 - 3, 20,--350 ii. 1, 37,—156 — 5, 34,—155 iii. 6, 29,-156 -12, 20, -108-20, 25,-157 -22, 2,-156 iv. 1, 40,-335 v. 1, 30,-489 -16, 2, -490-17, 11, -496-20, 4, 6, -498-20, 11, -499-20, 16, 22,-500 -20, 28, -501vi. 6, 40,-158 vii. 11, 24,-366 viii. 5, 41,-157 -24, 7, -208ix. 2, 16,—222 2, 17,-223 2, 21,-223 2, 23 ff., -222 6, 2,-224 7, -3587, 6,—386 — 13, 3,—316 -14, 48, -158— 15, 5,—457 — 16, 17,—458

-16, 30, -358

Bhagavata Purana continued—
ix. 17, 2,—227
— 17, 10,—232
inued— ix. 17, 2,—227 — 17, 10,—232 — 20, 1,—234 — 21, 19,—237 — 21, 21,—235 — 21, 33,—235 — 22, 14,—275 x. 33, 27,—113 Bhalandana, and Bhalanda a Vais ya mantra-krit, 20, 1, 201
- 21, 19,-207
— 21, 21, — 235
— 21, 33,—235
— 22. 14.—275
T 22 07 112
Di-11111
Bhalandana, and Bhalanda
a Vais'ya mantra-krit, 279
Rhavamana 266
Bhayamāna, 266 Bharadvāja, 141, 279, 330 Bharata, 168, 234, 242, Bnaradvaja, 141, 279, 330
Bharata, 168, 234, 242,
354, 360, 413
Bhārata, 187, 348
Dnaratas, 320, 338, 340, 354
Bhāratas, 344
Bhāratavarsha, 491, 494ff.
Bhāratī, 112
Bharga, or Bhārga, 231
Bhargabhūmi, 231
Pharmore 002
Bhārgava, 228
Bharmyas'va, 235
Bhāsī, 116
Bhāvins, 498
Dhada 210 202
Bheda, 319, 323
Bhima, 133, 142, 308, 349
Bhīmanāda, 207
Bhīma, 133, 142, 308, 349 Bhīmanāda, 207 Bhīmasena, 273
Diana 405
Bhīras, 495
Bhīshma, 127 Bhrigu, 36, 65, 67, 122, 139, 151, 168, 228 f., 279, 286, 314, 443ff. Bhrigu Vāruni, 443
Bhrigu, 36, 65, 67, 122,
139 151 168 228 f
070 000 014 449#
2/9, 200, 314, 44311.
Bhrigu Vāruni, 443
Bhṛigus tu aga, 175 Bhṛigus, 169 f., 228, 442 ff. Bhṛitakīla, 279
Bhriong 169f 228 442ff
Di-it-l-1- 070
Burnakna, 279
Bhumanyu, 360
Bhūrloka, 51, 209, 211
Bhūtakritas, 37, 42, 255
Diutakiitas, 51, ±2, 200
Bhūtānāmpati, 16
Bhūtapati, 108
Bhūtas, 59
Bhūtavīras, 438
Dittavitas, 100
Boar incarnation, 51 ff., 54, 76
Dubiling and Dothin Towi
con referred to, 47, 108
744 170 100 104 059
144, 170, 100, 104, 203,
340, 348, 395, 400, 442, con referred to, 47, 108, 144, 178, 180, 184, 253, 340, 348, 395, 400, 442, 505, 511
Brahma S'vovasyava, 30
Darkarakanin 000
Brahmachārin, 289

Brähman (masculine, priest), 155, 242 ff., 459 Brahman (masculine, the god), 35, 36, 75, etc. - his passion for his daughter, 107 Brähman (neuter, prayer, Brahman (neuter, the universal soul), 20 Brāhmana, son of a Brāhman, 252, 264 Brāhmanāchhamsin, 155 Brāhmanas (the theological works), 2, 4 f. Brahmanaspati, 16 Brahmani, 110 Brāhmans, 7, and passim - origin of the word, 252, 259, 264 - their intermarriage with women of other castes, 282, 481 prerogatives - their and powers, 128, 130, etc. Brahmanya, 155 Brahmaputra, 252, 259, 264 Brahmarshi, or Brāhman rishi, 400, 407, 410 Brahmās, the nine, 65, 445 Brahmāsva, 279 Brahmaudana, 26, 27 Brahma-yuga, 152 Bréal, M. Michel, his Hercule et Cacus, 246 Bride's seven steps, 378, 514 Brihaddevatā, 321, 326, 344 Brihadishu, 234 Brihaduktha, 279 Brihaspati, 16, 22, 163, 167, 226, 270, 438 Brihat, 16 Brihat-saman, 286 Buddha, 509 Buddhists, 513 Budha, 221, 226, 307, 336 Bunsen, Baron, his Philosophy of Universal History referred to, 8 Burnouf, M. Eugène, his Bhāgavata Purāna referred to, 8, 155, 211, 489, etc. his views about the Deluge, 215

C Chakshusha, 298 Chākshusha Manvantara, 207, 213 Chauda, 207 Chandala, 402, 481 Caste, mythical accounts of its origin, 7 ff. Variety and inconsistency of these accounts, 34, 66, 102, 159 Castes, their future abodes, 63, 98 - their respective colours, 140, 151, 153 no natural distinction between, 140 - manner of their rise according to Prof. Roth, 289- time of their rise according to Dr. Haug, 292 Chāturvarnya, 135 Charshanis, 158 Chauras, 482 Chārvākas, 305 Chhandas, 4 Chhandogas, 334 Chhāndogya Brāhmana, 5 - Upanishad, iii. 11, 4,-195, 514 - iv. 1, 4,-49 - v. 3, 1,—435 - viii. 15, 1,-195 Chīnas, 482, 484 Chīrinī, a river, 199 Cholas, 488 Chunchulus, 353 Chyavana, 124, 273, 283, 445, 470, 474 Colebrooke's Miscellaneous Essays quoted or referred to, 8, 13 f., 25, 52, 325, 378, 385, 492, 497 Cowell's, Professor E. B., translation of Kaushītakī Brāhmana Upanishad, 10, 432 - Preface to, quoted, 32 Creation of man, mythical accounts of, 7 ff. - their mutual inconsistency, 34, 65, 102 - how explained by Indian commentators, 66 Creations, similarity of successive, 60, 89

D Dadhīcha, 279 Dadhyanch, 162, 169, 172 Daityas, 41, 139, 499 Daivavāta, 348 Daivodāsa, 348 Daksha, 9, 65, 72, 116, 122, 124 ff., 153, 221, 335 Dākshāvanī, Aditi, 126 Dama, 222 Damayanti, 389 Damayantī, see Madayantī Damins, 500 Dānavas, 139, 144, 209, 468 f., 499 Dānavratas, 501 Danāyū, 123 Dandakas, 467 Danu, 116, 123 Daradas, 459, 482 Darvas, or Dārvas, 482, 488 Dāsa, 174, 323, 396 Dasahotri, 29 Dasaratha, 362 Dasarna, 222 Dasyus, 174 ff., 358, 460, 469, 482, 500 Dattātreya, 450, 473, 478 Day of Brahmā, 43, 48, 213 - gods, 43 Deities, triad of, produced from the three Gunas, 75 Deluge, legend of, 183, 199, 203, 209, 211 was the tradition of it indigenous or not, 215 - comparison of different Indian accounts of, 216 Devadeva, 351 Devakas, 500 📍 Devala, 352 Devalas, 353 Devāpi, 269 Devarāja, 279 Devarāta, 279, 351 f., 356, 413 Devarātas, 353 Devarshi, 400 Devas, 79, 499 Devasarman, 466 Devasravas, 344, 352 f. Devavat, 322 Devavāta, 344

Dhānajapyas, 353

Dhananjaya, 279 Dhanur-veda, 477 Dhanvantari, 226 Dhanyas, 500 Dharma, 20, 122, 124, 385, 400, 412 Dhärshtakas, 223 Dhātri, 18, 27, 124 Dhī, 241 Dhrishnu, 126 Dhrishta, 221, 223 Dhritarāshtrī, 117 Dhruva, 234, 298 Dīrghatamas, 226, 232, 247, 268, 279 Dīrghatapas, 233 Dīrghasattra, 300 Dishta, 222 Diti, 116, 123 Divodāsa, 229 f., 235, 268, 279, 322, 348 Dogs, whether they fast from religious motives, 365 Draupadī, 381, 389 Dravida, 209 Dravidas, or Drāvidas, 482 Dravinas, 500 Dridhanetra, 400 Driptabālāki Gārgya, 432 Drishadvatī, 344 Drona, 207 Druhyu, 232, 482 Druhyus, 179 Duhsīma, 305 Durga, commentator on the Nirukta, quoted, 344, 417 Durgaha, 267 Duritakshaya, 237 Durvāsas, 387, 389 Dushyanta, 234, 360 Dvāpara, 39, 43 ff., 119, 146, 149 f., 447 Dvīpas, 51, 489 ff. Dwarf incarnation, 52, 54, 233Dyaus (the sky), feminine, 108 masculine, 163, 396, 434

E

Earth, the goddess, 51, 163 Earth fashioned, 51 ff., 76 - milked, 96

Egg, the mundane, 35, 74, 156, 503 Ekadāsinī, 69 Ekavims'a, 16 Elysian fields, 502 Emūsha, 53

F

Families, hope of their reunion in a future life. 385 Fathers, see Pitris Fish incarnation, 50, 54, 111, 183, 199, 205, 209, 211 Flood, see Deluge

G

Gabhastimat, 494 Gabhīra, 232 Gādhi, 343, 349, and passim Galava, 232, 352, 411 Gālavas, 353 Gandhamādana, 491 Gāndhāras, 484 Gändharva, 494 Gandharvas, 33, 37, 59, 139, 144, 177, 250, 257, 499 their heaven, 63, 98, 307 Gangā, 130, 199, 206, 461, Garga, 227, 236, 279, 305 Gārgya Bālāki, 431 Gārgyas, 236 Gärhapatya-fire, 186 Gāthin, 348, 358 Gathins, 358, 363 Gätra, 335 Gautama, 121, 235, 316, 434, 466 Gavishthira, 330 Gaya, 227 Gāyatrī, 16, 110, 114, 137 Genesis, i. 2,—52 Gifts to priests, 259 Gir, 241 Gods, intercourse of men with, in early ages, 147 whether they can practise Vedic rites, 365 Goldstücker, Professor, aid received from, 508

Harivamsa continued—

1781, -236

1819,—273

8811,-307

11355,—154

11802,—153

11808, -152

Harsha, 124

296

Harvasva, 279

Harivarsha, 491, 494

Haug's, Dr. Martin, Aitareya Brāhmana quoted or referred to, 4, 5, 48,

107, 137, 177, 180, 192,

246, 250, 256, 263, 355,

- Origin of Brahman-

369, 438 f., 492 f., 513

ism quoted, 11, 14, 292

note on Manu, vii. 41,- 130, 183, 200, 229, 311,

Hiranyagarbha, 195, 220

Homer's Odyssey quoted,

Hostility to Vedic wor-

Hotri, 155, 251, 263, 271,

Houses, origin of, 93

Human sacrifices, 11 f.

Hymns of the Rig-veda, 4, whether they allude castes as already

Haughton, Sir G. C, his

Hayagrīva, 207, 212

Havishyanda, 400

Hayasiras, 449

Hemakūṭa, 491 Himavat, or Himālaya,

Hiranmaya, 491

Hiranyaksha, 352

Hiranyākshas, 353

Hema, 232

491

502 ship, 259

294, 459

Huhu, 336

Hūnas, 495

318

Hrishīkes a, 206

Gopatha Brāhmana, 5 Gorresio, his edition of the Rāmāyana referred to, 397, 399, etc. Gotama, 330 Gravan, 155 Griffith, Principal, MS. obtained through him, 279 Grihya Sūtras, 5 Gritsa, 279 Gritsamada, 226 Gritsamati, 227 Gubernatis, Signor A. de, quoted, xii. Gunas, 66, 75, 145 Gurudhīra, 279

H Haihaya, 477 Haihayas, 449, 486 Haimavatī, 336 Hala, 121 Hall's, Dr. Fitzedward, edition of Wilson's Vishnu Purana, 24, 268, 512 and passim information given by, 155 Preface to his edition of the Sankhya-pravachana-bhāshya referred to, 430 Hansa, 158 Hansas, 498 Hanumat, 143 Hari, 51, 62 Harita, 224 Harita, 352 Hāritas, 225 Hārītaka, 351 Harischandra, 355, 379ff., 413, 486 Harivamsa quoted— 292, -302652,-223 659,-221 718, -376773,-487 789,-230 1425,-351 1456,-351

1520, -227

1596, -231

1682, -233

1732,-227

1752, -231

1766,-352

I

existing, 161 ff.

Ida, 268, 279, 306 Idā, daughter of Manu, 184 ff., see Ilā Ikshvāku, 115, 126, 177, 195, 221, 224, 268, 337, 355, 362, 401, 405, 508 Ikshvākus, 401, 418 Ilā, 126, 221, 306, see Idā Ilāvrita, 491 Indra, 3, 10, 18, 20, 33, 44, 163, 168, 171, 191, Indra's heaven, 63, 98 wife, 341 his adulteries, 121, 310, 466 Indra-dvīpa, 494 Indrānī, 310, 389 Indu (Soma), 124 Instrumental cause, 51 Isaiah vi. 9, 10,—255 Isana, 20 Ishīratha, 348 Ishundharas, 499 Isvara, 75, 221 Itihāsas, 3, 5, 215

J

Jābāli, 115 Jahnu, 273, 349, 353, 360, 413 Jahnus, 358 Jaimini's Sūtras, 508 Jainas, 305 Jamadagni, 279, 330, 345, 350, 355, 413, 422, 447, 450 ff. Jamadagnis, 342 Jambudyīpa, 488, 490 ff. Jambunada, 461 Janaka, 130, 334, 426 ff. Janaloka, 44, 51, 88, 95, Janamejaya, 152, 438 Janantapa, 493 Janardana, 206 Japa, 442 Jatāyus, 116 Jātimālā, 497 Jatukarnya, 223 Jaya, 352 Jayakrita, 351 Jayāpīda, 424 Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society quoted, 3, 6, and passim Jyotsnā, 59

K

Ka, 125 Kachhapa, 351 f. Kadrū, 123 Kakshīvat, 268, 279 Kāla, 62 Kālā, 123 Kālakā, 116 Kalāpa, 277 Kali, 39, 43 ff., 120, 146, 150, 495 Kalindas, 482 Kalinga, 232 Kalingas, 459, 495 Kalmāshapāda, 414, 423 Kalpas, 43 ff. Kāma, 112, 124 Kāmarūpa, 495 Kambojas, 482 f., 485 ff. Kānchana, 349 Kānchis, 391 Kandaprishtha, 442, 507 Kandarpa, 408 Kāndarshi, 400 Kānīna, 223 Kankas, 484 Kānyakubja, 390 Kanva, 166, 170, 172, 234, 279 Kānvāyana, 234 Kapas, 472 Kapi, 237 Kapila, 227, 414 Kapila, 123 Kapilas, 499 Kāpileyas, 356 Kapishthala, 344 Kardama, 116, 123, 400 Kārīshis, 353 Karmadevas, 46 Kārtavīrya, 450, 478 Kärūsha, 221 f. Kārūsha, 126 Kārūshas, 495 Kāśa, or Kās'aka, 226 f. Kas'erumat, 494 Kāsirāja, 226 Kāsis, 431 Kāsmīras, 459 Kāsya, 227, 279 Kasyapa, 37, 54, 115 f., 123 f., 126, 195, 330, 400, 451, 455 f., 459 Kasyapas, 438 Kāthaka Brāhmana quoted, 140, 186, 189, 332 f., 358 Kati, 352 Kātvāvanas, 352 Kātyāyana's S'rauta Sūtras, 19, 136, 365 ff., 369, 514

Kaumāra-sarga, 58 Kaushītakī Brāhmana quoted, 328 Upanishad, 10, 431 Kaus'ika, 342, 349 Kausika (epithet of Indra), 347 Kausikas, 353, etc. Kaus'ikī, 350, 411 Kavi, 243, 279, 445 Keralas, 488 Kesaraprābandhā, 285 Ketumāla, 491 Ketus, 32 Khalins, 468 Khandapāni, 235 Khāndavāyanas, 451 Khas'as, 482 Khyāti, 67 Kīkatas, 342 Kilāta, 189 Kimpurusha, 491 f. Kimpurushas, 499 Kīnās'a, 97 Kinnaras, 37 Kins'uka, 229 Kirātas, 391, 482, 484 f. Kolisarpas, 482, 488 Konvas iras, 482 Kovidas, 500 Kratu, 36, 65, 116, 122 f., 400 Krauncha-dvīpa, 491, 500 Kraunchi, 117 Kripa, 279 Krishna, 113 Krishnas, 499 Krishti, 178 Krita, 39, 43 ff., 88, 90 ff., 119, 144, 148 f., 158, 492, 495, 505 Kritamālā, 209, 212 Kritavīrya, 449 ff., 478 Krodha, 123 Krodhavas'ā, 116 Kshattravriddha, 226 Kshattri, 481 Kshattriyas, 7, and passim etymology of the word, 97, 504 - how their race was restored, 452 Kshemaka, 235 Kshudrakas, 459 Kuhn, Dr. A., quoted, 179 Kulakas, 500 Kullūka quoted, 36, 47, 129, 279, 480, 483

Kumārila Bhatta referred to or quoted, 122, 509 Kuntis, 459 Kūrma avatāra, see Tortoise incarnation Kurus, 5, 269, 431, 495 Kurus, 498 Kus'a, 227, 349, 351, 397 Kuśa-dvipa, 491, 497, 499 Kus'alas, 500 Kus'āmba, 349, 351 Kusanabha, 351, 397 Kus'ika, 338, 340, 346, 400, 474 Kus'ikas, 342 f., 346, 355, Kusumāyudha (a name of Kāma), 112 Kutsa, 330 f. Kuvera, 140, 279, 400

L

Lakshmi, 124 Lalita-vistara, 32 Langlois, M., translator of the Harivams'a, 151 - of the Rig-veda, 273, Lassen's Indian Antiquities quoted, 394, 425 Lātas, 482 Lātyāyana's Sūtras, 512 Lecky, Mr., his History of Rationalism, 407 Les'a, 226 Life of Brahma, 49 Linga Purāna quoted, 225 Lohita, 279 Lohitas, 353 Loiseleur Deslongchamps, M., his note on Manu, vii. 41,-296 Lokāloka mountain, 503 Lunar race, 220, 225

M

4

Mada, 471 f.
Madayanti, 419, 514
Madhuchhandas, or Madhusyanda, 279, 347, 351 f., 357, 400, 406
Madhusūdana Sarasvatī, his Commentary on the Bhagavad Gītā quoted, 508

Madras, 484, 495	Mahābhārata continued-	Mahābhārata continued —
Magadhas, 495	Bhīshma-parvan—	Anusasana-parvan-
	410,—501	2158,—482
Magadhas, 501	455 500
Magas, 501	455,—500	2160,—130
Mahābhārata, 5 f.	468,—502	2262,—466
_ quoted—	Drona-parvan—	2718,—474
Adi-parvan—	2149,—414	2841,494
272,—447	2395,505	3732,—374
869,—445	2443,—459	3960,—460
2253,—116	4747,—483	4104,—443
2459,—451	S'alya-parvan—	4527,—128
2517,—122	2295,—392	4579,—128
2550, 2574,—123	2281,—272	4745,—314
	2360,—419	6208,—507
2606,—445
2610,—476	S'ānti-parvan—	6262,—514
2620-2635,—117	774,— 32	6250,—514 6570,—132 7187,—462
2914,—410	1741, 1792, —423, 452	6570,—132
3128,—124	2221,-304	7187,—462
3143,—306	2247,— 97	As'vamedikha-parvan—
3151,—308	2280,—370	1038,—57
3533,—482	2280,—370 2304,—366	Mahabhaya, 124
3727,—360	2429 —484	Mahadeva, 75, 207
9750 972	2429,—484 2674,—49, 149	- taught by Angiras,
3750,—273		226
4719,—418	2682 ff.,—49
6638,—388	2749,—127	Mahākalpa, 213
6695, -342	2819,—140	Maharloka, 156
6699,—415	3404, 3406, -150	Maharshi, 400
6802,—448	3408, 49	Mahat, 41, 75, 114
7351.—389	4499,—388	Mahāvīrya, 237
8455, -389	4507,—209	Mahendra, 451
Sabhā-parvan—	5330,—376	Mahesvara, 74
489,—379	6130,—506	Mahīdhara, 490
1021 482	6640,—429	Mashishas, or Māhishakas,
1031,—483	6930,—138	482, 488
1045,-494	7509 105
Vana-parvan—	7523,—125	Māhishmatī, 462, 478
10137, 10201—450	7548,—507	Mahodaya, 402
11234,—143	7569,—122	Mahoragas, 139
11248.— 40	7573,—125	Maitrāvaruna, 155, 244
12460,—308	7882,—430	Maitrāvarunī, 186
12469,—133	8550,— 60	Maitrāyana, 230
12619,—147	8591, 8604,—423	Maitreya, 56, 58
12747,—196	10058,—151	Maitreyas, 230
12826,— 48	10699,—430	Mālavas, 459, 495
12952,— 35	10118,—423	Malaya, 205
10000 10	10961 120	Mallinatha quoted, 395
12962,— 10	10861,—130 11221,—334	Mamatā, 247
12981,—145	11221,004
13090,— 40 13436,—129	11545, 11854,—430	Māna (Agastya?), 321
13436,—129	12658,—215	Mānava-dharma-sāstra
14160,—178	12685,—122	(or Institutes of Manu)—
Udyoga-parvan—	13088,—145	Quotations from—
373,—310	13090,— 40	i. 8 ff.—35
3721,—412	Anus asana-parvan—	— 22, 25, — 38
3970,—336	183.—412	— 30, — 60
5054,—276	183,—412 186,—352	— 31 ff.,—35, 446
Rhichma norven	201,—354	58 ff.,_38, 446
Bhīshma parvan—	1967 440	- 66 f -43
227,—491	1867,—440	- 66 f.,-43 - 69 ff.,-47
346,—495 389,—148	1944,—229	70 f oc 20
389,—148	2103,—482	— 79 f., 86,—39

M ānava-dharma-s'āstra
continued— i. 87, 93, 97,—40
1. 5/, 93, 3/, 740 — 88 ff.,—364 — 100,—129 ii. 29,—137 — 38 f.,—481 — 170,—138 — 225,—138 — 241,—515 iii. 171,—275 iv. 239 ff.,—380 v. 1, 3,—446 vii. 2,—446 — 3 ff.,—300 — 38 ff.,—296 viii. 17,—380 — 110,—329 ix. 22,—336 — 66 f.—297 — 149 ff.—282 — 301 f.—49 — 503,—300 v. 4—480
— 100,—129
ii. 29, ~ 137
— 38 f.,—481
- 170,-138 - 225,-138

iii. 171,—275
iv. 239 ff.,—380
v. 1, 3,—440 vii 2.—446
3 ff.,300
— 38 ff.,—296
VIII. 17,—380
ix. 22.—336
— 66 f.—297
— 149 ff.—282
301 f49
x. 4.—480
x. 4,—480 — 7 ff.,—282
- 8,-481
- 12,-481 20 481
— 20,—481 — 43 f—481
7 ff.,—282 8,—481 12,—481 20,—481 43 f.,—481 45,—482 105,—358 108,—377 xi. 234 ff.,—393 32,—398 xii. 39 ff.,—40
— 105,—358
108,377
— 32,—398
xii. 39 ff.,—40
Mānāvī, 186
Mănāvī, 189 Mānasas, 501
Mandagas, 501
Mandagas, 501 Mandapāla, 336
Mandeĥas, 500 Māndhātri, 225, 268, 279, 484
Mantra, 2, 4 f.
Manu, progenitor of the Aryan Indians, 161 ff.,
183 ff. — his bull, 188 ff.
Manu, 119, 122, 297
—— Auttami, 38, 111
— Chākshusha, 38, 298 — Raivata, 38
— Samvarani, 217
Sāvarni, 217
- Svärochisha 38 111
Sväyambhuva, 25, 38 f., 44, 65, 72, 106, 111, 114, 298, 489, 511
나는 하는 항상 가장을 보고 말을 하는 것을 다.

Manu Tāmasa, 38 Vaivasvata, 37 ff., 44, 111, 115, 126, 196, 213, 217, 221, 279, 298, 306, Vaivasvata 37 ff., 44.
111 115 126 196 213
217 221 270 208 306
211, 221, 219, 290, 000, 508, 510
— Vivasvat, 217
Manu (a female), 116 Manu (=mind), 23 Manu's Descent, 183, 217
Manu $(= mind)$, 23
Mann's Descent, 183, 217
Manush ($=$ Manu), 165 ff.
Manvantaras, 43 ff. Marganapriya, 116 Marchi, 36 f., 65, 114 ff., 122 f., 126 Mārkandeya, 48, 199, 207 Mārkandeya Purāna quoed, 75, 81 ff., 221 ff., 379 Mārttanda, 126 Mārttikāvatas. 459
Marganapriya, 110
Marichi, 36 f., 65, 114 ff., 122 f., 126
Mārkandeya, 48, 199, 207
Mārkandeva Purāna quoed 75 81 ff 221 ff 379
Märttanda 196
Manttilarrates 450
Maru, 277
Maruts, 20, 71
Maruts, 20, 71 — their heaven, 63, 98
Marutta, 222
Matanga, 411, 440
Mātaris van, 128, 170, 256
Mati, 241
Mātrikā, 158
Matsya-avatāra, see Fish-incarnation
Matsyas, 431
Matsyas, 431 Matsya Purāṇa, 1,12—203 49, 39,—277 132, 98,—278 3, 32 ff.,—108
49, 39,—277
132, 98,—278
3, 32 ff.,—108
Matthew Genel of St xiii. 14 f.,—255 Maudgalya, 235
Mandanian 005
Madugarya, 255
Medhatithi on Manu, 47 Medhatithi, 234
Medhatithi, 234
Mednyatithi, 170
Mekalas, 482
Men, Five races of, 163, 176
- their original condition, 62, 117, 145, 147
Monales 407 410
Menakā, 407, 410 Meru, 417, 491
Meru, 417, 491
Metempsychosis, 385
Mīmānsa-vārttika quoted,
508
Mithilā, 279, 430
Mitra, 27, 184, 186, 221, etc.
Mitrasaha, 337, 414, 423,
514 Wit 000 000
Mitrayu, 230, 322
Mlechbas, 41 f., 141, 482, 484
[25 전 기가지 기가 된 시, 기가 [27]

Mrikshinī, 271 Mrityu, 20, 124, 299, 303 Muchukunda, 140 Mudgala, 235, 279, 352 Mukhya-sarga, 57 Müller's, Professor Max, Ancient Sanskrit Literature quoted or referred to, 2, 4, 5, 8, 13, 48, 122, 181, 192, 253, 263, 326, 355, 358, 366, 426, 508 Art. in Journ. Germ. Or. Soc., 365 - Art. in Journ. Roy. As. Soc., 115, 177 - Art. in Oxford Essays, now reprinted in "Chips from a German Workshop," 226, 231 - Chips from a German Workshop, 429, 431, 490 - Preface to Rig-veda, 348, 417 - Results of Turanian Researches, 327 Mundaka Upanishad, i. 2, 1, quoted, 3, 39 Muni (a female), 123 Munis, 153 Mūtibas, 358, 483

N

Näbhāga, 224, 268 Nābhāga, 126, 224 Nābhāgārishta, 126, 223 Nābhānedishtha, 221 Nābhāganedishtha, 192 ff., 221 Nāgas, 37, 140 Nagnajit Gandhara, 515 Nahush, 165, 179, 307 Nahusha, 133, 226, 232, 297, 307 ff., 393, 410 Naigeya sākhā of Sāma-Sanhitā, 14 Naimittika-laya, 45, 209, 219 Naubandhana, 200 Nairritas, 124 Namuchi, 175 Nara, 35, 76, 353, 400 Nārada, 36, 119, 126, 400 Nārāyana, 35, 50, 54, 76, 154, 400 - assumes different colours in different yugas, 145

Nārāyani, 353 Narishyanta, 126, 221, 223 Narmadā, 207, 478 Neshtri, 155, 251 Nève, M., Mythe des Ribhavas referred to, 161 Nīchasākha, 342 Nidāna-Sūtras, 136 Niggards, 259 Night of Brahmā, 43, 209 Nīla, a mountain, 491 Nīla, 235 Nīlakantha on M.Bh., 201 Nimi, 297, 316, 337 Niramitra, 235 Nirriti, 124 Nirukta, 5 quoted or referred to, 3 i. 8.—256 -20, -147ii. 10,-269 -24, -338--- 25,---340 iii. 4,— 26 — 7,—165 -8, -177— 17,—445 iv. 19,-154 v. 11,-253 -13, -321vi. 30,-322 -32, -342ix. 6,-253 -26, -417x. 44,-154 xi. 19,-442 -23,-9xii. 10 f., - 34,-162 xiii. 9,-252 Nishādas, 177, 481,153 f. Nishāda, birth of, 301, 303, 403, 481 Nishāda-sthapati, 366 Nishadha, 491 Nītha, 241 Nivid, 241 Nodhas, 330 Nriga, 221 Nyāya-mālā-vistara quoted, 510

0

Odras, 482 Oha-brahman, 255

P

Pādma-kalpa, 44, 50 Padma Purāna, 379 Pahlavas, 351, 391, 398, 482, 484, 486 Paijavana, 366 Pāka-yajna, 187 Pakshya, 342 Panchachūdā, 413 Panchadas'a, 16 Panchajanāh and other parallel terms, 176 Panchālas or Pānchālas, 431, 434, 495 Panchasika, 430 Panchavims a Brāhmana, 5 quoted, 417 Panchavims'a stoma, 492 Pändus, 5, 127, 381 Panini, 3 referred to, 513 Pānins, 353 Pannagas, 144 Para, 44 Pāradas, 482, 486 Paramarshi, 400 Parameshthin, 123 Parardha, 44 Parasara, 56, 58, 130, 322, 417, 430, 447 Parās'ava, 481 Pārasikas, 495 Paras'urāma, 350, 422, 442, 447 ff., 474 Parāvasu, 455 Parikshit, 438 Parivettri, 275 Parivitti, 275 Parjanya, 20, 270 Parsis, 293 Pārthivas, 353 Paruchhepa, 172 Parushni, 490 Parvata, 400 Päs advumna, 319 Passion, 51, see Rajas Pasupati, 108, 444 Pātālas, 504 Patangas, 498 Pātnīvata (Agni), 191 Paundras, or Paundrakas, 391, 482, 484 Paurava, 353 Paurukutsī, 351 Phena, 233 Pijavana, 268, 297, 322, 338

Pis'āchas, 33, 37, 140 Pītas, 499 Pitris, 23, 37, 46, 58, 79, 88, 434 Plaksha-dvīpa, 490, 497 Plants, origin of, 59, 90, 95 Plato quoted, 147 Potri, 155, 251, 263 Prachetas, 36, 116, 125, 279Prāchetasa, 125 Prachetases, 72 Pradhā, 123 Pradhāna, 51, 74 Pradvumna, 279 Prajapati, 16 ff., 23 f., 29 ff., 52 ff., 68 ff., 180, 184, 444, and passim born on a lotus-leaf, - his exhaustion, 68 --- his heaven, 63, 98 Prajāpati Parameshthin, 19 Prakās'a, 58 Prākrita-sarga, 58 Prakriti, 74 f. Pralaya, 214, 217 Pramaganda, 342 Prāms'u, 221 Pranava, 158 Pras'āstri, 251, 263 Praskanya, 330 Praskanyas, 234 Prastotri, 41, 155 Prasūti, 65 Pratardana, 229, 268, 455 Pratihartri, 41, 155 Pratipa, 273 Pratiprasthātri, 136 Pratisanchura, 44 Pratisarga, 49 Pratishthātri, 155 Pratyūsha, 400 Pravāhana Jaivali, 433, 515 Prāyaschitti, 294 Pretas, 141 Prishadasva, 224, 279 Prishadhra, 126, 221 Prithä, 494 Prithavāna, 305 Prithi, or Prithu, 268, 279, 301, 304, 511 Prithivī, 434 Prithūdaka, 272 Priyamedha, 172, 235, 268 Priyavrata, 65, 72, 106, 114, 489, 491, 497

Pulaha, 36, 65, 116, 122 f.,	Rāmas, 495
400	Ramathas, 485
Pulastya, 36, 65, 116,	Rāmāyana, 5 f.
122 f., 400	guoted-
Pulindas, 358, 482 ff.	i. 37, 4,—405
Pundra, 232	— 51-65,—39°
Pundras, 358, 483, 495	— 55, 5 , —329
Purānas, 3, 5 f.	— 70,—3 3 7
Purāṇās va, 279	— 70, 41, — 36
Purohitas, 41, 128, 507	ii. 110, 1-7,—
Pūru, 232, 277, 331, 360	— 110, 2, — 36
Pūrus, 179	— 110, 3,—54
Purukutsa, 266, 279, 331	— 110, 6, — 33
Purukutsānī, 267	— 111, 1, —3 3
Purumīļha, 267	iii. 14, 5–15, 2
Purūravas, 126, 128, 158,	-11
172, 221, 226, 279, 306,	iv. 43, 38,—498
349, 497	v. 82, 13,—59
Purusha, 9 ff., 25, 32, 34 ff.,	vii. (or Uttara-k
75 f., 106, 155	30, 19 ff.,—1
Purusha-sūkta, translated	74, 8 ff.,—11
and discussed, 7 ff., 34,	Rambha, 226, 232
155 f., 159, 161	Rambhā, 336, 408,
Purushas, 500	Ramyaka, 491
Purushottama, 51	Rantibhara and Rant
Püshan, 19 f., 33, 71, 270	234
Pushkalas, 500	Rantideva, 423
Pushkara, 405	Rasollāsa, 62
Pushkara-dvīpa, 491, 501	Raspi, 292
Pushkaras, 500	Rathachitra, 336
Pushkarin, 237	Rathakāra, 336
Pushpaka(Rāma's ear),120	Rathaesthas, 293
	Rathantara, 16
등을 하는 사람들은 그리고 있다.	Rathavīti, 283
${f R}$	Rathītara, 224
소격들의 마닷컴 집중하였다니?	Rathwī, 292
Rabhasa, 232	Rati, 106, 114
Raibhya, 455	Rauhināyana, 72
Rājanya, 10, 258, 264, etc.	Rāvaṇa, 21, 478
Rājarshi, 266, 400	Re-marriage of

Rajarshi, 266, 400 Rajas (the Guna) 41, 58, 62, 66, 75, 79, 89, 92, 141, 154 Rajas (masculine) 335 Rājasūya sacrifice, 20, 225 Rajatarangini quoted, 424 Raji, 226 Rākshasas, 59, 140, 144, Räkshases, 33, 37, 59, 136, 177 Rakshovāhas, 459 Rāma, 5, 112, 115, 720, 305, 337 Rāma Mārgaveya, 438

115 7,400 29-31. 3 kānda) 207 413 tināra. Indian Re-marriage of women in early times, 282 Renu, 346, 350, 357 Renukā, 350 Renumat, 352 Ribhukshans, 165 Ribhus, 255 Richīka, 349, 405, 413, 450, 453, 476 Rig-veda, 2 Texts of, translated 1— First Mandala-10, 1, -24610, 11,-347 13, 4,-167

Rig-veda continued-First Mandala-14, 11, -16715, 5,-253 31, 4, -17232, 12,-490 33, 9, -24636, 10,—167, 170 - 19,-166, 167 44, 11,-168 45, 3,—341 47, 6,—330 58, 6, -170 63, 7, -330 65, 1,-170 68, 4,--164 76, 5,-166 80, 1,-244 — 16,—162 83, 5,-169 84.7. -25992, 11, -4594, 6, -263 96, 5, -243 101, 4, -260-5, -246102, 2,-322 106, 5,-167 108, 7, -246-8, -179112, 16,-171 - 19, - 331 114, 2,-163 117, 3,—178 ___ 21,—171, 174 122, 9, -260 124, 2, -45125, 7,-260 130, 5,-173 - 8,-174 139, 9, -172144, 4,—45 158, 6,—46, 247 162, 5-7, 11, 15, 16, 163, 3,—12 164, 15, -362 - 34, 35,—244 -- 45,--252 - 50,-11 167, 7, -173 175, 3,-174 177, 5, -183182, 3, -260185, 9, -331

¹ A large number of texts are referred to in pp. 45, 163, 170, 171, 241, 243, 245, 259, 329, etc., but as they have not been translated they are not included in this list.

Dia mada	Pig-rode sortinged	Rig-veda continued-
Rig-veda continued—	Rig-veda continued-	Seventh Mandala
Second Mandala—	Fifth Mandala—	87. 4,—325
1, 2, 3,—251	$\frac{-12,-248}{37,4,-247}$	88, 3-6,-325
-4 ff270	40 5 ff 6 042 469	91, 1, -172
2, 10,—178	40, 5 ff., 6,—242, 469	97, 1,—176
4, 2, -170	- 8,-248	3.—242
7, 1, 5,—348 12, 6,—244	45, 6, -166	100, 4,—172
10 9 949	53, 2,—331	100, 4,—172 103, 1, 7, 8,—253
19, 8,—243	54, 7, 14,—247 Sinth Wondala	104, 13,—258 —— 12–16,—326
20, 4,—243	Sixth Mandala—
- 6,-174	11, 4,—177	Eighth Mandala—
23, 1, 2,—242 —— 4,—260	14, 2,—165	2, 21,—46
27, 1,—72	- 3,-174 16, 1,-167	4, 20,—262
33, 1,—184	- 9,-167	7, 20,—249
	- 13, 14, -169	9, 10,—268
- 13,-163	10, 14,—10	10, 2,—166
36, 5,—253 39, 1,—247	 	15. 5,—171
19, 1, -241	21, 8,—243	16, 7,—245 17, 2,—249
43, 2,—252	-11,-175 $44, 11,-261$	17, 2,—249
Third Mandala—	44, 11,—201	18, 22,—173
1, 21, -345	45, 7,—244 46, 7,—179	10 91 167
3, 6,—165	40, 7, -179	23, 13,—165
5, 10,—170 18, 4,—346	48, 8,—165	27, 7,—168
18, 4,—346	49, 13,—172	30, 3,—164
23, 2-4,-345, 348	51, 5,—163 61, 12,—176, 178	23, 13,—165 27, 7,—168 30, 3,—164 31, 1,—249 32, 16,—249
26, 1,—346	61, 12,—176, 176	32, 16,—249
29, 15,—347, 362	70, 2,—167	33, 19, -249
30, 20, -347	$\begin{array}{c} 75, 10, -252, 253 \\ -19, -242 \end{array}$	33, 19,—249 34, 8,—168
32, 10,—244	- 19,-242 Sth Mandala	36 7,-263
33, 1–12,—339	Seventh Mandala-	37, 7,—263
34, 9,—176, 258	2, 3,—168	43, 13, 27,—168
42, 9, -347	- 5,-339	1 20 040
43, 4, 5,—344	7, 5,—249 8, 4,—349	50, 9,—264
-, 5,-247 49, 1,-176	0, 4, -349	52, 1,-163
49, 1,—170 52 6 16 01 04 240	15, 2,—178	45, 55, -245 50, 9, -264 52, 1, -163 - 7, -176, 178 53, 1, -261 7, -250
53,6-16,21,24,-340,	18, 4, 5, 21–24, —321	53, 1,-261
354, 372	19, 3,—331 20, 2,—331 22, 9,—243 25, 3,—331
-9, -362 $-12, -242$	00 0 049	64. 0, -3+1
12,2+2 55 10 191	05 9 991	66, 5,-250
55, 19,—181	20, 0,—001	66, 5,—250 — 8,—253
Fourth Mandala—	26, 1, 2,—241	81, 30,—250
6, 11,—173	28, 2,—243	81, 30,—250 85, 5,—250 — 6,—181
9, 3, 4,—252	32, 10,—332	6,—181 *
16, 9,—242 25, 4,—348	- 26,-329	87, 5,—175
- 6, 7,—260	33, 1–13,–318	87, 5,—175 — 9,—250
26 7 175	- 3,-242	91, 1,—172 92, 2,—348
26, 7,—175 37, 1,—165	- 11,-244	92, 2,—348
42, 8, 9,—266	35, 7,—242	Ninth Mandala-
44, 6, -268	52 2 229	65, 22, 23,—177
50, 7-9—247	42, 1,—249 53, 3,—332 60, 8,—332	66. 20.—178
58, 2,—248	64 3 - 339	86, 28,—181
Fifth Mandala—	64, 3, -332	86, 28,—181 92, 5,—175 96, 6,—250
2, 12,—173	69, 2,—176	96, 6, -250
2, 12,—168	70, 2,—173 — 3,—184
21, 1,—168	- 5,-164 - 5,-243	11 2, 1, 3,—250
29, 3,—248 31, 4,—248	72, 2,—329	113, 6,—251
32, 11,—178	83, 1-8,—323
119-110	1 00, 1-0,020	지나의 기대를 발표하는 경우 그는 생각이

Rig	-veda continued-	•
Ī	enth Mandala— 14, 1,—217 16, 6,—253
	14. 1. -217
	16 6 253
	17 1 0 017
	17, 1, 2,—217
	21, 5,—169 26, 5,—167
	26, 5,—167
	28 11 251
	33, 4,—262 45, 6,—178	. 1.1.1
	45, 6,—178
	40, 0, -110
	46, 2, 9,—170
	49, 7,—175	•
	52, 2,-252
	53, 4, -177
	54, 3,—181
	46, 2, 9, —170 49, 7, —175 52, 2, —252 53, 4, —177 54, 3, —181 60, 4, —177
	01 7 010
	61, 7,—242 62, 5,—341
	62, 5,-341
	-7, -193
	63, 7,—166
	62, 5, -341 - 7, -193 63, 7, -166 68, 3, 4, 5, -72 - 8, 11, -217 69, 3, -166 71 and 72, -13
	00, 0, 1, 0, 12
	0, 11,-411
	69, 3,—166
	71 and $72, -13$
	71, 1-11,-254
	-11245
	71, 1-11,—254 — 11,—245 72, 2,—46
	1 5 79
	- 4, 5, -72 - 5, -9 73, 7, -175 75, 5, -490
	- 5,-9
	73, 7,—175
	75, 5,—490
	77, 1,—245 80, 6,—165
	80. 6.—165
	81 and 89 19
	01 0 0 101
	81 and 82,—13 81, 2, 3,—181
	82, 3,—163, 181 85, 3, 16, 34,—5
	85, 3, 16, 34,—2	245
	— 29,—251
	-39.40 - 257	k jiriye
	88, 19,—256
	00, 10,-200
	89, 16,—243
	- 17,-346
	88, 19,—256 89, 16,—243 — 17,—346 90, 1,—32
	 1-16,9
	91, 9,—173
	92 10 169
	05 7 200
	30, 1,—300
	97, 1,-46
	97, 17, 19, 22,-	256
	98, 1-12,-270
	99. 7.—173
	100 5 -164
	105 8 041 04
	100, 0,-241, 24	4
	107, 6,-245
	109, 1-7,-256
	$\begin{array}{c} 91, 9, -173 \\ 92, 10, -169 \\ 95, 7, -306 \\ 97, 1, -46 \\ 97, 17, 19, 22, -270 \\ 98, 1-12, -270 \\ 99, 7, -173 \\ 100, 5, -164 \\ 105, 8, -241, 24 \\ 107, 6, -245 \\ 109, 1-7, -256 \\ -4, -244 \end{array}$
	121,—13
	,

Rig-veda continued-
Tenth Mandala—
125, 5,—246 129,—13
129,—13
141, 3,—201
161 412
148, 5, 268 161, 4, 13 167, 4, 345
Rijrās'va, 266
Riksha, 235, 274, 360
Rikshavat, 456
Ripu, 298
Rishabha, 279, 357 Rishabhas, 500
Rishabhas, 500
Rishi, 243
Rishis, 36, 44, 88, etc.
Rishtishena, 269 Ritabādha, 279
Ritayu, 234
Ritayratas, 501
Rituparna, 322
Roer, Dr. E., his transla- tions of the Upanishads referred to, 25 tions of the Upanishads referred to, 25
Rohidas va, 268
Rohini, 389
Rohita, 355
Rohitāsva, 382 38 k Roth, Dr. R., his Literature and History of the Veda and History of the Veda referred to,289,318,324, 331, 339, 342, 360, 364,
372
Germ. Or. Society, 8,
192, 194, 217, 248, 289
Studien, 48, 355, 376
Dissertation on the Atharya-yeda, 395
- Illustrations of Ni-rukta, 177, 253, 256,
321, 339
Rosen, Dr. F., remarks on the story of S'unassepa, the story of Sunassepa,
Buchi /mass \ CE
Ruchi (masc.), 65 Ruchi (fem.), 466
Rudra, 3, 20, 65, 163, 194, 1 995
Rudras, 19 f., 52, 117
Rudras, 19 f., 52, 117 Rūpin, 360
나 불병에 막게 하는 것 하셨습니다고 있다.
8
S'abaras, or S'avaras, 391,

393, 483 f.

Sacrifices of no avail to the deprayed, 98 Sadasyas, 459 Sādhyas, 10f., 26f., 38, 41 Sagara, 337, 486 Sahadeva, 266 Sahajanya, 336 Saindhavas, 495 Saindhavāyanas, 353 S'aineya, 483 S'ainyas, 236 S'aivyā, wife of Harischandra, 380 f. S'ākadvīpa, 491, 500 S'ākalas, 495 S'akha, 401 S'akas, 391, 398, 482, 484, S'akti, or S'aktri, 315, 322, 328, 342 S'akuntalā, 410 S'akvarīs, 255, 320 S'ākya (Buddha) 509 Sālankāyana, 279 Sālankāvanas, 353 S'ālāvatī, 352 S'ālāvatyas, 353 S'almali-dvīpa, 490, 498 Salvas, 438 S'ālvas, 495 S'ama, 124 Samantapanchaka, 451 Sāma-veda, 2 quoted i. 262,—180 -355, -163Samprakshālana-kāla, 217 Samsraya, 116 Samvarana, 360 Samvartta, 207 Sanaka, 51 Sanandana, 51, 65 Sanatkumāra, 114, 307 S'āndilya, 513 Sanhita, 2, 4 Sanjaya, 148 S'ankara on the Brahma-Sūtras, 147 - Chhāndogya Upanishad, 195 Sankarshana, 207, 507 S'ankhayana Brahmana, 5 Sankhya, 126, 210, 334, 430 Kārikā, 158 - Pravachana, 158

Sankīrtti, a Vaisya author of Vedic hymns, 279

Sankriti, 237
Sānkriti, 352
Sānkrityas, 353
S'antanu, 269
S'apharī (fish), 205, 209
Santadas'a, 16
Sapta sindhavah, 489 ff.
S'arabhas, 391
S'aradvat, 279
S'aradvata, 2/9
Sarasvati, 71, 110, 141,
110,010,010,
Sārasvatyas, 305
Sarga, 49
Sarvakāma, 322
Sarvakarman, 422, 456
Sarvasāra Upanishad, 361
S'aryāta, 221 S'aryāti, 126, 221
Saryati, 120, 221
Sasarparī, 343
Sat, 46
S'atadru, 417
Satānanda, 235 S'atapatha Brāhmana, 5
Kānva S'ākhā, i. 6,
—— Kanva Sakha, a s, ————————————————————————————————
— Mādhyandina Sākhā, Texts from, translated or ma formed to
i 1. 4. 12.—366
_ 1, 4, 14,—188
-3, 2, 21, -136
4, 2, 2,—348
-4, 2, 5, -166
5, 1, 7,—168
-5, 2, 16, -137
-5, 3, 2, -163
-7, 4, 1, -35, 107
— 8, 1, 1, — 181
ii. 1, 4, 11,—17
-2, 2, 6, -262
-3, 4, 4, -147
— 4, 2, 1,—96
-4, 4, 1, -125
-5, 1, 1, -69

iii. 2, 1, 39,—309
-2, 1, 40, -130
- 4, 3, 6,—313 147
- 6, 2, 26, -141
Ferential 30—1.1.1.2.366 i. 1, 4, 12,—366 i. 1, 4, 14,—188 3, 2, 21,—136 4, 2, 2,—348 4, 2, 5,—166 5, 1, 7,—168 5, 2, 16,—137 5, 3, 2,—163 7, 4, 1,—35, 107 8, 1, 1,—181 ii. 1, 4, 11,—17 2, 2, 6,—262 3, 4, 4,—147 4, 2, 1,—96 4, 4, 1,—125 5, 1, 1,—69 5, 2, 20,—136 iii. 2, 1, 39,—369 2, 1, 40,—136 4, 3, 6,—613 6, 2, 26,—147 9, 1, 1,—68 iv. 1, 5, 1,—221 3, 4, 4,—262 5, 4, 1,—9 v. 3, 5, 4,—268 5, 4, 9,—367 vi. 1, 2, 11,—30
17. 1, 5, 1, -221
- 3, 4, 4, -202
- 0, 4, 1, -9 - 2 5 4 - 262
v. 0, 0, 7,—200 5 4 0 — 267
= 0, 4, 0, −007 = 1 0 11 −20
VI. 1, 2, 11, -00

S'atapatha Brāhmana continued-Mādhyandina S'ākhāvi. 6, 1, 19,—188 — 8, 1, 14,—349 vii. 4, 1, 19,-125 -5, 1, 5, -54- 5, 2, 6,—24 viii. 1, 4, 10,-515 -4, 2, 11, -19-4, 3, 1, -19x. 4, 1, 10,—438 4, 2, 2,—69 - 4, 4, 1,—69 xi. 1, 3, 1,-31 -1, 6, 1, -35-1, 6, 7, -30-1, 6, 8, -29_ 5, 1, 1, -226 -6, 1, 1, -443-6, 2, 1, -426xii. 1, 6, 38, -333 xiii. 4, 1, 3,-369 -4, 3, 3, -217_ 5, 4, 14,—168 -6, 1, 1, -9-7, 1, 15, -456xiv. 1, 2, 11,-53 _ 4, 2, 1,-24, 36 -4, 2, 23, -19-5, 1, 1, -4327, 1, 33,—46 -9, 1, 1, -433S'atarūpā, 25, 65, 72, 106, 110, 114 S'atayātu, 322 S'atendriyā, 114 Sattva, 41, 62, 66, 75 f., 79, 89, 92 Sāttvika, 42 Sāttyahavya, 493 Satyaketu, 231 Satvāngas, 498 Satyavatī, 349, 405, 450, 453 Satyavrata, 207, 375 Satyavratas, 501 S'ātyāyana Brāhmana S'ātyāyana quoted, 320, 328 Saudāsa, 343, 414 Saudāsas, 328, 337 Saumya, 494 S'aunaka, 226, 279 S'aundīkas, 482 Saurāshtras, 495 Sauvīras, 495 Sausrutas, 353 Savana, 335, 445

Sāvarnya and Sāvarni, 217 Savitri, 71, 181 Sāvitrī, 110 Sāvakāyana, 438 Sāyana quoted, 2, 164 and passim S'avu, 171 Schlegel, A. W. von, his edition of the Ramayana referred to, 397, 399, Semitic source, was the Indian legend of the deluge derived from a, 216 S'esha, 44, 116 Seven rishis, 200, 400, 404 Seven seas surrounding the continents of the earth, Sexes, their primitive relations, 418 Shadgurusishya quoted, Shadvimsa Brāhmana quoted or referred to. 334, 513 Simhikā, 123 Sindhudvīpa, 268, 272, 353 Sindhukshit, 268 Sinhalas, 391 S'ini, 326 S'iva, 389 S'ivis, 459, 493 S'lishti, 298 Smriti, 5, 139 Snehas, 500 Solar race, 220 Soma, 10, 19 f., 30, 71 f., 124, 153, 166, 175, 181, 221, 225, 467, 469 Soma Maitrāyana, 230 Somas'ushma Sātyayajni, 428 Somesvara quoted, 511 Sons, may be begotten by third parties, 418 S'onambu, 207 S'răddhādeva, 207 S'rāddhădeva, 207, 335 S'rauta-sūtras, 5 S'ravanasya, 279 S'rī, 67 S'rīdhara, Commentator or Bhāgavata Purāna, quoted, 210 f., 317 S'ringin, 491 S'rinjayas, 283, 512

87
S'rotriya, 442
S'rutadharas, 499
S'rutarshis, 279, 400
Sthānu, 116, 122
Sthānutīrtha, 420
Sthapati, 514
Stoma, 241
Streiter, Dr., his Dissertatio de Sunahsepho, 48
355
Subhagā, 116
S'uchi, 445
S'uchi, 445 Sudās, 242, 268, 297, 319
321 ff., 338, 366, 371 ff
Sudāsa, Sudeshnā, 233,
S'ūdras, 7 and passim etymology of the word, 97 Sudyumna, 221
Sudvumna, 221
Suhma, 232
Suhotra, 227, 267, 349
353, 360
Suhotri, 227
Sukanyā, 283
Strate 117
S'ukī, 117 S'ukra, 305, 335, 445
Cal-
Sūkta, 241
Sukumāra, 231
Sulabhā, 430
Sumantu, 349
Sumati, 234
Sumeru, 96 Sumitra, 167
Sumura, 107
Sumukha, 297 Sunahotra, or S'unahotra
Sunanotra, or Sunanotra
226, 228
S'unas's'epa, 350, 353
355 11., 3/6, 405, 415
S'unas's'epa, 350, 353 355 ff., 376, 405, 413 Sunīthā, 299, 303
S unanpuenna, 552
Surādhas, 266
S'ūras, 495
S'ūrpāraka, 455
Surya, 245, 251
Sūryavarchas, 336 S'ushmins, 500
S'ushmins, 500
S'ushmina, 493
Sūta, 207
Sutapas, 232, 235
Sūtras, 5
S'utudrī, 338, 490
Sushadman, 438
Suvarchas, 279
Suvitta, 279
Suyavasa, 355
Svāhā, 389
Svarbhānu, 249, 469
Dvar onanu, 249. 409

Svarjit Nāgnajita, 515 Svayambhü, 33 Svayambhū, 96, 111, 122 S'veta, 491 S'vetaketu Aruneya, 428, 434 S'yāparnas, 438 S'yāvās'va, 283 S'yena, 513 S'yūmaras'mi, 171

T

Taittirīya-āranyaka quoted. 31 Taittirīya Brāhmana, 5 - quotedi. 1, 2, 6,—68 -1, 3, 5, -53- 1, 4, 4,—186 — 1, 9, 10,—26 -1, 10, 1, -68-2, 6, 1, -68-2, 6, 7, -21-6, 2, 1, -70- 6, 4, 1, -71 8, 8, 1,-26 8, 2, 5,-445 ii. 2, 1, 1,—72 - 2, 4, 4,-515 -2, 9, 1, -27-3, 6, 1, -68-- 3, 8, 1,-23 7, 9, 1,—71 iii. 2, 3, 9, -21 -2, 5, 9, -189— 3, 3, 1,—25 -3, 3, 5, -25- 3, 10, 4,—26 - 4, 1, 16, --49 - 8, 18, 1,-24 - 9, 22, 1,-43, 46, -10, 9, 1, -71[163 - 12, 9, 2, -41]Taittirīya Sanhitā, 2 - quotedi. 5, 4, 1,--29 — 7, 1, 8,—187 - 7, 3, 1,-262 -8, 16, 1, -20

-16, 11, 1, -137

-3, 5, 1, -124,

-- 4, 13, 1,--21

-5, 9, 1, -187

-6, 7, 1, -186

iii. 1, 7, 2,-512

ii. 2, 10, 2,-188, 510

Taittirīva Sanhitā continuediii. 1, 9, 4,-193 -5, 2, 2, -332iv. 3, 10, 1,-16 v. 1, 5, 6,-184 -6, 8, 3, -136vi. 2, 5, 2,-187 -3, 10, 4, -32-5, 6, 1, -26- 6, 6, 1,—191 -6, 8, 2, -26--- 6, 10, 3,-26 vii. 1, 1, 4,-15 -1, 5, 1, -52— 5, 15, 3,—187 — p. 47 of MS., 328 Commentator on. quoted, 3 Taittirīva Upanishad quoted, 443 Taittirīva Yajurveda, 12 Takshapa, 279 Tālajanghas, 467, 486 Tamas, 41, 57, 58, 62, 66, 75, 80, 89, 92, 141 Tāmasa, 42 Tāmrā, 116 Tāmraliptakas, 459 Tāmravarna, 494 Tāndya Brāhmana, 5, 329 Tansu, 234 Tapas, 119, 141 - its great power, 394, 410 Tapoloka, 88 Tārā, 225 Tārakāyanas, 353 Tirvak-srotas, 57 Tishmas, 500 Tishya (=Kali) age, 148 Tortoise incarnation, 51, 54 Trasadasyu, 263, 266, 331 Trayyaruna, 237, 267 Treta, 39, 43 ff., 92 ff., 119, 145, 149 f., 158, 447, 495 f. Triad of deities, see Deities Trigarttas, 459 Trisanku, 362, 375, 401, 413 Trishtha, 190 Trishtubh, 16 Trisiras, 268 Trivrishna, 267 Trivrit. 16 Tritsus, 320, 324

Troyer, Captain, his edition of the Rājataranginī, 424
Tukhāras, 303
Tumburas, 303
Turvas'as, 179
Turvasu, 232, 482
Tushāras, 484
Tvāshṭra, 438
Tvashṭri, 181

U

Uddālaka Āruni, 195 - S'vetaketu, 419 Udgātri, 41, 155, 251, 294 Unnetri, 155 Upadrashtri, 4, 459 Upanishads, 2, 5 Upasruti (a goddess), 311 Upastuta, 170 Uru, 298 Urddhvabāhu, 335 Urddhvasrotas, 57 Urija, 335 Ūrijā, 335 Urukshaya, 237 Urunjirā, 417 Urva. 351, 476 Urvasī, 226, 244, 306, 316, 320, 337 Us'anas, 226 Ushas, 108 Us'inara, 268 Usīnaras, 431, 482 Utathya, 279, 467 Uttānapad, 72 Uttānapāda, 65, 72, 106, 114, 298 Uttara Kurus, 491 ff. Uttara Madras, 492

v

Vāch, 241, 246, 325 Vachas, 241 Vāhlīka, 273 Vaibhojas, 482 Vaikhānasas, 32 Vaikrita-sarga, 58 Vaina, Vainya, 268, 279 Vairāja, 16, 111 Vairūpa, 16 Vaisampāyana, 122, 153 f. Vaisasa, 97 Vaisvas. 7. and passim etymology of the word, 97 Vaivasvata Manvantara. 112, 214 Vājas, 165 Väjasaneyi Sanhitä quoted or referred toxi. 32,-169 xii. 34,-349 xiv. 28,-16 xxx. 18,-49 xxxi. 1,-9 -1-16,-8-13.-10xxxviii. 26.-490 Vājasravas, Vajrasīrsha, 445 Valākāsva, 349 Vālakhilya, iii. 1,—217 iv. 1,-217 Valmīki. 5 Vāmadeva, 114, 279, 330 Vāmana-avatāra, see Dwarf incarnation Vandya, a Vais'ya composer of Vedic hymns, 279 Vanga, 233, see Banga Vangas, 459 Vansā, 116 Vapushmat, 222 Varāha-avatāra, 53, see Boar incarnation Vārāha-kalpa, 44, 50, 67 Varenya, 445 Varna (colour or caste), 140, 153, 176 Vārshagiras, 266 Varuna, 18, 20, 27, 71, 136, 168, etc. his adultery, 467 Vāruna, 494 Varuna-praghāsa, 136 Varūtrī, 190 Varvaras, 484 Vasas, 391 Vashatkāra, 487 Vāshkalas, 353 Vasishtha, or Vasishtha, 36, 65, 110, 115, 122, 211, 244, 316 ff., 468, begets a son to king Kalmashapāda, 418 Vasishthas, 242, 319 ff., 402Vastrya fshuyans 293 Väsudeva, 206

Vasumanas, 268 Vasundharas, 499 Vasus, 19 f., 52, 117, 124, 184, 186, 221, 444 Vātarasanas, 32 Vatsa, 231 Vatsabhūmi, 231 Vayata, 319 Vāyu, 10, 19, 33, 76, 128, 172, 464 Vāyu Purāna quoted, 225, 227, 232 i. 5, 11 ff.,—74 - 6, 1 ff., -75 - 7, 22 ff., -81 - 9, 1 ff., -77 - 9, 100, -446 Vedāngas, 5, 126 Vedānta, 223 Vedas, 63 - antiquity of, 2 undivided in the Krita age, 144 Vedasravas, 279 Vedhas, 65 Vedhas, a sage, 243 Vedhasa, 279 Vena, 126 Vena, 297 ff., 481 Venuhotra, 231 Venva, 268 Vibhu, 445 Videha, 426 Videhas, 431, 459 Vidhātri, 124 Vidūratha, 455 Vidyutpatāka, 207 Vijnāna Bhikshu, 158 Vikrīta, 123 Vinatā, 123 Vipās, or Vipāsā, 338, 417 Vipra, 243 Vipula, 466 Virāj (masc.), 9, 36 f., 106, 111, 195 - (fem.), 217, 333, 511 Viranchi, 112 Vīrinī, 125 Virochana, 233 Virūpa, 224 Virūpas, 341 Vīryadharas, 499 Vis', 157 Vishnu, 3, 10, 51, 54, 62, 67, 75, 153, 172, 211, 495, etc. assumes different colours in different yugas,

145

Vishnu Purāna quoted-Book i. 3, 10 ff., and 14 f., -43 5, 16 ff., -44 5, 1 ff.,—55 6, 1 ff.,—60 7, 1 ff., -64 8, 12,-66 9, 15, -389 10, 10,-335 13, 7,-298 13, 54, -511 15, 52, -72 Book ii.— 4, 1, and 5 ff.. 4, 9,—498 4, 12 ff.,—499 4, 19 ff., -500 23 ff., -500 4, 28 ff.,—501 4, 37 f.,—503 7, 19, 24,—504 10, 8,—336 Book iii.-1, 3,—44 1, 6, and 9. 1, 14,-335 3, 9,—386 6, 21,—400 Book iv.-1, 4,—220 1, 5,—72 1, 12,—221 1, 13, 14,-2, 2,-223 3, 5, -224 3, 13,-375 3, 18,—337 4, 25,—337 6, 2, -225 6, 19,—226 7, 1,—226 7, 4, and 14ff 8, 6,—232 10, 12,—232 18, 1,—232 19, 9,—236 19, 10,—234 19, 16,—235 21, 4,-236 24, 44,—277 Book vi.-1, 4, -43 Visisipra, 166 Visvajit, 352 Visvakarman, 52, 76, 173,

Bhauvana, 456

Visyakrit, 352

Vis'vāmitra, 128, 232, 242, 247, 265, 272, 279, 329 ff., 337 ff., 474, 483 Visvāmitras, 342, 345 f. Vis'vantara, 438 Visvaratha, 352 Visvasrijah, 37 20, 71, Visvedevas, 16, 380 Vītahavya, 228, 268, 279, 285, 297 Vitatha, 227 Vītihotras, 459 Vivāsas, 498 Vivasvat, 26 f., 37, 115 f., 122, 126, 169, 195, 199, 201 Vrajana, 360 Vrātya, 22, 481 Vrātya-stomas, 513 Vrihaspati, 310, see Brihaspati Vrishagir, 266 Vrishala, 482 Vrishan, 170 Vrittra, 174, 310 Vyāsa, 6 Vyasva, 268

Weber's Indische Literaturgeschichte referred to, 2, 5 - Indische Studien quoted or referred to, 8, 9, 14, 32, 39, 48, 49, 108, 136, 141, 147, 155, 181, 186, 189, 216, 252, 272 f., 332 ff., 357, 367, 369, 373, 395, 438 f., 443, 446, 492 f., 511 f. - articles in Journal Germ. Or. Soc., 189, 366, 385, 443 his opinion on the origin of the Indian tradition of the Deluge, 216 Vajra-süchī, 140 Williams's, Prof. Monier, Indian Epic poetry referred to, 6, 34 Wilson's, Prof. H. H., Analyses of the Vishnu, Vayu, and other Puranas, 6, 505 - translation of the Rig-veda referred to,

360, 372, 490

Wilson's Sänkhy_ Kārikā referred to, 430 . Vishnu Purā 1 referred to, 6, 49 353, 446, and passim article on Human Sacrifices in India in Journ, R. As. Soc., 355 estimation Women. which the ancient Indians held them, Yādavas, 112 Yadu, 232, 477 Yadus, 179 Yajna-paribhāshā-sūtras. 2, 365, 367 Yainapeta, 336 Yājnavalkya, 25, 136, 428 Yājnavalkyas, 353 Yajur-veda, 2 Yakshas, 37, 139, 144, 499 Yama, 20, 122, 126, 129, 171, 217, 320 Yāmadūtas, 353 Yamunā, 467 Yāska, 3, 5, see Nirukta e Page of Yātudhānas, 326 f. Yaudhāḥ (warriors), 511, 514 Yavanas, 391, 398, 482, 485 ff. Yayati, 232, 455 Year of Brahmā, 44 Year of gods, 43 Yoga 210, 334, 466, 478 philosophy, 430, 508 Yogin, 153 Yudhājit, 279 Yudhishtkira, 127,133,309 Yudhyāmadhi, 322 Yugas, 39, 43 ff. system of, not mentioned in the hymns of the Rig-veda, 45. - their several characteristics, 39, 90 ff., 144

 \mathbf{z}

Yuga of the Kshattriyas,

Yuvanāsva, 225, 268, 279

Zendavesta, 293 Zota. 294

152